Mr. R. W. Case, who is operating at the Rittenhouse Theater, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, a new house seating 500, which has all the latest equipment and a 12 x 14 well-ventilated operating room, says he ordered a Handbook from Williams, Brown & Earle three weeks ago, but they informed him they were out of the books, and we had not shipped them any since. He instructs us to "get busy." He then hands Lubin the following bundle:

> Why is it that the Lubin Company still holds to the old-fashioned method of patching its film at every change of scene, letters, subtitles, etc.? I had one ten-day reel recently that had 107 patches, all factory made, and out of the 107 I think I had to cement about half. I believe the Lubin folks must be using distilled water and tobacco juice for cement. For the benefit of operators I wish you would give them a good, strong roast.

Well, neighbor Chase, you are right there in Philadelphia, so why don't you call up the Lubin Company and register your own kick? However, I have had a lot of complaints on this particular proposition, and I think myself that Pop Lubin can well turn his undivided attention to the matters herein mentioned, and that he can easily make considerable improvement. As to the Handbook matter, why, I guess if Williams, Brown & Earle had ordered an additional supply of the Handbooks they have been sent. However, I will take the matter up with our business manager, Mr. Wylie, who is the man behind the gun.

A Challenge.

Mr. E. David Dean, secretary of Local 224, Washington, District of Columbia, writes:

> A statement emanating from a local owner-operator was noted in the Department recently. It says, in part, that all the Union in this city does is to raise salaries. In contradiction of this statement, I wish to say that we have only made one demand on local owners, and that demand amounted to a raise of 1½ cents per hour for all-day shows, and no raise for night shows. The correspondent also says that we do not know as much as non-union men, whereas our union has a school at every regular meeting and also has a committee who will answer any question concerning the machine that any member may desire to ask. Therefore, I challenge this owner, whoever he may be, to a show of three reels on a bet of $20.

I am much gratified at the mild tone of brother Dean's come-back. Evidently he is not of the brick-throwing type. His reply is a plain statement of facts, winding up with a challenge to the operator-owner who sent in the former communication. The editor hereby offers his services as official stakeholder, assuring the contestants that the decision will be such that nobody wins—except the aforesaid editor.

Referred.

Mr. Le Roy Hester writes from Venus, Texas, as follows:

> In the following questions you are to be prosecuting attorney, jury and judge. I am a road man who desires to join the union. Have turned the crank for eight years, using all kinds of current, and have operated from a Power's 6A down to the little old Optigraph. Now have an Edison Underwriters Model. Am using a portable six h. p. engine and a 60 volt generator, and you can take it from me I get some light at the arc. I am sure I would be benefited by joining the organization. But can I do so without leaving my work? I am always out in a small town and seldom get to a city, therefore, I am up a stump as to what to do.

As prosecuting attorney I would say I do not know what to prosecute you for; as jury, you do not seem to be guilty of anything but knowing your business; as judge, I have referred the whole matter to President Shay, who will no doubt communicate with you and tell you what can be done.

New Reel Clip.

Mr. J. D. Pitts, Fredericksburg, Va., sends in the wooden hub of a reel, to which he has attached a very excellent clip of his own invention. He asks whether or not I would advise his taking out a patent on the same.

I do not like to give advice of this kind. To my mind it is very doubtful if marketing the device would return sufficient money to justify the expense of a patent. What I, myself, would do would be to have careful drawings made, showing the idea in its entirety, and then make a statement before a notary public, declaring the same to be my own idea and invention. This will, according to my understanding of matters, provide protection pending application for patent, and you can then see whether you could sell to some reel manufacturer, or whether you could interest anyone in it or not. I do not believe it would pay you to manufacture it yourself. The main thing there would be against it would be its cost, which would be several times that of the flat spring clip now in use, although it would be a decided improvement over the latter. It is an open question whether manufacturers would pay the additional expense involved.

Operators
Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?
The new second edition of the
MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS
By F. H. Richardson
420 Pages Illustrated
$2.50 Each Postage Paid
will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years
Address all orders and remittances to
MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

"THE DANGLING NOOSE" (Selig), Oct. 31.—A Western story, written by W. E. Wing. The plot is somewhat on the made-to-order variety, employing the familiar Indian character to bring the threads together. The hero has an uncertain character, which makes it difficult for the observer to sympathize with him. The scene in which Rose employs dynamite to rouse the settlement and prevent the lynching of Indian Jim was most interesting. A fairly strong Western offering, with pleasing settings and photography.

"PEGGY'S BURGLAR" (Vitagraph), Oct. 31.—This is a half-reel comedy of the better sort. Peggy slides down the laundry chute at the girls' school, to evade the principal, and lands upon a real burglar. She captures him under some canvas and the other characters all come down the chute upon him. Edith Storey and Harry Lambert play the leads.

"FATTY'S AFFAIR OF HONOR" (Vitagraph), Oct. 31.—This, on same reel with above, is even more amusing. Hughey Mack fights a very humorous duel with the bogus count. The laughing finish is better to be seen than talked about. A very good comedy release.

"LOVE'S DECEPTION" (Patheplay), Oct. 31.—There is nothing essentially new in this story of two brothers in love with the same girl. But it is nicely presented photographically and sincerely acted throughout. There is something fine about the way in which the lame brother continued the correspondence with the girl back East after his brother had been killed. Then she comes West, and, of course, marries the lame boy. The close was romantic and pleasing. A good release.

"A MOMENTOUS DECISION" (Lubin), Oct. 31.—The plot in this story hovers about the subject of finance, but none of the deals are clear in the mind of the observer. This is not entirely essential to the enjoyment of the film, but would have made the opening scenes more convincing. Jimmy, whom the husband has befriended, saves the wife from the designing villain and restores the happiness of the couple. The settings and characterizations are good and the photography also, but the plot is not of the strongest.

"THE SPEED LIMIT" (Kalem), October 31.—A fairly entertaining comedy half reel, with John E. Brennan, Ruth Roland and Grover Larkin in the cast. Jim is arrested and convicted by the judge; later Jim becomes town marshal and arrests the judge for speeding. Well acted and pleasing.

"THE GRANITE INDUSTRY" (Kalem), October 31.—Very attractive pictures of the largest granite quarry in the world, at Barre, Vt. This gives a splendid idea of the industry and is well worth seeing. On same reel with above. A good release.

"THE DOCTOR'S DUTY" (Essanay), November 1.—In this film G. M. Anderson appears as a young doctor. The chief scene in the story is where he debates with himself as to whether he shall let his injured rival die or pull him through and see him wed the girl. Not an extremely new conception. The good photography, fine scenic effects and pleasing work of Marguerite Clayton as the girl help the picture along immensely.

"THE STOPPED CLOCK" (Biograph), November 1.—This is not a powerful detective story, but it is absorbing and worked out with a fair degree of skill. Most of the scenes occur in the store of the dealer in antiques and the adjoining living rooms. The rascally junior clerk steals the marked money and endeavors to place his crime and the subsequent shooting on the girl's lover, his fellow clerk. There is much good drama in this story and the film is decidedly interesting from beginning to end.

"TOO MANY TENANTS" (Patheplay), November 1.—In point of construction and general consistency this film shows a good conception of farce-comedy on the part of the scenario writer. The idea in itself proves only moderately amusing. The young artist borrows a house in order to make an impression on his uncle. The uncle and the new tenants arrive the same night and many complications ensue. The chief amusement centers about the wedding, which brings out a number of laughs.

"THE PRESIDENT'S SPECIAL" (Kalem), November 1.—This railroad story is interesting enough, but there is a certain lack of consistency in the scenes which makes it difficult to follow at times. The president's son leaves home and works his way up to a job as engineer. An enemy puts sand in the engine driver and a bottle of whiskey in the tool box, but in the end everything winds up well. Too many plot threads in this, but at the same time the film possesses considerable entertainment. The reconciliation at the close was well pictured.

"WHEN THE PRISON DOORS OPENED" (Lubin), November 1.—This story gets a very good start, the observer being put into immediate touch with the characters. The man and girl are both released from prison. They meet at the depot and afterward marry. Former prison acquaintances begin to blackmail each of them. The plot carries the interest, though it is not overly strong. The climax works up quite well. The photography and acting are very good.

"CUPID AND THREE" (Essanay), October 29.—A farce that cannot be termed dull, for it has been acted in a sprightly way. But it lacks a real comedy story that would seem natural in comedy atmosphere. It is the players who save it.

"TWO SACKS OF POTATOES" (Selig), October 29.—A farce burlesque offering that surely made laughter. Some in the audience "cussed" while others with more humor got very good amusement from it. Hugh Mosher, as First Potatoes, and Clyde Morris, as Second Potatoes, deserve special credit—we wouldn't have played their parts for a good sum. The piece was written by Ethel C. Unland and William Duncan produced it. Ye done good, Bill.

"A MUDDLE IN HORSE THIEVES" (Selig), October 29.—On the same reel with the foregoing is this, also a laugh getter. It is a chase picture filled with unexpected changes and gets comedy largely from the eccentric speed which makes a two-horse buggy seem to jump over the ground. It is breezy surely.

"THE HORRIBLE EXAMPLE" (Edison), October 29.—A very amusing satire that makes the professional prohibitionist the butt of its fun. It is mostly the players and general handling that makes the laughter, for it surely doesn't convince and has no logic at all. Dan Mason is full of fun as the lecturer, who gets drunk on extra good cough syrup made on the sly by Edward Bouldon, who wants to be his son-in-law, but sells corks, and corks can be used in bottles and so is undesirable. Every one of the players does well. The author and producer is Charles Seay. A very fair offering.

"FATHER'S HATBAND" (Vitagraph), October 29.—Father's hatband is Cupid's mail carrier between home on one hand and the office on the other, and the clerk whom father doesn't want as his son-in-law. Father stops at the barber shop and there changes hats with Mr. Henpecko. This adds to the fun considerably. This is surely a novel situation and it has been well worked up into a delightful comedy offering, the best and most desirable picture of today's regular releases.

"WHEN CHILDHOOD WINS" (Patheplay), October 29.—The child reunites a father and his daughter. There had been an elopement and the father had refused to recognize the husband or child, but by accident meets the little girl and, not knowing her, they become friends. It makes a pleasing offering, because the little girl is pleasing in herself and acts very cleverly.

"THE BARBER CURE" (Biograph), October 30.—Comic doings and queer characters, not much of a situation. It made a good deal of laughter.

"BOARDERS AND BOMBS" (Biograph), October 30.—"Hamfat's" stranded without money and country characters with comic grimaces, tickled the audience. It is just laughable nonsense.

"A JAPANESE WEDDING" (Melies), October 30.—This beautiful picture of a graceful and dignified ceremony will make a strong appeal to refined people everywhere, also the second part of it, which shows a cobbler of wooden shoes is no less acceptable. Both are truly human and deeply interesting. These Japanese vignettes seem to this reviewer the best of their kind that has been offered to the public so far. The camera work is very clear and natural in tones and details.

"GREED FOR GOLD" (Essanay), October 30.—An old story, rather commonplace, but carefully and thoughtly re-written. The miser, who is the story's villian, is played so conventionally that he is almost without interest and keeps the picture from being as lively as it might have been. There is enough good matter in it to hold the audience and it makes a very fair offering.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 63," October 30.—The mid-week topical was not seen this week by our reviewer.

"DOC YAC AND THE ARTIST'S DREAM" (Selig), October 30.—The second of the series of comic cartoons drawn by Sidney Smith. The mechanical means used to give motion to the figure, Doc Yac, is too apparent There is little wit in the jokes. There were few laughs from the audience.

"BIANCA" (Vitagraph), October 30.—The freshness and light-hearted ending of the love story of Bianca (Margaret Gibson) and Tony (George Cooper) seemed to please the audience which was in a very receptive mood and chortled with delight. The foreman (Mr. Kunkle) is, as usual, a trouble maker, but he cannot part the chosen two. It is an entertaining, not a brilliant, offering, and the acting, never very imaginative, is natural. W. Hanson Rurham is the author of the script which Robert Thornby produced.

"THE KING'S MAN" (Vitagraph), Nov. 3.—A love story of the Canadian wilds. Its hero is a N. W. mounted policeman (George Holt) who loves Babette, the heroine, daughter of a whiskey smuggler (Charles Bennett). Billie West, in this role of a French-Canadian, convinces and is pleasing. A half-breed (W. J. Bauman) also loves Babette, is jealous and ugly and stabs the girl's father out in the woods. This situation develops into a vigorous melodramatic episode which strong acting all around puts over in good shape. An acceptable picture. W. Hanson Durham is the author and W. J. Bauman produced it.

"WILD WALES" (Edison), Nov. 3.—Some lovely views, including the beautiful abbey of Val Crucis; the old castle of Dalydedden and some marvelous mountain pictures, clouds and sunset on water. A good offering.

"PORGY'S BOUQUET" (Edison), Nov. 3.—A farce cleverly acted and, for the most part, freshly and brightly written. The author is Milton Nobles and it was produced by C. J. Williams. William Wadsworth's sweetheart, Alice Washburn, lives across the way and just above another couple, the Smiths (Mrs. C. J. Williams and Dan Mason). There's a mysterious letter from Mrs. Smith's "Papa," to be a surprise for Dan. Dan thinks that William, who is talking to Alice, is flirting with his wife, and when the bouquet comes by mistake, he remembers the letter. But, after all, it's the characters and the acting that give the farce life and make it a good offering

"THE DOUBLE CHASE" (Lubin), Nov. 3.—A love story; it is not very effective, but has many pretty scenes. The players are stronger on youth, personality and good looks than on acting; but this is not surprising, for acting is an art and must be learned. The management was not, at all times, convincing and these two shortcomings keep the offering from really living.

"PATHE WEEKLY, NO. 64" (Nov. 3).—A good number. The most interesting item is, perhaps, the royal wedding of Prince Arthur and the Duchess of Fife. One sub-title called attention to "the suffragettes rushing the police to get near the king's carriage"; but there was no king in the carriage—the scene showed women trying to get a better glimpse of the bride. There are many other items of interest, a wreck of a square-rigged ship, for instance.

"DIVERSION" (Biograph), Nov. 3.—A picture full of wholly arbitrary coincidences and is quite unconvincing, so much so that when a child was shown as putting poison in her milk (she thinks it sugar) the audience laughed. The scenes were handled weakly and are filled with incongruities. The child was hardly dressed as the daughter of a poor workingman; she had a doll one would expect to find only in the nursery of the rich and it is carrying a long distance to bring four such characters as the story's two couples together under the same roof. A poor offering.

"THE VAUDEVILLE STAR'S VACATION" (Patheplay), November 4.—A gracefully acted picture that will be quite sure to please. It is the often played summer hotel farce and has some padding, but we find in it a cleverly comic hotel proprietor (the freshest and most effectively played figure in the picture), and also a very good male impersonation by the "vaudeville star." It was a manless hotel and the women there had snubbed her, so she fools them as the Duke of Nyack or something. There was laughter quite often and it seemed to be popular.

"SLIPPING FINGERS" (Selig), November 4.—Sheer melodrama with a very noble heroine. It pleased some in the audience very much—it is not designed for highbrows. Such a picture is sure of a solid following in many places and perhaps no one will count it very much of a bore. The acting is commendable.

"HIS SILVER BACHELORHOOD" (Vitagraph), November 4.—There is a touch of mawkish sentimentality in the last two scenes of this offering; but its situation was carefully developed by its author, and its leading woman, Norma Talmadge, has kept it strong by intelligent and well-held-in acting. Her work in it will add to her reputation for versatility. There was only one other picture among today's offerings that gave as much to the audience or that was watched so closely. A picture with strongly acted scenes and, as a whole, a good offering.

"TOMMY'S STRATAGEM" (Edison), November 4.—Sentiment and a rather weak pathos are furnished by this picture of a raggety boy's method of making friends. The pretty lady's white poodle falls into the lake and is coddled, so Tommy waits for the proper time and he too falls in. After he is adopted his conscience troubles him because he had pretended and he makes a clean breast of it. By this stroke he stays in the sympathy of the audience, if the spectators have believed in him enough to feel sympathy. Just a fair offering.

"QUICKSANDS OF SIN" (Essanay), November 4.—Some spectators leaving after this picture had been shown talked as though they had been deeply impressed with the whole program—it was this picture that did it; there was only one other that approached it on today's list. The producer has made use of a new and effective method of suggesting passage of time—he links the scenes by writing the sub-title across the scene and dissolving the scene then, dissolving the following scene into the sub-title and fading that out. As for the picture, effective acting makes its rather unpleasant situation most vivid; but it has been kept healthy, for the author and producer have put solemn dignity in it. They have made it a picture of humanity. A desirable offering.

"MAGIC MELODY" (Lubin), November 4.—An adventure picture which lost its grip on the audience's attention; because it became very unconvincing toward the end. It promised well, for we have had so many sloppy love stories from all makers that a picture with this situation was welcome. It is a story of half-savage Indian peons in Mexico and the center of interest is the child of an American doctor whom an Indian is about to sacrifice to the sun god because the doctor had failed to cure his mother. It was rather weakly produced and not strongly acted.

Licensed Specials.

"MOTION PICTURE DANCING LESSONS" (Kalem), October 29.—This two-reel special from the Kalem studio has for its object the teaching of the new steps even to people who are not graceful dancers. It has been noticed at length in a former issue of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD; see issue of October 18, page 248.

"THE RATTLESNAKE" (Lubin), October 30.—There were some in the audience not wholly pleased by Romaine Fielding's production of "The Rattlesnake," by Emmet Campbell Hall, and some of its scenes do show a lack of humor, of health, of balance. Mr. Fielding is apt to lay on the horrors, but those last scenes, which also half-offended some as being raw, were worthy of high praise. It is not, for some reason, a pleasant thing to look squarely at life and pleasant art doesn't look at it either and so, since all our art is cooked, true realism always seems raw. At his best Mr. Fielding is head and shoulders above nearly all other producers we know. And he has put enough of his good work into this to make it a desirable offering. Tony's attachment for the snake didn't get over truly and the scenes that show it were kept on so long they threw the story out of focus; especially did the unforgettable but not very valuable mad scene in the ruined hut. The story was brilliantly conceived, but developed in a rather lawless way. Mary Ryan (Moritz Cytron), who was not villainous when she smiled (therefore not a good villain) and Jesse Robinson, with others, support Mr. Fielding, who plays the leading role.

"IN LOVE AND WAR" (Patheplay), October 30.—This two-part picture was reviewed in THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, issue of October 25th, page 410.

"JANET OF THE DUNES" (Edison), Oct. 31.—This two-reel subject, by Harriet T. Comstock, shows moving picture art at its highest niche. The story dips deeply into life; it has its tragic moment when the mother dies and her body is found on the seashore. Later the daughter goes through an experience similar to that of her mother, but when the tragedy seems imminent her lover returns and a happy climax is achieved. Mabel Trunnelle has never done anything finer than in this dual role of mother and daughter; Herbert Prior, Charles Ogle, Richard Tucker and Nellie Grant were also good. Richard Ridgely, as director, gave the scenes almost perfect proportion and the photography is admirable. A particularly fine production.

"THE TOLL OF THE MARSHES" (Essanay), Oct. 31.—A picture that will no doubt accomplish good work in teaching people to avoid buying land in remote sections—sight unseen. The young man and his mother were thus victimized. Later, while living in the marsh country, the son saves the child of the company's president. The scenes are interesting and finely photographed. It would have been in order to show just what use is made of this crop of "flags," since the film went into this so extensively. The story was entertaining, but not very strong for a two-reel subject. Its chief strength lies in the odd location for the story.

"A WOODLAND PARADISE" (Edison), November 1.—This film production is very justly announced as "an idyllic comedy." In it are a modern Adam and Eve, portrayed by Mary Fuller, author of the story, and Harry Beaumont. It is just a pretty little love story. The girl had never seen any man, except her father, until Adam came along, having purchased the adjoining timber lot. She naively tells him he doesn't look like her father, but she loves him just the same. Pleasing comedy of the better sort, which leaves a good impression with the audience.

"THE WARMAKERS" (Vitagraph), November 1.—An interesting two-reel story of international intrigue, written by James Oliver Curwood. Maurice Costello and Mary Charleson appear. The plot starts off rather vaguely, but gradually begins to crystallize, and the high point of interest is reached at the ambassador's dinner, where all of the guests are drugged. A very striking scene is this and well handled. Then comes the effort to regain the stolen plans and the interest centers in a stateroom on an ocean liner, where the wife finally succeeds in recovering the papers. Novel scenes make this better than the average offering of the kind.

"THE FATAL SHOT" (Kalem), Nov. 3.—A melodrama in two parts with a somewhat mechanical plot and not very strong. The hero carries an important receipt in his outside pocket where the villain can easily get it without detection and it is not made very clear how the villain knew it was there. Its loss makes the hero seem guilty of a theft and he goes to prison—a glimpse of him in his stripes behind the bars made the audience laugh as usual. The villain marries the girl and ill treats her and the hero comes out of prison. The villain has not destroyed the receipt that, if found, will show him to have been the guilty one and sets a revolver-trap so that whoever opens a certain drawer where the receipt is will be shot. The "fatal shot" kills himself. It is pretty well acted; but its quality is made clear by the plot we have just retold.

"HOPE" (Selig), Nov. 3.—Far above the average, this offering, though not wholly great, is effectively emotional all through, but especially in its closing scenes and has some fine things in the way of artistic pictures. Through the whole runs a beautifully tender thread of symbolism which will make a strong appeal to every sensitive and sympathetic spectator. The texture of the story is very slight; but the picture's spirit shines through nearly every scene and gives vivid unity to the whole. This is the sole dramatic value the offering has—it is a high one. In such a picture, which makes its appeal more to women and children, it was, it seems, a mistake to have anyone shot so brutally as was Hope's sweetheart. The author is W. E. Wing. Bessie Eyton plays Hope and poses at the close, first as "Hope Playing on a Harp with One String," which fades and then as "Hope Clinging to the Rock of Ages."

"ZUMA THE GYPSY" (Cines), November 4.—This two-part special offering has already been reviewed in these columns and we need not go again into details here; but may add that the picture impressed this reviewer as a commendable offering.

Independent

"A HIDDEN LOVE" (Crystal), November 2.—A very simple story. It is well told, what there is of it, but that is not much.

"MIKE AND JAKE AMONG THE CANNIBALS" (Joker), November 12.—It is a strange conception of humor that is revealed in this picture. It is difficult in restrained language adequately to describe how bad the stuff is. Even in the making it is badly done. The camera in many scenes is so close as to result in blurred figures.

"AMBLYSTOMA" (Eclair), November 9.—An extremely interesting natural history subject in which we are introduced to a strange inhabitant of underground streams.

"DOES MAX SNORE?" (Eclair), November 16.—This comedy tells clearly a very simple story and its characters are well presented. We meet Max, of whom his intended fears that he snores; we meet this girl, her old aunt and an indolent manservant—all charming people. The girl thinks she hears Max snore, but discovers that it is the servitor. The acting is very praiseworthy.

"THE TRAMP DENTISTS" (Joker), October 29.—Low comedy which contains a number of funny situations of a somewhat disgusting type. The tramps occupy the dentists' office and pull teeth with pincers, ice tongs, etc. After making a great deal of money they surrender the office to the real owners and go back to their old life.

"THE CHEESE SPECIAL" (Joker), October 25.—Low comedy with a good burlesque idea, which brings forth much laughter. The characterizations are rough and lack refinement; one of the minor characters was allowed to spit frequently and copiously before the camera. These lapses in humor tend to make this class of films unacceptable to the best houses. This will pass for successful burlesque with less particular audiences.

"THE HEART OF A CRACKSMAN" (Powers), November 7.—This story was written by Wallace Reid and directed by Willis Lobards. It is a melodramatic offering, with a gentleman crook for the hero and a pair of deep-dyed villains for him to thwart. The deathbed scene was badly overacted, but the pictures are good and the story possesses quite a strong interest of a frankly sensational sort.

"JAKE AND MIKE GO FISHING" (Joker), November 5.—A very exciting comedy in which a pair of artificial legs play a very prominent part. A great deal of water appears in which the principal characters take numerous baths, besides indulging in a very spirited chase. The production is sure to win a laugh.

"OH, WHAT A DREAM" (Eclair), November 9.—This picture contains an original and amusing idea, which did not seem to be worked out to the best advantage. The married couple had trouble in getting a divorce because they had no witnesses to their quarrels. They go about trying to procure testimony of witnesses and some of the situations are funny, but as a whole the reel is not very successful.

"LOVE AND LIMBURGER" (Joker), November 8.—The German band members carry large quantities of limburger cheese about with them. The story is not very clear and the comedy in this is not of the best sort. However, it will have a certain appeal to some audiences, in spite of its lack of refinement.

"UNSEEN METAMORPHOSIS" (Eclair), November 16.—A highly original and entertaining series of movable drawings, introducing animals, street parades, fruits and the like. One of the best series of this kind we have seen.

"THE CRACKSMAN'S REFORMATION" (Powers), November 14.—This is a story which seems like amateur socialism tinged with a club. A cracksman convinces a business man that he has not been doing for society all that he might; the business man agrees to do things on a new basis. The cracksman on his part agrees to refund all his ill-gotten gains. The moral is not clear, or if it is, it seems questionable.

"HER SECRETARIES" (Crystal), November 18.—A woman novelist appears to have considerable trouble in getting the right kind of stenographer in this bright little comedy. She finally solves the difficulty by doing her own copying.

"PERCY'S NEW MAMMA" (Crystal), November 18.—Sharing the reel with the above is this farce comedy concerning a young man who jilts his sweetheart to find her afterward married to his father. The story is told in a spirited manner.

"THE GIRL AND THE BANDIT" (Frontier), November 8.—In this interesting little drama of the West a young girl meets a stranger in the mountains, is led to believe that he is a bandit and discovers afterward that he is a bandit's double. Some good Western scenes appear.

"SLIM GETS THE REWARD" (Frontier), November 6.—"Slim" is a good comic character. He is made the butt of jokes and the kitchen scullion by a lot of cowboys until he captures a bandit by a strange and ingenious device.

"THE BLOOD BROTHERHOOD" (Rex), November 16.—This is an exciting melodrama by Lois Weber, well presented and well acted. The girl under the hypnotic influence of the rascal, the leader of the Brotherhood, is rendered to good advantage.

"THE BROTHERS" (Nestor), November 18.—Donald MacDonald and Ramona Langley, the one as the elder brother and the other as the younger brother's sweetheart, play the leads in this drama of the West. The story swings around the younger brother's infatuation for the pianist in a dance hall. The photography is good.

"FORGOTTEN WOMEN" (Victor), November 17.—Mr. Kerrigan plays his usual good lead in this drama, which begins with a rich man picking up a hobo, dragging him into a dining hall crowded with well-dressed people and demanding a story of him. In the story is driven home the point that a man must not forget his mother, his sisters and his sweetheart during his bachelor days. This is a first-rate production.

"THE DILEMMA" (Great Northern), November 1.—The outcome is too easily foreseen and the fun is spoiled, being too clearly prearranged. Yet good acting and careful management of business make it decidedly entertaining to watch.

"THE HEART OF A DOLL" (Gaumont), November 13.—A picture of sentiment with children as the chief players. The story is fresh and well worked up and taken in the usual lovely scenes, makes an offering that is sure to please.

"A BOGUS HERO" (Great Northern), November 8.—There are touches of real burlesque in this picture, which will surely make hearty laughter. The situation is "put across" by the players, who have what is needed in such offerings, a feeling for humanity under the masks of ridicule they wear.

"A MAN OF THE PEOPLE" (Nestor), October 29.—A clearly told interesting story of the West in which a young preacher comes to town, teaches a wife beater to be good and wins the respect and support of the entire community—a very rough one of cowboys and miners. Some good action in this film.

"LOVE SICKNESS AT SEA" (Keystone), November 6.—The Keystone Company disports itself on the steamer Harvard, now plying the Pacific coast. Ford Sterling, Mabel Normand and Mack Sennett are among those who appear. Sterling has a laughable case of seasickness and the reel closes with a beautiful sunset view on the Pacific. Very enjoyable nonsense.

"THE MARRIAGE OF NATAINA" (Majestic), November 2.—This story is quite conventional and rather crudely handled, although it is not without considerable interest. The Indian girl was too clearly a bubbling young white girl under her disguise. The dying lieutenant is said by the sub-title to clear Swiftwind and the girl, but at the same time Swiftwind was responsible for his death. The photography was good.

"OUT OF THE GRAVE" (Crystal), November 16.—Two suicides, one a young man, who is out of work and whose girl has jilted him; the other a young woman, whose sweetheart has grown cold because she lost her money, attempt suicide in this drama and, failing, marry one another. The situations are interesting.

"THE WARD OF THE SENIOR CLASS" (Majestic), November 4.—There are a lot of pretty girls in this and the photography is good, but the plot is slight. The little girl escapes from the trustees and is adopted by the school girls. They coddle her, make new dresses for her and show her the intricacies of making fudge. When the trustees come for the child they refuse to give her up. An attractive picture, but not overly strong as to plot.

"THE WATER CURE" (Thanhouser), November 2.—This entertaining film shows what the good-looking Thanhouser players can accomplish with a light plot. Flo finds herself at Cape May, surrounded by many suitors. She says, "Isn't the ocean cute?" Later, when her canoe upsets, she is rescued in turn by numerous aspiring heroes. A lot of good humor in this and pretty summer resort pictures.

"THE EFFICACY OF PRAYER" (Kay-Bee), November 14.—An entertaining reel, showing a minister baptizing two Indian converts in a stream. As a rule religious fervor of this sort does not go very well, but there is nothing displeasing in this. Later Big Elk gets in trouble with his tribe; there is much stirring action and two live bears help to keep the story going. Not a particularly strong offering, but quite interesting.

"THE SCENARIO WRITER" (Majestic), October 26.—Here is a comedy with some new features of interest. The morning paper carries an item which the scenario writer makes use of immediately, for his plot. A moving picture within a moving picture is shown, indicating the way in which the story is built up. When it finally appears about thirty other scenario writers claim they saw the idea in the paper first. Some amusement in this.

"FATTY AT SAN DIEGO" (Keystone), November 3.—Some nonsensical stunts are pulled off in the Southern California city during the Cabrillo celebration, a parade being the chief feature of interest. Fatty's dip in the fountain, while being pursued by the irate husband, was very funny and the reel will please many observers immensely.

"CAUGHT IN HIS OWN NET" (Komic), October 23.—A half-reel comedy, in which two young men strive to become heroes in order to win a girl. The plot is not very new, but there is a clean, breezy atmosphere about the pictures that is pleasing.

"DECEIVING DAD" (Komic), Oct. 23.—On same reel with above. Archibald is an unwelcome suitor and the girl and her lover desire to test his bravery. They upset a boat and pretend to be drowning, but Archibald does not rise to the occasion at all. This is also entertaining in a quiet way.

"THE SILVER-TONGUED ORATOR" (Thanhouser), October 26.—An amusing skit, in which James Cruze impersonates a grocery clerk who becomes afflicted with a hobby for oratory. He tires out the grocery trade with his ranting, bores his sweetheart and is thrown out of a clambake gathering. After numerous unpleasant experiences he decides to go into Chautauqua. A bright comedy offering.

"AN INDIAN'S HONOR" (Kay-Bee), November 7.—A one-reel offering, written by William H. Clifford. The Indian who murdered a man early in the story afterward saves the colonel's son from death. A live bear is used to good advantage in working up the excitement. The reel gets a fair degree of interest.

"ONE PINE MOUNTAIN" (Imp), November 10.—Jane Gail and William Shea, the former as the young daughter of a millionaire, the latter as one of a settlement of mountaineers whose homes the millionaire threatens to take from them, play the leads to very good effect in this drama—or, perhaps, melodrama—which reaches a climax in an unusually strong and exciting situation. The production has been well planned and gets over. The producer selected some good types, in particular the young man who plays the part of the leader of the Society for the Extinction of Millionaires. The film is commendable.

"THE LESSON THE CHILDREN TAUGHT" (Powers), November 3.—This is a nicely rounded drama in which three little children teach their elders, a young couple and mother-in-law, to forget their quarrels and live in harmony. The story would have worked out with as good an effect if the kids had taught them, in addition, a sense of humor which they seemed very much to lack. But there is no question about the interest which this film awakens. The story is simple and makes its point effectively. A good production.

"THE RING OF SORROW" (Victor), November 3.—The part of Rosa, an Italian girl whose sweetheart dies leaving her an unlucky ring, is in good hands in this excellent little drama as Miss Fritzie Brunette plays it. She is well assisted and the story is very interesting. The fortunes of the ring, passing from hand to hand, will hold attention from beginning to end.

"THE PASSERBY" (Victor), November 10.—Mr. Kerrigan in the title role, a mysterious stranger who drops in on a dinner party to remain with his host and be of endless service to him, gives us a most pleasing rendition of his part and is well backed by a strong cast all around. The story is laid back in the days before the Civil War, when men habitually wore frock coats and the ladies hoop skirts, and it tells of many interesting and likable people.

"THE JANITOR" (Keystone), October 27.—The janitor's daughter goes to the beach with an admirer and is pursued by her irate father. The police force join in the chase and create some comical situations.

"THE MAKING OF AN AUTOMOBILE TIRE" (Keystone), October 27.—This, on same reel with above, is exceedingly instructive and interesting. It shows the making of auto tires from start to finish, the process being quite complicated.

"THE SPEED KINGS" (Keystone), October 30.—Mabel has a great time with her admirers, including Ford Sterling and Teddy Tetzlaff, at the auto races. Many views of cars in action at Santa Monica are shown. The racing scenes get ahead of the plot in interest.

"THE BRAVEST MAN" (Majestic), November 9.—This is a rather conventional ranch story, with a few extra touches which make it better than the average. The manner in which the lame boy saved the foreman from death in the burning house was full of interest. The photography is good and the story as a whole serves to entertain the observer very well.

"THE CAMPAIGN MANAGERESS" (Thanhouser), November 9.—One of those very romantic film stories in which the pretty young heroine performs a lot of improbable acts. In this case the girl edits her father's paper, runs the sheriff out of office and gets her lover elected. The story is not very convincing, but it has action and moves along pleasantly enough. The photography is good.

"HIS NOBS, THE PLUMBER" (Apollo), November 2.—The girl in this comedy film quarrels with her lover, just as her uncle is about to bestow a large sum of money upon her. She calls in the plumber and pretends they are engaged. Trouble ensues and later the real lovers make up. Fred Mace, Marguerite Loveridge and Bud Duncan appear. The photography is good and the film one of fair interest.

"LITTLE BROTHER" (Thanhouser), November 7.—In this courtship William Russell and Flo LaBadie play the leads. The little brother brings them together after a quarrel. The scenes picturing the crabbing expedition were very interesting and will be particularly appreciated by people who have indulged in this sport. A light comedy offering of a pleasing sort.

"LEVINSKY'S HOLIDAY" (Majestic), November 8.—Low comedy of a fairly pleasing sort. Levinsky hires out as bearded lady in a circus, later as a base ball dodger. In the latter office rotten eggs are thrown at him. The photography is good, but the humor is not of a highly diverting type.

"ALGY'S AWFUL AUTO" (Princess), October 31.—This comedy demonstrates the adventures that befell Algy after he won an auto in a raffle. He takes it in the house and damages things, generally speeding about the rooms. It proves indeed a speed demon and he is glad later to get rid of it. A fairly amusing number.

"A SURE CURE" (Reliance), November 3.—A slight plot rather amusingly worked out, with Charles Dickson playing the role of a man in search of health. He starts for England, but is held up and becomes a penniless tramp. This experience, in company with another hobo, impersonated by Paul Scardon, improves his health greatly. A new idea, pleasingly presented.

"WHEN JOE WENT WEST" (Nestor), November 12.—This is a comedy offering with a very old plot. Joe is mistaken for the new minister on his arrival in the West. He decides to carry out the joke, but in his drinking and card playing seemed to overstep the part. A mock marriage closes the reel, which did not succeed very well, largely owing to the threadbare situations.

"THE DRESS OF LOLITA" (Reliance), November 5.—A pleasing character story, located in the Italian section of New York. Chas. Perley and Irene Hunt play the parts of the young immigrant and his wife. The latter lends her wedding dress to a friend and Beto sees it on the girl in the ball room. The result comes near being a tragedy, but the wife recovers from her fainting spell and the story ends happily. A good offering of its type.

"TWO MEN AND A MULE" (Series 3) (Reliance), November 8.—This is the third of the series by Junie McCree, dealing with the adventures of Steve and Jake. The mule is again missing in this, but the adventures of the two tramps are much more entertaining than in previous numbers. The situation in the restaurant was extremely humorous and the shoe store episode was also very good. Low comedy of a laughable sort.

"ICH GA BIBBLE" (Solax), October 31.—A farce well acted and freshly amusing all the way through. It is an excellent offering; will make laughter and be liked.

"THE WONDERFUL HUDSON" (Solax), October 31.—On the same reel is this series of clearly photographed views of the American Rhine.

"CAUGHT AT HIS OWN GAME" (Frontier), Nov. 13.—Jack gets his cook and his hired man to impersonate his parents so that a young lady who is about to visit his ranch may be saved the embarrassment of being alone in the house with him. Out of this situation springs an amusing little comedy, full of spirited action and many laughs.

Independent Specials

"THE JUDGMENT" (Domino), November 6.—A two-reel story of Puritan days, written by Richard V. Spencer. The story contains an odd mixture of scenes similar to those in "The Scarlet Letter" and "A Tale of Two Cities." The sub-title, "It is a far, far better rest that I go to than I have ever known," is a direct quotation from the latter as it was dramatized and should not have been used without credit. The scenes in this photoplay are true to the period depicted and a good story is thrown on the screen. The tale takes up the Salem witchcraft days in the second reel, the leading woman character being hung as a witch. The photography is very good.

"LADY BABBIE" (Eclair), November 12.—This is a rather elaborate three-reel production; its atmosphere in colonial days, the principal characters, including a governor of one of the provinces and his political enemies, and its theme, derived from the adventuresome, mettlesome qualities of Lady Babbie are well rendered by Miss Barbara Tennant, and the equally daring and adventurous Lord Bryon, her lover. The story is not quite so clear as we should like to have it, but the costumes are very pretty and we like the color. The photography is commendable.

"CAPTAIN KIDD" (Bison), November 4.—This three-reel subject is produced by Otis Turner. Plainly much care has been given to the making of it, to the costuming and to the settings. Much in evidence is a great sailing ship, which in itself makes a most interesting background. The release is the second of the series. It is spectacular and sensational. Being the story of a pirate, naturally there is much fighting and much slaying. These features predominate to the exclusion of the human-interest element. The production undoubtedly will go strong in those houses where the sensational is popular.

"THE STRUGGLE" (Bison), September 23.—A two-reel offering, with the action, such as it is, centering about the two sons, one of them strong and the other weak. Jack assumes the blame for his brother's attempted theft and goes to the city. Later scenes show the weak brother's reformation and we see him go to find Jack in the city. Meantime the parents are very poor and the brothers reach home just in time to save them from going to the county farm. Conventional and overacted in places, and yet a picture with a broad theme. The photography was a little indistinct in places.

"THE MADONNA OF THE SLUMS" (Bison), November 11.—A two-part story by Grace Cunard, apparently located in the Latin Quarter of Paris. The girl from the slums creeps into the hallway where the young artist finds her. He takes her into his rooms and induces her to pose for his masterpiece. The masterpiece itself was a mere daub, which should never have been allowed to appear in the film; nothing mars a story of this type like cheap accessories. The chief interest centers about the celebration of New Year's eve in the artist's headquarters, when the thieves come to recover the girl model. The story itself has some appeal, but the settings are not of the best.

"THE GHOST" (Domino), November 13.—This two-reel offering, by William H. Clifford, is an Irish story. The shanty interior and characterizations are very good; the story is not very new and develops slowly. It could, in fact, have been compressed into one reel. Tim's fondness for drink is depicted in the first reel. In the second he has a terrible dream, which is fully pictured. He believes himself to be dead and wanders as a ghost among his former friends. Double exposure photography is employed to give this effect. When he awakens he swears off drinking forever.

"THE IMPOSTOR" (Broncho), November 12.—A two-reel subject, written by William H. Clifford. There is some fierce warfare in the opening reel, but later the plot begins unfolding and it is a very interesting one indeed. Jim, a union private, decides to take the place of John Calhoun, a confederate soldier killed in battle, who resembled him greatly. He does this after reading a letter from Calhoun's blind mother, who worships her son. The deception is a well meaning one and leads up to some situations later that reach the heart. Jim finally tells Betty, the dead man's sister, that he is only masquerading; she requests him to keep up the deception till after her mother's death, which he does. Later they fall in love and are married. A good war story.

"THE JUNIOR PARTNER" (Thanhouser), November 4.—This two-reel subject, with Florence LaBadie and James Durkin in the leads, gets an interesting start, but soon drifts off into melodrama of an unconvincing sort. The situations are too plainly manufactured and lack atmosphere in keeping with the story. The girl marries a Russian count in preference to the junior partner. Later, when she is in trouble, he goes to her. The escape down the tower on a knotted rope was about the best of the latter scenes. scenes.

"LEVI AND McGUINESS RUNNING FOR OFFICE" (Imp), November 13.—A low comedy subject in two reels, suitable principally for exhibition in houses catering to a sporting clientele. The tone of the production is not of an elevating sort, as it consists of race rioting between the Irish and the Jews. Some of the characterizations were genuinely amusing, and could well have been employed in developing a plot more worth while. The production drags some in places, but it is not without a certain humorous appeal.

"LASCA" (Bison 101), November 15.—Two reels are given to a portrayal of the poem so popular in many sections of America. The work is excellently done. There are strong scenes, some spectacular and some dramatic. The picture will make good entertainment.

"THE ROGUES OF PARIS" (Solax).—A four-part picture giving a melodrama filled with sensational incidents, and what is more surprising and better than sensationalism, freshness. The scenes are handled smoothly and convincingly and, with one or two exceptions, the players do very good work indeed. But it has one drawback as a whole: It is more interested in giving us sensations than it is in building up in us the big sensation from the dangers and perplexities of the heroine. In order to enjoy any picture of a struggle we have got to take sides, and there is no way to make us get so wrapped up in one as to make the fate of beauty in distress hang on the outcome of the fight, or chase, or struggle-of-wits. This picture's heroine had been in deep danger, but she has been practically rescued, and still the story keeps on; we see a fight on top of a swiftly moving train, but have almost forgotten what it is about. The heroine was got out of the villain's house too soon. Fraunie Fraunholtz makes the leading role very interesting with his evil plotting and villainous demeanor, though once or twice it was overdone, as when he threw the table down. Vinnie Burns plays a piteous figure as the heroine and deserves praise. The detective is the picture's weakest point in scenario and in the acting, though that disguise was most ably accomplished. On the whole, we believe the offering will be liked.

"DOOM OF THE OCEAN" (Eclectic).—A three-part offering whose special feature is the many glimpses of the sea caught from all angles and in several different moods. Some will think that the sensational rescue of a woman and her young son (played by acrobats) from the top of a lighthouse by a rope lifted up to them from a ship and down which they climb, not without danger, is the feature of the offering. It would have been if the story had been stronger, but the incident, startling as it is, does not convince us and we do not naturally see it as the truth; it fails to be as effective as the trouble, effort and danger of the players, under better auspices, would have made it. The villian of the story doesn't look at all evil, quite the contrary, and the story's heroine is not taken by a very natural actress. The photography is perfect, but the scenes are hand-tinted and this is not at all times fortunate. Only fair as an offering.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

ORGANIZATION.

Iowa League's State Secretary Makes Strong Plea for Trade Unification—To Have a Clean House.

I DO not imagine that the history of the Iowa League will produce a very graphic story. Some years ago the late Wm. B. McKinley was in the act of making over the tariff schedules and consulting with the different members of Congress when they came to that part of it dealing with the manufacture of linoleum, there arose a dispute, and after a lengthy argument McKinley said, "Send for the president of their association," referring to the manufacturers of the disputed article. It was found that they had no association, a few responded as individuals to explain, but there was no explanation, and the industry suffered accordingly.

The "most organized" people in this country at present, who are fighting for what they believe to be their rights, are the bankers of the land. Legislation that has been knocking at the doors of Congress for years is about to receive attention, and this legislation has been anticipated in behalf of the bankers by their association for a number of years, and their association reaches every nook and corner of this broad land. They are an example. They know an individual may be ever so large as an individual, ever so important and interested in weighty affairs, but he is not as large as an association, and since the banker is the highest type of our best business man, so he can show the highest type and most efficient organization.

Now at the other end of the string comes along the poor business man and the starving associations. Some of the most brilliant people who have come and gone on this terresterial sphere have been notably poor business men, but—and here is the place to stop and pause: the exhibitor wherever he is, must be a business man. If he has the temperament of an opera singer, he should cultivate more solidity; if he cannot see just where an association is going to benefit him in DOLLARS and CENTS in capital letters, he must lay that to his weakness and realize that they must have some other exceedingly valuable requisite to make up for it and close his eyes and jump into his association, comforting himself with the fact that if he is making a fool of himself, that every banker is doing it, nearly every hardware merchant, nearly every lumberman merchant is doing it, the jewelers, the bakers, the drygoods man, etc., so he will be in a large, a growing assemblage.

Now let it be known that in Germany, where the world is older commercially and where they rub elbows with each other more often because the ways are closer peopled, the associations have a regular name. And they go out for business in the name of the association, they fight all outsiders in the name of the association, if anyone throws a rock at any individual in a commercial way over there, the whole association takes action upon it. When an association asks for anything over there, they get it: First, because it is right, or they would not ask it in the first place. Second, because they are a recognized organization of strength, and a refusal would mean a costly battle with only one result—the granting of the request finally. It is wonderful to look upon, the workings of their "Bunds" and also gratifying to know that there is no place for dishonesty, no graft in all of their operations. Every man who joins is stripped clean of innate badness, and the associations uphold the other fellow in the settlement if one of their members is found deficient. That is where the honesty comes in. They do not talk much about their associations, yet they have done things that are the marvel of the world in the way they have carried their merchandise to the four corners of the globe by means of their associations, assisted by the government itself.

And what have we done in Iowa?

In 1912 we had our first meeting in July in Chicago, the following December in Des Moines and the following May in Des Moines. Between the last two meetings we had a short fencing bout with the legislature over the "Burt Law" for censorship. The legislators finally agreed that we did not need to be watched any more than the newspapers, that we did not want to turn back to the Salem Witchcraft days and begin all over again, that the plane of morality of the people of Iowa was jury enough for the censorship of pictures. Whenever there was an exhibitor whose morals, due mostly to a false start in life, I believe your Mr. Harrison calls it "inferior start," which is better; whenever such a man plans for a commercial reward a campaign against the fitness of things, the common every-day people, the hard-working people of Iowa with their high ideals of decency rise up and slay that man in his commercial undertaking. There is no money in dirt in the moving picture business in Iowa.

After the session with the legislators we have settled down to a plan for permanent organization, a plan that will save every dollar that comes into the association from the sale of program space, or from the sale of exhibition space to the association. Any dollar from any other source will be put into the treasury of the association and no-split with any man. We cannot plan graft and permanency in the same association.

The history of the Iowa League has not been written yet. We hope to enlist the services of every man showing pictures in the State of Iowa, and when the preacher in any vicinity wants information or needs information, we will be ready to give it. When the club-woman girds on her armor and with her new broom of voting-strength begins to clean house in Iowa as she will, we want to be able to show her that we are right in the middle of house cleaning and can use a little more extra help; give her a section to look after in her own way, and she will be happy.

When the legislator, who is one of the two or three hundred who get together every session of the legislature, begins to cast his eyes over the State to see what worlds there are to conquer with himself to occupy center stage as the peepuls-champeen, he will, should he open the door of the moving picture industry in this State, find everything so peaceful that he will sit down in the shade of the porch and call for a fan, a Bryan-Highball, instead of rattling his armor all over the house and scaring the baby.

The writer has been exceedingly well pleased and favorably impressed with the trenchant editorials against censorship appearing in the Moving Picture World. The far-sighted way you have handled every situation that called for judgment is remarkable and the exhibitor in Iowa, as everywhere else, will find his best schoolmaster the teachings of the Moving Picture World.

Yours respectfully,
W. C. EDDY,
Secretary of the Iowa League.

TO TEST OHIO CENSOR LAW.

Action Instituted by the Mutual Film Corporation on Grounds of Unconstitutionality and Interference with Interstate Commerce.

At a meeting of the Industrial Commission of the State of Ohio, under the direction of which the enforcement of the Ohio State Censorship law for motion pictures has been placed, this resolution was adopted on October 30:

> Be It Resolved, By the Industrial Commission of Ohio that no prosecutions for the violation of the provisions of an act entitled, "An act providing a board to censor motion picture films and prescribing the duties and powers of the same," shall be instituted by the Industrial Commission of Ohio, the Board of Censors of Motion Picture Films, or by any deputy or employe of said commission, or by any one acting under its or their authority or direction, for any act or omission occurring prior to the rendition of a judgment or judgments in cause No. 205, The Mutual Film Company vs. The Industrial Commission of Ohio, et al., and cause No. 206, Mutual Film Corporation vs. The Industrial Commission of Ohio, > etc., now pending in the United States District Court, Northern District of Ohio, should such judgment or judgments be rendered prior to the 15th day of December, 1913, the purpose of this resolution being to enable the question at issue in said actions to be judicially determined prior to prosecuting violators of the provisions of said act.

Walter N. Seligsberg, attorney for the Mutual Film Corporation, under whose direction the actions referred to in the resolution were instituted, explained to the representative ot the Moving Picture World that one was in the interest of the Mutual Film branch at Detroit, Mich., and the other on behalf of the Mutual Film branch of Cleveland, Ohio, both of which exchanges were serving patrons in the state of Ohio and thereby affected by the censorship law.

The grounds of action stated allege unconstitutionality of the law in that it interferes with the liberty of the individual and, also that the law is in contravention of the Interstate Commerce law which guarantees the freedom of trade between states.

The actions will come up for argument on November 29, in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio, sitting in Cleveland. A similiar action is now pending in Kansas at the instance of the Mutual Film Corporation on account of a particularly drastic law passed by the Kansas State Legislature. Though the case was argued some months ago no decision has yet been rendered, but judgment is expected at any time.

As will be seen by the resolution, prosecution for violation of the Ohio law is suspended until December 15, or until judgment shall be rendered in the suits. In the meantime the Board of Censors will continue to examine and pass upon all pictures submitted to them at Columbus, Ohio.

OKLAHOMA CONVENTION.

The Oklahoma State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America held a meeting at Tulsa, Oklahoma, on October 29-30. About thirty-five members were present and the meeting was a very enthusiastic one. National Secretary Wiley was present and addressed the meeting upon many important subjects.

L. W. Brophy, of the Yale Theater, Tulsa, was elected secretary for the unexpired term and it was unanimously voted to hold the second annual convention at Oklahoma City on February 11-12, 1914.

The exhibitors were the guests of the International Dry Farmers Congress at their exposition at the fair grounds on the afternoon of the 30th.

Convention Chairman, Carl Gregg, of Tulsa was untiring in his efforts to entertain the visitors and the festivities ended with an elaborate banquet given at the Elk's home and the cabaret part of the program was furnished by all of the vaudeville managers in the city. The banquet was attended by seventy-five people.

Following is a list in part of the exhibitors present: L. W. Brophy, Yale Theater, Tulsa; W. M. Smith, Cozy Theater, Tulsa; C. C. Harkins, Majestic Theater, Coalgate; Ben D. Swofford, Lyric Theater, Neosho, Mo.; O. McLane, Olympic, Oklahoma City; Carl Gregg, Lyric Theater, Tulsa; B. H. Powell, Empress Theater, Oklahoma City; G. W. Jughes, Pawnee; Albert Jackson, Pawhuska; S. H. Jones, Atus; L. E. Donehue, Okemar; John Slocum, Elk City; J. L. Carr, King Fisher; Ralph Talbot, Palace Theater, Tulsa; Benn Gregg, Wonderland Theater, Tulsa; W. R. Weber, Clarence; W. J. Sornborger, Supulpa; J. C. DeWalt, Ponca City; R. L. Lunsford, Cleveland; A. A. Shilkett, Nowata.

The film exchanges were represented by C. C. Cropper and O. A. Bandy, of the Universal; C. O. Mattingly, Mutual; J. W. Cotter, Warner's Features; R. C. Libeau, Monarch Features, Kansas City.

Machine men, who were present were: David F. Cowan, Simplex; Bert Bohammon, Nicholas Powers Co.

PLANNING FOR NATIONAL CONVENTION AT DAYTON.

Plans for the big national convention of the Motion picture Exhibitors' League of America, to be held at Dayton, Ohio, next July, are already under way. President Neff was in Dayton last week and conferred with the local exhibitors and the officers of the National Cash Register Company on the subject. The plans are said to be most elaborate, with plenty of features for the entertainment of visitors.

PREPARATION FOR OHIO STATE CONVENTION.

A meeting of the Cincinnati exhibitors was held at the Sinton Hotel on October 29, for the purpose of discussing plans for the Ohio League State Convention, which is to occur on January 27, 28 and 29, 1914, in Cincinnati.

TEXAS LEAGUE ATTENDS FAIR.

Motion Picture Day at the Texas State Fair, held at Dallas, Tex., October 27, attracted quite a number of theater managers. A brief meeting was held at the Hippodrome Theater in the morning, after which the party adjourned to the fair grounds. President J. S. Phillips was in charge of the delegation. Among those present were: John C. Penn, of McKinney, vice-president; H. J. Gould, of Dallas, secretary; Anthony J. Xydias, of Houston; F. D. Perkins, of McKinney; L. M. Ridout, of Denison; J. C. Clemmons, of Beaumont, and J. W. Rushing, of Kemp. The next gathering will be held during the Fort Worth Fat Stock Show at Fort Worth.

TOLEDO LOCAL MEETS.

A big meeting of the local exhibitors' league of Toledo, Ohio, was held at the Boody House on October 29. The question of a shorter program was discussed and a committee was appointed to investigate and report at the next meeting. A number of new members were admitted. President Neff, of the National League, was present and an elaborate luncheon was served after the meeting adjourned.

DETROIT EXHIBITORS' BANQUET.

About one hundred members of the Detroit Exhibitors' Local partook of a sumptuous banquet at the Pontchartrain Hotel, Detroit, Mich., on the evening of October 30. Peter J. Jeup was toastmaster and the speakers of the evening were President M. A. Neff, of the National League; Mr. Lynch, Mr. Brockelt and Mr. Seeman, of the General Film branch of Detroit; Mr. Levy, Mr. Maybridge, of the Universal Film branch, Detroit, and Mr. Dubuck, of the Mutual branch, Detroit. A general good time was enjoyed by all present.

LIMA, OHIO, EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE.

A meeting of exhibitors was held at Lima, Ohio, on October 31, for the purpose of organizing a local branch of the Ohio League. There was a good attendance and President Neff was on hand to assist. These officers were elected: President, W. B. Gandy; first vice-president, J. R. Smith; second vice-president, F. J. Zanone; secretary, G. O. Dupuis; treasurer, M. Osburn; sergeant-at-arms, H. B. Hoffman.

ORGANIZING IN CANADA.

For the purpose of organization, J. L. French, of Rosetown, Sask., Canada, has been appointed national vice-president of that province. Arrangements will be made at once for a convention to be held at a time and place to be named later.

CLEANING HOUSE IN OMAHA.

President Frank Harris, of the Nebraska State League of Exhibitors, has made an effectual protest against the exhibition of certain sensational pictures in Omaha. The houses running the objectional films have taken them off at President Harris' request.

"MAKING A MAYOR."

With woman suffrage, a theme of discussion, together with the particularly keen political warfare waged this year in New York State and City, a film depicting the career of a vote, is one of interest to the holder of the suffrage franchise as well as to possible holders, male and female. The fact of a film having been taken under special privilege always adds to its value. The privilege granted to the Fair Feature Sales Company to take motion pictures in the hitherto forbidden regions where the votes are assembled that make mayors, add to its strength as an educational subject.

"Making a Mayor; How the Metropolis Elects Its Executive; New York's Liveliest Day and Busiest Night" is the title of this subject, to be sold on the open market basis.

It shows, among other things, the various important personages of the campaign—Sulzer, Whitman, McCall and others in the course of their daily duties or engaged in talking to voters.

There are glimpses of the activities of women campaigners for the Fusion cause and also a fraction of a hundred feet showing how the women will vote, when and if they get a chance. These latter scenes were taken at Columbus Circle, New York City, on Election Day. They report the mock election which women there carried on. Scenes will also be taken in cafes showing the revelry of election night.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO. REMOVES.

The Feature Photoplay Co. has transferred its activities from the Exchange Building to more sumptuous offices in the Candler Building, 220 W. 42nd Street, New York. The program of the Feature Photoplay Co. will be the best product of foreign manufacturers at regular intervals. Mr. H. A. Lande is as usual at the helm.

"Eighty Million Women Want--?"

Four-Part Suffragist Picture by Unique Film Company.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THE UNIQUE FILM COMPANY, a newcomer in the film world, issued a number of invitations to reviewers and other distinguished citizens to attend a private exhibition of "Eighty Million Women Want—?" at the Bryant Motion Picture Theater, November 5th, 11 a.m. An enthusiastic audience of generous size waited two solid hours before the films arrived. Whoever was responsible for the management of the exhibition failed utterly. It was considerably after two before the reels had been shown. I think it well to make a note of this because such an unconscionable waste of valuable time is simply inexcusable.

The pictures themselves are deserving of unstinted praise. A very clever scenario is always the best kind of an asset in features and the scenario, written, I believe, by a woman, showed traces of talent and no small degree of skill in handling the technique. This feature is not only a most effectual means of propaganda for the cause of Woman Suffrage, but it would, I am sure, be welcomed by any man who wants to give his patrons a high class offering with plenty of pathos and humor. The story of the plot is taken from the life around us and succeeds in portraying political conditions as they exist in this country to-day. There is no more modern and interesting topic than the great change that has come over the political consciences of our people, and this feature gives a most attractive picture of the defeat of the old and the victory of the new idea in politics. I think the love story that has been woven into the film is most charming and engages the interest and the sympathy of the spectator from the first to the last. Those who have looked upon the Votes-for-Woman movement as the last refuge for old maids and cranks are due for a most pleasant and agreeable disillusionment. The heroine of the story, though a stanch enough suffragette, is womanly from top to toe, and both she and the hero look and act their best when they gaze upon the marriage license, which forms the finale of the story.

The acting was far above the average and the director thoroughly understood his business. The scenes at the Suffragette headquarters were infectious in their enthusiasm and just about perfect in their realism. This was of course to be expected with Mrs. Pankhurst to the fore very ably seconded by Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, president of the Women's Political Union. Mrs. Blatch made an able address while we were waiting for the picture and the operator ran a frayed "Western drama" while we were still waiting.

The Unique Company has set itself a high standard in this production and we look forward to many more good features from this source in the future.

ACTON DAVIES REVIEWING EDISON SCENARIOS.

Acton Davies, dramatic critic of the Evening Sun and recognized authority upon all things theatrical, has been engaged by the Edison Company to review all scenarios before they are turned over to the directors for production. This is another innovation by the Edison people and in view of the fact that Mr. Davies has made a life study of the drama, it will undoubtedly mark another step forward in the quality of Edison productions.

Mr. Davies is enthusiastic over the new work and declares that it has opened his eyes to the amount of art and imagination required in the writing of a scenario and that his visits to the Edison Studio convinced him that the production of a photoplay requires as much artistry and thought on the director's part as the staging of a three act play. He also makes an interesting statement of the possibility that the successful photoplay authors may in time contribute to the stage itself so that "in time the moving picture industry may give to the theater a brand new crop of budding and blossoming American dramatists."

BIGGER MAJESTIC COMPANY.

C. J. Hite has decided his New Majestic "stock" in Los Angeles isn't big enough. So some more players have been added to the line that wanders to the pay-window on Saturday. Howard Davies, legitimate stage fame, is one. Then there is Vera Sisson, who is touted as a beautiful girl of the very-very kind. Billie West, who worked in American pictures, is another. Then comes Victory Bateman, who was a Majestic about a year ago, but quit to go back on the stage. And now she has gone back to the Hite organization, "for keeps," she says. Mr. Hite says the increasing of the company won't stop with the signing of the players denominated above. He intends to make it the biggest picture "stock" on the Coast. J. C. Epping is the new business manager.

NEW UNIVERSAL STAR.

Katherine Kerrigan to Join Brother Jack in Great Production of "Samson and Delilah."

Following considerable negotiations with the Henry W. Savage's "Everywoman" company by Manager Isadore Bernstein of the West Coast company, Katherine Kerrigan has been secured to play opposite her brother, Jack in the forthcoming feature, "Samson and Delilah." Miss Kerrigan, widely known as one of the most popular leading women on the road, appears in one of the lead roles in the play, "Everywoman," and it was only through the personal influence of her brother and Mr. Bernstein that she was induced to leave the company long enough to appear in the production. She is to receive a top-notch salary. When finished she will return to Savage's company.

"Samson and Delilah" will be, perhaps, the largest and most stupendous feature photoplay yet produced at the Universal Pacific Coast studios. Miss Kerrigan will be cast as Delilah and Jack (Warren) Kerrigan will play Samson. Probably in four reels, many of the elaborate scenes will employ hundreds of extras, besides the dozen or so playing the leads.

Miss Kerrigan's natural characteristics and physical attainments will conform beautifully to the demands that will be made upon the part of Delilah, the famous adventuress of biblical history. Tall, with a mass of dark hair, she has a face that is exquisite in its classical beauty. Her eyes are black and flashing, her lips are full and there is perfect contour of body. Mr. Kerrigan, of course, will make a splendid Samson with his massive physique and finished technique as an actor.

"THE FATAL RECKONING" (Ammex).

An interesting production by the Ammex Company is offered by the Exclusive Supply Corporation, under the title of "The Fatal Reckoning." It is a two-part Western subject possessing a good story which is creditably portrayed. The photography is good and many of the scenes are interesting. The story opens with an emigrant wagon train which rounds up on the prairie for the night. One of the men with his little son leaves the train in search of water and discovers gold. Returning to camp he secures part of an old letter from his partner upon which to write his claim to the location and goes back to the spot where the discovery was made. While busy staking his claim a band of Indians swoop down upon the wagon train and kill all the emigrants except one man, his partner, who manages to hide himself in one of the wagons.

Later the three survivors are seen struggling along with but one horse to draw their wagon and what few effects they have saved from the slaughter. But even under these awful conditions human passions are displayed; the two men have a quarrel and the father of the little boy is thrown over a steep precipice and left by his antagonist for dead. This man takes the little boy and brings him up as his own son, and in after years the man becomes prosperous as the owner of the mine, and happy with his daughter and adopted son, the latter becoming a promising physician.

The man who was supposed to have been killed by the fall over the cliff was found by some prospectors and recovered from his injuries, but suffered an entire loss of memory. Some chance takes him back to his home town, and, while wandering about the streets, he is struck by an automobile driven by the young physician. Taken to the hospital the man recovers his memory. The fragment of a letter further serves to identify him, for it contains the name of the man who threw him over the cliff and afterward adopted his son and stole his mine. The young doctor takes the letter to his supposed father, who goes to the hospital and recognizes his old partner whom he supposed to be dead. The shock of the meeting is too great and the faithless partner dies of heart failure. Father and son are united; the mine is transferred to its rightful owner, and the boy marries—is enabled to marry the girl whom he supposed to be his sister.

It is a happy ending to a rather tragic story and will please most picture theater patrons.

NEW KIND OF CONDENSER.

A large consignment of a new variety of condensers has arrived at the offices of the Kleine Optical Co., Chicago, and are now being offered for sale. Manager Frank Hough claims that this particular condenser is an actual lens made of optical glass and cannot discolor as is the case with the common glass usually moulded into lenses.

ERROR IN KALEM AD.

In our issue of November 8th, an error occurred in the Kalem advertisement of Dion Boucicault's play, "The Octoroon." The advertisement read that this drama would be issued in two parts, when, as a matter of fact, it will be put out in three parts.

At the Sign of the Flaming Arcs

By George Blaisdell.

THE news that Acton Davies is to review Edison scripts is mighty good news. Mr. Davies is the dramatic critic of the Evening Sun and has been for many years. In this time he has witnessed all the theatrical productions of the metropolis. Certainly he knows the drama. So also does he know how to write of it in most interesting style. It is always a pleasure to read his stuff. In the first place, he is one of those who always finds more matter for praise than for dispraise. Of course, he has been known to be irritated, as for instance recently he said, in speaking of the effort of a certain woman, that "not even an act of Congress could create her an actress." If a man's writing be an index to his temperament, it may be inferred that Mr. Davies has a keen sense of humor. As the critic will undoubtedly handle only the finished script and not the torrential influx of the raw article, it is safe to assume his optimism is to be preserved to us.

The acquisition by the Edison forces of Mr. Davies, if only in an advisory capacity, spells advance. It means the addition to the producing energies of the motion picture industry of one more man who knows. It will take time for the work of one individual to make itself felt in a studio. It will take even longer for its influence to be felt in others. Nevertheless, the Edison Company is beginning at the right end. Whatever strengthens the story on which the motion picture is based fortifies the foundation of the industry.

* * *

William Welsh, who for a long time has been a member of the Imp Company, has signed up with the Biograph Studio. In the company of Mr. Brenon and in the last six months with Mr. Tucker he has done excellent work. He has had much stage experience.

* * *

Howard Crampton has been added to the regulars of the Imp Studio. Mr. Crampton has appeared in many of the productions of Mr. Baggot and Mr. Tucker.

* * *

"Pop" Hoadley, old-time scenario man, will, on November 9, transfer his affections from the Universal to the Biograph. He will be engaged in transforming plays into scripts. None can do this same thing any better than Mr. Hoadley. Superfluous as it may sound, in view of this selfsame fact, here's wishing him all kinds of good luck.

* * *

Construction work is being pushed at the Vitagraph plant. Like the population of New York town, the Flatbush studio gets bigger every year. In the main plot there is being erected a glass-inclosed studio. The structure completes the square of buildings. It is 55 by 110, and when ready for business will materially increase the company's facilities. In the new plot across the street there has been erected a large stage. The writer saw there last week a "drop" 85 by 40; it was a pretty big painting—and a good one. In the foreground there was in process of erection a two-story "marble" affair which later will be destroyed by fire. By its side is a great tank nearly ten feet in depth.

Director Fred Thomson has just returned from a two weeks' trip with a large company to Boston and its environs. The production on which the party was working will be the largest the Vitagraph has ever filmed.

Director Ned Finley has returned from North Carolina with his company.

Walking across the yard Saturday afternoon was as rough-looking a pirate as ever scuttled a ship. It was not at the first glance that under the forbidding exterior was to be seen the genial countenance of the Nestor of the Vitagraphers — "Bill" Shea. He is the veteran of them all — unless Commodore Blackton sees fit to dispute the distinction with the old-time player. Mr. Blackton told the exhibitors at their Brighton Beach banquet last July how he "worked in the pictures" in the early days. Mr. Shea was garbed as a tramp with several weeks' growth of beard and sundry scars ornamenting his face. We walked across the quadrangle and Mr. Shea indicated a fire escape where, the day before, he had a tussle with Hughie Mack. It was ordained that the big fellow should throw him from the frail structure. In the muss, Mr. Shea's leg caught in the railing and he hung head down. There were only a few feet to fall and there was plenty of soft stuff to break the force of the drop. It was a scene which, of course, had not been rehearsed. The entanglement was an emergency not provided for. To his distress at the prospect of spoiling a scene was added the very natural fear on the part of Mr. Shea that the great bulk of his antagonist would carry away the supports, with the smaller man on the wrong side of the debris. Mr. Mack acted quickly, however. He extricated the burglarizing tramp and threw him over again! While there were moments of suspense the film recorded a better situation than the script called for.

* * *

We are apt to think when we see a player on the screen that we also see the man behind the actor. There are times when we can—when we meet him face to face we find revealed the man we had pictured. Not always. Augustus Carney is an exception. Sitting in a Broadway cafe the other afternoon there was about him nothing to remind one of the West—of mountain and plain, of field and stream, of men with the bark on, of guns and "bewhiskered pants." Despite the fact that there was on the table between us that which ordinarily furnishes inspiration for conversation, "Alkali Ike" had little to say of the land where for four years he had made his home. His interest is more in good stage productions and in books. He said he had had several years of quiet, of "rusting"—with little in the way of diversion other than that provided by the meager news of a small community. He spoke most appreciatively of the character of Miss Vedah Bertram, the late leading woman of the Western Essanay Company. He said she was of unusual education and marked refinement and had a large grasp on French and English literature.

Mr. Carney was strong in praise of Forbes-Robertson's "Hamlet," which he had witnessed the night before. It is not difficult to understand why the comedian is an admirer of the Dane. He, too, is a dreamer and a philosopher, as far from what we would estimate him by his riproaring pseudonym as ice is from hot water. His nearest approach to an outward expression of mirth is a dry chuckle. That he is in love with the quiet of Western solitudes is plain. When asked if he had in mind what he would do when he returned from his contemplated lengthy vacation abroad, he said: "I think I'll go West."

* * *

Well, well. You just can't keep a good man out of pictures, once he has had a fair crack at them and made a hit. Here's word comes across the continent from Los Angeles that John Steppling is going back on the screen. Director Al Christie, of the Nestor brand, has signed up the well-known player for his comedy company. Manager Bernstein, of the West Coast Universal forces, is to be congratulated on his acquisition; so, too, are the patrons of the Universal program. Mr. Steppling has done good work before the camera. One of the last portrayals he did was John Durbeyfield in "Tess." Those who have seen it know what strength he can bring even to a strong production.

* * *

If some of the perfervid sweet young things who are so sure that they would just love to "be in the pictures" were compelled to undergo the experience sustained by Miss Laura Sawyer and one of her sister actresses at the Famous Players studio one day this week, it is very likely their enthusiasm as well as their blood would encounter a shock. A shipwreck scene was being put on, one of the thrilling situations in "The Port of Doom." Miss Sawyer and her fellow-player had been immersed in water—it was cold, too—up to their necks. They were lifted from the water and passed through a small aperture which had been cut in the side of the half-submerged cabin. It was a most unpleasant adventure, yet it was looked upon as part of a day's work.

* * *

The housewarming of the Screen Club has been set for November 15. Before that date it is said that the new home of the Screeners will be completely equipped. It's pretty shipshape right now.

* * *

Admirers of Little Mary will see her in one of her strongest productions in the four-part Famous Players "Caprice." The character fits her like a glove. It is said the directors of the picture gave her full scope in the portrayal of the mountain maid Certainly the result is a charming comedy-drama. It is no small undertaking to attempt to sustain a comedy characterization for four reels. There is no question of the success. Miss Pickford plays Mercy with an abandon, with a verve, that will please as well as surprise her friends.

* * *

Arthur Mackley (the sheriff) typewrites in from Los Angeles just to say "Howdy." He is back in his Western home after an absence of five months, during which time he has with Mrs. Mackley made a European trip. He touched quite a number of geographical points on the way out, including Chicago, Birmingham, Denver and Galveston. He says further that he will have some news to tell us very soon. The sheriff has taken to the typewriter, presumably as a means of recreation; his letter, which he confesses is his second attempt to play this kind of piano, he takes pains to point out is friendly. Quite unnecessary. Far be it from us to speak other than softly when referring to what others may accomplish with one of these wonderful contrivances.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE SEA ETERNAL" (Lubin).

This picture tells a dramatic story of the sea coast, the characters being fishermen and fisher-wives. The salt of the ocean permeates every situation and the rugged toilers of the village are true to the dangerous and weather beaten life. Hearts beat warmly beneath the fustain and love in the end conquers the eventualities of adversity and villainy. It is one of the Lubin high class melodramas in two reels and employs the wonderful cast of the Arthur Johnson Company, Mr. Johnson playing the leading role.

John Tapley, a fisherman; Mary, his wife, and their baby live happily at the point until John Mason comes to buy fish, outbidding Corson, the local dealer. Mason pays attention to John's wife, who innocently enjoys it. Corson spreads a scandal and John thrashes Mason and chases him from the village. John quarrels with Mary, but really believes her innocent. Mason returns while John is absent and tells Mary that her husband has been injured and offers to take her across the channel intending to keep her out all night. A storm blows up and the boat is tossed at the mercy of the waves. John sees the boat, but recognizing his wife roars that Mary and her lover can go to damnation. That night neighbors find John with the baby in his lap crying. Corson's wife takes the child and John goes away and gets work in another village. Years pass and Corson's son Ned falls in love with John's daughter Nellie and takes her away and marries her. Crazy Mary takes a great liking to the young bride, who really is her daughter, but does not recognize her. John has wandered the country over to find his child. Corson and his wife have died, but John locates Ned and his wife. One night Ned is at sea and Nellie is calling for him, the storm is terrific and Crazy Mary takes a leaky boat to bring him back. The boat is sinking when John swims to Mary's rescue. Mary and John are both saved and the reunited family are made doubly happy by the addition of a new member, for while John was rescuing Mary, Nellie's baby was born.

Scene from "The Sea Eternal" (Lubin).

ERROR IN ADVERTISED PRICE.

In a recent issue of the World a serious mistake was made in the price of Brightasday Curtain Emulsion. The Minneapolis Branch of the Laemmle Film Service has been advertising this article for some time at the price of $7.50 but through an error in copy, the price was incorrectly given as $2.50. Readers will please note the correction.

"FOR LOVE OF A MAN" (Reliance).

The oft-repeated author's lament that their character drawings have suffered through the fault of the actors or the ideas of the stage director, finds ground for argument in the production "For Love of a Man," offered by the Reliance Company in two acts and sixty-six scenes with Carey Lee, the clever actress-authoress, in the leading role.

The drama is written around a character that calls for the most delicate kind of acting and Edgar Lewis, who staged the offering, solved a difficult problem when he cast the one who conceived the character, to portray it, and in addition, gave her authority to carry out her own ideas to the smallest detail.

A beautiful girl, capable of great deeds and noble sacrifices, is in love with a handsome but dishonest man. Finding that he has committed a theft she is accused of the crime and accepts a long prison term in order to shield him. During her imprisonment she learns of his marriage to another. Gradually she becomes cynical and hardened, finally casting her lot with her jail companions who continue their lives of crime after their release from the penitentiary. But her better nature is again brought to the surface after she has succeeded in causing the man for whom she suffered disgrace, to receive his just punishment and the drama reaches a strong and natural climax without the woman having committed any wrongful act.

Scene from "For the Love of a Man" (Reliance).

A striking use of that powerful text, "Judge Not That Ye Be Not Judged" as a sub-title dissolved into the final scene of the feature brings this strong drama to an unusual close. Released November 15th.

BARBOUR TAKES VACATION.

Edwin Barbour, the veteran dramatist, now of the Lubin Scenario staff, sailed November 1, for a short vacation in Bermuda. Mr. Barbour is recovering from an illness and expects to write some more feature stories during his absence from the studio.

W. N. SELIG GOES WEST.

W. N. Selig, having effectively disposed of a vast mass of personal correspondence that had accumulated on his desk during the interim of his European tour, not to mention the taking up and adjustment of a world of detail in association with his big interests here, packed up his grip and left for the West. He expects to visit a few days with the stock company at Prescott, Ariz., and then proceed immediately to Los Angeles.

THE GOLDEN GATE WEEKLY.

A regular reel of topical pictures, to be known as "The Golden Gate Weekly," will be released by the California Motion Picture Company, of San Francisco. Its sponsors believe that there is ample material on the Pacific slope to provide for such an issue every week, especially with the Panama Canal, the Mexican question, and the Panama Exposition occupying a prominent place in the news of the day. The producers have been successful in getting many exclusive features, including Felix Diaz landing in San Francisco, the more prominent of the Portola Festival activities, the laying of the corner stone by Mayor Rolph for the new San Francisco City Hall, interesting happenings at San Francisco's famous Mechanics' Fair and also at the newly instituted Land Show and Jim Logan setting a new pacing record.

Scene from "Golden Gate Weekly."

The film is being shown on some of the best known vaudeville circuits as well as in a multitude of individual motion picture theaters. The San Francisco Orpheum uses the film every week. The Sullivan-Considine and the Pantages are among the other prominent circuits showing the pictures.

NEW UNIVERSAL PLAYS IN THE MAKING.

Director Joseph MacDonald is featuring J. Warren Kerrigan in a two-reel Irish romance, entitled: "Rory of the Bogs." The big production is about completed. It is a story of the 18th century and more than three hundred people are used in the cast.

Francis J. Ford, the inimitable impersonator of Abraham Lincoln, has just completed a two-reel production, entitled: "The Sorrows of Lincoln." It deals with the great statesman's life from his rail-splitting days to his death. His love affair with Ann Ruthledge, which part is played by Grace Cunard, is depicted at length. His debates with Douglas are shown. In fact, all the many circumstances which led the great man to sorrow, form a part of the story.

"Her Off Day" has just been completed at the West Coast studios. The story is a ripping comedy in which Laura Oakley takes the leading role.

A drama of the early West, quick in action and of closely woven plot, is in the course of production by David Hartford. Frank Lloyd plays the role of a storekeeper, Cleo Madison plays the daughter, and Vester Pegg sustains the part of Bill, a young miner. The title is "A Twice-Earned Bride."

Robert Leonard is busy with the production of an interesting story which shows the moral salvation of a drunkard brought about through the agency of a remarkable dream. The title of the story is "The Dream." Joseph Singleton impersonates the chief of police and Helen Case plays the role of Salvation Army girl.

The seventh adventure of Mike and Jake is being produced by Director Allan Curtis. The production of "Mike and Jake as Heroes," is all but completed.

Director Daly's next picture will be "The Militiant," a two reel drama. The play was written by Calder Johnstone, Eastern scenario editor. The action revolves about a woman who is drawn between mother love and militiant tendencies.

"THE END OF THE CIRCLE" (Essanay).

The photoplay fans, especially those who are lovers of Western subjects, will be greatly pleased with Essanay's two reel drama "The End of the Circle." Eleanor Blevins, a newcomer in motion pictures, gives an excellent performance of her talents, and in playing the leading role assigned her in this feature, she not only demonstrates her dramatic ability, but gives a touch to the story that makes it a worthy attraction. Two men, both in love with the same girl, become jealous of each other. One, the villain, messes up things considerably and finally gets the other in wrong. True Boardman (the villain), finally marries the girl, but his brutality and fiendish desire for drink, kills what affection his wife might have had for him. Fred Church (the hero of this play), finds his former sweetheart dying from the white plague, but she recognizes him long enough to embrace and tell him that she loved him.

Scene from "The End of the Circle" (Essanay).

The photography in this piece is about the best we have seen in Western photoplays, and the backgrounds are superb. The portrayal of characters is excellent.

This production is booked for release Friday, November 21st.

"THE SERPENT IN EDEN" (Eclair).

The most exquisitely colored film turned out by the Eclair Company in many months is "The Serpent in Eden," in two reels, to be released Wednesday, December 17th, by the Eclair Company, on this side of the water. It tells a powerful and enthralling story of love unrequited, and contains scenes of pathetic tenderness. This Eclair film will be a sensation wherever shown, and add to the reputation of the Eclair Company for artistic pictures.

TWO KAY-BEES A WEEK.

Owing to the increasing demand for one reel Kay-Bees, the New York Motion Picture Corporation has decided, beginning the week of November 10th, to release two Kay-Bees a week, Tuesday and Friday.

"HUMANITY" (Apex).

Under the rather indefinite title "Humanity," the Apex Film Company has released a three part subject that is almost the last word in pictured melodrama. Apparently designed for the purpose of aggrandizing a peculiar people, it is adapted for general use by the elimination of certain distinguishing marks and becomes a thriller of the thrillers. The villain of the story becomes ruined by betting on horse races and is about to kill himself when prevented by a friend who offers him asylum until such time as his fortunes may be restored. This benefactor operates a gambling saloon for a high class clientele and the villain of the play takes an interest in the game to the extent of skinning a certain retired army captain through the aid of a servant and kills his victim in a scrimmage that follows.

Scene from "Humanity" (Apex).

After hiding his victim in the shrubbery the villain further attempts to debauch his friends wife and almost succeeds in pursuading her to run away with him before his treachery is discovered. When confronted with the evidence of his villainy by the outraged benefactor the traitor shows fight and a battle royal takes place which runs through almost an entire reel ending in a deserved death for the villain.

KLEINE'S "POMPEII" BOOKING IN PICTURE HOUSES.

It is announced that George Kleine will sent or share "The Last Days of Pompeii" for picture houses. As the terms are attractive, and the subject magnificent and spectacular, bookings are being made rapidly. Picture houses in unoccupied territory can obtain attractive propositions by writing to George Kleine's office at once. Such inquiries concerning all territory east and south of the Ohio River should be referred to the Kleine offices at 1476 Broadway, New York City. For all other territory they should address the Chicago offices at 166 N. State St.

LUBIN ENTERTAINS BASEBALL CHAMPIONS.

The Athletics, the World's Champion Base Ball Team, were entertained with an excellent program of select moving pictures and cabaret at the Lubin plant, Philadelphia, last Wednesday evening (Oct. 29). After the show a supper of a hundred plates and many cold bottles was served in the dinning room of the plant and admirably presided over by Wm. Kerry, Chas. Goldsmith, Colonel Joe Smiley, H. A. D'Arcy and John Ince. The usual songs, toasts and speeches were in order, the star number being a recitation, written and read by Clay M. Greene. Mr. Siegmund Lubin and Ira M. Lowry were the hosts.

WHO THE "PRINCESS" MAN IS.

The handsome dark-haired, dark-eyed leading man who plays opposite Muriel Ostriche in the Princess films, is playing his first "picture" engagement. He is Boyd Marshall, from the musical comedy stage and long a favorite with Kolb and Dill in Frisco and at the New York Hippodrome. He makes his film bow in the Princess reel entitled "Friday, the Thirteenth," as Miss Ostriche's superstitious husband. Several well-known picture actors were offered to Mr. Hite for the leading man job in the new brand, but he decided on the "new face," because in Miss Ostriche and Marie Eline, he had old favorites. The latter is the little lady who was famous for many years as "The Thanhouser Kid."

"THE FAITHLESS FRIEND" (Patheplay).

Two friends are working a mine together. Fred falls ill with smallpox and with fearless devotion Harold takes him away from the camp and nurses him back to health. A letter comes from Harold's sweetheart, Ruth, telling him of her father's death, and saying that she is now so independently rich that there is no need of his slaving for wealth, and that she wants him to come to her at once. He falls ill of smallpox contracted from Fred. Fred sees Ruth's letter and plans to use it to his advantage, so deserts Harold while he is asleep, goes to Ruth and tells her Harold is dead. After her first grief is over he woos and finally marries her. Harold, in the meantime, recovers, and is found by some wandering Indians and taken to their camp. Sick of humanity because of Fred's faithlessness he becomes a renegade and an adopted Indian. With the tribe he attacks a wagon train. Pursuing a fleeing white man, who is killed, Harold finds, to his surprise, that it is his unworthy friend. A white woman is then brought captive to him and he recognizes her as Ruth. He tells her of her husband's treachery, and as her old love for him is not dead he flees from the Indians with her to start life over again. A very good and well-acted story of western life.

Scene from "The Faithless Friend" (Patheplay).

PUT TABOO ON NO. 13.

Superstition causes great annoyance and confusion at Gaumont's offices at the World's Tower Building, New York City. Some months ago the floors were numbered from 1 to 29—No. 13 were in great fear and panic—so petitioned a change of number. 12A was substituted, but this only caused many friendly taunts and the fear of bad luck still remained. Now every floor above 12 has been changed, 13 is no longer 13, but 14. Politics are not in it when you hear the language used by those alighting at the 15th floor to find they have still to ascend to get to Gaumont's. Seeing there are some dozen film firms in this building, we hesitate to even guess at the feelings of the advertising manager on his tours.

Gaumont's two new reels released Saturday have proved a great success, so much so that they are faced with the problem of building a larger factory at Flushing, L. I., or to stop doing work for other film houses, as already they have a day and night staff constantly at work.

"MESSAGE FROM MARS" CASE ADJUSTED.

A deal of interest has been taken in the case of Charles Frohman against the United Kingdom Films and its American representative, James McEnnery, in which Charles Frohman sought to restrain the English manufacturers of the feature film, "A Message from Mars," from exhibiting in this country. "A Message from Mars" was produced in this country some years ago by Mr. Frohman, who starred Charles Hawtrey, the eminent actor, in the production which met with wonderful success all over the United States. By an agreement with Mr. Hawtrey, who held the acting rights, Mr. Frohman secured the full rights for the United States and Canada. Through the attorneys for the two factions an amicable and satisfactory arrangement has been arrived at and the interesting film is now ready for presentation to the public. The new York rights have been bought by Marcus Loew and the film will probably be shown in the Loew theaters within the next few weeks

Mr. McEnnery is also importing a fine English historical production, entitled "Charles I," four reels in length.

ENTERING ANOTHER FIELD.

Encouraged by the big success he is having with his Mirroroide Screens, J. H. Genter is hard at work on his new device for moving picture theaters, which is to be marketed under the name of the Announceoscope. We understand he is forming a separate corporation to handle the device. He was in New York City a few days ago arranging details and is very enthusiastic over the prospects. As well as showing the time continuously to the audience, the device can be utilized in a large number of ways for advance information on programs, etc. All patent claims have been allowed. We believe the ingenuity and utility of the Announceoscope will appeal to theater managers everywhere.

"20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA" (Eclair).

News is issued by the Eclair Film Company that they have obtained the exclusive rights for the entire world to reproduce in motion picture form, the works of the famous novelist, the late Jules Verne. Negotiations for this deal have been on for some time past and the Eclair Company were only able to successfully close the deal after paying an almost prohibitive price for these rights, and the amount runs into thousands of dollars. Among the first subjects to be launched on the market shortly, will be "The Children of Captain Grant," in seven reels, and "The Black Indies," in six parts.

James Durkin.

JAMES DURKIN WITH THANHOUSER.

Another legitimate leading man has deserted. James Durkin, of Broadway and "stock" note, and last of the celebrated Fealy-Durkin stock company, Denver, is a genuine every-week-in-the-year photoplayer now. Miss Fealy had joined the Thanhouser forces last July. Mr. Durkin has attached himself to the same pay roll. His first film is a two reeler called "The Junior Partner," released Tuesday, November 4th. Flo La Badie is his leading woman. Mr. Durkin says that the picture producer goes into detail a little more than the stage producer in the securing of realistic effects. This was because "The Junior Partner" script called for a fire scene and the director burned down a regular house.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE OLD CABINET" (Great Northern Special).

There is an absorbing story told in this feature film and many of the episodes are out of the ordinary along the line of sensation. Lieutenants Beck and Rodgers are members of the same regiment and boon companions. Lady Milton dies suddenly and as Hoff appears to be the next of kin, the family solicitor informs him that he is entitled to inherit the fortune left by the elderly lady. Before her death, however, she makes an attempt to reach an old cabinet, but the effort proves too much.

Later the possessions of Countess Milton are sold at public auction and after much spirited bidding, the old cabinet is sold to Lieutenant Rodgers. Time flies on apace and one day in a moment of abstraction Rodgers touches the spring of a secret drawer. In this he finds a will in which the countess acknowledges Lieutenant Rodgers to be her son by a former husband. Hoff is offered one third of the fortune if he will relinquish his claim to Anna and this is agreed to between the two lieutenants. But Hoff breaks his pact and engages the services of two thugs to waylay Rodgers and steal the will. The deed is committed, but the chase which follows is most exciting. Hoff has recourse to carriages and automobiles and in the meantime he is being followed by Rodgers. Finally in a bend in the road over a high cliff, Hoff's automobile goes awry and he dashes down the dizzy incline. When Rodgers reaches the form of his former friend he finds him dead and in his military blouse is the will which had been stolen by the thugs. The story is replete with thrills and engages the services of the many of the stars of the Great Northern Company.

Notes of the Trade.

EDWARD O'CONNOR, the Irish comedian of the Edison Stock Co., is a father for the third time, the latest being a boy. The score now stands: Boys: 2; girls: 1; having only been married about three and one-half years, Edward is in line for a Rooseveltian medal.

• • •

Albert E. Cawood arrived in New York recently, after traveling twenty-two thousand miles through the Arctic regions, making moving pictures for the General Film Producing Company of New York.

• • •

"The Subterranean City" or "Trailing the Jewel Thieves," the Kleine-Eclipse two-part release for Tuesday, November 25th, was hailed by critics as the most thrilling and exciting picture in their various experiences. The fall made by "Arizona Bill," a sheer drop of fifty feet onto jagged rocks below, is a wonder.

• • •

Among the exchanges who have entered their standing order for the new Laclede Western Features are: Weiland Film Company of Pittsburgh; Golden Gate Film Exchange of San Francisco and Los Angeles; Electric Theater Supply Company of Philadelphia; Northwestern Film Company of Portland and Seattle; Golden Gate Film Company of Denver and Salt Lake City; Electric Theater Supply Company of Baltimore.

• • •

The film booking agent of the Marcus Loew Circuit has contracted with J. Weinberg of Weinberg's Features, New York City, for thirty-four consecutive days of "The Missing Woman," the Films Releases of America subject.

• • •

Lillian Walker, well-known for her dimpled smile and her acting in the Vitagraph motion picture plays, has lost a valuable collie of which she was very fond. Whaddye mean—you lost your dog? Woof! Woof!

• • •

Heavily fettered in double-barred iron case, "Mose," one of the largest male lions in captivity, arrived at Universal City, Los Angeles, on October 23rd. This beautiful beast was acquired by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company especially to be used in Edwin August's production: "Into the Lions' Pit."

• • •

Miss M. B. Havey and Rosemary Theby, formerly of the Reliance, have joined the Lubin forces. Miss Theby should add much charm to the Lubin films. Miss Havey occupies a seat in the editorial department.

• • •

W. V. Ranous, for years a Vitagraph star and director, has just completed "Treasure Island," in three parts, for the program of Warner's Features, Inc. Mr. Ranous is of the opinion that this is just about the best thing he has ever done.

• • •

The big Shrine concert tour of California, with combined bands and patrols of San Diego, Los Angeles, Oakland, and San Francisco, in special fete at Santa Barbara on Tuesday, October 21st, was filmed by the American Film Manufacturing Company.

• • •

The real mistress of the denizens of the wild, is Kathlyn Williams, the leading lady of The Selig Polyscope Company, who goes into the lions' cage unaccompanied by any tamer; she has leopards following her about like kittens on The Selig Wild Animal Farm at Eastlake Park, California, and does not hesitate to toy with the treacherous tigers that are seldom respecters of persons. Miss Williams will appear as the heroine in the new series of wild animals plays, "The Adventures of Kathlyn."

• • •

George Kleine has fifteen companies now touring the United States and Canada with "Quo Vadis," and twenty-two with the Ambrosio version of "The Last Days of Pompeii."

STATE RIGHT PURCHASES.

NOTE.—Exhibitors are requested to keep this list on file or copy from it the names of purchasers in their particular territories. These lists will not be republished and we cannot undertake to furnish back information by mail to those who have neglected to keep a record.

"A LIFE FOR A LIFE" (Film Releases of America—3 reels).—Golden Gate Film Exchange, San Francisco; Northwestern Film Exchange, Portland, Ore., and Seattle, Wash.; Famous Players' Film Co., of Boston; Weiland Film Co., of Pittsburgh; Electric Theater Supply Co., Philadelphia; Electric Theater Supply Co., Baltimore; M. & F. Feature Film Co., Chicago; Exclusive Features, New York.

"CARDS" (Ramo—3 reels), for New York State entire, by Manhattan Feature Film Co., 341 5th Ave., New York City.

"THE WORKER" (Ramo—3 reels), same territory and purchaser as "Cards."

"A MESSAGE FROM MARS," for New York State by Marcus Loew, New York City.

ELEANOR WOODRUFF
The Ethel Barrymore of Motion Pictures
PATHEPLAY

CORRESPONDENCE

NEW ENGLAND AND CANADA.

THOMAS SPRY has acquired control of the Castle Square Theater at Boston, for Sunday nights, and is offering unusually attractive bills of vaudeville and pictures. Mr. Spry gave his first Sunday show on October 5, and full houses have been the rule ever since.

J. A. Eslow, general manager of the New England Universal Film Exchange, Boston, journeyed to Bangor Me., last week, and made arrangements for an office in that city. Mr. Eslow reports he has secured very satisfactory office accommodations in Bangor, and that Charles Stern, of his Boston office, has been selected to manage the Universal branch in Maine. Mr. Stern left the Universal recently to go with the World Special Films Corporation, but the attractiveness of the Bangor proposition was too good to pass up. Mr. Eslow reports that while in Bangor he jumped over to Old Town, Me., where he closed up the New Central Theater.

Mr. H. Hirsch is now at the helm of the New England office of the World Special Films Corporation, 1074 Boylston street, Boston. Mr. Hirsch comes from Chicago, where he has a very enviable reputation as a hustler.

Manager Bradley, of the Mutual's Boston office, has returned from a trip through Maine, and reports conditions to be satisfactory.

The Lyric Theater at Manchester, N. H., now flies the Universal banner in its lobby.

Mr. Harry F. Campbell put over a real good stroke of business when he closed with the Star Theater, Boston, for the complete Warner program of three-reel features each week. The service at the Star is first-run. In connection with the features the Star is using first-run Mutual service, contracted for with Manager Bradley.

The Everett, Mass., Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, made famous for its early training of the Brickley Brothers, and other well known athletes, is now a thing of the past, as negotiations have been completed whereby the entire Y. M. C. A. property on Cedar street, has been turned over to a moving picture concern. The purchase price of the property, almost in Everett Square, is said to have been $8,000, notwithstanding that the local assessors valued it at $18,000. The work of remodeling the property will begin at once. Photoplays and vaudeville are to be offered, but Manager "Nate" Brown's Broadway Theater, with its really big shows of Universal pictures and good vaudeville, will make things lively for the new house.

The Moving Picture Theater Managers' Association of Springfield, Mass., on October 16, waited upon Mayor John A. Denison, to acquaint his honor with the purpose and hopes of this organization. The delegation selected to confer with Mayor Denison was: Abraham Mardelberg, president of the association, and manager of the Princess theater; John T. Hudson, vice-president of the body, and proprietor of the Hudson theater; and Mr. J. B. Thomas, of the Globe Theater. Incidentally, this trio was selected with good judgment, and formed a good delegation. The questions that are principally interesting to the Association are Sunday licenses, the regulation of license fees, and one or two items of lesser importance. It is stated that this meeting was not without its desired effect on Mayor Denison, who is now looking into the exhibitors' troubles. The Association, in its turn, is pledged to see to it that every moving picture theater in Springfield is run on high moral lines, and promises to work for uplift, in every possible way. Of course the Mayor is not empowered to act on all things relative to exhibitors, as much of the regulation of the theaters is in the hands of the State police.

Mr. "Buck" Stern, formerly booking manager of the Mutual's Boston office, and later in charge of the Springfield office of the Universal, is now open for an engagement, and has several offers already under consideration.

Moving picture houses in Massachusetts using vaudeville acts, are also having a little excitement these days. In New Bedford things are very active—contract breaking being the cause. Judge Wentworth, in the civil court, handed down a decision on October 15, in favor of Manager Lefebre of the Orpheum Theater, awarding $25 and costs against an act, Lee and Mason. This act signed a contract with the Paragon Booking Offices of Boston, to play the Orpheum a split-week, opening in September. The act accepted the contract, and later received a contract from the United Booking Offices to play Bullock's Theater at Providence, for the same date, and did not appear at the Orpheum. Both of these houses offer bills of vaudeville and pictures.

It is stated that the Lyceum Theater at Milford, Mass., will run vaudeville in connection with its picture programs, as the Opera House, its competitor, is doing a big business with the mixed entertainment.

Milford, Mass., boasts of many secret societies, and these organizations have formed the idea of buying out the show of vaudeville and pictures at the Opera House, and then to sell their own tickets for the benefit of charity funds. This idea is very pleasing to Manager C. W. Currier of the Opera House, as he knows in advance what the returns will be.

Manager E. L. Knight of the Bijou Theater, at Springfield, Mass., ran the famous Players subject, "Chelsea, 7750," with Henry E. Dixey, last week, and the Bijou could not accommodate the crowds that flocked to see this masterpiece.

Mr. D. D. Scullen, manager of the Broadway Theater at Springfield, Mass., gives stock company shows weekly, but provides picture programs for his Sunday night audiences. Mr. Scullen had a birthday roll around last week, and was presented with a silver cigarette case and a traveling bag by his employees. Inscribed on the case was: "To our chief, from the Broadway tribe."

Mr. M. Cooper opened the Scenic Theater at Lowell, Mass., on October 6, with Mutual service. Business has been very satisfactory at the Scenic and Manager Cooper appears satisfied with both the outlook and with his programs. The house is well equipped and located.

The Premier Theater, Lowell, reopened on October 13, to good trade. General Film service has been contracted for by the Premier, which, as a rule, manages to secure its share of the available trade in its city.

Mr. William E. Reeves, manager of the Big Nickel Theater, at Portland, Me., found that his trade took a sudden leap forward on October 8, the day on which the Nickel opened up its new entrance, which has been greatly enlarged. The house is now one blaze of illumination, and bears no resemblance to its former self. The lobby effect is now really magnificent.

Mr. D. D. Leader, manager of the New Empire Theater, Portland, finds that his 1,400 seating capacity has been taxed to its utmost limit, since opening day, October 8. The Empire appears to be a winner, and is making more than good.

Mr. Harry C. Fitzgerald, manager of Fox's Theater, Waterbury, Conn., had unusually brisk trade October 13-18—carnival week. The theater was decorated in gala Autumn style, and the big Fox program of vaudeville and pictures played to big houses. Fox's now boasts of a Symphony orchestra, under the leadership of W. Jeroy.

Oliver Edwards, manager of Poli's theater, New Haven, Conn., has closed his season of stock company shows, and now offers vaudeville and pictures.

The Empire Theater, at East London, Canada, has closed. Poor business is the reason.

Mr. John P. Schiller, manager of the Unique Theater, London, Can., a straight picture house, is slated to become manager of the new theater being erected in London by the Griffin Company. The new house is to be by far the most expensive and beautiful theater in that city.

Mr. Kieran Kelty, who was recently made manager of the Opera House, St. John, Can., has resigned, and left for New York, having secured a contract with the Boston Opera Company.

A new theater is now well under way at Brantford, Can., and the house is to be called the Brant Theater. This house is to cost nearly $125,000, according to the owners. It will have every modern improvement, and a very large seating capacity. Policy: vaudeville and photoplays.

Mr. G. B. Odlum of the Grand Theater, St. Catherines, Can., plays vaudeville and picture programs very often, although a road show is offered now and then. Mr. Odlum finds that the photoplay policy is well liked by St. Catherines people.

The Boston Journal is publishing, each Saturday, a page devoted to photoplays, and things of interest to the trade generally. The Journal's page is all that can be expected and promises to grow more interesting. Providing the exhibitors, exchange men, etc., support the Journal's efforts on the moving picture page—which means advertising patronage—This paper agrees to do its utmost to help Massachusetts exhibitors kill the present 5-minute law in the next legislature. It also will agitate in favor of Sunday licenses for the theaters.

The Empire Theater, Chelsea, Mass., has been leased by the Gordon interests, which will run this house as a photoplay theater, starting November 10. On the same date, Gordon's Theater, Chelsea, will present stock-company shows. Before this these houses had been operated in opposition to each other, and the Empire did not do over well. It may show up more favorably under the new scheme.

The Star Theater, Boston, is now being repainted. The color scheme is white, giving the house a larger and neater appearance than before.

Mr. J. A. Emery, manager of the Star Theater, Bar Harbor, Maine, and secretary of the Maine branch of the Exhibitors' League, spent a couple of days in Boston last week and looked things over in general.

Mr. Frank Jones has sold the Back Bay Theater, Columbus avenue, Boston, to Mr. George Williams, of Haverhill, Mass. Mr. Williams has been in the theatrical business for some time, and expects to liven things up at the Back Bay. The Universal program will continue in this house, just as before.

Mr. John Burke reports that his new photoplay theater at St. John, N. B., is nearing completion, unless unforeseen delays arise, the house should open by November 15. The theater is an up-to-date affair, and should do a good business with the programs of Universal pictures.

Mr. H. Hirsch, manager of the World Special Films Corporation's Boston offices, at 1074 Boylston street, reports a very lively demand for the six-reel feature, "The Two Sergeants," and likewise for "Father John," in three reels. "Sapho," in four reels, is a real special of Mr. Hirsch's, and the picture is already booked solid.

Harry Asher, general manager of the Famous Players Film Company of New England, is making the wise ones stand up and take notice. A tremendous business has been developed, and a lease has just been signed, securing the entire fifth floor of the building at 31-33 Beach street, Boston. These premises give the Famous Players a floor space of nearly 6,000 feet. The film department is now located at 195 Pleasant street, and Mr. Asher is busy directing the plans for a toy theater, to seat 40 persons, to show exhibitors Famous releases. Besides the Famous Players line, Mr. Asher has many other high-grade multiple reel subjects, buying four new features each week.

"Les Miserables" is now in its tenth week at Tremont Temple, Boston, and this wonderful adaptation of Victor Hugo's masterpiece is doing a big business, with exhibitions each afternoon and night.

It was announced at the Boston Local of the Moving Picture Operators' Union meeting, on October 19, that the New England convention of the Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators' Unions in Manchester, N. H., last week unanimously indorsed the Boston Union's stand against schools which promise jobs to students when none but union men are employed in local theaters.

William C. Franke, business agent of the Operators' Union, was elected the third member of the board of trustees of the Central Labor Union, at an election held last Sunday.

Warner's Features, Inc., of Massachusetts, has just been incorporated for $30,000, with the following named as the promoters: V. H. Meyer, E. C. Harrington, and W. H. Butler.

John J. Barry, of the Theatrical Stage Employees' Union, was elected vice-president of the Boston Central Labor Union this week, receiving a large plurality over his various opponents.

John L. Sullivan, former champion pugilistic champion of the world, has entered the moving picture field! "John L" has purchased an interest in the Empire Theater, at Brockton, Mass. Motion pictures and vaudeville is to be the policy, and Mr. Sullivan also plans to enlarge the Empire, and generally improve it.

There's a little excitement these days at the Central Square Theater, Lynn, Mass., due to the carrying of a placard each afternoon and evening in front of the theater by the Theatrical Stage Employees' Local 73, stating that the house is unfair, in that it refuses to accept the union wage scale. This action on the part of the union immediately resulted in the filing of a bill in equity by the Central Amusement Operating Company, seeking an injunction to prevent this action from being continued. The men named in the bill are: Dennis F. Casey, Miles Moran, Michael Donahue, Charles Saunders and Percy Burke. The bill is returnable in the Boston courts this week. The case is considered to be in the nature of a test, as no such matter has before been brought to the attention of the local courts.

Mr. Louis D. Cohen is having erected at 282 Bennington street, East Boston, a photoplay theater, to cost $40,000. The plans were made by architect Nathan Douglas, and the theater is to be a first-class affair.

Searsport, Me., was all excitement when the Edison photographers took their departure. The Edison folks spent the summer in Searsport, and became very popular with the townspeople. All kinds of demonstrations took place, even the minister eulogized the players from the pulpit, calling them "serious, honest people." The school children all turned out, carrying flags with the slogan: "Good-by Mary Fuller." Judge J. B. Black made a complimentary farewell speech, expressing the pleasure Searsport people found in the Edison players, and saying he sincerely hoped they would return next year. Walter Edwin, director of the Company, replied to this address, expressing the company's appreciation. The Searsport band then played "Auld Lang Syne," and the players were off to Belfast. Miss Fuller was presented by Judge Black, with a bound volume of the "History of the Twenty-sixth Maine Regiment." All in all it was a regular fête day at Searsport.

Leon Schlessinger, formerly of New York, has taken over the direction of the Monarch Theater, Edmonton, Canada, which he will operate as a photoplay house. The Monarch is to be considerably improved under its new manager.

The New Bedford Theatrical Managers' Association, a new organization, was formed on October 7, at a meeting held at the Orpehum Theater, Plymouth, Mass. Mutual protection and dealing with film exchanges, vaudeville acts, musicians, operators, etc., as an organization, and not singly, as individuals, are the purposes of the body. Practically every house in New Bedford was represented at the meeting. A committee was selected to draft by-laws, consisting of H. R. Lefebre, G. W. Allen, Jr., and E. D. Davenport. Messrs. Senna, Eaton and Kollisch were appointed to swing the three houses not members into the organization. The committee on by-laws is now preparing its report, to be read at a coming meeting.

New Britain, Conn., is strong on that country store proposition. Manager P. S. McMahon, Keeney's Theater, has a country store each Wednesday night, to draw trade to his vaudeville and picture program, while Manager J. N. Carr, of Fox's Theater, pulls the same stunt each Monday and Thursday night.

Mr. David R. Bluffington has succeeded Mr. Charles Petford as manager of the Woonsocket Theater, at Woonsocket, R. I. Vaudeville and pictures will continue as the policy, just as usual.

They're just bound to run Sunday night concerts up in Edmonton, Can., and here's the way they do it. Instead of charging regular admission prices and selling tickets, collection plates are placed at the doors. This stunt is not in violation, directly or indirectly, of the Lord's Day Act of Alberta, according to a majority judgment just handed down by the Supreme Court of the Province. The ruling followed proceedings in the case of Grant Churchill, owner of the Portola Theater, who, with three other Edmonton theater owners, had been fined $40 and costs by Inspector Raven in the Municipal Court, on the charge of opening the moving picture theaters on Sundays.

Mr. William Holler, of London, England, visited Toronto, Can., this week, in the interests of the British-Canadian Amusement Company, a corporation about to open theaters in Canada.

The Royal Theater of Hamilton, Can., has a new manager in the person of George E. Brown, formerly assistant Manager of the Princess Theater of that city.

Manager Nate Brown, of the Broadway Theater at Everett, Mass., finds trade booming with Universal service and good vaudeville acts.

The New Imperial Theater, St. John, Can., built by Keith and Albee, of New York, is doing a turn-away business. It is the best house in this city.

HENRY.

ILLINOIS.

W. R. WRIGHT, of Stoy, has rented the Grand Opera House at Oblong and is giving nightly picture shows.

A. H. Heaton, of Roodhouse, Ill., has gone to East Moline, where he has accepted the management of the Pastime Moving Picture Theater.

A moving picture show has been opened in the Eversole Hall at Gardner, giving three performances a week. The opening was held up by the town board until a second exit was constructed from the second floor, where the shows are given.

Mrs. W. L. Osborne has sold the Maze Theater at Monmouth to Mrs. Sena Christensen, who has assumed charge. S. P. Christensen will act as manager.

Extensive plans for local pictures recently were announced by Manager George Gatts, of the Warrington and Playhouse theaters at Oak Park, who, with others, is interested in a moving-talking picture apparatus recently invented by Knapp Creiger, of Chicago. A room has been secured above the Harvey garage in Oak Park, which already has been stocked with a number of scene sets, and arrangements have been made with Frank H. Livingston, who was two years with a prominent producing company, to act as director. In addition to a number of subjects in Oak Park and River Forest already selected for a feature reel, Manager Gatts contemplates the inauguration of an Oak Park weekly.

Nearly all the picture houses in Peoria and Pekin are reported to have signed the agreement with the new operators' organization formed in that city, fixing a minimum wage of $18 a week. The new organization has been affiliated with the Peoria Trades Assembly and the State Federation of Labor. The Columbia, Star, Princess, Empress, De Luxe, Liberty, Imperial, Illinois, Sangamon, Lyceum, Royal, Majestic and Orpheum, of Peoria, and Idle Hour, Court and Dreamland theaters, of Pekin, have signed.

Walter Coddington has moved from Delavan to Toulon to look after his moving picture interests at the latter place.

Picture houses in Sterling and Rock Falls are co-operating with the Commercial Club of the twin cities by displaying slides which read "Trade at Home and Make Sterling and Rock Falls Bigger and Better Cities."

The Oak Park Theater Company, of Oak Park, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $60,000. The incorporators are John C. Hodgson, Jr., I. B. Clendenin, A. Maynard, John C. Hodgson, Sr., and Andrew L. Burke.

The E. E. Fulton Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000 to conduct, operate and sell moving picture shows and manufacture and sell all supplies therefor. The incorporators are E. E. Ralph, H. and M. L. Myron Fulton.

J. D. Williams will erect a new building at Panama for his picture show.

W. F. Westfall, of Grayville, has purchased the Star Theater in that city.

W. D. Saunders, of the Saunders Theater at Harvard, has opened his place with vaudeville in addition to pictures.

Picture shows in Forest Park are hard hit by recent legislation passed by the village board. A license fee of $365 a year is provided, emergency fire fighting apparatus must be kept at each show and direct connection made with the nearest alarm box. The mayor is given the power to appoint an officer for each show house, who is to be paid by the theater management, the officer to be on duty from half an hour before the first show until half an hour after the shows have ended.

The bowling alley is being removed from the opera house at Plymouth, and Monk Brothers will open a picture show in the building.

The Wilmette Theater Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000 to conduct theatrical and amusement enterprises. The incorporators are Jerome J. Cermok, Harry Okin and Thomas J. Bagby.

The Theatorium, Charles Brechner, manager, at Grayville, is putting in a new front.

L. A. Burnstine, manager of the Empire Theater at Lincoln, recently had Lincoln filmed in the orthodox local reel manner.

Fred Halpin, of Pittsfield, is the operator for William Carroll, who has opened a picture show in the Burnett-Buell Opera House at Louisiana, Mo.

The Union Film Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000 to manufacture, sell and deal in films, apparatus, etc., and also to conduct theaters. The incorporators are William F. Wreden, Robert Jonas and Pierre Sacks.

The Lyric Theater at Carbondale has been closed by Hugh Crowell for want of patronage. Crowell recently purchased the place at a forced sale. This leaves Carbondale with only one picture show.

Lee Davis, who has been connected with the Pastime Theater in East Moline, has accepted a position with the Rex Film Company at Chicago.

"Quo Vadis?" and "The Last Days of Pompeii" each played to a week's good business at the Warrington in Oak Park, bridging a gap between the closing of vaudeville and the opening of stock.

The village board of La Grange does not believe in too much competition, having refused to grant a license to the third picture show.

Robert E. Lee has opened a moving picture show on the first floor of the Odd Fellows Building at Warren, giving performances every night except Sunday.

The Court Theater at Kankakee has been won over to Universal service.

A moving picture show has been opened in the old skating rink building at Mendon.

Charles Yates has opened the New Dixie Theater in the old Presbyterian Church building at Walnut and East Main Streets in Taylorville.

Frank Rice, the moving picture man at St. Joseph, who also is village policeman, is recovering from gunshot wounds he received when trying to arrest a yeggman.

The entertainment committee of the Rock Island high school recently gave a Saturday afternoon and evening exhibition of the three-reel picture "Lucille" in the assembly room. Holders of season tickets to the school's lecture course were admitted free, but others were charged a nominal admission.

Lyman H. Howe's moving picture show will be the star number of a lecture course given by the Young Men's Christian Association at Dixon.

The "K" Theater at Mattoon has been conducting a baby show. It also announced that a real live baby, not a pig nor an animal, would be given away. The same announcement was made by the Lyric Theater.

Censorship at Quincy, as advocated by the Adams County Federation of Catholic Societies, probably will be satisfactory to the photoplay men, as those seeking the censorship do not appear to be radical. At a conference of representatives of the society, city officials and representatives of the Colonial, Savoy, Princess, Hippodrome, Star, Bijou, Gem and Quincy theaters a tentative plan was outlined. The pictures themselves will not be inspected, but the managers will submit to the board, in advance of the exhibition, the title and a synopsis of the picture. The representatives of the Catholic Society said that not over half a dozen pictures which should have been condemned had been shown in Quincy and that no hardship would be worked upon the theaters. The board will have the right to halt at any time a picture which violates the new ordinance. The measure if passed will give the mayor the right to appoint the commission of two or three members. Quincy managers have hired special officers where necessary to keep the crowds from blockading the streets in front of their theaters.

The bad poster seems to be responsible for the adoption of a resolution by the city council of Aurora calling for an investigation of photoplay houses by the chief of police and the suppression of all picture that are not to "the moral standard" which is not specified. "I do not want you to believe that I am presenting this resolution in a great burst of reform spirit," declared Alderman Sylvester, who fathered the measure. "One theater the other day had glaring posters all over the front advertising pictures of a notorious bandit. I do not believe it is good for our boys and girls to see such pictures."

Police officials at Pekin have been checking up on the managers who sell tickets in excess of seating capacity and an order against the practice has gone out.

William C. Krenz has leased the town hall at Milan and will open a moving picture theater.

J. C. Ohms, as trustee representing the bondholders, purchased the Lyric Theater at Belleville at a sale by the Master in Chancery for $29,199.

The Richlieu Theater & Amusement Company, of Wilmette, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $35,000 to do a general theater and amusement business. The incorporators are E. R. Webber, P. H. Heffron and F. J. Kroulik.

Vester Goble, Jr., of Rock Island, who has opened a picture show at Geneseo, and Miss Marie F. Seidley, also of Rock Island, recently were married.

Samuel Bates, who has had experience as a moving picture operator, has reopened the Bijou on North Main Street, in Kewanee. A number of changes have been made in the house and new outfit purchased. A three-reel program will be offered the patrons.

Dreamland Theater at Mt. Pulaski, now has a monopoly on the moving picture business in that city, W. W. Snyder having closed his house.

The Colonial Theater at Joliet has announced a policy which it believes will prove popular in connection with its many multiple reel programs. Instead of the patrons sauntering in at any time they are invited to come at any of the three regular evening shows.

Louis Windsor filed suit in the Adams County Circuit Court at Quincy against the N. M. Kent Company to foreclose on a moving picture theater outfit at Eighth and Lind Streets to satisfy a claim for rent alleged to be due.

Joseph Ross has assumed the management of the Varietie and Princess Theaters at Canton. The Varietie will continue with pictures and the Princess will be the home of vaudeville as well as pictures. Will Duffield will remain at his present location at the Princess.

The case of Joseph Wilson who purchased the Danville Film Exchange at Danville from R. H. Canaan and William Roseberry, of Muncie, Ind., and later charged them with working a confidence game was settled out of court.

F. M. Edgett, of Earlville, has sold the Lyric Theater at Leland to A. D. Covert, of that place.

Herbert Johnston, former manager of the Lyric Theater at Champaign, announced that he expected to have his new house in Lafayette, Ind., open about November 15.

Architect B. L. Hulsebus, of Peoria, is said to be drawing plans for a new moving picture house, but the name of the owner and location have not been given out.

Patrons of the Crystal Theater at North Crystal Lake were entertained free by the management the night of the first anniversary of the house.

Dan Higgins, of Decatur, has awarded contracts for the erection of his new moving picture theater, to be erected in the 1200 block on East Eldorado Street in that city. The house which will seat 400 persons will cost about $5,000.

The Comedy, the oldest moving picture house in Murphysboro, has been re-opened under the management of Charles J. Breitenbach, who formerly was a violinist at the Star. Later he married the proprietor, Mrs. Smith, and the house afterward was sold to Jean Dagle and Mr. and Mrs. Breitenbach left Murphysboro. This will give the city four photoplay houses.

Manager W. L. Busby, of the Hippodrome at Quincy, has added one act to his show, making four vaudeville acts and three reels of pictures. Another angle of the new policy is that but one show a night will be given.

C. B. Martin has opened the Princess Theater at Lewistown, which he recently purchased from Dan Elliott. The opening was made with a three-reel show and a five-piece orchestra.

Dundee may soon have a little experience with the Sunday picture show question. It is reported that C. F. Windt, who runs the show in the Opera House block, has been contemplating a trial of the seventh day performances.

Manager J. J. Reilly, of the Princess Theater at Alton, has installed a new pipe organ.

The amusement company which had been giving picture shows at Amusement Hall in Rochester, has inaugurated a schedule of three shows a week—Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights.

One long show instead of two shorter ones is the new practice of the Majestic at Waukegan. In addition to the vaudeville about four reels of pictures are run.

The Peabody coal mine, near Nokomis, one of the most modern as far as equipment and safety appliances are concerned, was recently filmed by the Industrial Moving Picture Company, of Chicago. Some especially good underground views were secured by the cameramen.

The new theater which Carl Pearson, proprietor of the "Little Gem" airdome, is erecting at Rushville, is to be used principally for moving pictures. It will seat 1,000 persons.

C. E. Kepner, of the Grand Theater at Mattoon, has added one act of vaudeville to the four reels of pictures which has made up his program. If it does not go, with no advance in price, it will be a strictly photoplay house.

The Aledo Opera House at Aledo, which has been under the management of J. W. Edwards, has been leased to Mrs. Vivian E. Gemelin, formerly connected with vaudeville booking agencies in Chicago. Motion pictures will play a large part in her ideas of entertainment and an illustrated song singer will be added for the photoplay shows.

D. J. Worth, 519 North Eighth Avenue, has purchased the Maywood Theater at Maywood.

Chris Giberson, of Hillsboro, recently secured the Grand Theater at Litchfield in a trade from Peter Biletto, but it is said that he will not run it, another change in ownership being likely.

Steve Bennis, formerly in the photoplay field at Lincoln, is now running a picture house at Virden.

A moving picture show is being given each Tuesday night in the old Congregational church building at Crescent City.

C. H. Osgood, the Galesburg cameraman, filmed events and beauty spots at Canton, which were shown at the Princess Theater.

Picture shows have been ended at the Coliseum at Paxton, and Manager O. M. Young is devoting his attention to roller skating and road shows.

Moving pictures are used in the municipal entertainments given on Saturday afternoons for children at Library Hall in Ottawa.

Local films in Kankakee went to the La Petite Theater.

Apropos of the movement by the Men's Class of the New England Congregational Church at Aurora for the installation of a moving picture machine, Rev. Allison Ray Heaps, the pastor, made a lengthy talk at a Sunday evening service, in which he gave seven distinct reasons why he favored the use of the moving picture in connection with religious service. "It helps to bring the church up out of the limbo of the outgrown and outworn into which it has been popularly consigned and puts some of the twentieth century spirit into it," he said in opening. His other six reasons briefly outlined are: The appeal is universal; they furnish wholesome entertainment; they make a quick impression; they have educative possibilities; aid in moral instruction and help the church in its mission. "The mission is to uplift the community, maintain the standard in culture, taste and thought and to put character into men and women. Here is a mighty asset," he finished. The plan is to use the outfit at least once a week for social occasions.

The city council at Freeport came to the rescue of the photoplay managers and at a special meeting passed an ordinance legalizing the operation of their houses on Sunday. The people voted last spring to allow the places to run seven days, but no ordinance had been passed and a new agitation had begun to close a vaudeville house.

The ten-cent admission for Saturdays and Sundays has been adopted by the Mirror, Lyric, Bio, Grand, American, Majestic, Barrymore, Central and Seventh Avenue Theaters in Moline.

Property holders in Rock Island filed a complaint with the city commission against the erection of a moving picture theater at Thirty-eighth Street and Fourteenth Avenue by J. S. Swartz and H. F. Paulsen.

Manager Hopper, of the Lyric Theater at Freeport, filmed the I. O. O. F. parade and temple in that city and made a good 800 feet for exhibition at his house.

The Lyric Theater, formerly the Grand, at Sycamore, which has been remodeled, will offer high class pictures under the management of C. A. Schaeffer.

Dempsey's Theater, at Peoria, has gone over from vaudeville and pictures to burlesque and vaudeville.

W. E. Hahn has purchased the interest of his partner, John Morrow, in the Cozy Photoplay Theater, at Shelbyville, and has taken charge of the house.

William Schuehert, manager of the opera house at Chester, Ill., has been negotiating with parties in Prairie du Rocher with a view to opening a picture show in that city.

"Governor" Yates has leased the old Presbyterian church in Taylorville and will use it for his picture show this winter. He has been conducting an airdome on East Main Street, in that city.

"Elgin in Motion Pictures" was shown at the Grand, in that city.

H. M. Fort, who has been conducting the Hippodrome, at Taylorville, has taken a long time lease on the Elk's Theater in that city.

Michael Dore, of Kansas City, Mo., has purchased the Grand Opera House, at Jacksonville, and will take possession of the property next March. Meanwhile W. H. Hunt will continue to manage the house, using a great many picture attractions.

The men's committee of the New England Congregational church, at Aurora, is planning to use pictures in connection with the church service and more especially in the Sunday school work. A sub-committee has been appointed to secure figures on the cost of installing a machine.

J. Quinn, manager of the Majestic Theater, at Rock Island, has let the contract for a new moving picture theater, to be erected at 712-714 Twelfth Street. It will be 40 x 80 feet. It is hoped to have it open by the first of December. Mrs. Quinn will have the management of the house. The name has not been selected and this feature will be left to the photoplay patrons of Rock Island.

H. S. Toops, of Kane, Ill., has purchased the moving picture show at Meredosia from Berger, Hedenberg & Parsons. The new manager will give two shows a week at Meredosia and two at Chapin. He will make his home in Meredosia.

It is reported that Steve Crawford may accept the management of the Temple Theater, at Alton, which is now managed by W. M. Sauvage.

Manager Burnstein, of the Empire Theater, at Lincoln, has announced his intention of re-christening it the Lyric and after remodeling and renovation it will hereafter be known by that title.

Steve Bennis has closed his airdome at Lincoln.

Moving picture shows of La Salle co-operated with the La Salle County Anti-Tuberculosis Society by allowing the nurse in charge to give ten-minute talks in their houses. They also used slides to help the work.

M. Brotman expects to have his new picture show in the Taxman building, at Ninth Street and Seventh Avenue, Moline, open soon. It will be known as the Dreamland. A four-piece orchestra will be a feature.

The new Capitol Theater, at Pekin, was passed by the State Fire Marshal's department after a thorough inspection.

The management of the Majestic Theater, at Mt. Vernon, in announcing its opening for the season declared that the house will be at the disposal of any worthy cause for a benefit performance. Three reels of pictures are given in addition to vaudeville attractions.

Owen Beeler has closed his moving picture show at Henry.

The Princess Theater, at Joliet, was on the alert to secure the films of the Knights Templars conclave, at Denver, Colo., and was the first house east of the Mississippi to show them. There was considerable local interest in the pictures, as Joliet knights won honors at the meeting.

All the children at the Mooseheart Lodge, the national home of that society near Batavia, saw the pictures of the dedication when they were shown for two nights at the Grand Opera House, in Batavia.

Village officials of Mokena contemplate doing away with the ordinance compelling shows to pay a license fee.

The Elgin Watch Company, which had some interesting films made at its plant in Elgin, is showing them in northern Illinois through local Young Men's Christian Associations.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

BUFFALO.

THE Buffalo Aldermen will consider the plan of the Nassoy Amusement Company to convert the three-story brick structure on the northwest corner of Pennsylvania Street and Prospect Avenue, Buffalo, into a moving picture theater. Opposition was raised to the plan some time ago. The petition for a permit to alter the building so that it can be used for a theater has been filed with City Clerk Harold J. Balliett, of Buffalo.

Manager Laughlin, of the Majestic Theater, Buffalo, had as a recent Sunday attraction, Lyman H. Howe's travel festival in moving pictures. The house was well filled. "The Grand Canyon of Arizona" was among the features.

Peter W. Langgard, a Detroit Dane, who made a trip through the whirlpool rapids at Niagara Falls recently for moving picture purposes, was nearly drowned. According to a report, Langgard was in the employ of the Graphic Motion Picture Co. He was swirled about in the maelstrom in a helpless motorboat for almost four hours. Fred Preston, of Niagara Falls, Ont., swam 150 feet into the whirlpool with a lifeline and towed the boat ashore. Langgard knew little of the river currents. His boat is fourteen feet long and four feet six inches in beam. It is equipped with a fourteen horsepower engine. In the whirlpool a piece of driftwood got afoul of the propeller and the craft was stalled until the occupant was rescued.

In an address at Peterboro, Ont., recently, President A. A. Ayer at a convention of Ontario and Montreal Baptists, said people crowd the picture shows and theaters, while the churches are half empty. To make Bible truths easy for the young, the speaker said Sunday schools should have been the first to use moving pictures.

The Family Moving Picture Theater, Buffalo, will have a new $25,000 organ and unit orchestra. Walter H. Foster has become manager of the house. He caters to a high class patronage.

As a result of a serious attack of stomach trouble, Charles S. Samuels, owner of the Samuels' Opera House, in Jamestown, N. Y., is seriously ill.

Moving picture machines may be installed in the schools of Toronto, Ont., in the near future. Trustee R. D. Fairbairn stated recently at a meeting of the Industrial Schools Association of that city that the Toronto Board of Education had been corresponding with Thomas A. Edison in regard to the matter.

The Peterson & Wood Theater, of Jamestown, N. Y., will soon be completed.

While digging for the foundation for the Griffin Vaudeville and Moving Picture Theater at St. Catharines, Ont., recently, men unearthed what is believed to be the tooth of a mammoth. The tooth weighs three pounds and is eight inches long by four or five inches thick.

Albert A. Fenyvessy, Buffalo, and David Cohen and Frank L. Cohen, Niagara Falls, have incorporated the Symphony Theater Co., Inc., of Buffalo. A printed report says the concern will give "theatrical and photographic performances." The capital amounts to $20,000.

Firemen rushed to the Family Moving Picture Theater, Buffalo, during a recent evening performance. There was no fire, but the private alarm box in the theater had struck an alarm and every piece of firefighting apparatus in the downtown section responded to the call. Fortunately there was no panic, as the audience filed out in an orderly manner. Moving pictures only are being shown at the Family, and, according to the manager, no person had any right to go on the stage where the alarm box is located. An investigation is being made.

Walter S. Wiles has petitioned the Buffalo Common Council for a permit to erect a one-story motion picture theater in Seneca Street, between Kingston Place and Cazenovia Street, in this city. He explains that there are few residences in this district.

The following Buffalo theaters are using the Mutual programs: Academy, 247 Main Street; Allendale, 203 Allen Street; Family, Washington Street and Broadway; Lincoln, 1406 Broadway; Victor, Genesee Street; Cozy Corner, 1065 Genesee Street; Bison, 842 Broadway; Broadway, 1185 Broadway; White, 378 Oak Street; Ideal, 616 Genesee Street; Majestic, 150 E. Ferry Street; Temple, William Street; Princess, 286 Grant Street; Bijou, Main Street; New, 649 Main Street; Garden, Pearl Street; Grant, Grant and Amherst Streets; Imperial, Court and Terrace Streets; Unique, Clinton Street; Belleview, Michigan Street; Lafayette, Lafayette Square; Savoy, 523 William Street; Abbott, Abbott and Bailey Streets. These theaters near Buffalo also use the Mutual pictures: Temple, East Aurora; Elite, Kenmore; A. C. Theater, Lackawanna; Star, Tonawanda; Pastime, Depew; Majestic, Niagara Falls; Hippodrome, Niagara Falls; Grand, Niagara Falls; Star, Akron; Savoy, Lackawanna; Star, Lancaster; Majestic, Lockport.

"We are having wonderful success with 'Ivanhoe,' the Imp feature," said F. S. Hopkins, manager of the Buffalo branch of the Victor Film Co. "In fact the demand is greater than we can take care of. We showed 'Ivanhoe' to great advantage in the new Allendale Theater, Buffalo, and repeated the feature in the Amuse U Theater, Elmira."

Samuel Newman is manager of the new Allendale Theater in Allen Street, owned by L. Michaels. Mr. Newman, who is Mr. Michaels' son-in-law, and E. M. Michaels are also interested in the house. Mr. Newman has been pleasing his patrons with the Mutual's "Forgotten Melody" and the Victor's "Ivanhoe" and "The Anarchist" films. A well-trained orchestra is a feature of this theater, which is located in a high-class section of Buffalo.

Harry Marsy, proprietor of the Happy Hour Moving Picture Theater, is trying to engage downtown club rooms for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Buffalo. Local and out-of-town exhibitors will be welcome at these quarters.

Henry Marcus, manager of the Academy Theater, has been appointed manager of the New Lyric Theater, Buffalo, by the Citizens' Theater Co. Mr. Marcus is well known in the theatrical and musical world. He opened the Academy Theater as a vaudeville and moving picture house on April 18, 1910, and has met with great success. He is an experienced showman. For fifteen years he was leader of the orchestra at Shea's Theater, Buffalo, and is personally acquainted with the leading vaudeville performers of the country. The New Lyric is a beautiful theater and draws patronage from all parts of the city.

The house plays vaudeville and moving pictures. The many friends of Mr. Marcus predict that he will have marked success in his new position.

BILLY BISON.

MICHIGAN.

TABLOID dramas have been added to the picture programs of the Colonial at Lansing.

Earl Tenno and Carl Trosee have opened a picture house at Bronson.

Moving picture men of Adrian have presented a petition to the city council asking that an ordinance be passed permitting the operation of the houses on Sundays. Another petition has been presented requesting that an ordinance, licensing and regulating the shows, be enacted. The ministers are fighting the Sunday show proposition.

Wires running to the machine of the Bijou at Flint, which runs pictures and vaudeville, were cut by a deputy state fire marshal.

The interesting spots in Owosso were photographed by B. E. Rann, of the Advance Motion Picture Company of Chicago.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

MISSOURI.

THE moving picture business is in remarkably good shape in Kansas City at present, the advent of cooler weather having been responsible for an influx of visitors intent on fall shopping. Most of the transients visit the moving picture houses in the business district, while the theaters in residence sections attract full audiences from surrounding territory nightly. All of the theaters now in existence are prospering and the wonder of the thing is that there are not larger and handsomer houses than do exist.

(Continued on page 754)

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co. Current Releases

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 9th, 1913.

REX—The Haunted Bride (Comedy-Drama)
CRYSTAL—When Duty Calls (Drama)
ECLAIR—The Amblystona (Zoology)
ECLAIR—Oh! What a Dream (Comedy)

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 10th, 1913.

VICTOR—The Passerby (2 parts—Drama)
IMP—On Pine Mountain (Drama)
POWERS—From Mine to Mint (Edu.)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 11th, 1913.

"101" BISON—Madonna of the Slums (2 parts—Drama).
CRYSTAL—Oh! You Pearl (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—Baldy Belmont Wins the Prize (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 12th, 1913.

NESTOR—In the End (Drama)
JOKER—Mike and Jake Among the Cannibals (Com.)
ECLAIR—Lady Babbie (3 parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly No. 88 (News)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13th, 1913.

IMP—Levi & McGinnis Running for Office (2 parts—Comedy)
REX—The Missionary Box (Drama)
FRONTIER—Caught at His Own Game (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14th, 1913.

NESTOR—Love, Luck and a Paint Brush (Comedy)
POWERS—Cracksman's Reformation (Drama)
VICTOR—His Wife's Child (2 parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15th, 1913.

JOKER—Almost an Actress (Comedy)
FRONTIER—The Bond that Binds (Drama)
"101" BISON—"Lasça" (2 parts—Drama)

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 16th, 1913.

REX—The Blood Brotherhood (Drama)
CRYSTAL—Out of the Grave (Drama)
ECLAIR—Unseen Metamorphoses (Scientific)
ECLAIR—Does Max Snore? (Comedy)

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17th, 1913.

VICTOR—Forgotten Women (Drama)
IMP—Who Killed Olga Carew? (2 parts—Drama)
POWERS—The Doctor's Orders (Drama)
POWERS—Cotton Time in Arkansas (Industrial)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, 1913.

101 BISON—The Raid of the Human Tigers (2 parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—Her Secretaries (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—Percy's New Mamma (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19th, 1913.

NESTOR—The Golden Princess Mine (Drama)
JOKER—Mike and Jake at the Beach (Comedy)
ECLAIR—Partners (2 parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 89 (News)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, 1913.

IMP—The Child Stealers of Paris (Drama)
REX—Fires of Fate (2 parts—Drama)
FRONTIER—Slim Becomes a Detective (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21st, 1913.

NESTOR—An Elephant on his Hands (Comedy)
POWERS—A Stolen Identity (2 parts—Drama)
VICTOR—Where the Hop Vine Twines (Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22nd, 1913.

JOKER—The Stinger Stung (Comedy)
FRONTIER—The Double Cross (Drama)
101 BISON—Wynona's Vengeance (2 parts—Drama)

Mutual Film Corporation Current Releases

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 9th, 1913.

APOLLO—Freddy Loosebelt from Africa (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Bravest Man (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—Looking for Trouble (Comedy-Dr)

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 10th, 1913.

AMERICAN—Martha's Decision (Drama)
KEYSTONE—Small Time Act (Comedy)
KEYSTONE—The Milk We Drink (Edu.)
RELIANCE—The Power of the Sea (Drama)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 11th, 1913.

THANHOUSER—The Campaign Manageress (Com-Dr)
MAJESTIC—The Rivals (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 12th, 1913.

BRONCHO—The Impostor (2 parts—Drama)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 46 (News)
RELIANCE—The Bracelet (Drama)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13th, 1913.

AMERICAN—An Assisted Proposal (Comedy)
DOMINO—The Ghost (2 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title not reported)
KOMIC—An Affair of Honor (Comedy)
KOMIC—Biddy on Her Mettle (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14th, 1913.

KAYBEE—Efficacy of Prayer (Drama)
PRINCESS—Friday, the Thirteenth (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—The Children's Hour (Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15th, 1913.

AMERICAN—The Drummer's Honeymoon (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Pitch That Defiles (Drama)
RELIANCE—For Love of a Man (2 parts—Drama)

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 16th, 1913.

APOLLO—Title not reported.
MAJESTIC—Title not reported.
THANHOUSER—Title not reported.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17th, 1913.

AMERICAN—The Trail of the Lost Chord (2 parts—Drama) 2000
KEYSTONE—Title not reported.
RELIANCE—Two Men and a Mule—Series No. 4 (Comedy)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, 1913.

THANHOUSER—Title not reported.
MAJESTIC—Title not reported.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19th, 1913.

BRONCHO—The War Correspondent (2 parts—Drama)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 47 (News)
RELIANCE—A Man and a Woman (Drama)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, 1913.

AMERICAN—A Modern Steel Plant (Topical)
AMERICAN—The Tale of the Ticker (Drama) 1000
DOMINO—The Witch of Salem (2 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—Title not reported.
KOMIC—Making Himself a Hero (Comedy)
KOMIC—Murphy's New High Hat (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21st, 1913.

KAY-BEE—Days of '49 (News)
PRINCESS—Title not reported.
THANHOUSER—Title not reported.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22nd, 1913.

AMERICAN—Calamity Anne's Dream (Drama) 1000
MAJESTIC—Title not reported.
RELIANCE—Her Father's Daughter (Drama)

Exclusive Supply Corporation Current Releases

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 11th, 1913.

GAUMONT—The Bank Messenger (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 12th, 1913.

GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 88 (News)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13th, 1913.

GAUMONT—The Heart of a Doll (Comedy-Drama)
ECLECTIC—The Fatal Plunge (Feature—3 parts—Dr.)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15th, 1913.

GAUMONT—The Fall of Constantinople, 1453 (Feature—3 parts—Drama)

Simplex

with motor drive approved for use in Chicago

THE Simplex projector has never failed to be approved by any national, state or municipal inspection bureau to which it has been offered for test.

Its very efficient safeguards against fire, wear and flicker appeal alike to inspectors, exhibitors and operators.

In the opinion of the trade all over the world, including the film manufacturers, it is indeed the

Original and Only

Peerless Projector

Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery

Why hesitate about placing that order? Act today and you will be a Simplex booster forever after.

Catalogue A tells much about it.

Made and Guaranteed by

PRECISION MACHINE CO.

317 East 34th Street NEW YORK

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 10th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—No Place for Father (Drama)
EDISON—Camping With the Blackfeet (Manners and Customs) 500
EDISON—Seth's Woodpile (Comedy) 500
KALEM—The Runaway Freight (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.) 2000
LUBIN—The Locked Room (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 66 (News)
SELIG—Phantoms (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
VITAGRAPH—Thieves (Drama) 1000

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 11th, 1913.

CINES—The Penalty (Special—2 parts—Drama)
EDISON—The Doctor's Duty (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—The Man Outside (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—A Miracle of Love (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Winter Sports in Switzerland (Sports)
PATHEPLAY—Siberia's Holy Lake (Travel)
SELIG—Movin' Pitchers (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Price of Thoughtlessness (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Canals of Venice (Travel)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 12th, 1913.

EDISON—His Nephew's Scheme (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—The Last Laugh (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—Our New Minister (Special—3 parts—Dr.) 3000
PATHEPLAY—Lizard Lore (Zoology)
PATHEPLAY—The Coast of California Near Carmel by the Sea (Travel)
SELIG—Trying Out No. 707 (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—An Elopement at Home (Comedy) 1000

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—Mrs. Casey's Gorilla (Comedy)
BIOGRAPH—Mixed Nuts (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The New Schoolmarm of Green River (Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—The Sea Eternal (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
MELIES—The Judgment of Buddha (2 parts—Drama)
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 67 (News)
PATHEPLAY—A Slave of Satan (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.)
SELIG—A Child of the Prairie (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Right Man (Drama) 1000

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14th, 1913.

EDISON—The Phantom Signal (Special—2 parts—Dr.) 2000
ESSANAY—The Boomerang (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
KALEM—The Fickle Freak (Comedy)
KALEM—Hypnotizing Mamie (Comedy)
LUBIN—When the Clock Stopped (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Butterfly Preservation (Entomology)
PATHEPLAY—The Slate Industry (Industry)
SELIG—A Cure for Carelessness (Comedy)
SELIG—The Matterhorn, Switzerland (Travel)
VITAGRAPH—Fanny's Conspiracy (Comedy) 1000

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—His Inspiration (Drama)
EDISON—Getting a Patient (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Alkali Ike's Auto (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—Against Desperate Odds (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Whose Is It? (Comedy) 400
LUBIN—Badly Wanted (Comedy) 600
PATHEPLAY—In the Same Boat (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—Jerry's Mother-in-law (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—A Cure for Suffragettes (Comedy)
BIOGRAPH—He's a Lawyer (Comedy)
EDISON—Nora's Boarders (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Stolen Tapestries (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—The Two Fathers (Comedy) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 68 (News)
SELIG—The Escape of Jim Dolan (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
VITAGRAPH—Tangled Threads (Drama) 1000

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, 1913.

CINES—For the Love of a Toreador (Special—2 parts—Drama)
EDISON—A Cause for Thankfulness (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—The Lost Chord (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Shadows (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Mr. Gaston from Paris (Comedy)
PATHEPLAY—Flowers of Japan (Horticulture)
SELIG—The Port of Missing Women (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—His Last Fight (Drama) 1000

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19th, 1913.

EDISON—The Girl in the Houseboat (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—The Usual Way (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Express Car Mystery (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
PATHEPLAY—By Impulse (Comedy-Drama)
SELIG—The Touch of a Child (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Why I Am Here (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—Farming in Ancient Thebes (Agriculture)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Detective's Stratagem (Drama)
ESSANAY—The Cowboy Samaritan (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Partners in Crime (Special—3 parts—Drama) 2000
MELIES—Title not reported.
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 69 (News)
PATHEPLAY—The Green-eyed Monster of Jealousy (Special—2 parts—Drama)
SELIG—An Actor's Romance (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Sale of a Heart (Drama) 1000

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21st, 1913.

EDISON—A Good Sport (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000
ESSANAY—The End of the Circle (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.) 2000
KALEM—The Laundress and the Lady (Comedy)
KALEM—The Dublin Horse Show (Topical)
LUBIN—His Chorus Girl Wife (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Natives of Australia (Manners and Customs)
PATHEPLAY—The Pond Snail (Zoology)
PATHEPLAY—In the Spanish Pyrenees (Travel)
SELIG—Outwitted by Billy (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Schemers (Comedy) 1000

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22nd, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—By Man's Law (2 parts—Drama)
EDISON—A Proposal Deferred—"Who Will Marry Mary" (No. 5—Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's First Arrest (Drama) 1000
KALEM—Primitive Man (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—The Harmless One (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Kenton's Heir (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Whimsical Threads of Destiny (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

---

Every Exhibitor Wants Prompt Service

That's what you'll get when you order from the AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO., First National Bank Building, Chicago. One, three and six sheet posters for all Licensed film. Let us have your standing order for posters. Announcement slides, photos of the players, poster frames, etc.

ORDERS SHIPPED SAME DAY RECEIVED

LOOK WHO'S HERE!

The Greatest Stars in the Film Firmament

Beautiful Photographs of the Leading Actors and Actresses Playing in Licensed Films

FINISHED IN SOFT GRAY Size 22" x 28"

Price 40 cents each, postage prepaid

Crane Wilbur, Maurice Costello, Francis X. Bushman, Gilbert M. Anderson, Marc MacDermott, Arthur Johnson, Mary Fuller, Ormi Hawley, Kathlyn Williams, Gwendoline Pates, Octavia Handworth, Lillian Walker, Lottie Briscoe, Alice Joyce, Carlyle Blackwell.

ALL MASTERPIECES OF PHOTOGRAPHY

A smaller size, 11" x 14", in same style and finish as above of Harry Myers, John Bunny, Guy Coombs, Ruth Roland, Beverly Bayne, Edith Storey, Earle Williams, Lillian Wiggins, Helen Costello, Dolores Costello, Charles Arling, Alice Joyce, Mary Fuller, Kathlyn Williams, Mary Charleson.

Price 20 cents each
Postage prepaid

---

OAK FRAMES

For the 11"x14" size photographs, silver gray, mission finish. Boxed ready for shipment, $8.50 each

GENERAL FILM COMPANY, Poster Department

(Formerly Photoplay Advertising & Specialty Co.)

71 W. 23rd Street and 440 Fourth Avenue, New York; 121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 1022 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; 7th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio; Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.; 218 Commercial Street, Boston, Mass.; 122 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; 737 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.

(Continued from page 749)

A freak ordinance passed in Kansas City last August was given its death blow recently, when an injunction was granted Charles W. Tyler, a well-known exhibitor, permitting him to conduct his theater on Twelfth Street without police interference. The ordinance is the most radical ever attempted in the West as far as animated picture regulation is concerned. The bill provided that no moving picture theaters could be operated within a certain district, regarded as the chief business section of Kansas City. The area restricted by the provisions of the ordinance covers four blocks, being bounded by Tenth and Twelfth Streets and Grand and Main. Shortly after the ordinance was signed by the Mayor, Mr. Tyler was arrested. He filed an injunction suit and this was given him recently. While this action on the part of the Circuit Court does not directly kill the ordinance, it means that it practically results in its abrogation, according to attorneys who are interested in the case. Frank L. Newman, formerly with the Mutual Film Corporation's Kansas City branch, will resume work on a theater at 1022 Main Street as the result of recent developments.

"The Fire Bug," a film shown at the Yale Theater, did not meet with the approval of the Kansas City authorities, and the picture was seized. Hereafter, according to Fred F. McClure, head of the recreation department, only pictures passed by the National Board of Censorship will be allowed to be shown without first undergoing inspection by his department. A testing outfit has been purchased and pictures which have not met with the O K of the Natiolal Board will be exhibited privately. The parts of the "Fire Bug" which were particularly offensive, according to the ideas of Mr. McClure, were eradicated and the film returned to the management of the house. Exhibitors of Kansas City are not particularly excited over this action, the majority handling films which have been approved in the East and secured through regular channels of distribution. The recent incident was the second of the kind which has taken place in Kansas City recently.

The Kansas City Photoplay Association is a dead issue for the time being, at least. The organization has failed to meet recently, despite the fact that a good many developments could have been handled better by it than by the exhibitors as individuals. Efforts are being made to revive the local association, and it is believed that these will prove successful. Film exchanges and others are back of the movement toward a resuscitation of the organization, and this probably will be effected shortly.

The "Foto-Player" installed in the Twelfth Street Theater by the Standard Amusement Company recently, is attracting much favorable attention and will be made a fixture. The machine is made by one of the Pacific Coast companies. The Standard is particularly fortunate in securing the service of Ernest Francois Jores as organist. He is a master manipulator, and his ability to improvise is placing him in good stead in the moving picture business, to which he is a new acquisition. Mr. Jores plays both in the Tenth and the Twelfth Street Theaters of the Standard.

Denny Costello, owner of the Bijou Theater, of Kansas City, was the victim of one of the most daring robberies noted in the city for months, and one which in itself would make a good subject for the screen as far as unadulterated nerve is concerned. The safe of the theater, but a block from police headquarters, was blown with dynamite, the noise being deadened by clothes which were piled against the safe. Close to $2,000 in cash was secured, and jewelry worth $200 taken. The burglars knocked the combination off the safe, blew it with dynamite and walked off with their spoils. Arrests made by the hysterical police have failed to reveal any clue of importance.

The need of some sort of action by exhibitors has been emphasized by stories in the daily newspapers of Kansas City recently. With the press of most cities of the country ready to concede the value of the animated pictures from all standpoints, that of Kansas City has been a marked exception. Many crimes committed recently, especially where the offender happens to be a youngster, have been played up by the daily papers as resulting from moving pictures. While it is possible that the embryo highwaymen advance motion pictures as an alibi for their wrong-doing in many cases, exhibitors believe that the papers should use more repressive tactics. No formal action has been taken by the moving picture interests as yet, the plan being to await the reorganization of the association.

Motion pictures are coming into its own in Kansas, Topeka being one city where they probably will be adopted as a regular part of the course of study in the schools before long. W. C. Austin, a member of the textbook commission, after an exhaustive study of motion pictures in this role, announced himself as being highly in favor of their adoption. "Nature studies, agriculture, hygiene and health, fire prevention and similar subjects could be taught better by moving pictures than by books," stated Mr. Austin recently in discussing the subject. Mr. Austin's plan is to grade the pictures, just as other studies are. The state would own the films, according to his ideas. More vivid impressions could be obtained by the agency of the moving picture than by any other means, is Mr. Austin's conception.

The following item, which appeared in a Kansas City paper in 1873, and was reproduced recently, provides a strange contrast to the present methods of doing things in the film world: "Messrs. Stamper and Safford, of Council Bluffs, Ia., were taking stereoscopic views of the city yesterday. They will be exhibited here in the near future."

MURRAY.

PHILADELPHIA.

UNUSUAL activity has been noted in the moving picture business in Philadelphia, and exhibitors and supply men report a greater volume of trade for the month of October than any other month since the first of the year. Film exchanges are being pressed for more features of the better class, especially in three-reel productions. With the building of a great number of moving picture houses the demand for equipment is increasing, and during the past few weeks several large contracts have been awarded to local interests.

The new theater recently opened at Fifty-first Street and Baltimore Avenue by Charles Segel is one of the photoplay houses in this city that is really attractive Mr. Segel is giving the very best pictures possible, and he is building up a patronage of regulars which is remarkable.

The Regent Theater, 1632 Market Street, which is under the direction of Alexander R. Boyd, and the management of Frank W. Buhler, opened on November 1. The exterior and interior of this new house are most attractive. With a system of indirect lighting, plain white walls, and dark woodwork finishings, a most pleasing effect is to be had. The large mirror screen adds clearness to the pictures, which are projected by Simplex machines. A Western Union electric clock is located directly over the screen, giving the correct time of the day, while every convenience is provided for the patrons.

With the removal of the Calehuff Supply Company from 50 North Eighth Street, to the northwest corner of Thirteenth and Race Streets, the mecca of the motion picture trade has centered in that section of the city. The new home of the Calehuff Supply Company is considerably larger than its old quarters. A larger assortment of parts for every make of projecting machine will be carried in stock, while a greater stock of supplies, including carbons, lenses, tickets, etc., will also be carried. Several changes have already been made in the sales force, and Walter Evans, formerly of the Edison Company, is now assistant manager.

The Empire Film Exchange's new quarters at 1223 Vine Street, have already proved advantageous in handling the ever increasing business of this film exchange.

C. Schwarz, who recently became associated with Edward Kruapa in the Monarch Film Exchange, announces that at present he is awaiting the release of some four, five and six-reel productions, which are now in the custom house. These productions are among the best ever produced, and consist of war dramas, detective stories and magnificent hand-colored spectacular photoplays.

"Wanted By the Police" Film Company has opened offices at 211 North Thirteenth Street, with a three-reel thriller of the same name, having twenty-four styles of posters, giving the exhibitor the largest possible assortment of advertising.

Carr & Schad, the present owners of the Victor and Empire Theaters at Reading, Pa., have bought the Crescent Theater of that place.

A charter has been granted under the laws of the State of Delaware to the Conestoga Amusement Company with a capital of $500,000. The incorporators are George G. Steigler, S. L. Martin, William M. Pyle, all of Wilmington, Del.

Joseph N. Snellenburg, of the firm of N. Snellenburg & Co., and E. J. Pershing, of this city, have purchased a site in Atlantic City at the Boardwalk and Virginia Avenue, opposite the Steel Pier, for the erection of a picture theater. It is said that the building will be ready for its opening about Easter.

Fred B. Richert has let a contract for the erection of a moving picture theater at 7939 Frankford Avenue, which will have a seating capacity of about 500 and will cost about $5,000.

Fred and George Felt are receiving estimates on a picture theater which will be erected at Fifty-second Street and Wyalusing Avenue.

Plans for a moving picture theater to be erected on the southwest corner of Fifty-fifth and Spruce Streets for William R. Bicker and E. P. Hartman are being prepared by E. Allen Wilson. The structure will have a seating capacity of 1,000 and will be built of brick, with terra cotta trimmings. It will be for sale or lease when completed.

The Porter Amusement Company will erect a one-story moving picture theater, to seat about 500 persons on North Broad Street, south of Lehigh Avenue. Work will be started in the near future. Private plans.

Gennera Granese was arraigned before Magistrate Harris last week charged with violating the Act of Assembly relating to the conducting of an amusement place. Granese was accused of running a moving picture show on Christian Street, west of Seventh Street without a license. He was held under bail for court.

F. William Kamp, for several years connected with the Calehuff Supply Company, Inc., has resigned his position with that concern and will retire from active business for the present.

CONGDON.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

THE Larkin Company, soap manufacturers, of Buffalo, N. Y., have been utilizing the New Masonic Temple Auditorium as a moving picture theater, for the exhibition of moving pictures showing their plant. Admission was by cards distributed free, and so great were the crowds that they extended all around the building.

A new moving picture theater, at an estimated cost of about $9,000, is being erected at 2021 Eighteenth Street, Northwest. The theater will have a frontage of 30 feet and a depth of about 105 feet, and will have a seating capacity of 361.

The Apollo, on H Street, Northeast, recently gave a matinee showing "Ivanhoe," for the benefit of the school children of that section. About one thousand youngsters availed themselves of the opportunity of seeing this, necessitating the use of the Dixie to accommodate the overflow from the Apollo and the relaying of the reels between the two houses.

The Favorite, on H Street, near North Capitol Street, Northwest, is building an addition about 90 feet long and 16 feet wide, having a seating capacity of about 300. This house was but recently erected. Its popularity has spread, requiring additional seating accommodations.

Mr. M. F. Tobias, district manager for Warner's Features, Inc., has been in town for some little time. On Sunday morning last he gave a private exhibition of some of their leaders to the local picture men at the Plaza Theater, on Ninth Street, Northwest. Among the half dozen or more features shown was "For the Heart of a Princess," which was well received and which has since been shown in several of the local houses with good results.

"Bill" Alvine, manager of the Virginia Theater, has joined the ranks of the benedicts, having taken Miss Mamie Johnson, of this city, as his bride.

The Circle Theater, 2105 Pennsylvania Avenue, Northwest, offers a week's free tickets for the best opinions based on their exhibitions and upon the theater itself to its patrons. The accepted letters are printed weekly on the cover page of the program issued by the house. The public is informed that "You may see the same pictures elsewhere, but to see them with that lifelike quality that only a mirror screen gives, you must see them at the Circle." Their projection is really good.

A practice alleged to be common among some moving picture houses of this city, that of presenting gifts to certain of their patrons by various means, is being investigated by the authorities. It is thought that in some of the theaters the lottery law is being violated, while in others it is agains the "gift enterprise" law.

C. L. LINZ.

WISCONSIN.

THE Milwaukee Journal is involved in the fight for a censorship in that city. At a meeting before the judiciary committee of the city council, Charles H. Phillips, picture show owner, charged that the Journal favored the censorship ordinance because the owners would not advertise. A number of speakers from various organizations, as well as Miss Mabel Search, said to be connected with the Journal, advocated regulation of films. Rev. H. H. Jacobs, of University Settlement, defended the shows. "I'm opposed to any kind of censorship because I believe the theater owners can best regulate their shows and keep out the objectionable pictures," he said. "I'm a picture show fan. I've attended hundreds of shows and have yet to see one that is abjectionable. If you are going to censor, start with the $1.50 shows. The workingmen who attend the picture shows would not stand for the things that are shown in those productions." Action on the measure was postponed by the council until John Collier, general secretary of the National Board of Censorship, could appear and tell of the scope and efficiency of its work.

Joseph Scherer has been granted a permit to erect a moving picture theater on Greenfield avenue, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth avenues, in Milwaukee. It will seat 600 persons.

O. V. Berkel and John Killoran of Appleton, have opened a picture show at Luemberg.

An annual license fee of $25 a year for moving pictures shows is fixed in a new ordinance passed by the city council of Tomah.

Thomas & Jones, of the Colonial, at Waukesha, are planning the erection of a new theater.

R. L. Kathan, of Edgerton, has rented the H. Fisher Building, on Racine street, in Jefferson, to be used for a picture show.

F. E. Moore's feature "Hiawatha," was a good attraction at the Bijou in Fond du Lac.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

THE GREAT ORIGINAL PASQUALI PRODUCTION

THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEII

HAS BROKEN ALL RECORDS

DURING ITS PRESENT PHENOMENAL RUN AT WALLACK'S THEATER, NEW YORK CITY. A STUPENDOUS $250,000. CREATION OF EIGHT REELS, DIVIDED INTO A PROLOGUE AND TWO COMPELLING PARTS—GET THIS PICTURE FOR YOUR THEATER AND BREAK YOUR OWN RECORD—A FULL LINE OF POSTERS AND LOBBY DISPLAY IN KEEPING WITH THE PRODUCTION

OPEN FOR BOOKINGS
RENT OR SHARE

FOR TERMS AND PARTICULARS ADDRESS BOOKING OFFICE
WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORP., 110 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK
FILM AND ALL PUBLICITY MATTER COPYRIGHTED BY PASQUALI AMERICAN CO.

HUGH HOFFMAN

OHIO.

L. A. STOCKTON has taken charge of the Lakewood Theater in succession to Louis Wilcox, who resigned as manager.

The American, at Elyria, is running comedy films in special programs.

Manager W. O. Woodward, of the Sandusky Theater, Sandusky, has returned from a visit in New York.

Jack Reeves, of Findlay, is planning the purchase of the old Elite Theater at Fostoria.

Moving pictures of an educational nature are favored for use in Zanesville public schools by Superintendent Bowers. The matter of purchasing a machine has been under consideration for some time.

The Utopia Amusement Company, incorporated at $50,000, will erect a new model theater at Painesville, and has closed a deal for its construction. The house is planned to seat 1,200 persons and will be completed within ninety days. The officers of the company are: President and general manager, Bob Manchester; vice-president, Harry Leoni; secretary and treasurer, D. F. Hopkins.

Manager Costley, of the Fairy, at Kent, had a cameraman taking street scenes and other pictures for reproduction at his theater. Children of the schools were photographed.

Jacob Reinhardt, for two years manager of the New Colonial, Cleveland, has resigned to enter another business.

The Dunbar Theater Company has been incorporated at Dayton with $10,000 capital. Robert H. Mallory, Haveth Mau, A. O. Ridgeway and others are interested.

The Lewis Amusement Company will build a new theater at Akron. It has been incorporated for business in that town in the sum of $25,000. Louis R. Dyshere, J. A. Arbogast, Harry Gilletly, Harold Bazen and R. E. Lewis are behind the project.

The State will receive between $20,000 and $25,000 from the inspection of moving picture films, according to an estimate made by W. C. Archer, secretary of the state industrial commission at Columbus. This tax will fall on the film maker and not the picture shows.

Managers of Alliance theaters have introduced ozonators in their houses as auxiliaries of ventilating systems.

Ashland theaters are showing pictures of the street fair that took place there several weeks ago.

The Casino Theater Company has been incorporated at Cincinnati with a capital of $125,000. H. R. Kerans, J. J. Shevlin, John Galvin, J. O. Eckert and M. L. Galvin are incorporators. Several motion picture houses are planned by the firm.

In addition to the usual film program the Stafford Theater, at Niles, is using a six-piece orchestra. William Owens is singing. The Grand Theater has added four reels to its usual vaudeville program.

The Weller Theater, Zanesville, is specializing in Kinemacolors.

The Dreamland, at Warren, donated the use of the house Sunday, Oct. 5, to Miss Marguerite Prevey, of Akron, for a speech to workers.

In featuring Kalem's five-reel "From the Manger to the Cross" the Majestic, at Dayton, engaged the Odeon Madrigal Singers of the Cincinnati College of Music.

Rev. A. M. Bird, a candidate for mayor of Barberton, makes it a plank of his platform that he will not object to Sunday motion picture exhibitions.

Special interurban cars were run from neighboring towns into Mansfield to accommodate patrons at the opening of the Memorial Theater.

The Thornton Theater, Akron, held its grand opening Tuesday, Oct. 7. It has a seating capacity of 700 and the largest lobby of any of the local theaters.

Manager Kunz, of the Opera House, Mansfield, likes the idea of a state censorship board, just appointed. "Just what we want. For a long time we have been trying to get something along this line," he says.

The Sharon, Pa., fire department has decided to secure motion pictures of the Youngstown department, presenting them for the benefit of the volunteer corps. The film will be shown at the Orpheum.

The Family Theater, at Salem, arranged a special program for Homecoming Week.

As guests of Helen Morrison Lewis, manager of the Hippodrome Theater, at Zanesville, Mayor John H. Schofield, Police Judge John Whartenby, Probate Judge Harvey C. Smith, Chief of Police John Arter and others of the municipal and judicial family saw the film production of Judge Ben Lindsey's court in action, "Saved By the Juvenile Court," at a performance Monday, Oct. 6.

Youngstown saw local color in the film depicting the gas industry along the line from West Virginia into central Ohio when the pictures were shown at the Dome.

Mayor Baker is using motion pictures in his campaign for re-election.

The Photoplay Amusement Company, of Columbus, has been incorporated with a capital of $100,000. Max Stern, Nathan Gumble, T. F. O'Neill, E. M. Schoernborn and William Gumble are incorporators.

The Rex Theater, Ottawa, is presenting motion pictures of the Putnam County Fair.

Two new theaters are under way for Ravenna. H. W. Riddle has accepted plans for one, while the other, owned by Frank Traves, is in process of construction.

J. C. Ragland, of New York, has taken over the lease and management of the Sixth Street Theater, Coshocton.

I. C. Horn and L. C. Hoover, of Fremont, have taken over the Monarch Motion Picture Theater, Euclid Avenue and East 105th Street, Cleveland, purchased from the Lewis Amusement Company.

Louis Wilcox has resigned from the management of the Lakewood Theater, Lakewood, Ohio.

Abe Pottiker has sold the Lincoln Theater on West 25th Street, Cleveland, to John D. Kaloft.

The west side merchants of Cleveland have enlisted the services of moving pictures and school children in an educational campaign for an $850,000 bond issue to build a steel and concrete bridge over Big Creek. Motion pictures of the heavy traffic over the present structure are to be taken and shown in public places.

H. Staelin, of Dayton, will erect a two-story theater at Wyoming Street and Gunkel Avenue, plans for which have been filed with the Dayton Builders' Exchange.

Spitters in Cleveland theaters have fallen under the ban of the Health Department. Sanitary patrolmen have been assigned to duty in various houses by Sanitary Sergeant I. M. Motter with instructions to arrest anyone violating the anti-spit ordinances.

J. W. Cupp, of Galion, who has been located in Washington, D. C., will move to Cleveland soon to take up a motion picture theater.

First run features are shown at the Alhambra, Globe and Olympia Theaters in addition to the usual vaudeville programs.

Bert F. Mills, candidate for mayor of Lakewood, a suburb, has invited school children to attend a free motion picture show on the village's needs of a playground and park system. He is using the Lakewood Theater.

Cash remittances from the manufacturers of films for inspection by the new state board of censorship made to the state industrial commission has reached the $4,000 mark. The new design for a film "tailpiece" has reached Cleveland exhibitors. It outlines the state of Ohio and in the center says: "Passed by the Ohio Board of Censorship." The approval films are four feet in length and numbered. Ten thousand of them, or 40,000 feet were included in the first shipment to Cleveland houses. The Rose Theater, Columbus, has been leased by the commission and all pictures must be sent there for inspection. The few films that have thus far been rejected were returned to manufacturers for revision and obliteration of objectionable scenes.

Boy scouts at Youngstown secured heavy houses for the presentation of "The Making of a Boy Scout" at South High School and received ten per cent. of the profits.

Manager John R. Elliott has installed a new Power's machine at the Grand Opera House, Youngstown. He has added a feature program for Sundays.

The Lyceum, at Findlay, has been playing to heavy houses on "The Doom of the Gunmen of New York." The film has had a week's run there.

Manager L. B. Cool, of the Park, Youngstown, is using Adhemar's orchestra of ten pieces in addition to a feature program each Sunday.

The Diamond Amusement Company has been incorporated at East Liverpool in the sum of $10,000. Joseph Weinstein, Samuel Reiner, John Pelites, John M. Nanos, and R. R. Cohen are backing the enterprise through which it is planned to establish several motion picture houses in and about East Liverpool.

George Kleine's "Pompeii" closed a remarkably good run at Engineers' Hall, Cleveland, on October 8.

The New Sun, at Springfield, is giving four shows on Sundays, combining a vaudeville and film program.

Wellsville theaters will soon exhibit pictures of its fire department in action. A film was taken recently while the fire fighters were attempting to subdue a particularly bad blaze.

The Century, at Cincinnati, has been placed for sale and it is said the theater may be auctioned to the highest bidder.

The Mystic, Chicago Junction, is giving away a chest of silverware each Friday night in connection with other business houses of that place.

Carter's six-piece orchestra is playing at the Stafford Theater, Niles.

Manager Hill, of the Grand, at Athens, has contracted for exclusive rights Warner's Feature films in that city.

The Palm Theater, at Painesville, will soon move into a better and more pretentious house. A special program marked the last week in the old theater.

BUCKEYE

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

SPRINGFIELD photoplay managers seem to have caused a wave of ill-feeling by the service given during state fair week. There is always an undercurrent of protest by regular patrons against the customary raise in prices. This year, however, the United Press Association, which serves practically all the afternoon papers in Illinois, sent out a column-long story on the films that went at marvelous speed. The story was cleverly written, to indicate that the time is ripe for seeking laws "for pure 'movies'." It is said that three-reel shows were given in thirty-five minutes, and that an operator told the United Press correspondent the managers had given orders to speed up. "Springfieldians believe that they are not alone in their protest against the speed given their new national pastime," continues the writer. "They say it is never safe to visit the shows on Saturday night. On that night, the popular one for the picture show, managers take the opportunity to shift their crowds rapidly, with the result that only the kidlet and the youth with the sharp eye can tell anything about the story." A representative of The Moving Picture World called the attention of one manager to this sentiment against local shows which had been made state-wide. "What the —— do we care what the papers say? We had the crowds," was the reply. On top of this comes the announcement that prices have been raised by the Vaudette and Lyric to ten cents on Saturdays and Sundays only.

Quite a number of changes have been made in Springfield theaters. George Burton sold his interest in the Gaiety to his partner, Frank C. Smith. Smith in turn sold his interest in the Gaiety at Kankakee, Ill., to Burton, and Burton completed the transaction by acquiring the rest of the Kankakee interests from Kelly, Smith's partner. Smith then bought a large vaudeville house in Cincinnati, Ohio, seating 2,500 persons, and sold the Gaiety here to W. W. Watts, president of the Vaudette Amusement Company, whose operations heretofore have been confined to the photoplay field. However, Watts has had theatrical experience. Harry Thornton, son-in-law of Watts, who has been out on the road with the Vaudette's feature picture "From the Manger to the Cross," will be associated with Watts in managing the Gaiety, Springfield, Vaudette, Chicago Vaudette, and the feature attractions. No change will be made in the policy of the Gaiety. The Jones, Linnick & Schaefer bookings will be continued and the quota of pictures will not be increased for the present, although the photoplay probably will rule in the summer.

The Co-operative Amusement Supply Company, of this city, has sold a new Power's 6-A outfit to the Olympic, at Danville, and a complete picture show outfit to J. B. Watson, who will open a new house at Chrisman. The concern rented several machines to exhibitors at the Illinois State Fair, who used films in their exhibits. The Illinois State Livestock Commission, which showed pictures of the methods of treating hog and cattle diseases, and the Holt Caterpillar Company, which used an Edison educational and one of their own industrial reels, announced that they believed this was one of the best methods of securing results at a big exposition of this sort.

The Grand Theater, 509 North Side square, has switched over to the General Film Service, and incidentally has inaugurated a longer program and a higher admission. From four to five reels daily will be shown for ten cents, except children, and the changes will be but three times a week, Sundays, Tuesdays and Thursdays. This house recently showed two reels of Springfield views, which included a number of scenes at the Illionois State Fair.

A wedding of interest to Illinois photoplay people took place October 20, at Chicago, when Charles E. Kizer and Miss Iota Smith both of Springfield, were married. Kizer, who formerly was connected with the Vaudette in Springfield, is now manager of the Vaudette on Ashland avenue, in Chicago, and his bride, until recently, was piano player at the Grand Theater.

Manager Charles H. Takacs, of the Chatterton Opera House, has been booking a number of the high class features. "Les Miserables" played to a good week's business. The George Kleine production of "Quo Vadis?" has been scheduled. The Scott Antarctic films will be featured soon.

President Robert E. Woodmansee, of the Board of Education, has come out for the adoption of the moving pictures in the Springfield schools. In his annual report he says: "As new inventions appear which increase the facilities of communicating knowledge and illustrating historical knowledge, it seems to me that they should be adopted in our schools. To this purpose the moving pictures can be utilized in teaching and illustrating a great many of the subjects taught in our schools." He is on familiar ground, as he is a regular patron of local photoplay houses.

Tony Siera has opened a new moving picture show at Pawnee, near Springfield.

Senator Edmond Beall, of Alton, who was a member of the Illinois State White Slave Commission, which created such a furore in the middle-west some time ago, is loaing to various exhibitors, a small reel of films which he had made.

Dr. A. E. Prince, of Springfield, one of the most eminent occulists in the middle west, refused to bolster up The United Press story that speeding reels were injurious to the eye. The reporter saw in an interview with Dr. Prince a new ground for complaint against the photoplay managers accused of turning out three reels in thirty-five minutes during the Illinois State Fair. "When these pictures made their rapid growth in popularity," said Dr. Prince, "we occulists expected they would deevelop 'the moving picture eye.' We have had the 'embroidery eye,' and the 'sewing eye,' but the pictures haven't added to eye trouble."

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

WILLIAM FOX

Has booked "David Copperfield" for his entire circuit. He gets

THE BEST

THE MASTERPIECE

OF THE GREATEST OF ALL NOVELISTS

Produced with a great cast by HEPWORTH'S, London, every scene of the immortal novel of

CHARLES DICKENS

Was taken in the identical parts of England where his characters lived and loved, under the direction of and from a dramatization made by Thomas J. Bentley, England's foremost authority on the works of Charles Dickens.

7

GREAT

PARTS

David Copperfield

As a proposition appealing to film buyers this great feature has been an astounding success from the first, but there is still

SOME OF THE RICHEST
TERRITORY STILL UNSOLD

I have a complete line of advertising matter, including

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1, 3 and 6 Sheet | Booklets | Lobby Photos |
| Lithographs | Heralds | Newspaper Cuts |

BETTER WIRE NOW!

"I HELP YOU HELP THE EXHIBITOR"

4

GREAT

PARTS

ANOTHER

One of HEPWORTH'S, a grand money getter for the exhibitor; so a grand money getter and business builder for you

THE THRILLING RACING MELODRAMA

WILLIAM FOX

Has booked "Kissing Cup" for his entire circuit. He gets

THE BEST

KISSING CUP

Presented with a strong cast including Alec Worcester, Chrissie White, Harry Gilbrey, Flora Morris and others.

A kidnapped jockey, a hair-raising pursuit in a racing automobile, an aeroplane flight, which lands the jockey on the race course just in time to ride the winner, and a real love story make this feature

SURE-FIRE!

150 Scenes 150 "Punches"

TERRITORIAL SALES WILL NOT LAG ON SUCH A FEATURE AS THIS

OF COURSE, I HAVE

A COMPLETE LINE OF ADVERTISING

A. BLINKHORN

SOLE AMERICAN AND CANADIAN AGENT

A WOMAN'S LAST CARD

(ZOE)

Good territory left on this great feature. Surprises me! Everybody that bought made money on it. Ask me about territory.

SUITE 1903
World's Tower Building
110 West 40th Street
NEW YORK

TWO REELS WEEKLY

Soon I will release each week a one reel drama and a one-reel split comedy and scenic. I can guarantee these. Ask me about this service.

"I HELP YOU HELP THE EXHIBITOR"

NOTICE!

Motion Picture Camera Men

THE CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION will pay the highest price on the market for exclusive negatives of interesting and important happenings in California.

It will be of interest to you to get in touch with them at once.

They aim to make the

GOLDEN GATE WEEKLY
TRADE MARK
CALIFORNIA EVENTS
PRODUCED BY THE CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

the finest "Weekly" release in the moving picture world. They want you to help them.

CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Herbert Payne, President, Capitalist.
Henry T. Scott, Chairman of Board of Directors, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.
E. P. Schwerin, Vice-President and General Manager, Pacific Mail Steamship Company.
Walter S. Martin, Martin Estate Company.
Thomas Magee, Thomas Magee & Sons.
Edwin M. Eddy, Selwyn Eddy Estate.
George Lewis, Pres. Shreve & Co.
James Woods, Manager St. Francis Hotel Company.
Thomas A. Driscoll, Director Hibernia Bank.
Baldwin Wood, Attorney at Law.
Clarence Payne, President Payne Estate Company.
Thomas B. Eastland, President Coast Realty Co.
A. M. Johnson, Attorney at Law.
Robin Y. Hayne, Capitalist.

CAPITAL $1,000,000.00

MANUFACTURERS
AND PRODUCERS OF "PHOTOGRAPHICALLY PERFECT"
MOTION PICTURE
FILMS

Developing Work of the Highest Order

Telephone—Sutter 4272
Cable Address—Campico

MAIN OFFICES—SAN FRANCISCO
356 PINE STREET

"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the West"

THE CHAMPION

REPORTS emanating from the Ince and Sennett training camp lead to the belief that the two famous trainers are not exactly satisfied with the champion's condition. Foundations for these reports arise from the fact that though he is not likely to have a fight on his hands for some time, as there is no one in the field at present worthy of his steel, Ince and Sennett have him going through his paces every day and special attention seems to be being paid to head-work (Keystone), but that does not mean that the other essential parts (Broncho, Kay-Bee and Domino) that the champion's make-up consists of are being neglected.

The lesser lights of the motion picture world, who act as sparring partners for the champion, are having a rough time of it, as Tom Ince drives the champ after them in training bouts, just as he would in a championship battle, and it is ludicrous to see them trying to get away from or block the flurry of rights (Kay-Bees) and lefts (Bronchos) that the champ sends after them. And as his body (Domino) is in perfect condition, Ince sends him in wide open, so that he will become inured to body blows.

As we go to press, a statement is issued from the camp, signed by one of the champ's mentors, Mack Sennett, stating that the champ will spring something new in head-work (Keystone) in the very near future (three Keystones a week).

FUTURE RELEASES

KEYSTONE
COMEDIES

November 10th
SMALL TOWN ACT—MILK WE DRINK (Split Reel)
November 13
WINE
November 17
OUR CHILDREN
November 20
A MUDDY ROMANCE
November 24
FATTY JOINS THE FORCE
November 27
COHEN SAVES THE FLAG

KAY-BEE
FEATURES

November 11th
FOR MOTHER'S SAKE
November 14th
EFFICACY OF PRAYER
November 18th
THE CLAIM JUMPER
November 21st
DAYS OF '49
November 25
THE MAELSTROM
November 28
THE SIGN OF THE SNAKE

BRONCHO
HEADLINERS

November 12th
THE IMPOSTOR
November 19th
WAR CORRESPONDENT
November 26th
THE REFORMATION
December 3
THE BURIED PAST
December 10
THE WOMAN

DOMINO
WINNERS

November 13th
THE GHOST
November 20th
WITCH OF SALEM
November 27th
BELLE OF YORKTOWN (3 Reels)
December 4
TRUE IRISH HEARTS
December 11
THE CURSE

MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP., Longacre Bldg., 42d Street and Broadway
NEW YORK CITY

LICENSED FILM STORIES

KALEM.

THE STOLEN TAPESTRIES (Nov. 17).—Abbott loves Anna daughter of Roberts a millionaire. The latter frowns upon Abbott's suit declaring the young man to be a dreamer.

Roberts discovers that one of his valuable tapestries has been stolen. His butler, James, hands him a note which demands that the millionaire be at a certain spot with a large sum of money, if he wants the tapestry returned. Roberts notifies the police and obeys the note's demand. The thieves fail to show up. Upon his return to the house the millionaire finds the tapestry torn to shreds. A note fastened to it tells him it is the result of his informing the police.

The following day an immensely valuable Gobelin tapestry disappears. Another note is found by James demanding $50,000 for its return. Abbott learns of the theft. He promises to recover the tapestry and capture the thieves if Roberts will consent to his marriage with Anna. The millionaire finally agrees.

That night, Roberts pays a mysterious man the $50,000 and gets the tapestry. Abbott, by shamming intoxication, loiters in the neighborhood and pours anise over the auto used by the thief. Later, the young man secures the aid of the police and with a pair of bloodhounds tracks the machine to the robbers' hiding place.

The house is raided and a desperate battle ensues. The thieves are finally subdued and the ringleader is discovered to be James, the butler. Remembering his promise, the millionaire gives his consent to the marriage of Abbott and Anna.

THE EXPRESS CAR MYSTERY (Special—2 parts—Nov. 19).—Dugan, looking for trouble, smashes Pasquale's violin. The violinist follows the loafer, but is pacified by a passing priest. Grant's salary is insufficient for his family's needs. His request for an increase is denied. That day a large sum of money is placed in his care, consigned to a distant bank. Dugan learns of this money and decides to steal it. Unable to board the train in the yard, he drops to the roof of the express car as it passes under a bridge. Grant is knocked unconscious by Dugan. The thief empties the money bag and jumps off the speeding train into a river. Later, the express messenger is accused by his employer of having stolen the money and is arrested.

By chance, Dugan passes Pasquale's house. The Italian follows him and learns that the man intends to leave the city. Dugan discovers the Italian looking through his valise and assaults him. A lamp, upset by accident, sets fire to the house. Dugan escapes. The Italian revives and chops his way out. Knowing his man will leave by train, he hastens to the station. The thief foils Pasquale's attempts to stop him. The Italian thereupon holds up a locomotive crew, and with a pistol compels them to follow the train ahead. The chase ends in Dugan's capture, and the man is brought back to the city. Grant is being subjected to the third degree at police headquarters when he sees Dugan brought in. He recognizes the thief. A search reveals the stolen money in Dugan's valise. Cornered, the thief confesses his guilt and Grant is freed.

VITAGRAPH.

TANGLED THREADS (Nov. 17).—Major Bruce, an over-careful father, will not allow his daughter, Alice, to go to the dance with Jim, a young lawyer, as he does not wish her to receive that young man's attentions. Alice quarrels with her father and decides that it is high time he was realizing that she is grown up.

In order to bring this forcibly to his mind, she conspires with Harry, a young chum, whereby he will come boldly to her father and ask him for his daughter in marriage. She believes that this will cause him to acquire a just appreciation of her age. But when Harry calls her up to make the final plans for the coming encounter with the Major, this gentleman, in his room, picks up the telephone and overhears the whole conversation. He smiles broadly as he thinks of the fun he expects to have. Harry arrives at the house and goes to the library to see Alice's father, while Alice remains outside listening. When Harry manfully finishes his little speech, the Major, much to the boy's surprise and woe, takes him warmly by the hand, slaps him on the back, and says, "She's yours, my son, she's yours!"

Harry flees from the house in a rage. Jim presently hears that Alice is engaged to Harry and is furious. He will not speak to Alice when he meets her.

Harry tells all his troubles to his aunt, Miss Grace, with whom he makes his home, and she goes to see the Major in his behalf. The severe father will not listen to her entreaties, and allows her to go back to her house thinking that her mission has failed. But the Major has become interested in Miss Grace and calls to see her. Alice overhears him talking to her on the telephone, when he asks permission to call.

She follows him, and sees him sitting with the pretty aunt out under the trees. She calls Harry and they go together and confront the couple just as the Major has his arm around Miss Grace's waist. Harry demands immediate release from marrying Alice and Alice insists upon being allowed to marry Jim. The tangled threads are happily unravelled when Jim and Alice, and the Major and Miss Grace decide that they cannot live apart.

HIS LAST FIGHT (Nov. 18).—The fighter is a "second-rater" and loses his fight for the championship title. After his defeat he goes downhill very rapidly until he meets the captain of the sloop "Wasp," which is manned by desperadoes. The captain is a second edition of Wolf Larsen, of Jack London's story, a very bad man. The down-and-out fighter ships with the captain and goes to sea with him.

On an ocean steamer, a young heiress and young man, newly married, are going abroad on their honeymoon. The steamer founders in mid-ocean, all hands going down with it except the young couple who escape in a life-boat. Later they are picked up at sea by the "Wasp." The captain takes advantage of the girl's helpless position, after setting her husband to work in the forecastle. The young couple try to reason with the captain by promising him a liberal reward. The ex-fighter, now a sailor of the sloop crew, takes their part. While he is fighting off the captain and some of his gang the young husband and wife manage to escape from the sloop in one of the dories. They are later picked up by another steamer and saved. While they are getting away, their protector fights off the captain and his villainous desperadoes, and finally falls dead in the struggle. The last seen of the young couple is a view of them in the cabin of another steamer thinking of what may have befallen the man who sacrificed his life for them.

WHY I AM HERE (Nov. 19).—One day while going through the county prison, a professor of a nearby college pauses outside one of the cells, asks one of the respectable looking inmates what had brought him to his low estate. Peter, having talked to no one for many days, told the professor all.

"One day I saw the stenographer from the office next door and she made eyes at me. I flirted back. Then she became offended. Not noticing this, I kept up the flirtation and she, in anger, told me that her fiancé, Bill Murphy, was laying for me. I shuddered when I heard this, for the more I thought of the Bill Murphys that I had known, the less I liked the idea of having one of his kind laying for me.

"The girl brought me flowers for my funeral and told me I was as good as dead. I became nervous and took to the back steps and fire-escapes, but it did no good, the girl dogged my steps.

"Finally, in desperation, I asked the boss for a vacation and got it. All went well until she saw me go after a car, then she chased me with a crowd to take me to Bill Murphy. Then Bill came, a diminutive little shrimp. I had to be separated from him by the cops. They took me to the court. The next morning I was given thirty days and here I am." All of which is plainly shown in the picture.

FARMING IN ANCIENT THEBES (Nov. 19).—Showing some primitive methods of agriculture still adhered to in the Nile districts.

THE SALE OF A HEART (Nov. 20).—Count Paul de Vijon, with a beautiful daughter, lives in an ancient French chateau. Though the possessor of a large estate, he is heavily in debt. He decides that he will have to give his daughter in marriage to a man of wealth. His wishes are gratified when John Meyerson, a rich American, sees Germaine at the Duke de Beaulieu's ball and proposes to her. Though she rebels against this man whom she inwardly despises, she is willing to sacrifice herself for her father, and promises to marry the American millionaire.

De Vijon and his daughter go to America to visit Meyerson. While out motoring, Germaine meets with an accident and is thrown from the car. She is taken into a nearby house, which turns out to be the studio of Charles Lindgard, a young American artist. When Germaine recovers her composure, and sees a picture of herself upon the artist's easel, having been copied from a picture in a newspaper, she learns that she is Lindgard's ideal of womanhood. Where an ideal exists there is sure to be a harmony of taste, and love is a natural outcome. Germaine is soon as deeply in love with Lindgard as he is with her. But she remains true to her promise to Meyerson and tells the artist that her life is dedicated to another.

Lindgard advertises for an artist's model and engages Inez, a young Mexican girl daring and piquant in appearance, who is almost overcome with surprise when she sees a photograph of Meyerson in Lindgard's studio and recognizes it to be that of her husband.

Meyerson and Germaine, with her father, are at the magistrate's office, getting the marriage certificate when Lindgard and the Mexican girl rush in and accuse the millionaire of his duplicity. He is taken into custody by the police and marched off to jail. Overcome by the shock of the surprise, De Vijon succumbs to heart failure. Lindgard sustains Germaine in her hour of trial and she willingly accepts him as her husband.

THE SCHEMERS (Nov. 21).—Portly Mr. Smith and lean Mrs. Smith are spending the evening at home. Mrs. Smith is embroidering; Mr. Smith is reading. The telephone bell rings. Mr. Smith answers it and his face brightens. Mrs. Smith unconcernedly allows him to excuse himself, saying that he is going to bed.

Mr. Smith places a dummy in his bed and makes it look very real. Then he dons his evening clothes and goes to his club by way of the window.

Mrs. Smith decides that quietness is not to her taste. She telephones to her bridge club and tells the hostess she will sneak over. Mrs. Smith is delighted to find her husband sleeping peacefully. Far be it from her to wake him up. She noiselessly puts on her evening gown, places waving aigrettes in her hair, and hastens out. She is warmly greeted by her bridge-playing friends. No more so, however, than Mr. Smith, who joins a real, sociable and old-fashioned friendly game of poker with a stag limit.

Mr. Smith has partaken of much beverage, but realizes that the clock has been running. He tears himself away from his friends. But he does not get home as soon as Mrs. Smith, who hastens to her domicile in a taxicab. She is in her room quietly taking off her clothes when she hears a great noise. It sounds like shoes bumping down the stairs. She is startled and speechless when Mr. Smith pilots himself into the room. "Who is in the bed," she screams. Her husband is quick-witted. He surmises the truth in regard to Mrs. Smith and accuses her. The poor woman begs for forgiveness, but Mr. Smith forces her out of the room. He hides the statue and the dummy and then throws things about the room, and fires off all the cartridges in his revolver. When he lets Mrs. Smith back into the room, he says, "I Fixed Him! He won't try to hide in MY bed again!" and all ends serenely.

THE WHIMSICAL THREADS OF DESTINY (Special—2 parts—Nov. 22).—To test the worthiness of his two heirs, his niece, Stella Grigsby, and his nephew, Dr. Hale Webster, Giles Webster, an eccentric old millionaire, conceals himself in a secret apartment of his mansion. Word is sent to them that he is dead, and his money is left to them, provided they marry. Stella is to occupy the family mansion during the courtship. At first Dr. Webster seems well impressed with the girl. Complications arise, however, when the two go to a circus and Dr. Webster sees Kate, an equestrienne, with whom he becomes infatuated. While riding through the burning hoops on the back of a fiery charger, Kate falls and is badly hurt. Dr. Webster attends her until she is well. His infatuation is noticed by Stella, who is loathe to allow anything to interfere with the legacy. His attentions to Kate are also resented by Pietro, the Italian ringmaster, who is enamoured of her. The doctor calls upon Stella, declaring that he will give up the legacy in order to marry Kate, the girl of his heart. The uncle, peering through a slot in the door, gets a clue of his niece's real character when he sees her rage.

As a last resort, Stella visits Kate at the circus and tells her that she, Kate, is preventing Dr. Webster from getting a large fortune. But just as the girl is about to give up, the doctor comes and denounces Stella.

Stella conspires with Pietro to "dope" Kate's medicine that night before she goes into the ring. The plans are discussed in the mansion and overheard by Giles. Pietro pours the opiate into Kate's medicine and, while doing so, is seen by Fanny, Kate's sister, whom he binds and gags. While performing her act, Kate is overcome by dizziness and comes near losing her life as she is leaping through the hoops, but is saved by Fanny's admirer, and all ends happily when the doctor nurses her back to health and Giles comes to life to praise his nephew and denounce his niece.

SELIG.

THE PORT OF MISSING WOMEN (Nov. 18).—A girl wearying of the monotonous life on a farm, comes to a great city, and presently becomes known as "Decollette Nell," because she is always beautifully gowned. She is a victim of circumstances, but is clever, capable and dominating, so that she rises superior to the situation that drags down many of her weaker sisters. She has a good head that governs a great heart, and, wearied with the error of her ways and the hollowness and heartlessness of it all, comes to the "Port of Missing Women." Eventually, her father, a strong, hopeful, reliant character, comes to the city and visits the "Port" in search of his erring daughter. He immediately opens generous hands, and induces the habitants of the refuge to form a company and return to the old homestead, which has been greatly modernized, equipped with all the conveniences that it previously lacked to make life bearable and interesting. Nell's father and her saintly mother now have the practical assistance of their daughter in expending their wealth judiciously, to make the old farm a wholesome refuge that practically proves far more efficient than wordy resolutions of legislatures and the verbose enactments of city councils. The healthful and happy air of this community makes

"A Leap of Despair"

IN FOUR PARTS

The thrilling story of a dashing titled woman, whose daring feats of horsemanship won the admiration and later the love of the man she married. Her husband suffers financial reverses and she secures employment as the great feature act for a big circus. A rival has ensnared her husband, and as the equestrienne, performing high in the air, sees her husband and the other woman, she becomes unnerved, and horse and rider come crashing to the ground.

A Vividly Told Tale of Intense Interest, Acted by the Famous Company Which Has Made the Itala Masterpieces Famous

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

ITALA FILM COMPANY OF AMERICA
HARRY R. RAVER, Director General
CANDLER BUILDING NEW YORK CITY

all who come within its radius of influence, immune from the contagious touch of the sinful city. The girls earn their way by precious, honest toil, in close contact with nature, the wholesome mother of us all.

THE TOUCH OF A CHILD (Nov. 19).—Helen Hastings really loves her hard-working young husband, an accountant; but the superficial side of her nature craves worldly things and luxuries he is unable to furnish. She has a fine voice and gives all of her attention to its cultivation, to the neglect of her little daughter and her prosaic husband. An opera manager hears her sing, offers her an engagement, and after arduous study she makes a successful debut. The glamor dazzles Helen, but her triumphs seem more bitter than sweet, for she is lonely.

About this time in the train of artistic success comes dangling Count Duverne, and she is highly flattered by his attentions and is almost inclined to consider his perfervid protestations as genuine affection. The company in which she is engaged reaches her home city, and the Count comes along as a social lion. Her little daughter, Ruth, is stricken with a dangerous illness and in her delirium constantly calls for her mamma. The poor husband is desperate over the situation and the attendant physician tells him the only chance to save the little one's life is the soothing presence of the mother. He sends a note to her hotel, telling her of the desperate situation. It reaches her just as she has concluded a fiery scene of recrimination with the importunate Count, and moves the mother love mightily. She rushes instantly to the bedside of the ailing one—and a miraculous change for the better comes as she sobs repentantly by the little bed in the darkened sickroom. Little Ruth's life is saved, and her white hands join those of her father and mother, so that they part no more for life.

AN ACTOR'S ROMANCE (Nov. 20).—A hungry Thespian, out of employment, reads an advertisement, "Butler Wanted," and concludes to take a chance and get in close touch with some well-filled pantry. He accordingly "makes up" responding to the conventional type of butler in person and is accepted without question. The second maid forgets her admirer, the coachman, in her passionate fondness for the new deity in the household; and the cook neglects her steady, the big policeman, in expressing unbounded admiration for the butler. On his night out, the new man has filled out the wrinkles of hunger under his waistcoat, impatiently escapes the attentions of his household inamoratas, and hies to the theater in propria persona. There he is introduced to the daughter of his mistress and is asked to call at the house. This is much to his liking, but a trifle embarrassing, as it keeps him busy "making up" for his several identities—keeping on the good side of the stalwart and jealous cook, avoiding discovery by the sharp-eyed maid, and at the same time calling formally upon the daughter of the family he is serving. Versatility being his gift and cleverness his calling, allows him to make all points of the triangle satisfactorily, until one night he encounters a burglar trying to lift the family plate. He valiantly closes with the crook and in the struggle that ensues he pins down the thief; but the latter tears away his wig and disguise, so that the family, rushing alarmedly upon the scene, discover that the butler and the actor are one and the same. The daughter loves him devotedly and declares herself, while mother approves her choice—so they are married. The cook and the maid keep silent and retain their situations and the entire deal is highly satisfactory to the coachman and the policeman, who secretly congratulate their rival and win back their own.

OUTWITTED BY BILLY (Nov. 21).—Mary Gordon following the impulses of her heart, marries beneath her station, and after a year of happiness awakens to find herself a widow with a child in her arms, penniless in a cheap tenement. She starts out to find the home of her husband's parents. But, strange to say, she finds herself an object of suspicion and discredited as a wife. She shows her wedding ring and marriage certificate to the flinty-hearted pair; but Mother Gordon is a sullen woman and has the backing of her husband in looking askance at the poor young mother who had married her son and been too proud to visit them before. She begs them to care for little Billy baby while she goes back to the city to care for herself. She leaves her few treasures with the crusty couple, including her photograph, so that the baby may grow up to remember his mother, and the certificate to proclaim his legitimacy.

The months fly by—the young widow takes courage and grows in grace; likewise finds favor in the eyes of her employer, Irving Freeman. He will never listen to her explanations of her former marriage; but she longs for her child. Five years elapse; she and her husband are in affluence and the game of bridge is their absorbing pastime. The Freemans give a swell function at their home that is reported in the papers. Although the Gordons have up to this time made no sign, they have followed the fortunes of Mary with interest, and now the prospect of "easy money," through circulating a scandal or demanding a shake-down for $500 takes possession of the crabbed couple, despite the fact that Mary has always contributed to the support of the child. They start to the city with this purpose in view, and little Billy, wonderfully acute for his age, is taken for "first aid" in the scheme. He has hidden away in his blouse the beloved photograph of his mother and the certificate in which it was wrapped as it lay in the old bureau drawer. They instruct Billy to remain at the station until they return, and start for the Freeman mansion. Billy is not content to be cooped up, and, wrapping his candy in his paper, starts out to see the big town on his own account. He promptly gets lost, meets a kind lady, shows her his mother's photograph, and she, being a friend, takes him to the house. The Gordons get there first and have started something by their diabolical accusations, when Billy is ushered upon the scene. He recognizes his mother and she clasps him in her arms, with the photograph in one hand and his candy in the other. The paper in which he has wrapped his sweets happens to be her marriage certificate. The Gordons are allowed to depart in peace, and Billy boy is the hero of the hour in a new home where happiness and confidence have been restored by his fortunate advent.

Draw the Crowd

The experience of managers has shown that nothing fills a house so continuously as a well-illuminated entrance. This may be obtained by the use of

Westinghouse Long-Burning Flame Carbon Arc Lamps

These lamps give the intense illumination of the flaming arc with a high efficiency and a burning life of over 100 hours per trim. For the same brilliancy, they cost less to operate and less for trimming. Either white or yellow light.

Send for Folder 4258.

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

LET US DO YOUR
Developing and Printing
WE WILL DEVELOP YOUR NEGATIVE, MAKE YOU A POSITIVE PRINT AND SHIP WITHIN 24 HOURS FOR 5c PER FOOT COMPLETE.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
BY OUR FIFTEEN YEARS' EXPERIENCE.
EASTMAN STOCK USED ON ALL OUR WORK.
FILM TITLES and ANNOUNCEMENTS
3 Feet for 25 Cents In Any Length
GUNBY BROS. Inc.
145 West 45th Street, New York City

UNIFORMS
For USHERS and THEATRE ATTENDANTS
when made by the largest manufacturers of uniforms exclusively, are correct in style and qualities.
Catalogue A sent on request.
Russell Uniform Co.
1600 B'way, cor. 48th St., New York

MELIES.

THE JUDGMENT OF BUDDHA (2 parts—Nov. 18).—An Oriental Sultan incurs the enmity of his prime minister. The latter, when collecting tribute, forcibly takes money from a villager. The villager lays his plaint before the Sultan, and the prime minister, found culpable, is bastinaded. Although not deprived of his high office, he vows deadly revenge. He causes the Sultan's favorite child, a little daughter, to be kidnapped. He has this girl brought up, and fourteen years later brings her before the Sultan as a dancer. The Sultan is attracted by the girl's beauty, and, instigated by the prime minister, marries her. Thus unconsciously he commits a terrible crime against Buddha, having married his own daughter.

Immediately after the wedding ceremonies the Sultan's attention is drawn to a distinctive mark on the shoulder of his wife, and, greatly disturbed, for his lost child had an identical mark, causes inquiries to be made. The girl's adopted mother, under pressure, reveals the story how, fourteen years before, the child had been intrusted to her by the prime minister, and the identification is made absolutely certain, for the woman has preserved the chain and medallion that marked the girl as of royal rank. The Sultan orders the execution of his prime minister. The Buddhist High Priest is consulted, and a council of chief priests decides that the crime committed by the Sultan, although in ignorance, can only be expiated by perpetual imprisonment both for himself and his bride. He is deprived of all his insignia of royalty and thrown into prison, a fate shared likewise by his daughter. While the latter is in her cell her adopted mother visits her, changes garments, and sends the girl, thus disguised, out of the jail to lay her case before the High Priest and plead for mercy both for herself and her father, the Sultan. The girl succeeds in her mission, for it is decreed by the priesthood after consulting the oracle that, provided the Sultan will rebuild a ruined temple in a period of ten days, the crime will be forgiven. The Sultan, restored to his rank that he may have the necessary facilities, essays the task. But in the ten days the work is still uncompleted. The High Priest agrees to invoke Buddha once more to beg for an extension of time. But when he is in the very act of consulting the image, the judgment of Buddha is pronounced, for both the Sultan and his daughter are turned miraculously into stone Buddhas, amid the awe and hush of the worshiping assemblage.

SIDNEY AND ITS HARBOR (Nov. 6).—Beautiful scenic of Australia's leading city and its fashionable seaside resort, Manly.

EDISON.

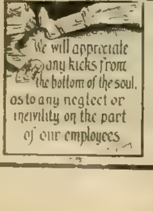
NORA'S BOARDERS (Nov. 17).—Nora MacIntyre was young, beautiful and a widow. Naturally she was very popular indeed with the not over-prepossessing individuals who composed Centretown's masculine population. With all her charming ways Nora had a hard business head, and when she found that the burden of running the tremendous house her husband had left her, was becoming somewhat difficult, she decided to take in boarders, relying on her hold upon the susceptible males of Centretown for the success of her plan. A hasty



We will appreciate any kicks from the bottom of the soul, as to any neglect or incivility on the part of our employees

ALL MAKES LENSES ALL SIZES

BAUSCH & LOMB OR GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN ALWAYS IN STOCK. BEST GRADE CONDENSERS, 75 CENTS. STOCK SLIDES, 40 CENTS. SEE THOSE ILLUSTRATED. WRITE FOR CATALOGUE SHOWING MANY OTHERS. ALSO OUR GENERAL SUPPLY BOOKLET CONTAINING EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS. SLIDES MADE TO ORDER. LET US HEAR FROM YOU TO-DAY. IT WILL PAY YOU.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO., 608 Olive St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

HERE IS A LIVE ONE!!!

One of the best self advertising features ever produced

---

"80 MILLION WOMEN WANT----?"

IN FOUR REELS

MRS. EMMELINE PANKHURST Great Militant Suffragist, the Leader of the English Forces

This is not a sensational, "window smashing, bomb throwing" picture, but a real political drama, showing the suffrage cause in its true light and as the leaders wish it presented to the public.

MRS. HARRIOT STANTON BLATCH President of the Women's Political Union, New York City and her co-workers for the "cause" have all taken an active part in the presentation of their work to gain Political Equality.

We are offering you an absorbing story of love, intrigue and clever detective work, in which the power of a modern Political Boss is challenged by the "Fair Suffragette," and after a hard fight, in which her lover is involved, she succeeds in defeating the political gang. This is the picture with the PUNCH that makes a big hit with an audience.

Exchange men, here is the chance of a lifetime for advertising world renowned personages

State Rights now selling. Wire your offer for whatever territory you want. The picture will be released November 5th.

NOW IS THE TIME. DELAYS ARE FATAL

All the usual paper, 1, 3 and 6 sheets. Photographs, heralds, cuts, slides, lobby displays, etc. Everything required for advertising.

---

UNIQUE FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th Street NEW YORK CITY

note brought her business-like Aunt Sally from the city to aid her in engineering the new venture. An attractive notice was prepared and posted on the bulletin board outside Centretown's general store, and Nora and her aunt anxiously waited for results. The results exceeded Nora's wildest dreams. As though impelled by a single gigantic impulse, the men of Centretown flocked to the boarding-house and demanded board and rooms. The house was speedily filled, and for many a day the general store saw no more of Nora's boarders. They were seated in the parlor watching Nora play on the piano.

The piano proved to be the indirect source of the downfall of several aspiring hopes. Nora had a music teacher—a vigorous young man of rather a different style of beauty than that prevalent in Centretown. Nora and the music teacher played duets on the piano in the gloaming, gazed deep into each other's eyes, and decided to get married. Nora's first act after this epoch-making decision was to go to the real estate agent. A few days later, a strangely unlovely looking person by the name of Amelia Pinkum called and had a mysterious interview with Nora and her aunt. That night Nora was peculiarly sweet to all her boarders. She told each of them to be sure to be on hand the next night, as she had a little surprise planned for them. The next afternoon, Nora drove away to church with her young man. That evening at dinner, the boarders appeared decked in regal splendor in preparation for Nora's surprise. It was a curious scene, and became even more curious when Aunt Sally cheerfully informed them that the boarding house had been sold, and introduced them to Amelia Pinkum, their new landlady.

A CAUSE FOR THANKFULNESS (Nov. 18).—John Tremayne was "country-bred." After thirty years of city life, he still had the sturdy frame and the clear complexion which had been wrought of the cold spring water and fresh breezes of the Connecticut hills. When his old mother wrote and told him how glad she would be if he and his family could come up and take Thanksgiving dinner in the old home, John Tremayne would have liked nothing better than to have written back that he and his family were coming to the old home not only for Thanksgiving, but for the rest of his days as well. Business affairs were not in a particularly prosperous condition, and John Tremayne at times grew heartily sick of the noisy clanging city and longed for the green fields of his youth. But Tremayne was married, and his wife was a typical society woman, who would as soon have thought of flying to the moon as going out to a dingy little farmhouse under any consideration whatever. So Tremayne wrote and told his mother that he was very very sorry that they couldn't come.

On Thanksgiving Day, Tremayne's children went to a football game at a college town some distance away. On their return, the Football Special was wrecked just outside the town in which old Mrs. Tremayne lived. The Tremayne children alighted safely from the wreck and made their way to their grandmother's house. The news of the train wreck was brought to Tremayne and his blase wife. The shock nearly drove Mrs. Tremayne mad. Together, husband and wife sped out to the scene in their automobile, only to find no trace of their children in the wreckage. Sick at heart, Tremayne took his anguished wife to his mother's that she might wait there while he continued the search. The two children met them at the door, with "granny's" kind old face beaming placidly behind them. There is hardly anything else to say about this story except that the Tremaynes had their Thanksgiving dinner in the only place where Thanksgiving means anything, anyway—out home in the country.

THE GIRL IN THE HOUSE-BOAT (Nov. 19).—"Spud" Bowman spent his summers on the shore of a certain lake, in a tent. His principal reason for doing so was because Gladys Merrill's family had a cottage just across the lake. Gladys had numerous admirers, but of all these the most assiduous were "Spud" and a certain Herbert Austin. At the time of the Country Club dance Gladys' attitude left "Spud" and Herbert in some doubt as to whom she intended going with. Herbert determined to clinch matters at the start. On the afternoon of the dance he borrowed "Spud's" boat, without drawing "Spud's" attention to his neighborly action. When "Spud" finished dressing he discovered that he was late and rushed down to the shore without a cent in his pockets. The fact that the boat was missing served only as a momentary check to his impetuous disposition. With characteristic impulsiveness, he plunged into the lake and started to swim to the other shore. When nearly across, he hit his head against a floating log and would have drowned if a girl on a nearby house-boat hadn't fished him out.

The girl's name was Mary Franklin. When she helped "Spud" out of the water she was in an extremely agitated condition. Her grandfather had a severe heart attack and was lying unconscious in the cabin inside. "Spud," ignoring his aching head, hastened in, examined the old man and realizing that there was urgent need of a stimulant immediately, plunged into the water and swam to shore. Invading a nearby road house, he demanded a bottle of whiskey. Just after the proprietor handed him the bottle "Spud" remembered that he had no money and left hastily with a few words about future settlement. The proprietor followed him; also a policeman. "Spud" eluded his pursuers in the woods and swam back to the house-boat with the bottle. After reviving old Mr. Franklin, "Spud" continued on his way to the dance, with a very warm feeling in his heart for the girl who had thanked him so warmly for his assistance. At the Country Club, he discovered that Gladys apparently had not missed him. "Spud" went home very thoughtfully. The next day, he took the house-boat girl and her grandfather to dinner at the roadhouse. The scene between "Spud," the proprietor and the policeman furnishes a highly amusing ending to this satisfactory offering.

A GOOD SPORT (Special—2 parts—Nov. 21).—The Sphinx Motion Picture Company needed an actor, and needed him very badly. For some time the Sphinx Company had devoted itself to the so-called "Western" picture. The fifteen hard-riding cowboys who composed their staff served admirably for this purpose. Most Sphinx pictures consisted of a series of views of the above mentioned cowboys galloping at full tilt after one of their number who was variously cast as a horse thief, a train robber, or a murderer. Suddenly the Sphinx management decided that the public wanted a "polo" picture. The stage directors were in despair. Their men could ride well enough to be sure, but even the widest stretch of imagination on the part of a long suffering public would hardly be sufficient to make them look English. They must have a typical Englishman to play the leading role. So hoping against hope, they put an advertisement in all the papers of the Western city in which they were located.

The Honorable Reginald Devenham read this peculiar advertisement asking for an English polo player with considerable interest. The Honorable Reginald was, to be brutally frank, "on his uppers." He had come to America, because a girl had told him that she wanted to see him make something of himself. So far, Devenham had done little toward making anything of himself. Moreover, he had spent all of the last installment of his 2,000 pounds a year. Devenham went to the motion picture studio, and the management fell upon his neck. He was just what they were looking for. Before the startled Englishman had time to turn around he had signed a contract to act in their pictures at the princely salary of five dollars a day. The acting amused Devenham immensely. It seemed so typically American. He balked a bit when they insisted on his kissing the heroine of the play, but since she was an unusually attractive girl, soon got over his early nervousness. Some weeks later, the girl in England went to a Cinematograph theater and saw Devenham kiss the girl in America. The next day, the girl in England cabled for Devenham to return. The situation at the end of the picture in which the Englishman's true feelings toward the two girl's are expressed, is handled in a masterly fashion.

A PROPOSAL DEFERRED (Being the fifth story of "Who Will Marry Mary?"—Nov. 22).—Justin Bradford, ex-captain U. S. A., gave up his commission in the army, and went out to the Rocky Mountains largely for the sake of a girl. The girl's name was Mary Cuyler, and she was very wealthy. So wealthy, in fact, that the fortune hunters of two continents were at her feet. Since Bradford was too much of a man to be willing that Mary should dream for an instant that he was of the same stamp as the motley crowd of penniless dukes and eager adventurers that sought to win her, he decided that the only thing he could do was to acquire a fortune which should be at least equal to hers. When a favorable opportunity presented itself, he invested all he had in a section of mining property, resigned his commission and went West to develop his holdings. Shortly after he arrived in Golden City, he discovered that the land which the famous Silver Star Mining Company was developing was actually his by title. He verified his discovery by careful surveying, and immediately put the case in the courts.

Mary, far away at a summer camp in Maine, received the alarming news from her agent that there was serious danger that she might lose her entire fortune. Filled with alarm, she hurried out to Golden City to see for herself just what the trouble was. On her ride from the hotel out to her mine, she met Bradford in the midst of his surveying operations. After their mutual astonishment had passed away, Mary told Bradford all her troubles. Some wicked adventurer was trying to take her nice mine away from her, and she was so angry that she almost wished she could slap him—whoever he was! She did not notice Bradford's face as she spoke. It had grown suddenly grave and hard. He asked her if the mine in question was the "Silver Star." She replied affirmatively in some surprise, and Bradford after shaking her hand turned away. That night, Mary received a letter from her lawyer, saying that the suit against

MAKE YOUR OWN CURRENT WITH A
Brush Electric Lighting Set
Send for 125-page catalogue with very complete information about electrical matters
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.
BOX MP-2, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

| | |
|---|---|
| "HEARTS OF THE WEST"3 reels; big front and photos | $60.00 |
| "TERROR OF THE ROCKIES"3 reels, big front | $60.00 |
| "MONTANA COWPUNCHERS"3 reels; big front | $50.00 |
| "POST TELEGRAPHER"2 reels; 101 Bison, lot paper | $60.00 |
| "TEXAS OUTLAW"3 reels; big front | $50.00 |
| "BATTLE OF THE RED MEN"2 reels; 101 Bison, big front | $60.00 |
| "IN THE BAD LANDS"3 reels; big front | $60.00 |
| "BLACK HAND OF FATE"3 reels; big front | $60.00 |
| "COUNTY FAIR"3 reels; big front | $50.00 |
| "LIFE OF GEN. GEORGE WASHINGTON"3 reels; big front & photos | $60.00 |
| "LES MISERABLES"3 reels; lot paper | $50.00 |
| "MOONSHINERS OF KENTUCKY"3 reels; big front | $60.00 |
| "GREAT FIRE SHOW"3 reels; big front | $75.00 |
| "SLAVES OF RUSSIA"2 reels | $45.00 |
| "SINGING GIRL OF KILLARNEY"2 reels; | $40.00 |
| "FRONTIER MYSTERY"101 Bison, 2 reels | $40.00 |
| "DAUGHTER OF THE REDSKINS"101 Bison, 2 reels | $40.00 |

A deposit of $10.00 to accompany order, balance C. O. D., privilege examination.
ECONOMY FILM CO. 105 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
Send for Booklet C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

We have a Catalogue of full line of Moving Picture Machine repair parts ready to put in your machine at reduced prices. We make them and for that reason can sell them very low. We also sell Stereopticons for $12.00; Calcium Jets, $3.00; 100 Carbons, $2.00; Condensers, 55c; Arc Lamps, $2.25; Stereopticon Lenses, 50c; Slide Carriers, 25c; Moving Picture Objectives, $2.75; Jackets, $1.75; Ticket Holders, 75c; Rheostats, $4.00; 50 Candle Power Stereopticon Lamps, 75c.
L. HETZ, 302 E 23rd Street, New York City

ORCHESTRA MUSIC
FOR MOVING PICTURES
The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:
No. 1 and No. 2
Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.
Send for free sample page and further discounts. 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.
CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

EXPRESS CHARGES GREATLY REDUCED by our new method of shipping. Write for our 1914 list and rates and How We Can Reduce Your Express Charges on our Exclusive Illustrated Song Slide Service.
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE, SIXTH FLOOR, POWERS BUILDING 37 SOUTH WABASH AVENUE CHICAGO, ILL

DEPENDABLE FEATURE SERVICE

Choice Territory for Choice Features:

| | |
|---|---|
| The Doom of Darkness . . . . . . | 4 Reels |
| The Cyclist's Last Lap . . . . . . | 3 " |
| Death, the Conqueror . . . . . . | 3 " |
| The Hole in the Wall . . . . . . | 3 " |
| The Twisted Ear . . . . . . . . . | 3 " |
| The Higher Courage . . . . . . . . | 2 " |
| Twixt Heaven and Earth . . . . . | 5 " |
| The Heart of the Hunchback . . . | 3 " |

All of these represent

SENSATION PLUS PLOT

The best possible paper. 1-3-6 sheets. Photos, Heralds.

THE TRUE FEATURE CO.

110-112 West 40th Street World's Tower Building New York City

Telephone 578 Bryant

SOLE AMERICAN AGENTS FOR THE CONTINENTAL ART FILM SOCIETY

GET ON OUR MAILING LIST

Poster Mounting Cloth
Headquarters.
Our 42-inch poster cloth is recognized as the standard fabric for poster mounting. It is used by the LEADERS.
TURNER-HALSEY COMPANY, 62 LEONARD STREET, NEW YORK

the mine had been suddenly withdrawn, and that she was left in sole possession. Her joy was tempered somewhat by a letter from Bradford, congratulating her on her success, and telling her that he was going to San Diego. So Mary was left to her own thoughts. What a queer fellow this Bradford was!

GEORGE KLEINE.

THE SUBTERRANEAN CITY; or TRAILING THE JEWEL THIEVES (Eclipse—2 parts—Nov. 25—Special).—Mr John Walker, a wealthy wholesale jeweler, is roused in the night by sounds coming from his strong rooms in the basement. He rouses the night watchman, who has fallen asleep, and the two make a careful search of the building. Two large safes have been broken open and every sign of a robbery remains, except that apparently no jewels are missing. However, next day Mr. Walker discovers quite by accident that a magnificent pearl necklace has been replaced by an exact copy in imitation, and on testing other priceless gems finds they too are only counterfeit. The town is soon ringing with the story of the clever robbery, and at the club it is the sole topic of conversation. John Walker has been giving details to his personal friends. His particular pal, Arizona Bill, is present, and Walker persuades him to go to the music hall, where a beautiful young dancer in whom Walker is interested is appearing. After the show, Walker and Bill are admitted to Vesta's dressing-room, where the former gives her a beautiful pendant to add to the countless expensive jewels he has already showered upon her. It is evident that Vesta cares nothing for Walker, but she is greatly attracted by the handsome Arizona Bill. After taking leave of the lady, Arizona Bill finds he has forgotten his gloves, and returns for them. Hearing voices, he peeps through the keyhole and sees Vesta hand the pendant Walker has given her to a man who is a stranger to him, he promising to give her an exact duplicate next evening. After the mysterious visitor has left Vesta (through the window), Bill walks in, claims his gloves as if he had overheard nothing, and again takes his leave. Later, he makes a bet at the club that within a month he will get to the bottom of the mystery of the bogus jewels. Next evening he watches Vesta's house, and about midnight she comes out and enters a waiting motor car. Bill clings onto the back of the car and hides in a ditch when the lady steps out and dismisses her chauffeur. They have come many miles from the town to a wild and rugged stretch of country, and Vesta, without hesitation, makes her way over the boulders to a narrow opening, through which she disappears. Bill follows, but misses his footing in the dim light and falls into space a hundred feet down. He is senseless for a few moments and, recovering, finds himself in the bowels of the earth, but, strangely enough, the surrounding tunnels are brilliantly lighted by huge arc lamps. Following one of these, Bill discovers a large workshop filled with men all busily engaged, some in the manufacture of necklaces and bracelets, others in melting down gold and extracting gems.

Bill incautiously crawls near and is observed by one of the workmen, who immediately gives the alarm. Bill is seized and brought into a comfortable room, which is apparently the headquarters of the chief of this mysterious town. Five or six men are seated at the table, and to Bill's astonishment he recognizes each of them for notable jewel merchants of his acquaintance. They have been present at the club when he made the bet that he would solve the mystery. The principals treat Bill with mock politeness and take him round their underground factory, showing him all details of the work. At length one of the number remarks that any stranger penetrating their stronghold can never see daylight again, and Bill is seized, bound and placed beneath a weighty press which is worked by electricity. The lever is released and slowly the huge weight descends. Luckily Vesta, a member of the gang, loves Arizona Bill, and to save him smashes the battery which controls the press in the nick of time.

While the members of the gang hurry off to see what has stopped the working of the press, Vesta creeps in and releases Bill and shows him the way out of the labyrinth. Just as they reach the end of one of the tunnels, Vesta hears footsteps and knows they are discovered. Her woman's wit comes to her aid, and bidding Bill make a slight flesh wound on his temple with a revolver, she takes her stand over him and announces that as she found him running away she had killed. But her clever ruse does not save Bill; he is taken for dead, but is thrown into a deep dungeon to make doubly sure. Vesta goes back to town and determines to confess all to John Walker, but her plans are foiled and she is taken back to the subterranean city, convicted of treason, and thrown into the dungeon to die. But Bill is not to be done; for many hours he has worked at the stones in the well, and at last an exit is made. He and Vesta by a perilous route and with many thrilling and hairbreadth escapes, at last get back to daylight and freedom. Bill tells Vesta to appear on the stage at the usual hour, and makes all arrangements for a capture. The principal members of the gang stroll into the music hall as usual, and when Vesta dances on the stage they are astonished. Madly they dash across the footlights to assure themselves that there is no mistake, but only to be surrounded by police, overpowered, and led off to the cells. Bill has won his bet, but he refuses to accept the 5,000 dollars, obtaining instead Walker's forgiveness for Vesta, the girl who had tricked him so heartlessly, but who has done all in her power to atone.

BIOGRAPH.

A CURE FOR SUFFRAGETTES (Nov. 17).—Caroline Spankhurst and her suffragette brigade conclude to stop at nothing, so in their dauntless enthusiasm they forget their babies peacefully reposing on the sidewalk. The babies fall into the hands of the traffic squad, ordered to keep clear streets. A small sized riot is taking place, but every mother's a suffragette so why cry "Help?"

HE'S A LAWYER (Nov. 17).—'Twas Sunday in the park. "I bet she's worth a million," he murmured in silent exultation, as he slipped on the ring. 'Twas Monday morning. She was a "stingy-grafter" and he a lawyer with a bad case of pawn or starve. Who would a thought it? But it takes a lawyer to start things. He did with the office across the way, where his "stingy-grafter" grafted. He reached rock bottom.

THE DETECTIVE'S STRATAGEM (Nov. 20).—In his moment of weakness, the bank thieves prevented the young cashier from becoming that against which his heart rebelled—a thief. Evidence, however, was against him. The detective's clever unwinding of threads saved both his own and his sweetheart's happiness.

BY MAN'S LAW (2 parts—Nov. 22).—"Are the days of despotism over, when one hypocritical money god can so sway the wheels of destiny that thousands of helpless men, women and children may be thrown defenseless upon the world?" so the editorial questioned. It served only as an impetus for the magnate to turn public opinion by philanthropy, while he continued to satisfy his own lusts at the expense of other lives.

LUBIN.

THE TWO FATHERS (Nov. 17).—Bob Carter and Peggy Ryan get married. Neither of them has ever met the other's father. The respective papas are invited to come on and congratulate the happy couple. Bob's father does not drink and Peggy's dad does not smoke. They meet on the train and get together, although neither knows the errand

CLIMB ABOARD!

If you intend to climb aboard the Universal band wagon, do it now BEFORE YOUR TERRITORY IS SO THOROUGHLY REPRESENTED WITH Universal films that I won't dare send more in. If you're not blind you can see that the trend of the times is Universalward. Don't run anything but the best program in your theatre. Come to any of my offices and see it RIGHT AWAY.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

MOTION PICTURE PEOPLE

If you are anxious to produce motion picture films on your own account, or if you have any film proposition worthy of backing, I am in a position to assist you and furnish all equipment necessary for your success.

W. HARRIS
214 N. State Street, Chicago, Ill.

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
130 Kearny St., San Francisco. Cal.

PICTURES on a "MIRROR SCREEN" are Unusual, Delightful to the eye, Save your light, Increase your Receipts, give Tone, Class and Dignity to your house. Don't be misled and spend your money on a makeshift and imitation. The "MIRROR SCREEN" is a wonderful plate glass mirror with a Prismized Snow-White Face. Frank T. Montgomery bought three "Mirror Screens" for his Majestic Theatres 1, 2, 3, at his, Tenn., five years ago. These screens are in use to-day. Put any surface in the world against them and if it equals these five-year-old r Screens" in any way I will forfeit $500.00. new Snow-White Prismized Surface is a Wonder. Write to-day for our catalogue and special proposition.

OR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville. Ind. F. J. REMBUSCH, Pres.
ern Representative, Frank Manning, 121 West 48th Street, New York City; 160 Irving Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ATTENTION, EXHIBITORS!

Now is the season to get money, and you cannot get it unless you put on big feature productions. We have imported a large stock of features, and are now in a position to rent a weekly service, consisting of six reels daily, including a feature every day, for $30.00 weekly. A trial will convince you that we have the goods.

ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO. - - No. 21 East 14th Street, N. Y. City

OUT OF TOWN TRADE A SPECIALTY

of the other. Their suit cases get mixed and when "Pop" Carter opens the wrong bag he finds a supply of booze which annoys him and the two old gents have a heated argument. On arriving at the home of the newlyweds they are duly introduced, but their tastes are unlike and everything causes a friction.

Peggy's father is a great fisherman and Bob's father looks upon the game as all rot and nonsense. He borrows an auger and bores a hole in the boat that Ryan will use. The boat quickly fills with water and Ryan cannot swim. Carter, however, being a good swimmer, rescues him. The doctor is sent for and soon puts the two old men in fighting condition again. But harmony at length is restored. The two old gents embrace and smoke and drink until they fall peacefully to sleep as the newlyweds laugh at their papas.

SHADOWS (Nov. 18).—Lester Nayne, a young artist, visiting a New England village, chances to meet Evelyn Thorn, a girl whose life is shadowed by what is to her a mystery. She lives with her father in the gloomy old Thorn place from which John Thorn never emerges. Evelyn has vainly asked why she is shunned by the people, and her only friend, a kind old priest, tells her that it is best she shall not know.

The friendship between Lester and Evelyn grows to love, and when the old priest learns of this he realizes that the girl must be told the thing that has been kept from her so long—that in the Thorn blood there is hereditary madness. Heartbroken, Evelyn sends to Lester a brief farewell, knowing that she can never be his wife. Crushed by the tragedy of the girl's life and the hopelessness of his own love, Lester prepares to go away. Evelyn, feeling that she cannot endure the life of misery that seems to stretch before her, determines to end it all. Lester, already on his way, rescues her, unconscious, from the river and carries her to her home. Shortly after Evelyn left the house John Thorn realized that at last the curse of his blood was about to come upon him, and sought the mercy of speedy death. The priest found a sealed packet addressed to himself, and containing, besides certain legal documents, a message from John Thorn. Evelyn is restored to consciousness and the old priest reads her Thorn's message—that she has in her veins not one drop of the tainted Thorn blood; that he stole her, for revenge, when a baby, but that, coming to love her, he could not bring himself to confess and thereby rob his life of its only joy; that the documents will establish her true identity. But to Evelyn only one thing is of consequence, the fact that she is free to find happiness in the arms of the lover, whom the old priest leads into the room.

PARTNERS IN CRIME (Special—3 parts—Nov. 20).—Two widowers, Jansen and Dobley, are high-class crooks. Their children, Frank Dobley and Esther Jansen, are engaged, but do not know about their fathers' trade. Frank, unknown to his father, gets the assignment from his editor to run down the band of crooks. He joins forces with Andrews, a young detective. Frank is caught by the band without his father's knowledge and escapes a time bomb by flooding the room he is in. He is rescued from drowning by Esther. Andrews, Esther and Frank trail the bandits and with the help of the police some of them are caught. Among them is Dobley, whom Frank tries to help escape when he discovers his identity. Dobley is thrown over the roof by Andrews, held solely by handcuffs and in that way captured.

Frank gives up his work and Dobley goes to prison without implicating Jansen. Jansen, to safeguard himself, tells Esther she can never marry the son of a thief, and Frank writes of it to his father in jail. The father decides to escape and confront his old partner. He is wounded in doing so. The night Frank agrees to help Andrews find the rest of the band, his father gets to the Jansen home and confronts the latter. Esther then learns the truth. Jansen promises to help the young people, but refuses to give up that night's job. Andrews decides to go down the river looking for the band in their motorboat. Jansen learns of it and posts his men where they can kill the detective when he gets opposite their hiding place. Unfortunately it is Frank and not Andrews who makes the trip. Jansen finds out too late and tries to head him off, but the police prevent. He swims out and in mid-river Frank learns that his sweetheart's father is the other head of the band. It is too late then, however, for the men on shore fire, and Jansen, mortally wounded, falls. Frank jumps overboard and rescues Andrews, then, with the help of the police, get the rest of the band. Frank goes to Esther's home to tell her of her father's death and there finds his father dying. Dobley makes both promise to make restitution before getting married.

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

G. W. BRADENBURGH, Importer

Four Dare Devils (new copy)
2800.......Cosmo. 6-3-1 photos, $280
Fall of Pompeii (Genuine)
2000..Ambrosio 12-6-3-1 photos, 200
By Whose Hand (Exclusive)
3000......Monopol 6-3-1 photos, 300
Three Drops of Poison
3400..........Luna 6-2-1 photos, 300
Spanish Blood (Asta Nielsen)
4000....Monopol 6-4-3-1 photos, 200
Dance to Death (Asta Nielsen)
3000......Monopol 6-3-1 photos, 175
The Black Viper
3200....Pyramid 6-3-2-1 photos, 175
Hero Among Men
2000........Lubin 6-3-1 photos, 100
Treasure of Devil's Valley
2700..........Eclair 6-1 photos, 100
The Minister's Daughter
2600. Messter 6-2 kds of l's pho's, 125
Sappho
2800.........Attas 6-3-1 photos, 125
The Scapegrace (Sensational)
1900........C. & M. 3-1 Banner, 100
Faust (colored)
2000...Pathe Art 8-6-3-1 photos, 100
The White Veil
3000........Vienna 6-3-1 photos, 100
Torch of War
3000....Continental 6-3-1 photos, 100

Over 1000 good films from $5.00 per reel up. All with posters, every film examined and sent in good condition. Prices net cash with order or C. O. D. with privilege of examination on receipt of 25% in advance.

G. W. BRADENBURGH
802 Vine Street :: Philadelphia, Pa.

TRANSPARENT SLIDE INK

Red, Blue, Green, Violet, Yellow or White, 15c per bottle, or 4 bottles for 50c postpaid. Large assortment of Brass and Glass Announcement Slides, 25c each.

MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO.
542 Atlantic Avenue Brooklyn, N. Y.
Send for Special Price List on Moving Picture Supplies

Machines and Genuine Parts

Edison–Powers–Simplex
Motiograph--Edengraph

Sold cash or time

Send for new catalogue today.

Bargains in Rebuilt Machines, Photo and Poster Frames, Curtains and Screens.

Write us today what you are interested in.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.
"Everything from screen to booth"
160-A No. FIFTH AVENUE, CHICAGO

HIS CHORUS GIRL WIFE (Nov. 21).—Robert Hart meets Rose Hunter, a well-known singer: they are mutually attracted and marry. Only a few months elapse and Robert's wife shows her true colors: She is extravagant, fast and has an uncontrollable temper. They quarrel; she strikes him. Finally she leaves him and goes away with a former friend named Allan. Robert secures a divorce and decides to enter the ministry.

Five years later he accepts a call to a small Southern town. He bends all his energies to making his people happy and becomes greatly beloved with one exception, his old maid housekeeper, who considered the minister had not been attentive enough to her and had slighted her for Lucy Norton. Hart finds he is falling in love with Lucy and realizes that she returns his love. The affair is brought to a climax at the May Day Festival, where Lucy and Hart stroll off together and finally go boating. Lucy reaches for a water lily and falls into the water: Hart rescues her and takes her home. The next night after choir practice he declares his love and is overheard by Miss Priscilla. The next day in dusting the minister's desk she finds an old photo of Rose inscribed, "From your loving wife, Rose." That same afternoon she sees a picture in the New York paper advertising the appearance in vaudeville of "Rose Hunter." She compares it with the other and decides it is her duty to send word to Rose telling her of Hart's whereabouts. She writes, and Rose makes up her mind to come on and get money from Hart. On Rose's arrival at the station she is met by the son of the landlord of the only hotel. She sends the young chap with a note to the minister, bidding him come to her that night. Hart, amazed and troubled, decides to go. On his arrival, the boy shows him to Rose's room and, full of wonderment as to what "the beautiful lady" can want with the minister, he watches them through the keyhole. Rose greets Hart pleasantly and tries to make love to him. She then threatens to let out their past if he does not pay her to keep quiet. He gives her a check. She, enraged because the sum is not larger, demands more. He steps toward her and she draws back and falls through the old-fashioned window. When Hart reaches the yard he finds Rose dead. She is surrounded by a crowd who, having seen the minister enter the hotel, accuse him of her murder. The boy appears and clears the minister of the blame. The next day the trustees call on Hart to demand his resignation. Priscilla admits them and hastens away to tell Lucy of the minister's downfall. Lucy immediately hastens to Hart, declares her love and faith in him. The trustees are touched, tear up Hart's resignation [illegible] him, with Lucy to face a life of happiness.

THE HARMLESS ONE (Nov. 22).—Henry Saxe, a half witted young man of the village, nourishes in his poor clouded mind a secret fascination for pretty Gladys Wyncott, who rides to work in the city every morning on the car with her sweetheart, Steve Lusk, the motorman. From the village to the city is about eight miles, and Steve's car is known as the "worker's" car. Henry, the "Harmless," determines to give Gladys a ride and steel her from her sweetheart, knowing instinctively the only way to secure her company would be to do this, thereby putting her at his mercy. He steals a nickel from his mother and steals the car from Steve, whom he knocks off the platform, also the conductor. Steve recovers in time to catch an auto and give chase, just saving the street car from crashing into a passing freight. Steve saves his sweetheart and the "Harmless" one is placed in an asylum.

ESSANAY.

THE LOST CHORD (Nov. 18).—Olga, a writer, at a loss to bring her book to a fitting climax, goes for celestial inspiration into church, where she kneels and listens to the wonderful music of Gustave, the organist. She meets him as he leaves the church, and they are instinctively drawn to each other. As the days pass they become greatly attached, and Gustave finds Olga becoming a great inspiration to him. Her old lover returns, however, and the magnetic force of Vanome compels Olga to forsake Gustave. This so affects the young musician that he not only loses his masterful touch of the organ, but becomes broken down in health. Realizing that he is dying, his physician grants his request to be taken to the organ in the church, and there while vainly trying to recall the great strain his spirit leaves him.

THE USUAL WAY (Nov. 19).—Billy is in love with the dentist's pretty little assistant, but is greatly distressed his uncle, on whom he depends for a generous allowance, absolutely refuses to allow him to marry. Uncle develops a bad toothache, and while at the dentist's falls desperately in love with Ruth and decides to marry her. He tells Billy that he no longer objects and he may marry whom he wishes, and he will do the same. Billy rushes joyously to Ruth and they arrange to

The STRANGLERS OF PARIS

ADAPTED TO MOTION PICTURES
IN SIX PARTS

"THE FEATURE EVERYONE HAS WAITED FOR"

EIGHT STYLES OF LITHOGRAPHS

TERRITORIAL RIGHTS AND BOOKINGS

The Motion Drama Company

TEL. 4155 BRYANT

OFFERS ANSWERED IN DRAMATIZATION

OF BELOT'S
FAMOUS NOVEL

DAVID # BY BELASCO

"A MASTERPIECE D'ART"

"THE ## FILM SENSATION ## OF THE YEAR"

DISPLAY MATTER DE LUXE

EXCLUSIVELY CONTROLLED BY

224 W. 42nd St., New York City
CABLE "USRIBUYAS NEW YORK"

ORDER AS RECEIVED

A LIVING STOREHOUSE OF WONDER

WHAT OTHER PICTURE THAT YOU KNOW OF HAS MADE A MILLION DOLLARS?—THIS ONE HAS, AND WILL DO IT AGAIN

PAUL J. RAINEY'S

ONE TOUCH OF NATURE MAKES THE WHOLE WORLD KIN

THAT IS THE SECRET OF THE EXTRAORDINARY SUCCESS OF THIS PICTURE. IT HAS THAT ONE VITAL APPEAL TO ALL CLASSES WHICH MAKES THEM FORGET FOR THE TIME THEIR STATIONS IN LIFE IN THEIR ABSORBING INTEREST IN THE DOMESTIC JOYS AND SORROWS OF GOD'S OBSCURE, FOUR-FOOTED KINGDOM, WHICH, AFTER ALL, ARE MUCH THE SAME AS THEIR OWN. THERE IS SOMETHING IN IT THAT APPEALS TO EVERY MOTHER, THAT APPEALS TO EVERY FATHER, AND, BEST OF ALL, IT APPEALS TO EVERY CHILD

JUNGLE FILM CO.

AFRICAN HUNT VIEW
A Rare Treat in Store Who Journey With Hunter Paul Rainey
MAMA ELEPHANT WHIPS BABY.
AT ROYAL PALACE.
Wilkes-Barre
Darkest Jungle Moving Pictures
Large Audience at Rainey Hunt Pictures
Instructive and Interesting Entertainment at Holyoke Evening Telegram
The Rainey Pictures
The Montgomery
African Hunt
Professor Boynton's ... for Entertainment ... Sunday Morning Acted Telegraph
Like Charge of the Ponderous Rhinoceros—Should Be Seen.
Posterity
AMAZING PICTURES
The Kennel Gazette
Great Animal Hunt ... on Screen
BIG GAME HUNTING ON THE CINEMATOGRAPH.
HUGH HOFFMAN

IN SIX MAGNETIC, STIRRING REELS

TO OBVIATE THE EXPENSE OF USING A LECTURE THE ENTIRE FILM HAS BEEN COMPREHENSIVELY RE-TITLED

AFRICAN HUNT

A STATE RIGHTS TRIUMPH THE UNIVERSE WILL WELCOME

THE RECORD OF THIS PICTURE AMPLY DEMONSTRATES THAT IT IS IN A CLASS BY ITSELF, AND ITS EQUAL MAY NEVER BE SEEN AGAIN. THIS APPLIES TO IT AS AN ENTERTAINER, AS A MONEY GETTER AND AS A RETURN ATTRACTION. NINETY-FIVE PER CENT. OF THE AMERICAN PUBLIC HAS NEVER HAD THE JOY OF SEEING THIS NATURAL HISTORY PHENOMENON. IT IS NOW UP TO YOU. PROFIT BY THE BOX OFFICE PROOFS OF THIS SPLENDID ATTRACTION AND LET US HEAR FROM YOU AT ONCE

1600 BROADWAY, N. Y.

AUTHORIZED DISTRIBUTORS FOR POWERS, MOTIOGRAPH, SIMPLEX, EDISON AND STANDARD MACHINES
Picture Theatre Equipment Co.
THE BIGGEST MOTION PICTURE SUPPLY HOUSE IN AMERICA
21 East 14th Street, New York City
CONDENSERS—BOOTHS—TICKET CHOPPERS—REELS—REEL CASES—BOOTH CABINETS.
WE EQUIP MOTION PICTURE THEATRES COMPLETE

(Continued from page 768)

marry that afternoon. On the way out they meet Uncle and when he learns that they are on their way to be married he is furious and threatens to disown Billy and cut him off without a cent. This threat immediately puts an end to their marriage intentions, and Ruth dejectedly goes back to the office, where she finds the dentist overjoyed at her return.

THE COWBOY SAMARITAN (Nov. 20).—John Landers is sent to the drug store by his bed ridden wife for some medicine. The druggist refuses him credit. Returning home his wife presents him with a letter from her brother in which he enclosed a check for fifty dollars. Landers is influenced by Whiskey Bill Tate to gamble his money, which he does and loses. The stranger to whom he had lost the money tries to prevent Landers from shooting him. The shot is fired and Little Mary, Landers' daughter, is the target, just as she is about to enter the saloon in search of her father. The child is taken to her home and medical attention is given her. The stranger, realizing how much the money would mean to Landers now, leaves a note with the cash, advising that it is for the child and for the father to start life anew. Months later we see Landers and his family leading a new and happy life as the result of the stranger cowboy samaritan.

BRONCHO BILLY'S FIRST ARREST (Nov. 22).—Broncho Billy is elected sheriff. Marguerite, the daughter of the village hotelkeeper, loves the new sheriff, and is very much delighted with his new appointment. A stranger comes to town, and like most country girls, Marguerite becomes greatly interested in him. The man has a fiendish influence over her and would have taken her away from her home and friends forever had it not been for Broncho Billy, who saves her from destruction, and also captures the stranger, who happens to be a fugitive from justice.

PATHEPLAY.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, No. 65, 1913 (Nov. 6).—Treves, Germany.—Emperor William II views the remains of the Roman occupancy of this place and inspects the new Kaiser Wilhelm bridge.

New York, N. Y.—Mayor Kline and the Board of Estimate leave City Hall to attend the first public demonstration of the new auto stages proposed for use in this city by the People's Five Cent Bus Corporation. The stages are similar in design to the modern surface car.

Newark, N. J.—The children of this city turn out in large numbers to celebrate Hallowe'en in old-fashioned style.

Washington, D. C.—Miss Fern Hobbs, private secretary to Governor West of Oregon, arrives here as the authorized representative of Oregon in regard to land matters pending in Congress and the Departments. She is welcomed by Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon.

Mobile, Ala.—President Wilson visits this city to attend the Southern Commercial Congress.

Hot Springs, Ark.—The raising of the new flag of Arkansas at the State Fair is preceded by a parade in which Governor Hays and other high State officials take part.

New York, N. Y.—Mme. Fremstad, famous opera singer, leaves Madison Square Garden after singing before 15,000 people at Fusion Political Rally.

Trinidad, Col.—In a two-hour battle between the mine strikers and deputy sheriffs, the Pathe camera man is on the strikers' firing line with the bullets flying around him.

Mill Valley, Cal.—The California Cycle Club starts on its annual run.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 64—1913 (Nov. 3).—London, England.—The marriage of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife is a function of the first magnitude at St. James Palace.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A military parade precedes the rededication of Congress Hall by President Wilson. The historic hall has been restored to its original appearance.

Dawson, New Mexico.—An explosion causes a cave-in and 223 miners are buried behind tons of rock, 4,000 feet from human aid. The list of dead is one of the most appalling in the history of mining.

Santa Cruz, Cal.—A solid wall of flames, six miles wide, sweeps across the Santa Cruz mountains and threatens the lives of hundreds of residents in this district.

San Francisco, Cal.—Thousands march through crowded streets in the Tortola Festival Parade that is a marvalous display in point of variety and picturesque costumes.

For FEATURE FILMS
address
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE
Suite 405 Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6229
SEND FOR OUR NEW LIST

Advance Motion Picture Co.
Commercial, Industrial and Educational Film Mfgrs.
Chicago.
General Offices. 547-549 Peoples Gas Bldg.
Factory and Studio. 950 Edgecomb Place

MOTION PICTURE FILMS
Get our prices. Quick facilities. We print negatives, develop and print positive. Splendid results assured. Camera men supplied.
Parisian Manufacturing and Film Renovating Co.
4940 Wentworth Avenue Chicago, Ill.

The Old Reliable
BULL DOG CEMENT
AND
ONE DROP OIL
At Your Exchange
ONE DROP OIL CO., 18 S. Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
Moving Picture Machines and Films.
Theatre Brokerage Exchange,
440 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

WHY SHOW A
Jumpy—Flickery—BUSINESS KILLING Picture?
WHEN YOU CAN
HAVE YOUR MACHINE FIXED AS GOOD AS NEW. WORK GUARANTEED
We sell all makes of machines, new and second-hand. Also machine parts, supplies, tickets, carbons, etc.
CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO.,
538 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Illinois.

FILMS FOR SALE
$3.00 per Reel Up
Send for our new revised list. 50 features for sale, low prices. Second-hand machines, all makes.
ECONOMY FILM CO., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

COMPENSARC
That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our Booklet 15018
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA
733

Denver, Colo.—The first anniversary of the dedication of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception is celebrated with much more pomp. After High Mass the priests leave the cathedral to attend a banquet.

New York, N. Y.—A serious tie-up of second, third and fourth class mail is threatened when 130 chauffeurs of the Postal Transfer Service strike without warning and desert their trucks on West 25th Street. Later the trucks are operated with a police officer detailed to each.

Oregon Coast.—With all sails set the British ship "Glenesslin" is driven on the rocks at the foot of the Neah-Kah-Nie mountain and ship and cargo are lost. The wreck is sold for $100.

MR. GASTON FROM PARIS (Nov. 18).—This story depicts the love adventures of a French waiter, the daughter of a German cook and an American waitress. The cook offers Gaston a job as waiter expecting him to marry Gretchen, whose face is not her fortune. But the American waitress has a face which is, and Gaston lays his heart at her feet. So resentment and jealousy awaken in the hearts of the cook and his daughter and they seek to compel Gaston to do their will—with laughable results.

FLOWERS OF JAPAN (Nov. 18).—A beautiful travel film showing the lovely wistaria and the regal iris in their native land.

BY IMPULSE (Nov. 19).—Robert Harmon, returning from abroad, calls upon a family friend, Mr. Fisher, and while there sees a photograph of a beautiful girl who, he is informed, is Mr. Fisher's daughter. Later his housekeeper tells him that another maid is needed and they send to an employment agency for one. It so happens that Mr. Fisher's daughter, Lucille, is at the employment agency on a similar errand and learning that Harmon desires a maid determines for a lark to take the position. She is employed and Harmon is impressed with the fact that he has seen her before. After a day or two Lucille decides to return home secretly in the dead of night and for a souvenir takes Marmon's photograph to carry with her. But a burglar entering the house at this juncture causes her identity to become known and gives her a lover.

THE GREEN-EYED MONSTER OF JEALOUSY (Special—2 parts—Nov. 20).—A touching story in which a little girl breaks down prejudice and jealousy in her elders, brings her mother and stepfather together and forms a common bond between the two. Little Jacqueline's widowed mother has married again and the stepfather having taken an aversion to the child from no cause whatever, she lives at a boarding school. Owing to an outbreak of measles the child is sent home, much to the annoyance of her stepfather. She overcomes his prejudice and wins his love, only to find that innocently she has aroused her mother's jealousy. But by making a supreme sacrifice she wins against opposition and causes happiness to take the place of foolish jealousy.

NATIVES OF AUSTRALIA (Nov. 21).—A short but interesting "customs" film showing the aboriginal Australians as they are to-day. These people are interesting because of the fact that they stand at the very bottom of the human scale in morality and mentality.

THE POND SNAIL (Nov. 21).—Showing the common but little known snail in his home and giving an insight into his habits.

IN THE SPANISH PYRENEES (Nov. 21).—Few Americans know the Pyrenees and this film is all too short, showing as it does splendid mountains capped with snow, brawling streams and Alpine meadows in a succession of beautiful views.

KENTON'S HEIR (Nov. 22).—Kenton, a wealthy man, has a ne'er-do-well son whom he discovers stealing from his safe. He drives the young man from his house in disgrace. Years later Kenton becomes desperately ill and his paternal love never having died, his longing to see his boy becomes unbearable. His physician feeling that it might save his patient's life were he to see his son again, determines upon desperate measures. He finds Wainwright, once a gentleman but now a vagrant, and asks him to pose as young Kenton. Wainwright consents and is accepted without question by the old man. Braced up by his new life of luxury he becomes a man and wins the love of a fair young girl. The sudden death of the physician removes the only witness of his identity. The real son shows up at last, and how Wainwright fights down his temptation but does not lose by it is most strongly told.

DREARY DRIVEL

Dreary, because of their dull sameness and monotony have characterized Western photoplays.

Laclede Westerns

Will be Different

FIRST SUBJECT:

THE PALEFACE SQUAW

(3,000 Feet)

Attention extraordinary to film stories will relieve you from the boring, "quick on-the-trigger hero who would have surely been hung in the last reel if it hadn't been for the devoted heroine," and such other scenes which make blindness less of an affliction.

Real writers, not literary longshoremen, have been engaged to write live scenarios that glow with feeling, sparkle with originality, palpitate with energy. And they will be "different!"

S ——————— R
T Care in Production I
A Will Save You G H
T Care in Renting T
E ——————— S

---

Three Reel Features Only, One a Month Beginning in November

---

FILMS LLOYD, Inc.

220 West 42nd Street :: :: New York City

WINTER SPORTS IN SWITZERLAND (Nov. 11.—This film shows the sports that have changed Switzerland from a summer resort into an all-the-year-around tourist country. Here we see sleighing, skating races, exciting scenes of coasters on "bob-sleds" going at a tremendous clip and above all the ski jumpers sailing through the air at incredible heights and speed.

SIBERIA'S HOLY LAKE (Nov. 11).—Lake Baikal is of great size, being 400 miles long by 35 miles wide, and is 1,800 feet above sea level. It is in a magnificent wilderness. This film gives an excellent idea of the scenic beauty of Southern Siberia and also shows the famous railroad ferry which carries trains across the lake.

LIZARD LORE (Nov. 12).—A most interesting and scientifically accurate exposition of lizards and their habits, prepared by Raymond L. Ditmars, Curator of Reptiles at the Bronx Zoological Park, New York City. It shows a number of different species of lizards in their natural homes and following out their natural habits.

THE COAST OF CALIFORNIA NEAR CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA (Nov. 12).—It is hard to conceive of more beautiful land and ocean pictures than these. Huge frothing waves beat against rugged cliffs, crowned by ancient cedars, and water-worn into fantastic shapes at their bases.

A SLAVE OF SATAN (Special—2 parts—Nov. 13).—A banker's daughter, wearied with the dull routine of her life, becomes an artist's model under an assumed name. Her artist employer falls a victim to her beauty and loves her and she accepts his advances. Finding her faithless, and learning her identity by chance, he reveals all to her father, who drives her from his house. She derives a scanty living from singing in the streets and cheap cafes. She is accidentally found unconscious from weakness, by the artist, who rescues her from her misery. He still loves her, and taught by her folly and its consequences, she really reciprocates his love. So happiness comes to them at last.

BUTTERFLY PRESERVATION (Nov. 14).—Another one of the films of scientific interest that have made the name of Pathé famous. It shows the capture, classification, method of preservation and final disposition for scientific purposes, of the beautiful little insects.

THE SLATE INDUSTRY (Nov, 14).—A fine industrial showing the quarrying of slate in imposing mountains, the shaping of the slabs, etc., up to the final cutting and shipment.

IN THE SAME BOAT (Nov. 15).—Spuffy, whilet at a summer boarding house by the sea, falls in love with "a widow fair," who reciprocates his affection. But the widow has a little son, fond of fishing and mischief, and while Spuffy is making love to the widow on one side of a large rock by the shore, the son is fishing on the other. The flying fishhook catches poor Spuffy's wig, which is captured and hidden by the youthful fisherman. Spuffy's efforts to keep the widow and summer guests from learning his plight are most laughable, and lead him into many scrapes, including an ocean voyage in a tub, before he convinces people of his sanity.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S EXCLUSIVE PROGRAM

VITAGRAPH.

WILD BEASTS AT LARGE (Released on General Film Exclusive Program—2 parts).—The train carrying all the cages filled with wild animals of the circus is wrecked, and bears, lions, leopards, elephants, kangaroos and monkeys escape down the track toward the village. Master Paul Seeley is sitting in the parlor bemoaning his fate. He has just been told that he cannot go to the circus because he startled his mother while enthusiastically raving over a book about the kings of the forest. From the window he sees the train wreck and runs out to spread the news among the townspeople. Mr. and Mrs. Seeley are suddenly prostrated with fear when they poke their heads out, to see two big tigers waiting there for them. They jump out the window to the street, making straight for the cellar, where, followed by their neighbors from all directions, they hasten for shelter. Upstairs in the parlor, the two big tigers jump about on tables and chairs, creating havoc. The biggest, sitting on a small round table loses his balance and table and tiger come to the floor. This attracts the attention of the other tiger. They sit on their hind legs and belt each other with their tremendous paws, and chase about the room, overturning everything. Patricio Mulduron, from southern Italy, in his popular fruit store, is pursued with all his customers, men, women and children, into the adjoining room by a swarm of monkeys. The monkeys sit upon the fruit stand and sample all the fruit, and gorge themselves so full they can hardly wiggle. The keepers now get on the trail of the escaped animals. They first catch the big tiger, in Mr. Seeley's home. The refugees in th Seeley cellar then come out and run for other shelter. The town grocery store is in great trouble. Five bears enter the place and start in to change its appearance. They climb a counter piled high with boxes of honey and fill their bellies with the sweet, stickey honey. They mount a stack of flour sacks and tear them open, scattering the flour in white clouds and covering their shaggy coats. Others climb the high shelves stacked with groceries and the shelves crash to the floor on top of them, scattering cans of beans, tomatoes, corn, etc., in all directions.

A proud and portly butcher is standing at the door of his butcher shop when Master Paul Seeley comes on the run and tells him that the wild animals are around the corner. The butcher leaps into the store, followed by Master Paul, just succeeding in getting into the refrigerator as three large lions enter the place. The cashier girl in the paying cage has to sit in the cage in the midst of the roaring lions, nearly frightened to death as she watches them tearing meat from the hooks and devouring it, while the butcher is peering through the glass in the refrigerator door. When the lions have consumed all but a bunch of tripe the keepers come and chase them out, allowing the butcher and the boy, nearly frozen, to come from their retreat. The girl has fainted, and when she comes to, she jumps at the slightest sound. In one house, the inhabitants are besieged by monkeys. Women holding children by the hand hasten up into the garret. One woman has to climb a ladder to the roof, followed by a big, frolicsome Simean, and she jumps down a whole story to a tin roof, falling through a skylight and landing upon the heads of a crowd of men drinking in a saloon beneath. Then comes Mr. Seeley carrying Mrs. Seeley, and when he hears of the monkeys he goes into the saloon and tells of his terrifying experiences. Just outside the barroom, fat, evil-colored piercing-eyed boa-contrictors are writhing on the floor, and as Mr. Seeley and a friend, both now feeling happy, start from the barroom, the snakes enter. Poor Seeley, his friend and all the men leap onto the bar, staring with saucer eyes. The snake-keeper comes, and bare-handed thrusts the snakes into sacks. Two leopards climb through a window in a barber shop and clear the place. One leopard climbs up the shaving mug rack, pulling the whole thing down, frightening the two animals so that they leap through the window. At this time the barber's wife is washing dishes in the room above. Spotted leopard enters and brushes against her: the woman gives a terrified yell, and grabbing up the pan filled with hot water, douses it on the leopard, who goes to the china closet and pulls it down, dishes and all. The barber's wife faints and does not revive until her husband with the leopard's keeper rescues her. Master Paul Seeley decides to play a joke on his parents. When Mr. and Mrs. Seeley stagger in, thinking that their troubles are at an end, they both collapse utterly when they hear a tigerish roar outside the door. Running to the bedroom, they are met there by Paul in a tiger skin. Mr. Seeley solaces himself for his recent woes by applying his slipper where Paul will feel it most.

PATHEPLAY.

A DUTCH LOVE STORY (Released Week of Nov. 10).—Hans Ghynt, a Dutch farmer of Holland, is a widower whose small family consists only of his mother, his son Jan and himself. He falls in love with a new neighbor, a Swiss widow by the name of Minna, living with her little daughter, Katrina, and who, though beautiful and good, is slandered and disliked by the neighbors simply because she is a stranger and foreigner. By reason of this uncalled-for prejudice Hans' relatives oppose the match with vigor. Minna, seeing this, asks Hans to release her from the engagement, but he refuses, being angerd by the folly of his people. The wedding takes place and Hans' mother leaves his house in anger, while Jan enlists in the army for six years' service in the colonies. Hans finds Minna a good and loving wife and Katrina a good step-daughter and is happy.

Six years later his mother, repenting of her folly, tries to get her son to permit her to return to his house, but he refuses either to forgive or receive her. Meanwhile Katrina has grown to womanhood and Jan returning home from the army comes to love her and is loved in return. In the light of their love the old mother is forgiven and the family is united once more.

LITTLE JACK (Released Week of Nov. 17).—Noel Bambert, an honest workman, finds that his wife has been unfaithful to him and that her guilty associate is his best friend. Broken-hearted, he drives his wife from his house and all his love and care is now lavished on Little Jack, his son, a delicate and sensitive child. Losing interest in his work because of his domestic trouble he becomes careless and seriously injures his hand in a vise. Rendered incapable of work for a time he is reduced to the extremes of poverty. That Little Jack may have food, the father begs on the street, and one night through an open window sees murder being committed. He rushes over to prevent the tragedy, but arrives too late. The assassin has fled and servants running into the room find Rambert only and seize him as the murderer and turn him over to the police. The real murderer, Mortal, who was driven to the crime by gambling debts, enjoys freedom from all suspicion. Rambert, crushed by his wrongs, thinks only of his little son and decides to give him over to the care of Dr. Arthez, whom he knows he can trust. The erring wife learning of her husband's misfortunes visits him in prison and vainly begs him to forgive her. In the meantime Rambert's air of innocence and repeated denials have caused the authorities uneasiness and they decide to investigate the matter more deeply. They seek to find persons who would have benefited by the death of the murdered man. Mortal, seeing the announcement in a newspaper, is overcome with guilty fear and decides to endeavor to bribe Rambert to plead guilty. He does so, offering to give to Little Jack $10,000 if the father will suffer for the crime. For his son's sake Rambert accepts and wills the money to Dr. Arthez as his son's guardian in a letter to be opened only after his death. The night before the execution Little Jack has a vision of his father on the scaffold and strongly influenced by the vision determines to open the letter, which he knows came from his father. As the letter contains the proof of Rambert's innocence the execution is averted in the nick of time. Rambert freed, Mortal arrested, and the father goes to his own home a happy man again, reunited with his wife, now forgiven, and with Little Jack.

KALEM.

THE PERILS OF THE SEA (Released Week of Nov. 17—2 parts).—David Langdon steals a sum of money from his father's safe. Edward, his elder brother, takes the blame and is ordered from home. Unable to secure other employment, Edward ships aboard the steamship "Columbia." Before sailing he writes his mother to this effect. Edward meets Lillian, and the two become friends. Fire breaks out in mid-ocean. Edward does heroic work to allay the panic, but almost all the passengers perish by fire or water. Edward saves the life of Lillian. The two are picked up by Second Officer Bradford, in charge of one of the cutters. After many days, the boat drifts ashore on an island. Privation has killed all the people in the boat except Lillian, Edward and Bradford. News of the disaster reaches the Langdons. David, remorse-stricken, confesses his guilt.

Five years pass and the three on the island have reverted to the primitive. Bradford's mind is giving way as hope of rescue vanishes. The sailor loves Lillian madly, but she in turn loves Edward. The latter gives no indication of his love for her, and the girl is in despair. Bradford makes an attempt to embrace Lillian and is driven off by Edward. The girl pleads with Edward to spend the night in her shelter, fearing Bradford's return. Edward declines, saying he will watch outside. Bradford returns that night. Again repulsed, he goes mad. Climbing to the top of a high cliff, he leaps to his death. The next morning a ship is sighted, and a rescue party makes for shore. Lillian then learns of Edward's love for her. Hand-in-hand, they await their rescuers and the dawn of a new life.

A TERRIBLE LESSON (Released Week of Nov. 10).—Drennan is the owner of a clothing factory. Conditions there are so bad that Mary Smith contracts consumption. Drennan enters the factory one morning just as Mary has an attack of coughing. He roughly abuses her and orders her to go on with her work. Terrified, the girl does her best. But her weakness is too great—she cannot keep up with the others. Drennan notices this and discharges the girl. The owner receives a letter from the Board of Health ordering him to remedy the conditions in his plant. Instead, Drennan bribes the political boss and ignores the order. The governess to George, Drennan's four-year-old son, resigns her position. Mrs. Drennan advertises for another maid. Mary applies for and receives the position. Drennan does not see his son's new governess. A few weeks later, George complains of feeling ill. Mary has succeeded in keeping the knowledge of her own illness from her employers. The doctor examines the child and declares him tuberculous. Drennan then sees Mary for the first time. The physician examines the girl and informs Drennan that his son has contracted the disease from her. In agony the factory owner reproaches the girl. But Mary flares up and informs him she contracted tuberculosis in his factory. Drennan sees his culpability and is overcome with remorse. He sends Mary and his boy to a sanitarium. The patients are finally discharged as cured. Meanwhile Drennan has had his factory renovated and it becomes the most sanitary shop in the State. He takes Mary and George to see the place. Mary is about to sit at one of the machines, thinking that she is to return to factory life. Drennan stops her. It is his desire that hereafter she devote her life to the care of her own health and that of his son.

A FEMALE FAGIN (Released Week of Nov. 10).—Nellie and Jane, two fifteen-year-old girls, are the pupils of Rosy Rosalsky. They are employed in a department store owned by Henry Burden. Nellie is employed at the cashier's desk, while Jane is a salesgirl. Jane, by sending the purses she steals to Nellie through the pneumatic tube escapes detection. Walker, department manager, is accused by a customer of having stolen her purse. Jane has taken this purse and has sent it to Nellie via the tube. Walker takes the angry woman to Burden's office. The owner is inclined to believe the department manager guilty. Grace, Burden's daughter, loves Walker and determines to investigate. Suspecting Jane, she leaves her diamond pendant on the counter. The salesgirl falls into the trap. That night, the two students of the female fagin turn all their proceeds over to their teacher. They keep the pendant, however. Jane wears it to a motion picture theater. Grace sees the piece of jewelry on the girl's neck and knows she has found the perpetrators of the thefts. The following day, she takes Nellie's place at the tube. A few hours later she receives a purse that has

NO MORE TWO REEL WESTERNS

After

"The Barrier of Blood" and "The Fatal Reckoning" ALL THE AMMEX FEATURES WILL BE IN THREE PARTS

Two a Month Now Three a Month Later

As you look over the list of contracts, doesn't it strike you that the shrewdest buyers in the business have recognized the quality in

AMMEX WESTERN FEATURES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| ALABAMA | John I. Pittman | Atlanta, Ga. |
| ARIZONA | Golden Gate Film Co. | 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco |
| CALIFORNIA | Golden Gate Film Co. | 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco |
| COLORADO | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| DELAWARE | Electric Theater Supply Co | Philadelphia, Pa. |
| DIST. OF COLUMBIA | Electric Theater Supply Co | Philadelphia, Pa. |
| FLORIDA | John I. Pittman | Atlanta, Ga. |
| GEORGIA | John I. Pittman | Atlanta, Ga. |
| IDAHO | Northwestern Feature Film Co | Portland, Ore. |
| ILLINOIS | (Northern) Union Film Co | Chicago, Ill. |
| LOUISIANA | Texas Film Corp'n | Dallas, Tex. |
| MARYLAND | Electric Theater Supply Co | Philadelphia, Pa. |
| MONTANA | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| NEVADA | Golden Gate Film Co. | 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco |
| NEW MEXICO | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| NEW JERSEY | (Southern) Electric Theater Supply Co. | Philadelphia, Pa. |
| NORTH CAROLINA | John I. Pittman | Atlanta, Ga. |
| OKLAHOMA | (Southern) Texas Film Corp'n | Dallas, Tex. |
| OREGON | Northwestern Feature Film Co | Portland, Ore. |
| PENNSYLVANIA | (East) Electric Theater Supply Co. | Philadelphia, Pa. |
| PENNSYLVANIA | (Western) Weiland Film Co | Pittsburgh, Pa. |
| SOUTH CAROLINA | John I. Pittman | Atlanta, Ga. |
| TENNESSEE | John I. Pittman | Atlanta, Ga. |
| TEXAS | Texas Film Corp'n | Dallas, Tex. |
| UTAH | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| VIRGINIA | Electric Theater Supply Co | Philadelphia, Pa. |
| WASHINGTON | Northwestern Feature Film Co | Seattle, Wash. |
| WEST VIRGINIA | Weiland Film Co | Pittsburgh, Pa. |
| WYOMING | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |

Do you want to help your competitor by allowing him to secure Ammex Features?

Ammex Film Company

Ninth Floor, Candler Building New York City

been stolen by Jane and sent up. The two girls are taken to Burden's office, where they confess their guilt. Jane tells of their schooling in crime by Rosy Rosalsky. Walker, Grace, the store superintendent and an officer accompany the girls to their home. The female fagin suspects the girls of having betrayed her. Turning the key in the door, she attempts to throttle Jane. Nellie opens the door and Walker, the superintendent, and the policeman overpower the woman after a hard struggle. Repenting of his unjust suspicion concerning the department manager, Burden gives his consent to Walker's marriage with Grace. The two take Jane and Nellie into their home where, freed from the influence of the female fagin, their redemption is effected.

A RAILROAD WOOING (Released Week of Nov. 10).—Alice, daughter of the superintendent of the railroad, is spending the summer at the home of Ethel. Billy and Bob are breaking in a new locomotive. The two girls go canoeing. The boat capsizes in the middle of the lake. Billy and Bob hear the cries for help. Leaving their engine ungarded they go to the rescue. Fearing to let their parents know of the accident, Alice and Ethel swear the boys to secrecy. In the meantime, a passenger train has almost smashed into the deserted engine. For failing to flag properly Billy and Bob are suspended for thirty days. The boys decide to spend their enforced vacation camping near Ethel's home. By the time the vacation draws to a close, arrangements have been made for a quiet double wedding. The day comes 'round. Clad in their best, the boys board the train for the town where they are to meet the girls. A defective valve injures the engineer and fireman of the train. Billy and Bob are ordered to take the place of the injured men. Their protests are of no avail, and they take charge of the engine. Before going, however, Bob sends a telegram to the girls to meet them at the station with the minister. The train pulls in. While the conductor holds the watch, the ceremony is performed. This over, the strong arm of duty separates the newlyweds. There is just time to snatch a kiss, and the train resumes its journey. Before going to bed at a distant terminal that night, Bob requests Billy to kick him hard in order that his fit of the blues be relieved. Billy accommodates him and then requests a similar favor. It is granted with right good will. At the little village down the line, two girls sit at a window, weepingly watching the rising moon.

of Nov. 24).—This picture presents some of the finest views ever taken of the New York Zoological views ever taken of the New York Zoological Park. Because of the number of animals shown, the superb photography and the success which attended the taking of these pictures, this feature brings the "Zoo" to every patron of the photoplay theater. The New York Zoological Park contains the greatest and most valuable collection of animals and birds that has ever been assembled for exhibition. Particular interest is attached to several of these creatures because of their rarity. The rarest animal in the world, the pigmy hippopotamus, is one of the animals of which several highly interesting views are given. So far as is known, this animal is the only one of its kind in captivity, and one of the very few living. Views are also presented of the Indian rhinoceros, the largest and rarest of existing rhinoceroses. The pictures of the lions and tigers are superb. These animals exhibited great curiosity while the scenes were being taken and assumed a series of striking poses in front of the camera. These together with the changing moods of the beasts form a series of pictures of unusual interest and beauty.

LUBIN.

A LEADER OF MEN (Released Week of Oct. 13—2 parts).—John Doran, bred of the slums, meets Julia Radnor, a capitalist's daughter. She patronizes him, but he becomes familiar and she rebukes him. He then declares himself the equal of any man and he will prove it to her. He gets employment in a ship yard and soon is made a foreman. His strong personality causes him to be the leader of the men and Laura Phalen, a stenographer, coaches him in the rudiments of education. David Radnor, Julia's father, and his clique of capitalists desire to get control of the ship yard, and bribe Doran to order a strike. The battle is fierce and bloody, until Laura takes John to some of the strikers' starving homes. He then finds that he has a conscience and despite the offer of more bribery money and the hand of the capitalist's daughter, he calls the strike off and finds love and contentment with the little stenographer.

WHEN THE HEART CHANGES (Released Week of Oct. 13).—When Roland loses Rose to Oliver he becomes a hermit. Time passes wearily for Roland and happily for Oliver and Rose. A little girl is born and a few years later Roland, who is in the town buying supplies, sees the happy family. The child wanders away from the parents and the hermit finds her crying. His jealousy being aroused he carries little Betty away to his mountain home. The parents search for the child, but in vain. Roland, always so nervous at being so close to Rose and Oliver and fearing that they will find and claim, the child resolves to go away. One day an auto breaks down near Roland's shack and he sees Rose get out and embrace a child about the age of her own, his heart is touched and he resolves to restore Betty to her parents. In the meantime the child has upset a box of matches and treading on some of them, sets fire to the shack. Roland is just in time to save Betty from the fire and hastens to restore her to her parents, who are overjoyed at recovering their baby. Oliver gives Roland a cigar, which in his nervousness he crumples into bits and drops it into his pocket. He then returns to the ruins of his home, fills his pipe with the broken cigar, lights it with a burning ember and smiles as true happiness comes with reparation done.

HIS CODE OF HONOR (Released Week of Oct. 20).—Rennard Wilson, a teacher of music, has among his pupils, Mary Dennis, a pretty and lovable girl. Because she is a well paying pupil he leads her to believe that she has a good voice, the fact being that her voice is far beyond par. James Kent, a visitor at the studio, remonstrates with Wilson, but he takes no heed and does not know that Mary is in love with him. The girl's parents raise money enough to send her to a conservatory in New York. There it is discovered that her voice has no value and at all tests for grand opera she is disqualified. Still Mary, unwilling to give up, writes to her parents that she is getting along finely, and in her humble rooms treasures the photograph of Wilson, the man she loves. The music teacher prospers and removes to New York. There he and Kent are companions. One night they attend a cabaret where Mary is to sing and take seats next to the platform. The manager has given her notice that this is to be her last performance. Heartbroken she struggles through her aria and faints upon the stage. Wilson and Kent take her to the hospital. There her sad eyes tell the story of her love for her teacher. He realizes that be is the cause of her unfortunate mistake, and must atone. Pity also inspires love, and he asks her to be his wife. As he leads her from the hospital her happiness is completed by meeting her father and mother, who have been sent for by Wilson to witness his atonement.

JUST NOBODY (Released Week of Oct. 27).—Amelia Hicks and her husband, being penniless, enter the county poor house. Dad has been unable to work his little farm on account of paralysis. One day Amelia is ordered by the officials to report at the house of David Jarrow, a railroad engineer. His long runs only allow him to be home once a week and he desires an old woman to attend to his five-year-old daughter and help with the housework. Amelia is duly engaged, but soon finds out that she is a drudge and a nobody. Unhappy that she is separated from her old husband she decides to leave, and one morning when Mrs. Jarrow and the child have started to town in the two-horse wagon, Amelia takes her little bundle of belongings to walk back to the poor house. Presently she sees a sight that chills her blood. The horses in the wagonette have bolted, and wrecked the vehicle right on the railroad track. She totters to the rescue, but finds herself unable to extricate the mother and child. She hears the toots of the engine with which David signals his homecoming. With all her strength she hobbles down the track waving her shawl. The train stops just a few feet from the wreck. The passengers quickly rescue David's wife and child and shower Amelia with money. She is no longer a Nobody, but indeed Somebody. Her husband, being cured of his malady, is on the same train and with money to re-rent the little farm they are again made happy.

ON TIME FOR WORK (Released Week of Oct. 27).—John Bowers, who is a machinist, is habitually late at his bench, and the superintendent has informed him that the next time he is late he may look for another job. John does not want the trouble of seeking another place. He goes to a pawn shop and buys a second-hand alarm clock. That night he again stays out and having had enough, forgets to wind up the clock. When he wakes up it is ten minutes of eight. He jumps into his clothes minus coat and hat, flies out of his room; he knocks the housemaid down stairs; upsets the newsboy at the door; speeds down the street; jumps on the hind part of an automobile; squeezes through the gate and finally lands on time.

WHEN THE EARTH TREMBLED (Released Week of Nov. 3—Three Parts).—Girard & Sims, ship brokers, of Philadelphia, had been partners for years. Sims' daughter and young Girard had become engaged while abroad. Sims speculated outside, and, injuring the credit of the concern, Girard demanded a dissolution. The young folks, hearing of the split, married before returning, and Girard disowned his son and repudiated the wife. Young Girard and Sims established a new concern in San Francisco, entitled "The Samoan Colony Company," and Paul sailed for the Colony, leaving his wife and two children in San Francisco. Girard had tried hard by buying in stock to ruin the Samoan Colony Company until he received news that the ship that carried his son had been wrecked and all on board lost. Then came the memorable San Francisco earthquake. Sims with many of his aids were buried in the ruins of the office building. Dora with her two children narrowly escaped and after many hardships went East to Philadelphia. Reduced to starvation she surrendered her two children to her father-in-law, William Girard, but he would not receive the mother. Later, Girard advertised for a governess for the children and Dora disguising herself secued the position. By her beautiful disposition she secured the old man's love, and finally her husband having been the only one saved from the wreck, returned, and peace and happiness came to the family.

WHEN BROTHERS GO TO WAR (Released Week of Nov. 3).—For years it has been the custom of the Valdez family, an old Mexican house, that an amber cross which is an heirloom, shall be the property of the head of the family. It is in the keeping of the Widow Valdez at the time she dies leaving two sons. One, Jose, the elder, who is betrothed to Maria, and Captain Guillemo Valdez, the younger, an officer in the army. To the captain the mother bequeaths her entire estate except the amber cross, which she wills to the elder brother. While attending the mother's funeral the young captain sees Maria, his brother's fiancee. They are mutually attracted and Jose in the bigness of his heart tells them to marry and be happy. A year passes and one day Guillemo is surprised to hear that Jose has joined the insurrecto's forces. Soon after a battle occurs and the brothers are each in command of opposing forces. Captain Guillemo is taken prisoner by the insurrectos and condemned to be shot. Jose, exercising his authority as commanding officer, permits his prisoner to escape, for which he is court-martialed and executed. The younger brother does not know of the sacrifice which has been made until an old servant places in his hand the amber cross.

FROM OUT THE FLOOD (Released Week of Nov. 10—Two Parts).—Andrew Tyler, son of the idle rich, and Florette Dubois, a chorus girl, at a dinner party are dared to get married. Full of wine the dare is accepted and a minister is sent for, who performs the ceremony. Simultaneously a dam bursts and the city is engulfed. Florette after much injury is rescued. Andrew is swept down the flood. Nan Hopkins, daughter of rich parents, is also swept down. She is attacked by a ghoul who tries to steal her rings, but Andrew swims to her rescue. Next day Florette and Nan are thrown together in the emergency hospital, and telling their stories become friends. On the point of death Florette gives Nan her marriage certificate and pleads that she shall take her place as Andrew's wife. Andrew has become demented and is cared for by a sympathetic farmer. The minister informs Andrew's father of the marriage and an advertisement is placed in the newspapers to find the missing boy's wife. Nan, having recovered, presents herself and is warmly received by the bereaved family. An operation restores Andrew to reason and he returns home, there he is informed that his wife is a member of the household. He falls in love with Nan and secretly they are married without the family ever knowing of the reckless episode.

---

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticons, Slides, Acressories
CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO
Large Line of Edison Goods. Established 1899

VISCO PICTURE MACHINE OIL
Saves you lots of trouble.
Insist on your dealer supplying Visco. Price 25 cents
The Visco Motor Oil Co. Cleveland, O.

NOTICE

THE differences heretofore existing between MR. CHARLES FROHMAN and the UNITED KINGDOM FILMS, LTD., of England, concerning the performing rights in the United States of America, of the moving pictures of the play, "A MESSAGE FROM MARS," having been adjusted, MR. FROHMAN hereby withdraws the notices heretofore published and issued by him and informs the public that the UNITED KINGDOM FILMS has full title and power to negotiate sales of such Moving Pictures known as "A MESSAGE FROM MARS."

CHARLES FROHMAN.

America's Extraordinary Production in Four Acts

Copyright by the New York Film Co.
The Lure of New York

Copyright by the New York Film Co.
The Lure of New York

"The Lure of New York"

Showing Life in Chinatown, Bowery and Coney Island

A clean but unusually thrilling drama, a moral warning against the lure and vile temptations of the City, and showing the power of resistance in the virtue of a good woman.

Two styles of lithographs of each size, one, three and six sheeets, large photographs, heralds and slides.

Write or wire for State rights to

NEW YORK FILM COMPANY
145 West 45th Street - - - New York

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

BISON.

THE RAID OF THE HUMAN TIGERS (3 parts—Nov. 18).—Phyllis, the daughter of Colonel Burton, and Clifford, a young officer, have been deeply in love. The story is laid in India. Owing to the colonel, Phyllis has been forced to marry Major Bainbridge, who is rich. Years pass by. Clifford has been transferred to another part of the country. Bainbridge with his wife and child come to take charge of the station. The old love between Phyllis and Clifford renews itself. Hadji Hassan, chief of the hillmen, attacked by a tiger, takes refuge in a water hole where alligators set upon him. He is saved by Clifford, who happens to be in the neighborhood. He swears his gratitude to his deliverer. Later, with the assistance of the Mad Mullah and his tribe the hillmen attack a caravan.

Harold, Phyllis' son, is captured. The chief, remembering the service that Clifford rendered, orders the boy released and the chap wanders off on his pony. Clifford has been set upon by a tiger and his horse returns riderless. The army soldiers start out to the rescue. Clifford, who was with Harold prior to the attack, searches for him and saves him from another tiger. Colonel Bainbridge joins the hunt and Phyllis, distracted, determines to look for him herself. There is a terrible battle between the soldiers and the hillmen in which the latter are driven back. In their retreat they meet Clifford and the boy. Clifford is badly wounded. As Colonel Bainbridge looks through his glasses, he sights his son and Clifford on a hill. They are rescued and brought to the colonel. Phyllis arrives, carried by her pet elephant, in time to comfort the gallant Clifford, who dies in her arms, satisfied to have been of service to her.

WYNOMA'S VENGEANCE (2 parts—Nov. 22).—After the colonel has ordered all the Indians to be shot on sight in a spirit of hate, Wynoma is found among the dead and taken into the home of the colonel. Years later we find her in love with the colonel's son. He humors her but expresses no deep affection for her. She grows jealous of his attention to a white girl. When the Indians attack the fort she makes the discovery of her origin—that she is the daughter of the attacking chief and that her people were killed at the command of the man who has raised her. She wishes to return—a step that would save the fort from the attack—but she is refused the opportunity. The colonel is wounded and abuses the Indian girl who still wishes to escape and save the inmates. Soon the colonel's wife is shot down and her sweetheart. She rushes to the vault, secures a keg of powder, sprinkles from the cellar to her room, throws the lighted match on the powder and dies in the terrific explosion that follows.

POWERS.

THE DOCTOR'S ORDERS (Nov. 17).—The district attorney and the doctor are good friends. Thus, when the doctor is arrested for speeding, it is the most natural thing in the world that he should go to his friend and attempt to beg off. He tells the district attorney that he was speeding to the aid of a sick man. The attorney refuses to take this for an excuse. Shortly afterward the district attorney has a nervous breakdown and the doctor informs him that he must take a month's vacation. The attorney, weighted down by his strenuous duties, refuses to take a rest and his wife hatches a scheme with the aid of the doctor, the police judge and the police and chauffeur as accomplices, whereby her husband will be compelled to take his vacation.

The wife asks the attorney to take her for a drive. He consents. Just prior to entering the machine, the chauffeur is taken ill and the matter of driving the car falls on the district attorney. During the drive, the wife affects a stroke of heart trouble and begs that she be hurried off to the doctor. The attorney smashes the speed limits. The motorcycle patrolmen, who are parties to the plot, arrest the speeders. He is taken before the judge and sentenced to thirty days in prison as an example to others. The following morning it is announced in the papers that the district attorney has gone on a month's vacation. The wife's object is attained, and she, with the other accomplices, goes to the jail to tell him of the joke.

A STOLEN IDENTITY (2 parts—Nov. 20).—Robert Ganton is an admirer of art and the story opens when he presents Ethel, his fiancee, with a picture of himself. Iva, the sweetheart of Marx, sees the picture and notes the striking resemblance between it and Marx. With the information Marx conceived the plan to steal Ganton's identity and possess his estate and wealth. With the girl he registers at Ganton's hotel and decides to trap him through his love of art. Marx secures the key to a private art gallery, the owner of which is absent. Ganton is enticed to call at the gallery. Once there Marx forces him to change clothes with him and Ganton is left a prisoner. The time for dividing the estate of Ganton's father arrives and with Ethel he goes to the attorney's office. To his chagrin Marx learns that Ganton has a little sister. He decides to do away with the girl. Iva becomes jealous of Marx's attentions to Ethel and a complication follows in which Ethel learns that Marx is a fraud. Held a prisoner she escapes and meets Ganton, who has also escaped by pounding his way through the roof of the building in which he was held. In an auto Ganton and the girl make a wild dash to the railroad junction to save the child who has been left on the tracks. They arrive in time to snatch her off just as the express dashes by. Marx is run down at the attorney's office and exposed, and the story terminates with the happy reunion of Ganton, Ethel and Dora.

CRYSTAL.

HER SECRETARIES (Nov. 18).—Pearl is a novelist. Geraldine, loved by Claude, is her stenographer. Pearl's father becomes infatuated with Geraldine and finding this out Pearl discharges her. Pearl advertises for a male secretary. Claude answers. Pearl persuades him to shave his Van Dyke beard off and later becomes quite attached to him. Claude writes her poetry and her love grows. They take a walk in the park. Meanwhile Geraldine has met the father and they go for a walk. Geraldine observes Pearl making love to Claude and she determines to teach her a lesson. Father is made the victim. Pearl resents the attentions to the father and a fight ensues. Pearl relents and discharges Claude. She resolves to do her own typing in the future to avoid friction.

PERCY'S NEW MAMMA (Nov. 18).—Percy brings his fiancee, Bertie, to meet his father. Papa is much impressed. Alice visits the family and Percy becomes attached to her. Bertie is jealous and starts a row. Percy accuses her of flirting with his father and a broken engagement is the result. Alice, sorry that she caused trouble, leaves. The next day the father calls on Bertie to fix matters up. Instead he fixes himself strong in the girl's affections and they are married at the church around the corner. Percy, in the meantime, has been paying attention to Alice and they are engaged. He brings her home to introduce father to her and is surprised to find Bertie as his new mamma. Joy is complete all around.

THE CABARET SINGER (Nov. 23).—Jones, concealing his identity as a crook, wins the affections of Madge. Her father objects to the match and drives Jones from his house. Madge elopes with him and for a time enjoys a high life among the cafes. She is soon left along. Jones is apprehended on an old charge and sent up. Returning to her home she is disowned by her father. Madge seeks employment in one of the cafes as a cabaret singer. She enters upon her work with a vim and triumphs above all her friends. Because her man friend has become infatuated with Madge, one of the singers vows vengeance. Madge has evidently forgotten about her father and home. She is struck down in the road by Ralph Weston's auto one afternoon and seriously injured she is taken to Ralph's home. On her recovery Ralph, unaware of her history asks her to become his wife. She is dismayed; she places a letter telling of her past in one of the boy's books. Meantime the dancer calls for treatment, observes Madge and denounces her. Madge admits it and leaves. Later, Ralph finds the letter in the book and realizes that Madge's better nature has asserted itself. A reconciliation follows.

NESTOR.

THE GOLDEN PRINCESS MINE (Nov. 19).—The young prospector is discouraged with his claim. So also is the old prospector, who lives close by with his wife and daughter, Ramona, the young fellow's sweetheart. An Indian leaves his daughter at the camp and goes to town to buy provisions. He pays for them with gold nuggets. A Mexican follows him away and demands to know where he got the nuggets. The young prospector interferes in the fight that ensues. At the placer mine the Mexican steals some nuggets while the miners are at lunch and showing them to the old prospector he offers him a share in the scheme if Ramona will marry him. The girl scorns his suit. Later, the old Indian observes that his young benefactor is down-hearted and offers to take him, blindfolded, to the mine. When the bandage is removed from his eyes the fellow finds himself in an unknown cave and skeletons around a pile of nuggets in one corner. They return with a generous supply. The Mexican seeks out the Indian and at the point of a gun forces him to lead the way to the mine. The Indian suddenly tries to overpower the Mexican and is shot. Dying, he crawls back and tells the young prospector the news and draws the location of the mine with his finger on the sand. At the mouth of the mine the prospector meets the Mexican and a fight takes place in which the Mexican is killed.

AN ELEPHANT ON HIS HANDS (Nov. 21).—Ramona is fond of pets. Her hubby, Eddie, has a horror of all animals and particularly her pets. The parrots bite him and the monkeys show their teeth. Ramona receives a wire from Eddie's uncle telling him that the circus has gone broke and that he is sending his pet elephant to Eddie to take care of. Ramona sends for Eddie and despite his protests insists that he go and get the beast. He attempts to get some stablemen to arrange to take the elephant. They refuse until he finally agrees to pay a high price for a stall. Arriving at the station Eddie is handed the huge animal with a bill for excess charges amounting to $300. Eddie has one trouble after another. The stable owner refuses to allow the beast on the place. It keeps both Eddie and his wife busy breaking down the fence to get the pet inside and then feeding and giving it water. In the meantime the neighbors protest and the authorities order it removed at once. The last scene of the beast shows him dragging a furniture van with Ramona sitting on top and Eddie leading.

JOKER.

MIKE AND JAKE AT THE BEACH (Nov. 19).—Mike and Jake adore Louise. She, in turn, likes the gallant life saver on the beach and when Mike and Jake propose, she responds with the information that only a brave man can be her husband. They have a passage of arms with the life guard and he pulls their noses. They observe Louise and the guard sitting together on the beach. Meeting two crooks they arrange with them to seize the girl and convey her to a raft. This is done. Mike and Jake overpower the guard and tie him to a post. Then they proceed to the life saving station and secure work as guards. They start out to rescue Louise. Unfortunately, the boat tips over and they experience difficulty in getting back to shore. They untie the other guard and he rows them out to the girl. See the picture to know the end.

THE STINGERS STUNG; OR, JAKE AND MIKE IN THE OIL FIELDS (Nov. 22).—Jake and Mike are both infatuated with Louise. Both carry flowers to her and both accompany her to the fruit orchard. They are caught by the farmer and Jake gets a bunch of buckshot from a shotgun. Mike and the girl escape and Jake is kicked off the place. As Jake limps back to town he comes upon some bunco men planning a letter, offering oil stock at 100 per cent. below par and guaranteeing one thousand per cent. profit. On the following day Mike takes Louise for an auto ride while Mike follows the course of the letter and runs it down in the hands of a rube. He follows the rube into the hands of the bunco men and then gets an idea of his own. Mike buys some oil and pours it on a portion of the land. He seizes the rube and insists that he go with him to see the place. The result is that the rube, the bunco men and Jake are all successfully urged to put their money in the land. Going to Louise he shows her his immense roll of money; she agrees to fly with him and as they pass the rube, the bunco men and Jake, Mike waves the money as a sign of his victory.

MIKE AND JAKE AT COLLEGE (Nov. 5).—Mike and Jake are interested in their sons, who are rival football team captains. There is a row and Mike takes his son away and advises him not to be put upon, and Jake takes his son aside and tells him to practice up. The boys continue to fight and the professor has to kick them out.

Both Mike and Jake love the college widow, and she strings both of them along. Finally she tells them she will marry the man whose son wins the greatest football fame. She thereupon leaves them and flirts with the professor. Mike and Jake come upon the professor and beat him. They are separated by the sons, who suggest a duel with pies.

This comes off with disastrous results to all. Jake and Mike then train their sons for the coming match, and get the worst of the gymnastic stunts and the boxing. On the day of the game the widow flirts with every one, including the sons. She promises the boys to marry the winner. The game is a terrific affair, in which Mike and Jake join. There is a general free-for-all fight at the end, and the widow walks off with the professor.

VICTOR.

FORGOTTEN WOMEN (Nov. 17).—It was during a wild night of dissipation by the reveller that the derelict, drifting down the street begging, approaches him. The reveller refuses him money, but insists that he go into the banquet hall and have a drink. The derelict is dragged up to the large table. His pitiable condition and the fact that he refuses to drink furnish amusement for the congregation. One of the crowd suggests that he tell a story in payment for the repast. The derelict tells the story of his life.

He is introduced as a young man, leaving his home in the country to visit a wealthy uncle in the city. Upon his arrival his uncle finds him a good position in a counting house. His fellows in the counting house teach him to drink. He neglects his mother and his people, and his course continues downward until he receives word from his home that his mother is dying and that her last wish is to see him. He rushes home, but too late. The picture of the derelict's story fades out and the banquet hall fades in.

The reveller takes from his pocket a letter from his mother containing a message from his sweetheart. He realizes that what happened to the derelict is now happening to him. He thanks the story-teller for the lesson. The reveller returns to his mother and sweetheart and leaves the life of dissipation behind. The final scene shows the derelict before a saloon fingering the money given him by the reveller. He conquers the temptation and leaves the old life behind.

"ACROSS THE CONTINENT"

FOUR PARTS 250 SCENES

The picturized version of OLIVER DOUD BYRON'S famous play, full of pulsating incidents, indisputably is the greatest, most enthralling feature film ever produced in America. As a piece of stagecraft it stands unexampled in the history of filmdom. Acted by Pilot's famous all-star cast of players. Fine, lustrous photography.

The burning of New York's celebrated "Five Points," built at an enormous expense, is the most spectacular conflagration ever witnessed.

The wonderful fall backwards from a 50 ft. bridge to the raging waters below is only one of the many daring incidents depicted in this truly wonderful photoplay.

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

ESCAPE FROM PRISON
STREET HOLDUP ON THE BOWERY
JUMP FROM THE HIGH WINDOW
THE FEROCIOUS (?) BEAR CHASE

Write Full Line of Spectacular Advertising Matter Wire

PILOT FILMS CORPORATION

220 W. 42nd St. New York, N. Y.

WHERE THE HOP VINE TWINES (Nov. 21).—It is on the opening day of the hop picking season that Vera met Fred Hallan, the young man from the city. Previous to this she had been happy in the love of Clarence Lane. Hallan was cultured and refined and he, without intending it, alienates her affections. Clarence is hurt by his loss. A spasm of jealousy grips his heart and he shuts Hallan in the hop-kiln with brimstone piled on the fire. Hallan suffers intense tortures from the strangling effect of the sulphur, he barely escapes with his life. When Clarence realizes what he has done he seeks out his mother's grave and gives way to remorse. Here Hallan finds him and he makes a heart-broken confession. Hallan forgives and promises to return the girl to him. He does this by having one of his girl friends from the city visit him in the country. Vera believes that she stands second in Hallan's affection and so turns back for consolation to her deserted sweetheart.

FRONTIER.

SLIM BECOMES A DETECTIVE (Nov. 20).—Slim Hoover's has a proverbial curiosity. In one of the papers he finds an advertisement of a correspondence course in "How To Be a Detective." Slim bites. When the instructions arrive he loses no time in practicing his chosen vocation. With his trusty book and outfit he starts forth to find Mrs. Riley's lost speckled cow. It never occurs to him that the one he finds in Mrs. Hookheimer's back yard is not the one. In triumph he delivers the beast to Mrs. Riley with the information that he found it in the back yard of her neighbor. Mrs. Riley telephones to the constable. Mrs. Hookheimer, in the meantime, has missed her cow and starts in search. She finds it in Riley's yard and leads it home. Arriving, she meets the constable and is arrested.

Trouble follows fast. Si Slocum receives a thrashing from Slim when he tries to interfere and the innocent lady is locked in the jail. When the cow boys finally discover that the detective is responsible for the entire affair they capture him and the two women, Mrs. Riley and Mrs. Hookheimer, proceed to turn the tables on their unconscious enemy.

THE DOUBLE CROSS (Nov. 22).—Jack Bartlett, out West, received a letter from his sweetheart, Ella, saying that as soon as he has acquired the ownership of a ranch she will join him and become his wife. Jack draws his money from the bank, but is prevented from buying the ranch that day on account of the real estate dealer being out of town. He is inveigled into a saloon by some gamblers and in a card game loses his money. Pedro, a cross-eyed Mexican whom Jack has befriended, convinces Jack that he has been robbed. Several days later Ella arrives. She is depressed when Jack confesses his loss to her. However, an idea strikes her and giving the boy some money bids him get a bag of good ore. She seeks and wins the love of one of the gamblers. He becomes interested in a claim she has staked and when she shows him the remarkable samples in her bag he offers to buy. She disposes of her share for more than enough to cover Jack's losses and that evening as the coach draws out a young couple bid farewell to the camp. The gambler and his friends, descending the shaft, find a note reading, "Crooked card games may be alright, but selling mines is better."

REX.

FIRES OF FATE (2 parts—Nov. 20).—The young doctor, spending most of his time in charity work, is particularly interested in the case of a poor mother who must send her child away for its health. This brings him into contact with the owner of the tenement and he endeavors to persuade him to improve conditions. He is refused. Dot, the owner's daughter, has overheard this refusal and she determines to investigate the trouble herself. Her father agrees to her slumming with annoyance. She meets the doctor at the flat of the poor woman, and constant association encourages love. Later the doctor proposes and is accepted. She learns that the child will recover with careful nursing and sends a note to her father stating that she will remain.

One night the building takes fire. The doctor and the girl, watching over the sick bed, are warned by the mother. All escape but Dot. The father, who has received word that the tenement is in flames, rushes to the scene and fights to lend aid. The doctor has gone back into the building and after a moment of great suspense he emerges with the girl in his arms. To show his gratitude the owner builds good sanitary tenements, while the doctor and Dot are quietly and happily married.

HIS OLD-FASHIONED DAD (Nov. 23).—John and Joseph, chums, have settled to comfortable old age together. John has a son, Bob, who is going the pace with his friend Harry. Joseph has a very pretty daughter. The old boys believe that an alliance between their children would be just about the right thing. John returns to his town home and tells Bob he has picked out a nice wife for him. John, provoked at being told he is old fashioned, sends for his old friend's daughter to come at once, and proceeds to array himself in the latest and most up-to-date apparel. The girl arrives, dressed in her most fashionable clothes and the two of them seek out Bob's haunts. Bob and his friend, Harry, see and speak to her. She resents and as they start to go Bob is astounded to see his father dressed in his best with the girl. Bob soon manages to be introduced. Matters progress rapidly to John's delight and amusement. Joseph comes to town and together the two old boys look through the window and see the young couple in an embrace.

IMP.

WHO KILLED OLGA CAREW? (2 parts—Nov. 17).

The story revolves about a photographer, an artist and an adventuress, who wields a peculiar deadening influence over the life of the latter. This adventuress is Olga Carew. During the exposition of the play the enmity which exists between the monkey and the artist's pet is established. The photographer, who lives in the apartment adjoining that of his chum, realizes the baneful effect the adventuress' association has on the artist. He can see that unless the friendship of the adventuress for his chum is severed, a career will be ruined. He takes it upon himself to enter the artist's apartment, while the adventuress is present, and upbraids him for the life of dissipation he is leading. He attempts to make his friend break with the woman and she in turn resents the intrusion. It is during a heat of passion that she strikes the photographer and the monkey. However, the photographer succeeds in inducing his friend to accompany him into the country where he hopes that the change will wean him away from the woman. We observe the artist's gradual reformation through the association of an innocent country girl, Vera Glenister.

The adventuress learns of the artist's whereabouts and follows. Against the pleading of the photographer she persuades the artist to accompany her back to the city, assuring him that he is unworthy of the other girl. Days go by, the photographer, though loving the country girl himself, induces her to accompany him back to the city with the hope that her presence will counteract that of the adventuress to save his chum. At her arrival there is a scene in the studio. Circumstances contrive to leave the two women alone in the adjoining apartment. There is a terrible scream from a woman. The chums and the janitor hear it, and rush in. Olga Carew lies dead upon the floor. Vera stands over her with a dripping stiletto in her hand. She is accused, arrested and carried to jail. There is a trail. Circumstantial evidence points to the guilt of Vera, yet her friend, the photographer, cannot believe that she is the murderer. He remembers a scientific theory that was projected in one of the current periodicals relative to a picture being photographed in the eye of a dead person, and with the aid of one of the detectives he photographs the eye of the dead Olga Carew. When the picture is developed he finds the faint shadow of a monkey in the center. This he carries to the court when it seems that Vera is about to be declared guilty. His evidence is introduced at the last moment. The judge realizes this, instructs the jury, and Vera is cleared. It was the monkey who carried revenge in his heart and plunged the stiletto into the woman's breast.

THE CHILD STEALERS OF PARIS (Nov. 20).—The husband, an American, has reasons to separate from his wife. Later a child is born to her unknown to him. Years pass. We find him a successful stock manipulator on the Paris stock exchange. The wife with her child is visiting in France. The child becomes lost in one of the public parks. She is kidnapped by a child stealer, who in turn sells her to an unscrupulous fagin who forces the child into the streets as a beggar. The child is found by her father who, unaware of her identity, gives her a home and becomes greatly attached to her . Later the mother discovers her child playing in the gardens of her husband. She would take the child away immediately, but the child insists on taking the mother to her benefactor. The man and wife come face to face and reconciliation soon follows.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 87 (Nov. 5).—Portola Pageant.—Twenty thousand native sons and daughters participate in the greatest pageant ever held in San Francisco, California.

The Grand Prix.—The classic of the French turf—the President's Cup—is won by Bruleur.

Prominent People in the Public Eye.—Democratic House Leader Oscar W. Underwood, father of the tariff bill, is given a rousing welcome upon his arrival in his home town—Birmingham, Ala.

Wreck on the Coast of Oregon.—Head on, with all sails set and drawing, the British three-master "Glenesslin," crashed upon the rocks at the base of Necarney Mountain, Oregon, and was pounded to pieces.

Weekly Fashion Hints.—Sport and evening coats are large and sumptuous. (By courtesy of The Ladies' Home Journal.)

Battle of Leipzig Celebration.—The hundredth anniversary of the Battle of Leipzig is celebrated with a magnificent parade in the German City.

Atlanta Fire.—A disastrous fire threatens to destroy the main business section of the city of Atlanta.

British Naval Cadets.—The cadets of the British naval school give an exhibition of efficiency at Earls' Court, London.

Uncle Sam's Troops.—There is an unusual movement of United States Troops on the border on account of the Mexican situation.

Topical Cartoons by the World-famous Cartoonist, Hy. Mayer.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

AMERICAN.

THE TRAIL OF THE LOST CHORD (2 parts—Nov. 17).—The interpretation of the poem, as set forth in the film, shows Father Josef seated at an organ in the chapel in the winter of his life. His ward comes to him with the information that the parent of his sweetheart is dying and wishes to see her united in marriage to him before his demise. Father Josef goes to the bedside and performs the ceremony and tells them that fifty years before he, himself, was about to be wed in this self-same room.

The ceremony awakens a train of memories and, returning to the chapel, he sees in retrospection the long years he has lived since he entered on "The Trail of the Lost Chord." He sees himself in the long ago—a young musician and giving lessons on the pianoforte to Marie, the daughter of the old Spanish Grandee. He becomes lover and teacher at the same time, until Marie's father returns and, learning of the state of affairs, drives him from his home as a dreamer and idler. Filled with grief at the injustice of it all, he meets Father Superior of the Franciscan Order, who cheers him and infuses determination into him.

The priest secures him a position in the orchards of a wealthy merchant and he toils until he possesses an orchard of his own. Then proving to Marie's father that he is not a dreamer, he secures her father's consent to the marriage.

On the morning of his wedding day, seated at his pianoforte, in the glad rejoicing of his approaching happiness, he unconsciously strikes a combination of chords that sound like a "Grand Amen."

He goes to Marie's home and the wedding party starts for the old Mission—but his happiness is destined not to be. Marie's horse throws her, and the frantic lover gathers her up in his arms and carries her to the home he has toiled years to gain. He sends for the Father Superior, but when the aged priest arrives, Marie is too near the borderland to respond to the marriage ceremony. The grief-stricken boy closes his home and goes out to seek happiness, and to do good.

Starting on his journey he finds a family being evicted from their home. He brings happiness by giving them his home and again starts out on his errand of love. The grave of Marie is his shrine, and it is here the aged Father Superior finds him. Leading him gently to the chaped, the priest points out that here he will find the nearest approach to peace, until, in Nature's own time, he will join Marie in the Great Beyond.

In the years that follow, he finds solace in deeds of mercy and charity. He is called by a dying mother to protect her boy from a drunken father. He raises the boy to reverence the church and hopes that he will also accept the Holy Orders, but the boy learns to love, and the priest, remembering his own sad life, gives his consent, and with it, the renunciation of his fondest and dearest hope. And now his mission is accomplished the marriage is consummated and he returns to the chapel to ponder on the mystery of life.

As he looks up the spirit of his lost love appears to convey his soul to its reward, and Father Josef at last has found his "Lost Chord."

THE TALE OF THE TICKER (Nov. 20).—Tom Burns, a broker's clerk, falls in love with his employer's daughter, Edith, but realizes their positions are too far apart to hope. Edith is beloved by Wilson, her father's private secretary. Although she likes him at first, her heart soon turns to Tom. She invites the young clerk to her birthday party. He sends her a bunch of violets, which she wears that night, disposing of Wilson's gift of a handsome bracelet. Wilson proposes and is refused. He becomes jealous of the preference shown Tom and vows vengeance. By ruining Edith's father he hopes to punish the girl and throw Tom out of a good position. But Tom receives an unexpected legacy and unknown to his employer, saves the day. Wilson is nonplussed at the failure of his plans. Edith becomes piqued at Tom's slowness and encourages his rival in the hope of bringing him to a declaration. Tom misunderstands. Edith's father learns of Wilson's perfidy and Tom's noble sacrifice and divining the cause of Edith's unhappiness, hits upon a scheme.

Feigning that he is near death as the result of an accident he sends for both Tom and Edith. Expressing a dying wish that they marry, Edith and Tom agree and the ceremony is just completed as Wilson enters. Surprise and chagrin show in his face, but he is quietly informed and his perfidy is known and given notice that his services are no longer required. Tom is then appointed Wilson's successor and the amount of his legacy restored. Then to cap the climax, papa reveals that his illness was all a ruse to bring about a speedy termination of the unhappiness of the young couple.

A MODERN STEEL PLANT (Nov. 20).—This picture was taken at Bethlehem, Pa., and gives, in a comparatively short length of film, a comprehensive revision of this absorbing industry. A panorama of the numerous buildings and immense stock yards containing 1,000,000 tons of oil and limestone is followed by an excellent view of a

"Just a Moment, Please!"

WE want to introduce our Producing Companies, so that hereafter, whenever we refer to the Superior Quality of WARNER'S FEATURES, you will readily understand that our statements are statements of fact. Look over these names and form a candid opinion of the ability of these producers to make quality features. Their pictures will surely delight your patrons.

GENE GAUNTIER FEATURE PLAYERS
Under the Direction of Sidney Olcott

MARION LEONARD FEATURES
Under the Direction of S. E. V. Taylor

HELEN GARDNER PICTURE PLAYERS
Under the Direction of Charles L. Gaskill

LEDERER'S CELEBRITIES FILM CO.
Under the Direction of Geo. W. Lederer

MITTENTHAL FILM CO.
Under the Direction of Chester De Vond

WHITMAN-WARREN CO.
Under the Direction of Giles R. Warren

RANOUS MOTION PICTURE CO.
Under the Direction of W. V. Ranous

ALBUQUERQUE FILM MFG. CO.
Under the Direction of Gilbert P. Hamilton

TAMPA FILMS, Inc.
(Bonavita Pictures)
Under the Direction of Frank Beal

IMPERIAL FILM MFG. CO.
Producing a Series of Western Melodramas

PYRAMID FILM CO.
Makers of "Her Supreme Sacrifice"

SATEX FILM CO.
of Austin, Texas

H. C. MATTHEWS
Directing Costume Plays

J. F. MACDONALD
Directing Spectacular Dramas

GREAT WEST MOTION PICTURE CO.
Western Melodramas

ECLAIR FILM CO.

AMBROSIO FILM CO.

MILANO FILM CO.

WARNER'S FEATURES are different. A postage stamp will bring our representative to your door to explain our three-a-week proposition. Act quickly if you want an exclusive franchise for your town.

BRANCH OFFICES: Chicago, Cleveland, Minneapolis, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Boston, Philadelphia, New York, Washington, San Francisco, Seattle, Denver, Dallas, Kansas City, Atlanta, St. Louis, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Spokane, Los Angeles.

WARNER'S FEATURES
INCORPORATED

126 West 46th Street NEW YORK CITY

550 ft. traveling crane with a 14-ton capacity carriage in operation.

By means of gigantic ladles, the molten iron is poured into a converter. The foreign substances, silicon, carbon and manganese, are burned out by blowing cold air through the molten metal, which causes myriads of sparks to issue from the throat of the converter, not unlike an enormous pyrotechnical floral display. It is then poured into ingots, which are rolled down in the blooming mill and subsequently finished in a rail mill. The picture shows the rail stock yards, from which the rails are loaded into cars by means of the electric magnet.

CALAMITY ANN'S DREAM (Nov. 22).—When at last her eyes grew dim from the long strain of reading the pictures in an illustrated treatise on the Cannibal Islands, Calamity cast aside the book and settled down for the night on her bunk of straw. Soon she is in the land of Nod and not unlike the child, her active but unconscious mind is making pictures of the happenings on Cannibal Islands. Her manner of getting there is natural enough for one of her type, but furnishes thrills not entirely anticipated. She is marooned and after an indefinite drifting about lands on the island where she is venerated by the natives. Her experiences are as numerous as they are grotesque and will form a highly interesting entertainment. The climax comes when she rescues one of the native women and her child and is about to escape to sea in a rowboat when she awakens with the report of her 44-calibre gun, which she has fired in imaginary self-defense.

MAJESTIC.

THE BRAVEST MAN (Nov. 9).—John Sinclair was the son of a sturdy old ranchman who had proved his courage in the Indian fight of the early seventies, but John was destined never to follow his father as a fighting man, for an accident in babyhood had doomed him to be a cripple for life.

Mary Shirley, a pretty girl who lived on a neighboring ranch, was a great favorite with the Sinclairs, and worshiped her. A new foreman came to the Sinclair ranch. Mary Shirley met him, liked him, but the feeling she had for him was not the friendship that she gave to John, but unselfish and devoted love. They became engaged.

The sheriff's posse captured the leader of a band of desperadoes, due entirely to the efforts of the foreman. The outlaw a few weeks later escaped from prison, and determined to wreak vengeance upon his captor. He made his way to the ranch, accompanied by some of his band, and found it deserted, save for the foreman and the crippled son. They ignored John as unworthy of consideration and made their way to the bunk house, where the foreman was bound and gagged. The bunk house was set afire and the outlaws prepared to leave. John had seen the band approach and knew their object. At first he exulted over the fate which was to befall the man he hated, then he thought of Mary and his feeling changed. Hastily he hobbled to the bunk house, but before he could reach it he was seen by the outlaws and fired upon. They rode away, leaving him badly wounded. But despite his growing weakness, buoyed up by the love for a girl who preferred another, he crawled into the burning house and dragged forth the foreman to safety.

The Sinclairs, returning from town, saw the flames in the distance, and hastened to their home, accompanied by Mary. There they found the foreman unhurt, and heard from his lips the story of John's heroism. The cripple's life was ebbing away, but it was a happy end, for Mary kissed him and told him with a sob that he was the bravest man she ever knew.

THE RIVALS (Nov. 11).—Pat O'Shea is in love with the widow Murphy, but the widow, fully aware of his adoration, flirts with him and keeps encouraging him continuously on the verge of despair. A great social affair to Pat and his friends is Mulligan's ball and he proudly takes the widow there, but she flirts with the leader of the German band. The leader falls a victim to her charms and receives a sound thrashing from Pat. The widow interferes and leaves the ballroom with Pat, but after he takes her home he returns, and with his friends, fights the leader and the rest of the band.

The leader of the band challenges Pat to a duel. A meeting is arranged, and Pat, learning that the leader is a poor shot, drops to the ground as soon as he fires and pretends to be dead. His opponent, panic stricken, flees and nearly dies of fright when he sees what he thinks is Pat's ghost, but which is really Pat covered with flour. The band leader believes it is a warning from the other world to keep away from the widow, so Pat has a free field and wins the woman of his choice.

THE PITCH THAT DEFILES (Nov. 15).—A bookkeeper and his wife are living happily with their two children when a settlement worker interests Nell, his wife, in the work. The morning of the first visit to the settlement happens to be the morning of the return of Dick Conn from a term in the penitentiary. His poor old mother is supporting herself by sewing. Nell and her companion come into the poor home and find the reckless and handsome Dick lolling down in a mood of half reckless despair. Nell in her first zeal goes to her husband and gets Dick work. The man, used to dominating women, becomes interested in pretty Nell, holds her interest for a year and gradually hypnotizes her into infatuation. She teaches in the settlement night school, and when at last she and her husband have drifted apart, she goes with Dick. Nell finds that Dick cannot be reformed and flees in horror. Her husband traces her, and reaches her as she despairs, and brings her out of the abyss of her folly, to her home and children.

THANHOUSER.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE (Nov. 9).—The little girl was very happy because she owned more dolls than did any of her playmates. It was therefore a source of sorrow to her when she came home one afternoon and found that the pet dog had eaten the most charming doll in her collection. While bowed down with maternal grief, she did not neglect to look about for a successor to her lost one and while passing a toy store she saw the very doll she wanted. The price was prohibitive, however, and she found that her balance in the bank (toy bank) was much lower than she had anticipated. Still an inspiration came to her, an advertisement calling her attention to the value of accident insurance policies. With fifty cents she bought one, and after looking over the provisions, decided that the easiest way to make money was to break her arm, which carried with it a cash bonus of $200.

No one can deny that the girl tried hard to earn the money. She had all sorts of marvelous adventures, but seemed to be indestructible, for do what she would she could not break. Finally, in despair, she went home, tore up the policy, threw the pieces away, and, tripping over a rug, fell and broke her arm. Of course she did not get the $200, for she did not have the policy; but it taught her a lesson, and one which she remembered in later years, which is, that it does not pay to hunt for trouble because it is liable to come when one least expects it.

THE CAMPAIGN MANAGERESS (Nov. 11).—In the little rural county there were two candidates for sheriff, the nominee of the "ring," and a young man who believed in reform principles. The reformer was in love with a bright girl, whose father was the editor of the village newspaper. The editor did not object to the marriage, but he absolutely refused to swing his support to his prospective son-in-law. And despite all the campaigning the young man did, he found that he did not make any headway, and as he sadly confessed to his sweetheart "only a miracle" could elect him.

The girl did not believe in waiting for a miracle to happen along. She waited for an opportunity, and when it came she grasped it. Her farther was suddenly taken ill, and the girl volunteered to get out the paper. The first thing she did was to swing its support to her sweetheart, and in so doing she made a most bitter attack upon the rival candidate, explaining that she voiced the views "of the editor."

The article aroused the ire of the "ring" nominee and he telephoned that he was coming over to horsewhip the editor. A crowd saw him stalk into the office, a horsewhip in his hand, and a revolver in his pocket. The crowd waited for developments, and there was a general surprise when the would-be sheriff marched out, his hands high in air, while the girl followed carrying the horsewhip and revolver. The fair editor threw the whip down, announcing, "Here is his whip, he tried to beat me." Then she added, "This is his revolver; I took it away from him," whereupon the crowd rose in its wrath. They believed that the candidate had sunk so low that he tried to beat a woman, and furthermore, was so great a coward that he permitted the crowd to cow her. Thereupon they chased the candidate away, with harsh words and stones, and his chances of election vanished more rapidly than he did. The reformer won at the polls, and only then did the girl admit that she had tricked the ring nominee, explaining blandly, "All is fair in politics, especially for a campaign manageress who loves her candidate."

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR (Nov. 14).—In Longfellow's beautiful poem, he tells of the children's hour—that time of day when the little ones are permitted to meet their elders on equal ground. He describes the love that exists between the grandfather and his three little grandchildren, who each night insisted upon coming into his study, where, for one golden hour they reigned supreme, and he was their willing and devoted servant.

As the poet says, speaking of his hero—

"They climb into my turret
O'er the arms and back of my chair
If I try to escape they surround me
They seem to be everywhere."

The grandfather entertains the children with fairy stories that never grow old, and the evening passes as happily or him as it does for them.

BRONCHO.

THE WAR CORRESPONDENT (2 parts—Nov. 19).—Tom Halsey, a star reporter for the "Daily Press," is sent to the front for news. He is sandbagged by a couple of thugs hired by Bill Baker, a rival for the hand of Mary Gordon. They put Tom in a box car, which is sidetracked near the battlefield. An order has been issued by the commander that no newspaper men shall be permitted to witness the battle, consequently all newspaper men are held in the guard house until the battle is decided one way or the other. Tom is captured after he has seen most of the battle and put in the guard house with the other newspaper men. They beg Tom to give them details of the story, but he refuses, hoping to make a big scoop for his paper. Jack Chelsea, whom Tom had helped when he was broke, has enlisted and is a telegraph operator at the front. He hears Tom through a partition and telegraphs to him that if he will go ahead and tell the story he will telegraph it to his paper. In this way Tom's paper gets the news on the street before any of the others. Tom returns after the battle to claim Mary Gordon.

THE REFORMATION (Nov. 26).—At a social function, Jim Blondon, society thief, steals a priceless diamond, which he places in his mouth. He transfers it to the beautiful Janeth, his partner, by kissing her good night. Detectives search him, and finding nothing, shadow him to the woman's house. He pleads with her to reform and turn straight; she laughs at him. Declaring it his last job, he leaves. She escapes by changing clothes with her maid. Some months later, Jim, thoroughly reformed, is now a first-class detective. He is put on the case of a wealthy married man, who entangled in the toils of a society adventuress, is breaking his wife's heart. Jim, trailing his man, comes face to face with the woman, Janeth. She refuses to give her victim up; the police, who are on the trail of the woman, break in. The wealthy victim escapes through a window, and the female Raffles, the stolen jewel in her possession, is taken prisoner, the reformed crook getting the credit and promotion for the capture.

KAY-BEE.

THE EFFICACY OF PRAYER (Nov. 14).—Because White Dove, daughter of the Indian Chief, and Moccasin, her half-breed husband, are baptized by Donald McTavish, the new minister of Gray Rock, Ariz., they become subject for the vengeance of the Medicine Man. Jim Crosby, a lone miner, is murdered and the coat of Moccasin is found close by. Moccasin is suspected, but McTavish is certain that Mocassin would not do such a thing. White Dove is out with her little son and fearing that the Medicine Man will steal the child, will not let him leave her. The boy sees a wild turkey and begs his mother to let him try to shoot it. He wanders away further than she intended and is pursued by bears. The boy takes refuge in a cave, which happens to be the Medicine Man's haunt. He returns to find the place occupied by the bears which have chased the boy. The bears turn on the Medicine Man, chasing him and capturing him, finally killing him. The sheriff is on the track of Mocassin; he has him handcuffed and about to take him to town, when White Dove rushes up to them and tells them that the bears have her boy. They release Mocassin and he rescues the boy. In the meantime White Dove tells the minister to prove his White God by saving her child. She feels that the prayer has been answered when Mocassin returns with the boy unhurt.

KOMIC.

MURPHY'S NEW HIGH HAT (Nov. 20).—Murphy, who has just purchased a new high hat, is invited to the wedding of Kelly. He goes and during the excitement he leaves his hat on a chair. A large, fat woman sits on the chair. The hat is sent out by the groom and fixed. Murphy and Nolan plan to play a joke on Casey and put his hat on the chair. They are trying to persuade the fat woman to sit on it when Casey enters, sees the joke, and substitutes Murphy's hat for his own. The fat woman is then placed on the chair. Murphy asks Casey out for a walk and Casey consents. Murphy takes a hat from the piano and finding it too small discovers that it is Casey's hat. He pulls the fat woman from the chair and finds his own, flattened worse than before. Filled with rage, he rushes out, takes all the other hats and stamps upon them. The guests are about to attack him when Casey, who is the only one with a whole hat, plays an Irish jig on the piano. At the sound of Erin's music, all hat is forgotten, and a dance begins.

MAKING HIMSELF A HERO (Nov. 20).—Mr. and Mrs. Jones, while returning from market, meet a crowd in front of the village store, lionizing Mr. Smith, who is credited with having captured a burglar single-handed. Mr. Jones is a very much henpecked man and his wife tells him that Smith is the kind of a man to have around the house. That night burglars invade the Jones home. Mrs. Jones forces her spouse, much against his will, to go down stairs. He goes and creeps outside of the house to avoid coming in contact with the men. By the merest chance the burglars are frightened and run, leaving their loot behind them. Then a brilliant idea strikes Jones. He covers himself with dirt and bringing the bag of silver back to his wife, tells her that he had to fight with six desperate men. His fame as a hero soon makes him the biggest man in town, and he is not slow to take advantage of his exalted position to lord it over his now submissive wife.

TOPICS OF TODAY

FEATURES OF MERIT AND THEIR DRAWING POWER

---

"THE GREAT LURE OF PARIS"

A Drama of Mysterious Power in 3 Parts

A mystery of Parisian cosmopolitan life—where a great Russian scientist, Leonid Protasoff, exerts his superhuman powers on a poor girl, whom he raises to the heights of fame, where she is admired by the multitudes, only later to be dashed into the Abyss.

---

A Psychological Drama in 3 Parts

"JUSTICE OR LOVE?"

was the problem to decide for the coquette Ruth. At the critical moment when the innocent Kirk defending a woman's honor silently accepts a prison sentence, Justice which until then was lying dormant at the bottom of the heart of the coquette, announced itself and decided the question.

---

"SALVATION"

A Life Drama in 4 Parts

Can there be a greater tragedy in the life of man or woman than when you build and build all your life a family, and when you see that you have almost reached the Goal, and then, as if by a gust of wind, the family, the mainstay of civilization, crumbles away before your eyes? Can there be a greater tragedy? True! In our story the family is partially saved, but the price of Salvation is—a human life.

---

We want to emphasize the fact that the Acting and Photography are of the highest Quality. We have spared no expense in making our display of posters in all sizes, heralds, photos and slides a Feature in itself.

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

220 West 42nd Street NEW YORK CITY

Phone Bryant 8486

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, No. 45 (Nov. 3).—President Wilson at Commercial Congress.—He visits Mobile and opens a meeting of Southern business men.

The Gordon-Bennett Race.—Start of the annual balloon contest near Paris.

Rough-Riding in Dayton, Ohio.—Western broncho buster conquers a wild zebra.

Freight Handling in Kingston.—The women perform most of the manual labor in Jamaica.

Pegoud Entertains Paris.—Daring aviator continues to perform aerial wonders.

Kids Are Kids the World Over.—Jap boys in public playground in Tokio.

New York's New Mayor.—John P. Mitchel is elected for the highest executive position in the American metropolis.

Paris Fashions.—French designers send us animated record of the latest creations.

Portola Festival, San Francisco.—Western city celebrates 400th anniversary of Pacific discovery by Balboa.

Glenesslin Piles Up On the Rocks.—British ship goes ashore on the Neah-Kah-Nie Mountain in Oregon with all sails set.

RELIANCE

THE POWER OF THE SEA (Nov. 10).—Peter Gilmore, dreamer, loves the sea and believes in its motherpower to heal sick bodies and reform sick souls. In a storm Enoch Allen, a drunken outcast, drifts to Peter's cabin. His sin-seared face at the window suggests to Peter a way to test his belief. He entices the outcast into the cabin with liquor, and when he falls to the floor in a drunken stupor, lifts the inert body, carries it to the shore, and plunges with it into the surf. In the weeks that follow Enoch fishes and hunts, growing body-strong and mind-sane by the clean, bracing ocean side. Each day the young man falls more deeply in love with Jessie, Peter's pretty daughter. As he is about to speak of his love, Jessie sees in the distance a floating spar. They investigate and find a man lashed to it. Life is not quite extinct. Jessie nurses the stranger back to slow-returning health. His name is Robert Moore. He is cultured, handsome, and appears much drawn to Jessie, who shows a liking for himself also. Enoch watches their friendship with love and jealousy raging in his heart. One day, coming upon Robert on a cliff above the sea, Enoch addresses the other bitterly. They quarrel. In the struggle Robert falls over the cliff. Enoch is about to leave him to his fate when the thought that Jessie's happiness may be bound up in the drowning man, makes him hesitate. The strong power of the sea silently appeals to his better nature. He finally rescues Robert and carries him to the cabin. Jessie's anxiety convinces him that she does love the other man and he gathers together his few belongings and steals away from the bitter sight of their happiness.

A case of whiskey washed ashore from a wreck attracts his attention. He is desperate with his disappointed love and longs to drown his sorrows, but the sea has done its healing work and its calm influence and the vision of his sweetheart in the waves saves him. He flings down the temptation and Jessie, who has followed him and watched his struggle with the anguish of pitty and love, goes to him and confesses that it is he whom she loves.

THE BRACELET (Nov. 12).—Blake, a middle-aged man, has a young girl wife, Agnes. He spends much of his time with a crony, Williams. Agnes is bored and receives the attentions of a younger man, Harry. Blake displays the contents of a curio cabinet to Williams, and shows him a bracelet which an officer of the English army gave to Agnes' great grandmother, upon whom it brought disgrace. Agnes laughingly puts the bracelet on and goes into the garden with Harry. Harry makes love to Agnes, and she agrees to meet him in the garden at eleven that night and elope. Harry goes, Blake and Williams play cards, and Agnes falls asleep. She is still wearing the bracelet. In a dream Agnes assumes the personality of her great-grandmother and goes through the scenes which led her to disgrace. Harry becomes her lover, Blake her great-grandfather and Williams his friend. Harry gives Agnes the bacelet and she elopes with him. They are pursued by Blake, who is killed in a sword fight with Harry, and Agnes throws herself on Blake's body. She wakes with the warning impressed on her mind. At eleven Harry comes, but Agnes dismisses him. She joins Blake and tells him that the bracelet has taught her that she needs her husband's love. Blake realizes that he has neglected her and they welcome the dawning of a happy married life.

FOR LOVE OF A MAN (2 parts—Nov. 15).—Mary Mallory, a trusted maid servant, is given jewels belonging to her mistress, Mrs. Castor, to lock in the safe. Mary is in love with the chauffeur, James Gordon, to whom she shows the jewels. While she is opening the safe, he, unnoticed by her, bends over her shoulder, and writes the combination on his cuff. Later he steals the jewels and to avert suspicion from himself he puts a couple of smaller ones in Mary's room. During the evening Mrs. Caster looks for her jewels, and finding them gone, sends for detectives. A search is made and the jewels are discovered in Mary's room. She is accused but protests her innocence. As she is being led away James puts his hand on her shoulder to encourage her. She sees the combination and understands. She is heartbroken, but is also willing to sacrifice herself for the man she loves. Unseen by the others, she takes the cuff from James and puts it in her bosom. She is then led away. James is too big a coward to confess that he is the thief, and Mary is sentenced to a long term of imprisonment.

A couple of years later, while in prison, Mary finds a piece of newspaper in which is the announcement of the marriage of James Gordon to Alice Smith. From this on she loses her faith in mankind and becomes hard and callous. After her term has ended she leaves the prison wearing the same clothes she wore when she entered. She still has with her the cuff by which she could easily have established her innocence. During this time James' wife has died and he is now employed as a chauffeur to Judge Mayo, the man who sentenced Mary to prison. Mary tries again and again to secure honest work, but she is immediately dismissed when her employers hear of her past life. Finally Molly, her former cell mate and now a member of a gang of crooks, prevails upon Mary to join them. The first house chosen to be robbed after Mary has cast her lot with the gang, is that of Judge Mayo. Mary fights against the robbery, but she is overruled by the others. After the robbery she and Molly make way with the plunder. Mary wants to return it and at last succeeds in overpowering Molly and returns to the Judge's house with the bundle. As she is slipping the package into the house she is discovered by the chauffeur, James, but neither recognizes the other. When the Judge hears her story he is inclined to let her go, but the chauffeur insists that justice be satisfied. At this she recognizes him, and filled with hate for the man she once loved, she turns upon him and tells the Judge who the real thief was in the Castor Jewel Case. At this point the police enter and James, the coward, is led off, while Mary is installed in the Judge's house as nurse of his two little children.

EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORPORATION

GAUMONT.

THE INTERRUPTED MESSAGE (Nov. 4).—A well-known banker goes to Mantes on account of his wife's health. He has a tape machine connected with his office. He is recalled to town one day and is compelled to stay late at the bank. That night burglars break into the strong room, but are overpowered by a suffocating gas which the management have had installed, and they are easily captured. The following morning the message was sent to Mantes that "Three men broke into the strong room of Magrath's bank last night. The principal was . . ." Here the message ceased. The news, full of dire possibilities, had a terrifying effect upon Mrs. Magrath, and she fell to the floor in a faint. Magrath heard the fall in his office, and hastened to the villa to reasure his wife.

LEONCE AND POUPETTE SEEK A DIVORCE (Nov. 6).—Leonce found that life with Poupette was becoming impossible, and decided to get a divorce. He writes to his Cousin Mary, telling her all his troubles and asking her advice. The situation was rather perplexing to Mary, because Poupette, who held a similar grievance, had also written to her for some advice on the subject. Cousin Mary wisely concluded that there was nothing whatever to make a fuss about. Each loved the other to distraction, and the divorce idea was a temporary lapse from sanity. Mary's idea was to lock them in the house together, and with such an astute person managing affairs, that was not difficult of accomplishment. Therefore, a little time later the young couple found themselves in the house with no chance of escape. First Poupette cried and Leonce frowned. Then they both laughed and Cousin Mary's work was at an end. No longer did they dream of divorce—the older woman who had witnessed such troubles before, had found a way out.

THE BANK MESSENGER (Nov. 11).—The son of a bank messenger left home because his father interfered too much in his affairs. He rented a room in a flat and overheard two men planning an attack on a bank messenger. Informing the police, his assistance was accepted, and he was given the task of calling upon the two men when he had the money they hoped to get in his wallet. Aware of their plot, he was accompanied by the police, who arrested the two men.

THE HEART OF A DOLL (Nov. 13).—Edna, daughter of Leonce, was puzzled because her doll had no heart. The ticking of her father's watch gave her an idea. She ripped the doll open and sewed the watch inside. When Leonce missed his watch he suspected a boy, who had called selling ornaments of stealing it. The boy was searched and allowed to go.

Later Edna's doll fell into the river and was being carried away when the boy came along and dived in and brought the doll to the bank. When Edna reached home, she was greatly distressed because the doll's heart had ceased to beat. "I am crying because my doll's heart is drowned," she said. Leonce then guessed what had happened, and found his watch, rather the worse for the immersion. The boy was soon discovered and Edna prettily rewarded him for rescuing her doll.

FEATURES

FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA.

THE MISSING WOMAN (Feature Subject—3 parts).—Nina, who has fallen into evil ways, and has sunk into degradation, reads of the success of her twin sister, Cleo Valiere, a journalist, who has written a novel which has won great success. The sisters long have been estranged. Cleo has sought to hide from her wealthy and aristocratic husband the ignominy of her sister's profligacy. When she sees the wanton girl about to enter her house she is terrified lest the kinship become known. She pleads with Nina to go away and tries to smooth the difficulties of that course with the lubricant of money. While they are conversing the factories of Cleo's husband are burned. In attempting to rescue work-people he is badly injured.

As he is carried into the house, Cleo hurries out her sister, wrapped in a cloak given to her by her husband. Nina is mistaken for Cleo and against her will brought to the bedside of the injured man. In his semi-delirious condition he does not perceive that she is not his wife. Nina, frightened, flees from the house. She is seen by the doctor, who follows her to the door of her low dive. Suspicious and indignant that Cleo, of whose identity he had no doubt, is carrying on an illicit love, with her husband near to death, the doctor confronts Cleo on the following day and demands an explanation. She begs him to cease his questionings. Unfortunately, the husband has overheard. Staggering from his bed, he denounces her. Nina goes again for money to Cleo's house that night. She wears the cloak Cleo had given her. A terrific storm comes up. Henry, the husband, consumed with anxiety, has in vain searched for his wife. Fascinated by the magnificence of the tempest, he is standing by the window. A vivid flash of lightning illumines the grounds. He catches a glimpse of the familiar figure of his wife enveloped in a familiar cloak, entering the house through a French window. There is a deafening peal of thunder—a blinding zigzag of electric flame. Dazed, Henry staggers toward the storm refugee. Dead, seared, blackened by the fury of the heavens she lies. In anguish he rises to his feet. The door opens. A woman enters. He stares in bewilderment. It is his wife.

ECLECTIC.

THE MESSAGE OF THE DEAD (Feature—3 parts).—George Bourdier adopts his orghan nephew, Philip. A woodcutter, Jean Gauthier, is notified by Bourdier to pay a note which is due. Too poor to pay, he visits the old man and induces him to cancel the note. He leaves, but forgets his axe. Gaston, a scapegrace nephew of Bourdier's, calls and tries to borrow a large sum. His request is refused, and he becomes abusive. His uncle drives him out. He returns that night and forces an entrance to the house, intending to rob the old man. His uncle discovers him and a terrific struggle ensues. Gaston strikes him down with the woodcutter's axe and makes his escape, after starting a fire to hide his crime. The old man, dying, writes in a book with his blood accusing Gaston, and gives it to Philip, who had witnessed the crime. Philip's mind is shattered by the horror of the fire and murder. He hides the book in a nearby cliff. The woodcutter, whose axe is found at the scene of the crime, is accused, and in the face of such damaging evidence, is adjudged guilty, and sent to prison. His little daughter, Marie, left alone in the world, finds the insane boy and takes him to her rude hut, where she watches tenderly over him.

Ten years pass. Gaston, the murderer, returns to the scene of his crime. He meets Marie, now grown up, and accosts her. Her father, returned from prison, protects her and incurs the enmity of Gaston, who swears vengeance. Gaston accidentally discovers the demented youth, who, with insane zeal and cunning, still guards the book with the dread secret. He sees the damning evidence of his guilt and tries in vain to wrest it from Philip, but succeeds in throwing the youth down an embankment, where he is found by the woodcutter. Gaston, to save himself, arouses the ignorant villagers and incites them to drive the three refugees away. The first attack fails and they attempt to burn the hut where their vicitms have sought refuge. Seeing the smoke and flames, a dim recollection of a similar scene is awakened in the brain of the insane boy. He follows the woodcutter and his daughter in their escape from the burning hut. They are met by the attacking villagers, one of whom attempts to strike down the old man with a woodcutter's axe. In a flash the vivid scene of the previous murder comes back to Philip. His reason returns with the shock, and he remembers the fatal book. Officers, attracted by the strife, rush in and separate the combatants. Philip shows the accusing writing in the book and the officers seize Gaston, the guilty wretch, who is led away to his just deserts.

Open Market

Making a Mayor

How the Metropolis Elects Its Executive. New York's Busiest Day and Liveliest Night

---

1,000 Feet (Approximately) of SUPERLATIVE Film

---

EVERY detail of the election process from stump speeches by widely known, silver tongued orators, putting on the ⓧ mark, which makes us rulers of rulers, the various steps incidental to the arrival in the big armory room in Police Headquarters, where the results are counted, tabulated and reported through the News Association to a waiting world.

These scenes were obtained exclusively and are the first of this nature ever to be taken. They are not studio pictures—they were taken on the spot.

There are also pictures of New York's wonderful Election Night life. You can see how famous spenders spend, and turkey trotters trot, and famous politicians celebrate.

Three-sheets and two kinds of one-sheets

How quick can you dictate a telegram and get it on the wires?

Fair Feature Sales Company

220 West 42d Street NEW YORK CITY

FAMOUS PLAYERS.

CAPRICE (Feature Subject).—Weary of the shallowness and artificiality of social life, Jack Darnton decided to go on a hunting trip as far from civilization and tangos as possible. But after three days of solitude and loneliness, he was almost willing to exchange the silent woods for a return of the old gaieties, when an accident restored interest to his new life. He did not know how he came to shoot so low, but the next moment a pathetic little scream told him he had hurt a human. He ran to the spot and found Mercy, a girl of the adjacent mountain settlement, with an ugly wound in her arm. There was something so charming about her stoic courage that Jack's heart went out to her—and never quite returned. From that moment the society lion courted the simple mountain maid, and despite her protestations that she was "not ezzackly his kin'," and that she "wasn't eddicated enough to be his wife," he got her promise. Somehow the news traveled back to Jack's metropolitan circle, and his father, excruciatingly cultured, became terribly annoyed at the idea of his son marrying a girl of Mercy's caste. The next day he appeared on the scene to prevent the folly, and had a politely indignant interview with Mercy, who merely defied her prospective father-in-law—and after attempting to commit suicide with a bulletless gun, married Jack. Then came heartbreak and disillusionment. Jack brought her back to his velvet and gilt, where her backwoods manners and dress did not make her very popular. Manicured, jeweled fingers were pointed at her, scornful, derisive glances met her wistful eyes, and the laughter that she provoked descended upon Jack. In time Mercy divined that he regretted his act, and she wrote to her father to take her back to the old home. So he took her away from the world of sham, and it was only after she returned to the peaceful simplicity of her mountains that she realized that she loved Jack more than she feared his people's scorn. She decided to go to school and educate herself up to his plane. Her father took her to the best seminary he could find, but here, also, her outlandish garb and uncouth demeanor were ridiculed, until she heroically rescued a schoolmate from fire, winning her admiration and the others' respect. The two became fast friends. Mercy progressed rapidly with her studies, developed a more refined taste in dress; and so when the Christmas holidays came, her chum did not hesitate to invite Mercy to her home for the week. There she introduced Mercy to her brother—and Mercy recognized—Jack! Jack, whose sister had registered in school under an assumed name! And while he thought she looked familiar, he could not place her, so great was her transformation. Mercy confided the whole surprising truth to her chum and sister-in-law, and the two arranged a plan whereby Mercy was to wear the simple old gingham gown wherein she had made her first ludicrous entrance into Jack's social world. Then it was that Jack recognized his wife—and so it was that Mercy's husband fell in love with her again!

TRUE FEATURES.

THE CRIME OF WALL STREET (Feature—3 parts).—Richard Lamb, the head of a powerful trust, needs the co-operation of an heiress, Ellen White, who resists all attempts to make her join the trust. One of Lamb's friends, a young man named Milton, succeeds in becoming the private secretary of Miss White, and soon possesses a good deal of her confidence. While out on a mission of charity, the horses of Ellen's carriage run away and Milton saves her from certain death. He becomes slightly injured and is nursed back to health by Miss White. He is now deeply in love with the girl and has forgotten all about his mission to win Ellen's consent to join the trust. He gets a telegram prodding his memory and upon his recommendation Ellen joins the trust.

In the meantime Ellen discovers the real identity of Milton and that she is learning to love him. She immediately discharges him and bids him begone forever. On his way back to the headquarters of the trust Milton is stopped by an accident which happens to his automobile and becomes a witness to the popular indignation against the trust. He finally arrives in the office of Lamb and makes his report. He is now determined to break the trust. The big warehouses of the trust are burned to the ground. Milton forms a counter-trust. Ellen White gives a masked ball and Milton decides to go, though not invited. The servants report that a crank dressed as a Black Pierrot and armed with dynamite has gained entrance to the ball. Milton is taken for the intruder. A very tense situation is encountered. How cleverly it is solved and how justice triumps over all obstacles is shown with wonderful skill in the pictures.

G. W. 313 (Feature Subject—4 parts).—George Walser, a clerk in a banking house, lives with his unmarried sister. Through an accident, he discovers that the son of his employer has betrayed his sister, and calls upon the son to demand that he marry the wronged woman. The son refuses. At this the brother, overcome by blind rage, strikes a blow which results in the seducer's death. Walser is arrested and sentenced to imprisonment for ten years in the stone quarries near the Chateau If. Here he becomes acquainted with Adolph Gautier, who had been sent to prison for political offences. Gautier is enormously rich and for the kindness shown to him by Walser in prison, he makes Walser his sole heir. The estate is one of the richest in France and Walser finds himself in the possession of unlimited wealth. He hears that his sister, who has been the cause of his misfortune, has become a sister in a neighboring convent. He calls upon her, forgives her and intends spending the rest of his life near her. At this time he receives an invitation from a neighboring landlord, whom he befriends in financial distress. The landlord's daughter falls in love with Walser and though he struggles manfully against it, Walser stills the voice of his young heart and becomes engaged to the daughter of the landlord, whose name is Elsie. He invites his fiancee to go hunting with him on his preserves. A former suitor for the hand of Elsie joins the party, and in the midst of their hunt they meet a wild bear. In the scramble for positions of safety Walser has his clothes torn by the branches. This accident reveals the brand on his upper left arm, G. W. 313, which had been burned into his flesh after he had entered prison. The defeated rival notices the fatal brand and, after short inquiries discovers the real identity of Walser, who had changed his name. Walser is confronted with these facts just as he is about to reveal his past to his future father-in-law. The engagement is at once broken and Walser decides to leave the country. Brooding over the terrible revelation which had been hers, Elsie remembers a photograph which her lover had taken of Walser in the act of helping a poor old woman carry a bundle of wood to her hut. Looking at the picture, she becomes convinced that Walser could never have been criminal at heart, and she hastens to Walser's sister in the convent and from her hears a confession of the truth. There she also meets Walser, who had come to bid his sister farewell. Explanations follow and the happiness of Elsie and her lover are complete.

ANNEX.

THE BARRIER OF BLOOD (Feature—2 parts).—A young half-breed, not knowing his parentage, falls in love with a girl who is visiting his foster parents in the West. In the midst of their happiness, his foster father receives a letter from the girl's father, stating that he objects to the match because of the parentage of his adopted son, and is leaving immediately to take his daughter home. The adopted son is then told the story of his parentage. After hearing the story Lee realizes that it will be impossible to now marry the girl. He conceives a plan whereby he will change her love for him to hatred and disgust He makes the sacrifice because of the barrier of blood.

ITALIAN-AMERICAN FILM CO.

THE CRIME OF THE CAMORA (Feature—4 parts).—The life of Detective Taris, one of the greatest criminal hunters in Italy, would have been prolonged if duty had not compelled him to be hated by the most noted gang of cut-throats that ever existed in the suburbs of Naples, Italy, under the leadership of Occhisbelli, the brains of the local Camora.

Owing to heavy political activities, several large sums of money had been deposited in the Commercial Bank, Gerad, in order to meet the expenses of a general election. The bank had been victims of several small robberies lately, and the heavy deposits induced the director general to have a guard placed around the bank in order to safeguard the money entrusted in his care. The chief of the police, after consulting with the director, orders Detective Taris and a few trusted men, to keep watch on the bank. Occhisbelli, the Camorist, obtains reliable information as to the large amount of money deposited, but it is hard for him to break in. Some new way must be formed to enter the bank. The photograph of the head of the watchman is procured, and Occhisbelli disguises himself accordingly. He has no trouble in getting past the outside guards and the watchman. Entering the room where the safes are, he sees the detective. Without any hesitancy he goes for the detective. A terrible struggle starts, where one man fights for his life and honor, and the bandit to keep his neck from the gallows. The struggle ends and there is another murder added to the long list of crimes endicted to the Camora. Having killed the detective, he looks around, takes what he can easily carry in money, and leaves the building. Nobody attempts to stop him as the disguise is perfect. He is taken for the watchman. At the door he meets the guards placed there by the detective, Taris, but little did they suspect that their chief had lost his life in the course of duty.

They don't recognize Occhisbelli disguised as the watchman. Next morning the real watchman opens the door of the bank and meets other night employees. Stunned for the moment, they cannot understand how he went out. In a few moments the terrible truth dawns on them and they rush to the strong room and find Detective Taris foully murdered. Ida Taris, his daughter, is informed of the terrible sacrifice her father has made for duty and wants to bring the guilty to justice. She requests the chief of the secret police for a detective badge for only a temporary appointment. The chief, knowing that Ida being a clever young woman, who has often worked with her father in some of the great criminal cases, decides to give her a detective badge, No. 399. She starts out in search of Occhisbelli, whom she already suspects. Disguised as an old woman, she enters the Apaches' den, where the Camorists are in the habit of meeting, and there overhears a conversation between two of Occhisbelli's pals, in which they mention his name. After a while they leave the den. Ida follows them a long distance, in which she is several times nearly discovered, sees them enter an old building in which the Camora gang have their headquarters. She tries the door and finds it locked. There is only one way to gain admittance and that is through the open window. Perilously she scales the wall and overhears more conversing, pertaining to Occhisbelli not having shared the plunder from his recent murder with them. They write him a letter in which they demand an equal share of the money which he stole from the bank when he killed the detective, or they will get his life, in which she overhears his address. As Occhisbelli lives in one of the best sections, on the outskirts of Naples with his sweetheart and a leader of blackmailers, Ida goes for help. When she reaches the house, she finds Occhisbelli, through a clever ruse, by hiding himself in the trunk, has escaped, but Ida is not to be outdone Later she follows up the trail and manages to enter his employ as a maid, and at the opportune time she signals the chief of police and his aids. After a severe struggle he is captured, in a company of the Camora that had come for their share of the robbery, which he refused to give them.

Occhisbelli tells the police that they have no evidence against him. Ida removes her garb as a maid, and confronts him. He is stunned to think a young woman has tracked him and obtained the evidence that will send him later to the gallows. Ida, having fulfilled her vow, is congratulated by the chief of police for having brought to justice the most feared leader of the Camora and avenged the murder of her father.

A. BLINKHORN.

KISSING CUP (Four parts — Feature — Hepworth).—Mr. Hetherington is a country squire with one daughter, and is interested in racing. To his daughter, Chrissie, on her twenty-first birthday, he gives a beautiful thoroughbred foal of splendid breeding, and this foal the daughter names "Kissing Cup."

Three years later Mr. Hetherington has serious money losses, and, giving a mortgage on his estate, borrows money from a millionaire neighbor, Richard Cardew, who is also interested in racing.

Cardew is secretly the enemy of the Hetherington family, although Squire Hetherington believes him a friend. The enmity was caused by two facts: Chrissie Hetherington has repeatedly refused his attentions, and young attentions upon Daisy Ingham, the daughter of Cardew's trainer.

Ingham, father of Daisy, quits the employment of Cardew after the insult to his daughter, and knocks Cardew down. Seeing "Kissing Cup," now grown to be a beautiful three-year-old, he is struck by the splendid qualities of the mare, and suggests that he will train and enter her for a big race on speculation. "Kissing Cup," when trained, is proved in private trial and is entered for the big race. With big odds posted against her, Squire Hetherington backs the mare to win him a fortune of £40,000, or $200,000.

A noted jockey engaged to ride "Kissing Cup" finds himself unable to handle the mare. Arthur Ingham, the young son of the trainer, has been the constant companion of the mare, and, having ridden her in the trial, is engaged to ride her in the great race.

Cardew, having already instituted proceedings to foreclose his mortgage on Squire Hetherington's property, is wild with rage when he realizes that if "Kissing Cup" wins the man he is trying to destroy will be safely out of his clutches. Watching a second private trial, he realizes how absolutely essential is the riding of Arthur Ingham to make the success of "Kissing Cup" probable.

Hiring ruffians to kidnap Arthur in a racing automobile, they carry him away on the night before the race. Their machine is followed by Daisy Ingham and Jack Hetherington, with an array of constables in another high-powered car, and here is seen a particularly exciting race between the cars. Cardew's bravos gain enough distance to successfully hide the boy in an abandoned building, but are seen by a tramp, who shows the constables the place where Arthur is hidden. The police making short work with the kidnappers, Jack hurries Arthur into his car and starts at top speed for the railroad, which will carry them to the race-course.

Flood water in a low place on the road "kills" the engine of the automoile, and, of course, brings the car to a hopeless standstill. Jack recollects that they are close to a famous aviation school, and dashes off with Arthur across the fields, hoping he may yet save the day. They are fortunate enough to find a skilled aviator just setting out for a flight. The situation explained, the aviator, like a true sportsman, undertakes to land them at the race-course on time.

Just as it is being announced that "Kissing Cup" is a non-starter, the aeroplane makes its graceful descent upon the oval enclosed by the race-course, landing just in front of the camera. Arthur has just time to change his clothes, weigh in, and get

ATTENTION!

THE NEXT BIG BELMONT FEATURE

THE CHILD DETECTIVE

or SHADOWS OF LIFE.

IN THREE PARTS

AN ASTOUNDING MYSTERY INTRODUCING THE GREATEST MARVEL OF THE AGE. A SENSATIONAL CRIME THAT IS MYSTIFYING AND THE GUILTY ONE BROUGHT TO BAY THROUGH THE SHREWDNESS OF THIS WONDERFUL BOY DETECTIVE, ABSOLUTELY THE CLEVEREST CHILD ACTOR THAT EVER POSED BEFORE A MOTION PICTURE CAMERA. EXQUISITE PHOTOGRAPHY WITH A HEART-GRIPPING PLOT AND THE THRILLS THAT ACCOMPANY A REAL LIVE FEATURE. ARTISTIC ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS, HERALDS AND PHOTOS FOR LOBBY.

Territorial Rights Now Selling
Write or Wire at Once. Don't Delay

BELMONT FILM COMPANY

ADDRESS: SUITE 710, 145 WEST 45th ST., NEW YORK CITY

"Kissing Cup" to the starting post.

In a most exciting racing scene, "Kissing Cup" is shown getting off a stride ahead at the barrier and followed around the track by the camera, she comes in a winner by five lengths.

The delight of the Hetherington's is only equaled by the anger of Cardew, and the final tableau shows beautiful Chissie Hetherington leading out beautiful "Kissing Cup" to receive the plaudits of thousands.

DAVID COPPERFIELD (Seven parts—Feature—Hepworth).—David Copperfield, shortly after the death of his beloved father, becomes aware of the attention of one Mr. Murdstone to his mother. His displeasure at such attentions is markedly evidenced, and as a result he is dispatched on a visit to Aunt Peggoty's home in Yarmouth, which has been made of an upturned boat by the side of the sea. Here he meets little Emily.

Upon his return to his home, "The Rookery," he finds his suspicions were true, and Murdstone has become his stepfather. Revolting against the tyranny and cruel treatment accorded him at the hands of his stepfather, David is sent to school at Salem House. While there he is advised of the death of his dear mother. After his mother's death, David is apprenticed to serve in the Murdstone brewery, and there becomes a lodger at the home of Mr. Micawber. The Micawbers, in straitened circumstances, are evicted from their humble dwelling, and David, mourning the loss of his new found friends, resolves to run away from his brewery apprenticeship and seek the home of his Aunt Betsy Trotwood, at Dover. Murdstone, learning of his disappearance and whereabouts, calls at the Trotwood home and demands David's return. This is denied, however, and David is sent to Canterbury to continue his education.

Before he has completed his course, however, David is compelled to seek means of earning his own livelihood, because of the financial condition of his aunt, and in consequence is apprenticed in the law office of Mr. Spenlow. There he meets Dora Spenlow, who becomes his wife, only to die ere his happiness has been begun.

While in the employ of Spenlow, David meets the villainous Uriah Heep, and subsequently he arranges, after a chance meeting with his old friend, Mr. Micawber, that Micawber is to become an employee of Spenlow. Then follows the detection by Micawber of the thefts of Uriah Heep and comes the restoration of Aunt Betsy's belongings. David chances to meet his old school friend, James Steerforth, and together they plan a trip to Yarmouth, where they visit the Peggotys. Steerforth persuades little Emily to leave with him, and later deserts her.

David Copperfield's rise to fame and fortune follows. The wronging of little Emily is detected, and she is finally found by David after she attempts suicide in the Thames. There is the final vindication for old Peggoty, when the lifeless body of Steerforth is found by Ham as it is washed ashore after a terrible wreck.

In the closing scenes, the Micawbers, who have gone to follow their fortunes in Australia, seated around their Yuletide table rise in toast to the Copperfield family, and in far off England, David and his wife, who was Agness Wickfield, respond. It is a beautiful and heart throbbing finale.

PASQUALI-AMERICAN CO.

A RACE WITH DEATH (Feature—2 parts).—Dr. Remond and his wife are at their country home; his friend, Mr. Lafour, visits them. Suddenly Mrs. Remond, who has turned toward the window, utters a cry, "An aeroplane! An aeroplane!" Pleased at the unexpected sight she calls her husband to the balcony, waving her napkin by way of salutation. But Lafour is ignorant as to the cause of her pleasure. He looks at Mrs. Remond, who has aroused in him an insane passion of love. The aeroplane alights in a field near by. The aviator is heartily congratulated by Mr. and Mrs. Remond. They recognize him as Favard, their friend, who has come to visit them.

While at dinner Dr. Remond begs the aviator to stay a few days with them as their guest and the aviator cordially accepts their hospitality. While they are dining a telegram arrives from Dr. Mailet requesting Dr. Remond to be present at a consultation in town the following day at three o'clock. Lafour's passion becomes frantic. He has succeeded in finding Mrs. Remond alone. The lady rejects him with disdain. Lafour, finding himself rejected, plans a fiendish plot to ruin his friend Remond. He writes a note to Mrs. Remond saying, "I love you passionately, but you have rejected me with insults. My revenge will be terrible. The bridge over which the train your husband is traveling will break down." Lafour hands this letter to a servant, saying, "Tomorrow, two hours after the doctor's departure, hand this letter to Mrs. Remond." Lafour goes away from the house in search of the necessary accomplices for his dark plot.

The hour of departure has arrived. The doctor kisses his wife good-bye. Two hours later the servant delivers the letter. The doctor's wife is in despair when a kindly voice asks: "What is the matter?" It is her friend Favard, the aviator. Mrs. Remond tells him about the danger surrounding her husband. Favard has an idea and is soon on his way to the railway tracks. The villainous Lafour has placed dynamite under the bridge over which the doctor's train is to pass. The aviator hastens to meet the train, which he succeeds in stopping just as the bridge is blown up. The doctor hastens back to calm his wife. The miserable Lafour, thinking that his ignoble revenge has been accomplished, again forces himself upon Mrs. Remond. He is driven from the house where now supreme happiness reigns.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

JUSTICE OR LOVE? (Feature Subject—3 parts).—Ruth, the daughter of a well-to-do widower banker, grows up without the guiding spirit of a mother. Kirk, the parson's son, just graduated from college, returns home to his father. It so happens that Kirk comes across Ruth, who takes a fancy to him. She has already flirted with her father's bookkeeper, who loses his head over her and steals $400 just to buy a costly present for her. Kirk meets Ruth at the river bank, and she invites him to row with her. He accepts the invitation, and the little romance begins there.

During the same evening Kirk walks along the quiet streets, and unconsciously approaches the home of Ruth. Ruth invites him in and the bashful chap sits down on a chair with head lowered. For a long time he is irresponsive, but finally his bashfulness overcome, he responds to her entreaties and kisses her.

Her father, sitting in his studio, hears a noise and starts to investigate. Kirk seeks to retreat, but it is too late, and the only visible plan is to hide himself in the adjoining room, the office. When the banker inquires the cause of the noise, Ruth denies all knowledge of it. He then proceeds into the office, and is astonished to find the son of the parson behind the safe, which is wide open. He accuses Kirk of the robbery, but the young man denies it. A struggle follows and Kirk wins. Kirk rushes to the bell tower of his father's church and collapses, where his father finds him. An explanation follows and he advises his son to leave the country. When about to board the train, he is arrested. Kirk refuses to give any explanation; a woman's honor is sacred to him, but he pleads not guilty. Kirk is sentenced to imprisonment for six months.

Suddenly, something hidden in the soul of Ruth, arises in her and she cries out to the presiding judge, "Halt!" and explains the reason of Kirk's presence in the banker's home. Kirk is quickly liberated and the real culprit, the bookkeeper, is arrested. A genuine love awakens in Ruth, which is reciprocated by Kirk.

SALVATION (Feature Subject—3 parts).—Life for Ida in the cobbler's home was too tame and uneventful. As a salesgirl in one of the swellest department stores, she came in contact with the elite of society, and when Baron Fredy became interested in her, she gladly responded. Ida is invited by the Baron to a social affair, where she makes the acquaintance of Oswald, a young noted painter. They are drawn toward each other by mutual admiration. The Baron notices this and resents it. Ida then openly breaks off with the Baron, and Oswald accompanies Ida to her home. A heart breaking scene follows between father and daughter. She begs and pleads for forgiveness, for staying out so late, but the old fashioned man is uncompromising, and orders her to leave his home.

Oswald, hearing noise, lingers in front of the house. Out comes Ida, crestfallen. Oswald rushes to her, and after some persuasion, she tells him the truth. Oswald explains to her that there is only one refuge, his studio. Ida consents. The cobbler's other child, Paul, becomes involved in a brawl, is arrested and sentenced to prison for four months.

Baron Fredy, thirsty for vengeance, lays his plans accordingly. He writes an anonymous letter to Oswald's father, in which he tells him that his son is not devoting his time to his art, but is interested in a girl of doubtful character. Mr. Saunder immediately goes to his son's home, where he finds Ida alone. He announces himself and tells her that he cannot countenance her presence in his son's home. She indignantly refuses the money which he offers her and leaves at once.

She passes a park and is approached by two ruffians. A young man who chances to pass by, seeing the embarrassing position of the girl, immediately goes to her assistance. The grateful girl thanks the young man. They glance at each other; it is Paul, her brother. Paul takes Ida to his humble lodging room, but they now face a problem—how to make a living? They decide to become vaudeville performers. Their first engagement is in a cheap cabaret. After their turn, Paul receives an invitation from two men whom he used to know in prison. They lay a plan before him to participate in the robbery of a rich merchant's home. Paul immediately decides to inform the merchant about the contemplated robbery.

He goes to the home of the merchant, and while waiting for him to appear, chances to see on the table a portrait of his sister. As he is holding the photograph, in comes Oswald, pale and feeble. He witnesses the scene, and inquires of the young man whether he knows the girl whose photograph he holds. Paul replies that the girl is his sister. Mr. Saunders consents. Paul is overjoyed and rushes out to bring Ida to Oswald.

That same night Paul, who has previously posted the policemen around the house, gives the signal to his would be accomplices that the time is ripe for action. The robbers appear and are immediately seized by the police. One of the robbers, seeing that Paul has given them away, succeeds in stabing him. Feeling that he is going to die, he asks for his parents, as his last wish is to become reconciled to them. The old folks humbly accept the will of God. Salvation has come!

RAMO.

WIVES (Nov. 5—3 parts—Feature Subject).—Stuart Hall, a broker, and James Steele, a financier, are rivals for the hand of Jane Travers, a society belle. Steele makes the greatest impression on Jane, and she marries them. Soon after Steele's marriage to Jane, Hall meets Lois Martin and saves her from the attentions of Jack Dallas, a chauffeur. Lois and Hall's friendship soon ripens into love. Jack, who wants Lois to marry him, on being refused makes things unpleasant for the lovers, but in spite of his threats they soon marry. Their married life is ideal and is soon blessed by the arrival of a little baby.

Jane's married life is not so happy; in spite of her riches she is dissatisfied. Lois and Stuart meet Jane and her husband at a restaurant. Jane sees Hall's happiness, which causes her to think of her own life, being married to a man she has ceased to love. This preys upon her mind so much that she decides to win Hall back. She meets Hall frequently on his trips to town. Hall is beginning to lose heavily in his stock dealings, which causes him to neglect his wife and child. Jane learning that her husband is secretly operating to raise B. & H. R. stocks, thinks she sees a way to arouse Hall's interest in her again. She informs Hall, whom she meets at a ball that evening, of her husband's plans. Hall is compelled through his financial difficulties to accept Jane's information, not knowing her secret motives for aiding him. The husband overhears his wife betray his business secrets; he fixes on a plan of revenge which would eventually bring Hall to his ruin. The next day in the stock exchange, Hall starts buying B. & H. R. stocks, which formerly he was selling. James Steele allows Hall to continue buying successfully, with the intention of swamping him with B. & H. R. stocks the following day.

In the meantime, Jack Dallas has been meeting with evil companions and is wanted by the police. He enters Hall's house with the intention to burglarize it. He meets Lois for the first time since her marriage. Hall arrives home before Jack has a chance to get away with any of the plunder, which he has frightened Lois into giving him. Jack forces Lois to hide him. Lois does not tell her husband of Jack's presence in the room, fearful that Jack will carry out his threats of shooting Hall. When Hall discovers Jack's presence in the room, he is suspicious. Jack allows him to believe that Lois invited him; Hall becomes furious. Jack only saves himself from bodily injury by holding Hall back with his gun. After Jack makes his escape, Hall accuses his wife. She resents his attitude, begs and pleads with him to listen to reason, but to no avail. He speaks of a separation which drives Lois frantic.

Two detectives, who are on Jack's trail, see him leave the house. Jack evades the officers, steals an auto and makes his escape. A rainstorm comes up and Lois, who is standing by the window is stunned by a bolt of lightning. Jack, in his endeavor to escape in the auto, loses control of it and is hurled over the cliff. Later he is found by the detectives, who get his confession before he dies. The next day at the exchange Steele swamps Hall with B. & H. R. stocks, making the price fall and ruining Hall. Hall goes to the woman and accuses her of duplicity. She becomes furious. She seeks to get Hall in a compromising position. She fails in this, for her plans are only denounced by her husband for her previous perfidy and he threatens to divorce her.

Hall begins to realize that he has unjustly treated his wife. He goes home to ask forgiveness for his hasty judgment, but the doctor refuses to allow Lois to be disturbed. Later a telegram is received, telling of Jack's confession and his real motive for entering the house. A reconciliation is soon brought about between Lois and Holmes. Steele, to avoid scandal, takes a quiet means to get a divorce from Jane.

LFWIS PENNANT.

DECREED TO DIE (3 parts—Feature Subject).—Our story opens in the Chambers of the Grand Duke Alexis, where we find the Grand Duke yielding to the entreaties of his daughter, Abba, to issue a general pardon, freeing all of the revolutionists from Siberian torture. Among those freed we see an elderly man being greeted by his sons, Arthur and Frank. Years of prison life have made the father a hopeless invalid, and as death approaches he exacts a promise from his son, Arthur, to avenge his death and free the country from the tyrant Alexis. We see the Nihilists in session. Arthur takes the solemn oath of vengeance.

Arthur is successful in gaining access to the Royal Chambers as a tutor to the children of Alexis. But he becomes absorbed in a love affair with the only daughter of Grand Duke Alexis and neglects to carry out the plot to which he has been assigned. Vera, a member of the Nihilists, ann raging with jealousy, undertakes to carry out the oath of vengeance. By a series of excit-

GAUMONT'S

FORTNIGHTLY TWO REELERS

Oct. 11th—"TWO SPIES,"
A fine Drama of Romance and War

Oct. 25th—"THE GAMBLER'S RUIN,"
An object lesson dramatically told.

Nov. 8th—"THE DUKE'S HEIRESS,"
A Chorus Girl's Romantic History

Nov. 22d—"CHAINED TO THE PAST,"
Exceptionally interesting

Dec. 6th—"FALSE NEWS,"
Daring Deeds of a Brave Woman

ARE OPEN FOR

New England States
State of Indiana
Iowa and Nebraska
Louisiana, Mississippi & Arkansas
Kansas and Oklahoma
Wyoming, Montana, N. & S. Dakota
State of Illinois
Wisconsin & Minnesota
N. & S. Carolina and Tennessee
Georgia, Florida & Alabama and New York State

To State Rights Men:

Gentlemen:—Are you going to let these great features, six-reels-of drama-packed-into-two-reels, slip from you? Each feature carries four-colored paper—1, 3, 6—4 pp. heralds, photos.

Wire Shipping Orders for Film and Paper NOW to

GAUMONT CO.

110 West 40th Street, New York City

ing incidents, the story ends with the death of Arthur by the hand of Vera, and finally, also, with the tragic end of the world's most notorious despot, Grand Duke Alexis.

MY BOY: or THE MYSTERY OF THE ROADHOUSE MURDER (Feature Subject—4 parts).—Jack Robinson, after causing his devoted mother endless trouble and expense by his reckless extravagance and dishonesty, disappears. Six years pass with no word from him. Then we see him in company with a questionable character known as Bernice, at a country roadhouse, which is a veritable den of crime, being the resort of a gang of thieves. A terrific thunderstorm is raging, and Arthur Rogers, a merchant, is driven to seek shelter within, not knowing that the roadhouse is a disreputable place. He is suspected of being a detective, and trouble ensues. Just then comes the bolt of lightning, which totally demolishes the building, and it is burned to the ground. The police descend on the spot, in an intended raid, only to find the building in ruins, and the criminals fled. Jack and Bernice are captured, but Arthur Rogers flees, to escape implication in the raid. He takes refuge by chance in Jack's own home, where Jack's sister prevails upon her mother to give him shelter, and shield him from the police. A love affair follows between Arthur and Ella, and he voluntarily goes to the police station to establish his innocence. At his trial he retains Miss Ella Robinson (who is an attorney) as his lawyer. Jack, already found guilty as an accessory of the murder, is recognized at the police court by his mother and a reconciliation ensues. At a dramatic point in the proceedings Bernice unexpectedly rises and confesses that she was the one who struck the fatal blow. Jack is liberated, begins life anew, and goes happily home with his devoted mother. His sister and Arthur Rogers are married.

BELMONT.

THE CHILD DETECTIVE; or SHADOWS OF LIFE (Feature Subject—3 parts).—John Graham, a wealthy banker, while out walking with his two children, comes upon a poorly dressed little girl. She unfolds a heartrending story of poverty, and tells of a sick mother who is dying from lack of proper nourishment and her inability to obtain medical aid due to her straitened circumstances. The rich children, surprised at hearing the tale, for they have only known luxury, implore their father to give aid to this little creature. The father, wishing to encourage his children in their noble feeling, agrees to accompany the child to her home. Upon entering the squalid quarters, and finding the mother practically dead, the first shadow of grief passes over the faces of the two wealthy youngsters. Before breathing her last the dying mother in despair asks what will become of her child. John Graham, to console the woman, takes the child in his arms and assures her that he will care for her and bring her up as a sister to his own two boys. The mother dies in peace, and Edith is taken to the home of her foster-parent. Time rolls on and Edith blooms into girlhood, the youths to manhood. The younger of her foster brothers, Jack, now falls in love with Edith, but his older brother, Henry, exhibits a feeling of first choice due to being the senior. Henry, who has fallen into temptation, becomes a gamester, and is hard pressed for funds. Knowing that his father has in his possession some negotiable securities, he plans to steal them. The betrothal of Edith and Henry is announced and the anguish of Jack is evident. On the evening of the reception Jack comes to Edith to bid her a fond adieu, and while holding her in fond embrace his brother enters and denounces him. The quarrel attracts the attention of the guests, and the father, after learning the cause, orders Jack from his home. The following evening the father is found unconscious in his study, from the blow of an intruder, who has robbed the safe. Henry intimates that it may have been his ingrate brother, who knew the whereabouts of the valuable bonds, and his solution is plausible. The unfurling of the baffling mystery is accomplished by a boy, and the process is vividly shown to the audience.

WORLD'S SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION.

SAPHO (Feature Subject—4 parts).—During an entertainment given by Engineer Dechelette, the former model Fanny Legrand comes across Jean Gaussin D'Armondy, who is studying law in Paris. On the eve of breaking away from her, he happens to hear that she is no other than the celebrated Sapho. Sapho called on Jean from time to time at his student's quarters and after nursing him through a long illness, she succeeds in deciding him to keep her with him. Sapho is happy in finding a small apartment where they shelter their love. One day the sculptor, Goudal, lifted a corner of the veil that hid Sapho's past. This made Jean jealous and Sapho appeased him by the surrender of her old letters. The sudden blaze of those innumerable papers caused the chimney of the house to catch fire. Neighbors rushed in and among the rescuers, Sapho recognized her father, the old driver. Ashamed, she dreaded that Jean's refined nature would take umbrage at the new stain.

The initial frail link has been turned into a solid chain that nothing can break. At times Jean is indignant and revolts, but Sapho always gets the better of him. After some high words with Sapho, and on the invitation of his uncle Cesaire, Jean takes a trip to his home. As soon as he returns, Sapho regains her hold on him. Rosario Sonchez, a former friend of Sapho, whom she has made stewardess of her mansion, invites Jean and his mistress to luncheon. On that occasion, Rosario introduces Jean to DePotter, the celebrated musician. Sapho's friends make fun of her disinterested love. Disgusted at his bondage, DePotter tells Jean, as an example of what he is to expect of the hard life he leads with Rosario. A few days later, it is decided to leave the mansion and go to live at Chaville, close to the Hettema's. At the pressing request of Sapho, Jean adopts a child, in total ignorance that the child is the son of Flamant, condemned for forgery. That day, in celebration of their installation at Chaville, they all have a picnic in the woods. It is there that they meet Irene Bouchereau, niece of the family doctor. This causes a terrible quarrel, which is only stopped by the sound of Hetteman's horn. One day Dr. Bouchereau meets Jean in a train and invites him to his house. The young people are pleased with each other. Then comes Jean on the eve of marrying the doctor's niece. Sapho compels him to give up all thoughts of marriage. Recognizing that his life is irretrievably bound with that of Sapho, Jean announces to his family that he is going abroad with his friend. His family reproaches and even curses him, especially his father. However, he learns that his mistress has received a visit from her former lover, the father of the child, and maddened by jealousy he insists that Sapho go with him to America. Fortunately for him, it is she who leaves him.

THE TWO SERGEANTS (Feature Subject—6 parts).—Capt. Derville has occasion to reprove a slovenly soldier at review. This soldier in a spirit of revenge for his humiliation, steals a large part of the funds with which Derville is entrusted. Derville cannot account for the disappearance of the money, and knowing he will be disgraced, he disappears, aided by Tom, his old servant, who supplies him with the clothes of a peasant. Derville is intensely fond of his wife and two children, and the separation is bitter for all. In the mountains Derville saves the life of Gustave, a peasant. War breaks out and Derville and Gustave enlist, the former under the assumed name of William. During a fierce battle William (Derville) picks up a bomb and hurls it away as it is about to explode under the feet of a general. For this brave act he is made a sergeant. A warm friendship springs up between him and Sergt. Robert, and the two are inseparable. The plague strikes the town and to prevent its spread strict military quarantine is established. The two sergeants are posted at a gate and refuse to permit any one to pass. A widow and two children try to get in to the gates, and tell a pathetic tale of hunger, adding that they will surely starve to death unless permitted to reach the house of their aunt. The resemblance of the children to Derville's own little ones touches his heart, and the two sergeants allow them to pass.

A disgruntled peasant who had been turned back complains to Valmore, the aide-de-camp. This worthy is in love with Laura, the fiancee of Robert, and he takes advantage of the opportunity to rid himself of his rival by denouncing the two sergeants. The general is touched by the pitiful tale, but is compelled to order a court-martial, which finds the two men guilty, but holds that in view of the extenuating circumstances only one man shall be executed, and that lots shall be cast to see which shall die. William and Robert throw dice and William is the unfortunate one. The men are sent back to their cell by the old turnkey, who is the uncle of Laura. While there, William receives a note from a friend, informing him that his wife and children have taken refuge on the Island of Rozes, not very far off. Derville, who had not been able to communicate with his family for three years, breaks down, and tells Robert the story of his life. Robert requests the aid-de-camp to permit Derville to go on the dispatch boat, which makes daily trips to the Island of Rozes, to kiss his wife and children good-bye, agreeing to stay as a hostage and die in his stead should he not return. The aide-de-camp sees possibilities in this and consents. Gustave the man Derville saved—is in charge of the despatch boat, and the aide-de-camp secretly tells Gustave that if he delays the return of William he will, in the meantime, get a pardon for Robert. The simple Gustave believes him. Mrs. Derville and the faithful Tom are living in a cottage on the island. The cannon announces the arrival and departure of the dispatch boat, and every day Tom goes to see, if by chance, word has come from the captain. Tom hears the soldiers talking about a proclamation and recognizes the name of his master. He takes the proclamation and finds it is an acknowledgment by the secretary of war of the innocence of Capt. Derville of the charges against him, the guilty man having confessed before dying. When Derville reaches the island, therefore, he finds himself in the peculiar position of a free man, restored to rank as Capt. Derville, and as Sergt. William he is condemned to death! The meeting between the wife and husband is wonderfully depicted, and very touching. Gustave tells the old servant that if he makes his master miss the boat his life will be saved. Tom, therefore, sets the clock back an hour, and Derville is astounded to hear the booming of the cannon announcing the return of the boat. The weeping wife and children cling to him, but he tears their hands away and dashes to the water's edge. There is only one way to keep his word of honor—to swim, and he dives into the water and begins the long journey. The dispatch boat arrives at the fortress without William, and the execution of Robert is ordered. The general is angry when he learns what has been done, but despite the pleadings of Laura and her uncle, he is compelled to carry out the sentence. Robert faces the firing squad, and the commands are given: "Ready! Aim!" Before the word "Fire!" is said, the old turnkey sees in the distance the swimmer nearing the shore. Exhausted, Derville is assisted to land and Robert is saved. Derville makes known his rank to the general, as well as his true name. Laura and her uncle eloquently plead for mercy, and the old general is, in fact, only too glad to have an excuse to stop the unpleasant proceedings, and tells Derville that to make atonement for the great wrong done him, a pardon would be secured for him. Then, indignant at the conspiracy of the aide-de-camp, he removes him from office and orders him under arrest to be himself court-martialed for his vile plotting.

NEW YORK FILM CO.

THE LURE OF NEW YORK (Feature—4 parts).—In Bavaria lives a young girl, Regina Muller, and her mother. They receive word that their inn is about to be closed on account of non-payment; so Regina, seventeen years old, resolves to go to America and try her fortune in the new world. The following week Regina departs for New York, and upon her leaving her mother presents her with a locket containing a photo of the mother, herself, and begging her daughter to go the right road, no matter what temptations may come her way. On board the steamer Regina meets a country woman, much wiser than herself, coming to New York from abroad, who assures the young girl that her husband, a certain Gentleman Joe, will take care of her. On their arrival Regina is welcomed in the new home on the Bowery, and is charmed with the courtesy extended to her. Her friends are up to a different game. Gentleman Joe and his pals in the underworld commence their usual low plottings. In order to carry out their schemes, they do away with the sergeant of their district. This gives them a free chance to proceed.

Gentleman Joe and his wife intercept Regina's letters to her mother. They forge a letter from Bavaria and inform the girl that her mother is lost to the world. Then they appease her grief by inviting her to the pleasures of the New York underworld. She is taken to Chinatown. A fight ensues in the restaurant. Gentleman Joe shows his true colors. After the row Regina becomes suspicious of her surroundings. Meanwhile, her mother, not hearing from her child, begins to feel that her daughter is lost. Regina soon forgets her experience in the underworld, and is invited to an evening at the cabaret at the Madison Square Roof Garden. It is during this adventure that the young child begins to realize more than ever that her friends are deluding her and that their motives are other than they pretend. Gentleman Joe makes violent love to Regina under pretense that he wants to make a cabaret singer out of her, but, filled with terror and fright, the little girl spurns his mock love and leaves the cabaret in horror and disgust. When the unhappy family reaches home, Gentleman Joe and his wife plot to drive the girl out of his home. Regina overhears their scheme and that night makes her escape out of the window. She is followed by Tony, Joe's confederate, but with the aid of the sergeant's son, who has turned against the gang, Regina is safely brought to his mother's home. After a most sensational chase on the running elevater train, then over the works of an elevated station and down the tenth story winding fire escape, Tony is at last captured by the police. The following day Regina seeks employment, and on her way meets with an accident. The occupant of an auto, a certain Madame DuPont, realizing her chauffeur's negligence, takes care of Regina, places her in her auto and drives home. This accident forms a new chapter in Regina's life. From now on her life is entirely changed. Madame DuPont is so charmed with Regina's simplicity and fascinating manner that she resolves to adopt her as her own. Regina receives a musical education; she is thrust into society, and is a debutante at a reception tendered in her honor. Years have elapsed. Regina's mother leaves for New York in search of her child. Soon after she lands she seeks employment. At this juncture Madame DuPont decides to send Regina abroad for a musical education. Everything is made ready for her departure. Regina calls up the employment agency for a servant. Mrs. Muller is in the office. She is sent to Madamoiselle Regina to act as a servant to her own child, not knowing where she is commissioned to go. She meets her daughter face to face, denounces her for her long neglect, but when she hears her child's story and finds the locket around her neck and her own photo intact, the mother's heart softens and the mother and daughter fall into each others' arms.

SPECIFY

GUNDLACH

Projection Lenses

when ordering new machines

You may as well get the best lenses, with the machine as to buy them later.

Supplied to order with Powers Cameragraph, Motiograph, Simplex, Standard

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.

808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

PAVED WITH DIMES

is your Road if you will only recognize it. No matter how good your business is—IT CAN BE BETTER. You and your Competitor SHOW FILMS your chances of drawing money to your box office are equal. Give YOUR public a Souvenir Post Card of the Principals playing in the Films you show and you have gone the other fellows one better. OUR POST CARDS are as good as a photograph, and when a FAN starts to collect them they never let up.

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand: formerly sold for $4.00. Over 300 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 30 of the most popular Association players, $10.00 per thousand.

Photo Post Cards

for hand coloring. NOTE: The public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—30 Association Players $5.00 per thousand

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 300 different names, 20 cents each.

LARGE PICTURES, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.

LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, 12 of the Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.

Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of Kalem, Lubin and Edison, and also all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Set of 12; $2.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.

Lobby frames to hold 12 pictures with necessary cards—$6.00 each.

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 300 players and samples free. All letters answered the same day as received.

MR. EXHIBITOR, READ THIS

"The Battle of Gettysburg" played Tuesday, October 14th, at La Ray Theatre, Salem, N. J. Mr. Ray, when asked how it took, said:

> "We could not hold the crowds. The biggest mob that ever attempted to get into a theatre fought to see it. We turned away as many as we took in. This is all the more remarkable, when we are charging 10c., as it was the first time we have ever gone above a 5c. admission. In addition to this fact, on the same day there was a big launching at Salem and a free lecture at the City Hall. Naturally, we were more than delighted with the result."

Our Files Are Overflowing With Letters of the Above's Ilk

EASY TERMS

Terms and Booking at any office of the Mutual Film Corporation

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION, Longacre Bldg., 42nd St. and Broadway, NEW YORK

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY

(Incorporated)

1301 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines Repaired by Expert Mechanics. Genuine Parts Only Used

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens
Chairs
Tickets
Pianos
Bio & Electra Carbons
Special Gundlach Lenses
Condensers
Edison Transformers
Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Asbestos State Booths
Asbestos Wire
Switches
Plugs
Spotlights
Gas Making Outfits
Limes
Film-Cement
Branch General Disinfectant Co.
Scenery, Stage Effects
Theaters Bought, Sold Rented

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

EYE COMFORT LIGHTING System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium..............................

Ceiling Height..............................

Width of House..............................

Name..............................

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.

Chicago
229 W. Jackson Blvd.

New York
505 Fifth Ave.

A SECRET SERVICE RAILROAD STORY

UNPARALLELED IN THE NUMBER OF ITS STARTLING EPISODES THAT LEAD UP TO A TERRIFIC RAILROAD WRECK. THIS IS ANOTHER OF THOSE SOUL-STIRRING FEATURES THAT ARE BEING SELECTED FOR US BY OUR SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE WHO IS SENDING US ONE EVERY WEEK OF THE CREAM OF EUROPE.

---

| | |
|---|---|
| A BARGAIN WITH SATAN—An Allegory of the Supernatural - - | 5 PARTS |
| HUMANITY—A Thrilling Tale of Friendship and Ingratitude - - | 3 PARTS |
| PETER MAKAROFF—A Story of Russian Court Life - - - - - - | 4 PARTS |
| THROUGH THE CLOUDS—A Mixture of Romance and Aeronautics | 3 PARTS |
| THE FALL OF FRANCE—An Incident of the Franco-Prussian War | 3 PARTS |
| LONDON BY NIGHT—A Barker Melodrama in Barker's Best Style | 4 PARTS |
| THE GREAT BULLION ROBBERY—A Supersensational Feature - | 3 PARTS |
| THE BLACK 13—Sequel to "On the Trail of the Spider Gang - - | 3 PARTS |

APEX FILM CO.

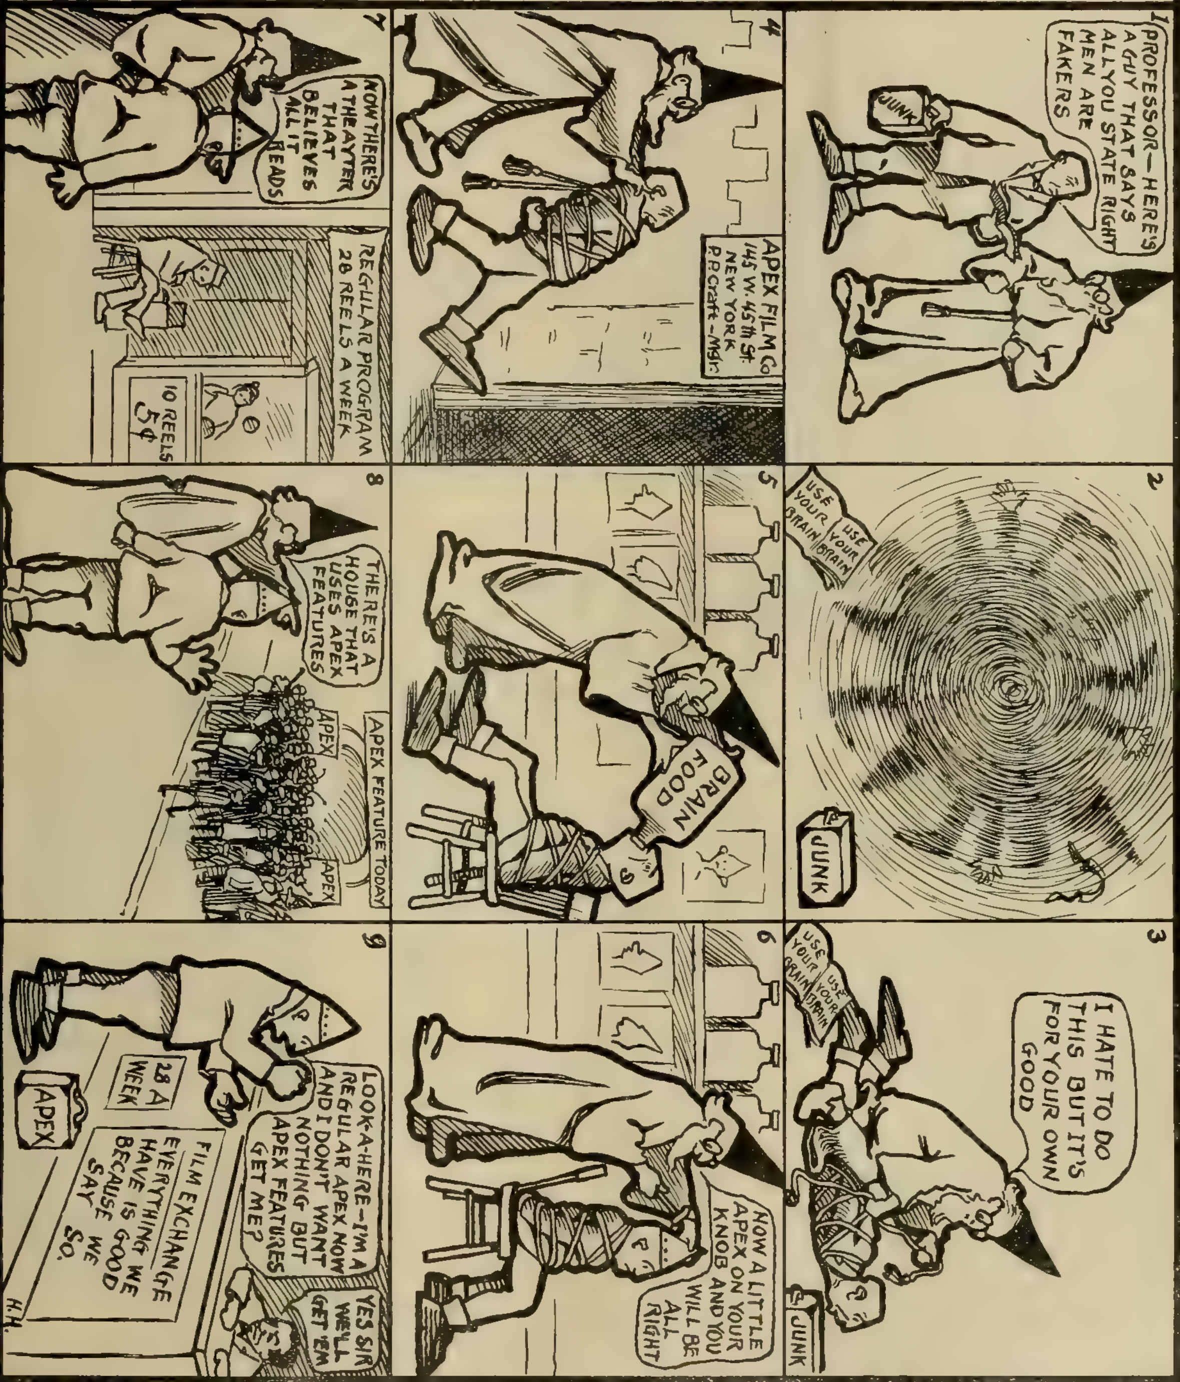
145 W. 45th St., New York — P. P. Craft, Manager

A Day in the Life of Prof. Apex—Brain Specialist



1
PROFESSOR—HERE'S A GUY THAT SAYS ALL YOU STATE RIGHT MEN ARE FAKERS JUNK
2
USE YOUR BRAIN
USE YOUR BRAIN
JUNK
3
I HATE TO DO THIS BUT IT'S FOR YOUR OWN GOOD
USE YOUR BRAIN
USE YOUR BRAIN
JUNK
4
APEX FILM CO 145 W. 45th St. NEW YORK P.P. Craft-Mgr.
5
USE YOUR BRAIN
USE YOUR BRAIN
BRAIN FOOD
6
USE YOUR BRAIN
USE YOUR BRAIN
NOW A LITTLE APEX ON YOUR KNOB AND YOU WILL BE ALL RIGHT
7
NOW THERE'S A THEAYTER THAT BELIEVES ALL IT READS
REGULAR PROGRAM 28 REELS A WEEK
10 REELS 5¢
8
THERE'S A HOUSE THAT USES APEX FEATURES
APEX FEATURE TODAY
APEX
APEX
9
LOOK-A-HERE—I'M A REGULAR APEX NOW AND I DON'T WANT NOTHING BUT APEX FEATURES GET ME?
YES SIR WE'LL GET 'EM
28 A WEEK
APEX
FILM EXCHANGE EVERYTHING WE HAVE IS GOOD BECAUSE WE SAY SO.
H.H.

USE YOUR BRAIN

"OUTLAWED"

DESPERATE men of desperate deeds at bay, with their furtive eyes ever watchful for the grim hand of the Law, does this title suggest.

This state rights feature is not misnamed. It pictures vividly, powerfully the lives of the lawless, outcasts by reason of committed evils or the strange ways of the circumstantial which sometimes enmesh the innocent.

How a wronged man vindicates himself and escapes the noose of death; how his well beloved wears man's attire to live or die beside him when bullets fly and men drop, brings red thrills to our cheeks, causes our hearts to pound thunderously against rib walls. Let this picture stir you as it has stirred us!

Film Releases of America
220 West 42nd St., NEW YORK CITY

A Matter of Results

"The Last Night of the Barbary Coast"

Bought By Exchange-men of Discernment Has Proved To Be An Asset

Is There Any Reason Why You Don't Allow It to Become an Asset For You?

---

Have you estimated what the tremendous publicity will mean in your bookings? Do you realize how many people are keenly interested in seeing how this famous San Francisco Tenderloin looked on the last days and nights?

---

You don't want argument. You want proof! Let this picture show you!

---

12c. a foot 1, 3 and 6 Sheet Posters

PROGRESSIVE FILM PRODUCING CO.
OF AMERICA
234 EDDY STREET SAN FRANCISCO

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

EXPERT OPERATOR—Wishes position with firm who will appreciate high class work. Satisfaction guaranteed. Best of references. Address N. V. A., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—November 15th, A-1 operator with new Power No 6 machine. Two years' experience. Now employed. Satisfaction guaranteed. Very best references. OPERATOR, Box 125, Prattville, Ala.

OPERATOR—Desires position in Arkansas. Five years' experience. Can furnish Power's No 6A. State operating room equipment and salary in first letter. Address ERNEST MORRIS, Box 342, Marianna, Ark.

MACHINIST—Would purchase theater or shop interest where used as dance-orchestra cornetist. Double saxophone, oboe, and novelties. BERNARD, 234 Indiana, Toledo, O.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—First class piano player for picture theater; must be able to play pictures and song. Address H. B. FRANKS, Grand Theater, Macomb, Ill.

WANTED—Reliable man located in Chicago that understands buying film. Reference and $5 0 bond required. Address RELIABLE, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED—Experienced motion picture producer with ability to produce Western stuff. Satisfactory references required. X. Y., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

WANTED—Films to book in Cincinnati. Can book your features to good advantage. Write for my proposition. L. E. POCOCKE, 2256 Francis Lane, Cincinnati, Ohio

PARTNER WANTED—With six hundred dollars, feature film business, have organized others. References required, can guarantee results. O. M. C., Rand Hotel, Cincinnati, O.

WANTED—A young man with factory experience to fill position as assistant manager. An investment of $2,000.00 required. Address THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio.

BUSINESS MAN—Old or young, with $10,000, can obtain interest in enterprise promising large, profitable growth, on permanent basis, without competition. Treasurer's position open. Will appeal especially to man acquainted with dry goods, textiles, motion pictures, or advertising. Principals only. Legitimate. M. E. R., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANTED—Picture theater to rent, in first class town. Prefer Western Iowa, Eastern Nebraska, Northern Missouri, or within 150 miles of New York. Would buy if trial shows good money-maker. Address N. I., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

WILL RENT OR BUY—Motion picture theater in Southern Minnesota, North or South Dakota. Full particulars in first letter. Address BOX 20, Allen, Minn.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

PICTURE THEATER—An honest house, with established family patronage, in growing Chicago neighborhood. No competition; beautiful. Always clearing $75 a week. Long lease. Open to rigid investigation, $5,000. Address P. S., 428 S. Harvey Ave., Oak Park, Ill.

FOR SALE—Picture and vaudeville houses from $500 to $30,000 in Los Angeles and southern California. JACK E. CLOYD Company, 512 South Hill St., Los Angeles, Cal.

FOR SALE—Picture theater open 7 days a week in town of 8,000. C. C. HADDOX, Kenton, Ohio.

FOR SALE AT A SACRIFICE—The only picture theater in thriving North Missouri town, population 3,500. Big profits; 10c admission; seating 300. New Power's 6 A machine. Also equipped for vaudeville. Price, $1,100, your own terms. You cannot afford to pass this opportunity. Must sell account enforced change of residence. Address P. O. BOX 86, Moberly, Missouri.

FOR SALE—Motion picture house, mirror screen, Power's 6, quick sale, $1,800. City 9,000, Southern Iowa. Address S. I., Care Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE—2 well-established, paying picture shows in downtown district of large city. Owner has reasons for selling. For full information address PEORIA FILM EXCH., 505 Fulton St., Peoria, Ill.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn. Largest house in city of 80,000; newly constructed, equipped with stage, scenery, dressing rooms, accommodating 400 patrons; located heart shopping district. Earned $4,600 net last year. Will sell for 30 , less than cost of same. Good reasons for selling. Address WM. F. NIEL, 202 Austell Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

NICKELODIEN THEATRE—Near Pittsburgh, Pa., seating 1,000, clearing $200 weekly. $8,000. Another Middletown, Ohio, clearing $60 weekly, $1,200. We buy and sell everywhere. TRISTATE THEATRE EXC., Schmulbach Bldg., Wheeling, W. Va.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Complete new set of scenery, cheap. Four drops, size 10x15 ft., with rollers, rope and pulleys. Eight wings and three borders. Address A. J. Berube, East Tawas, Mich.

FOR SALE—Power's No. 5, Ft. Worth Compensarc Screen, 220 good folding chairs cheap. GEORGE BARKER, 803 N. 4th St., Estherville, Iowa.

FOR SALE—1913 Underwriters Edison Machine complete, used three weeks, cheap. Address C. LEOSSGN, 2251 North Spaulding Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—One A. & W. Cleveland Theatre Sign with Star Top. Star contains thirty lights, word theatre contains forty-seven. Total height 18 ft., width two and one-half feet. If interested make us an offer. STAR THEATRE CO., Ithaca, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Power's No. 6, used six months, good condition, $100.00 cash. Sent for inspection if charges paid both ways. P. O. Box 851, Bellows Falls, Vermont.

20 REELS—Good condition, $4 and $5. Portable booth, $25. Power's No. 5 complete, $60. Complete Pathe Passion Play for rent. LUBECK, 1109 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE—110 or 220-volt Economizer, 60 Cycles, a few films and features; give full particulars. MARTIN L. FREDERICKS, 2017 North Twelfth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

FILMS FOR SALE.

AT A SACRIFICE—Nick Carter, American Detective, in three reels. Good paper and banner, also Titanic and Archbishop Ryan's Funeral. Address T. STUART DRAKE, Easton, Pa.

FOR QUICK SALE—Splendid three-reel subject, "Phanton Auto Bandits," use anywhere, with mechanical front sixteen ft. length. Engine in pursuit of automobile. Big money maker. Will accept $75.00. W. B. BALL, 1909 Madison Ave., Toledo, O.

FOR SALE—Six big features for the following territory: East Pennsylvania, So. Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, and Virginias. Banners and all kinds of paper mounted. About 10,700 feet, eight cents per foot, including everything and lot of bookings. In business since August. Partnership reason for selling. FEATURE FILMS, 3213 Morse St., Philadelphia, Pa.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Electric piano, 66 notes, berrywood. Cost $1,000.00. Must sell at once. Make offer. ENGLE & MASON, New Empire, Fort Dodge, Iowa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TYPEWRITER—For authors, 40 cents per 1,000 words. Special book rate. JACK LIVERPOOL, 394 Massachusetts Ave., Boston, Mass.

AT LAST—No wires burning off inside the lamphouse, no dark screens. Our device, $2.00, postpaid, cash with order. State machine, voltage and amperage. CELTIC CO., Syracuse, N. Y.

GUIL PASTILS—A substitute for limes. Brighter light, less gas. $1.35 each, postpaid. Holders, 35 cents. C. E. LINDALL, Sole Importer, Bar Harbor, Me.

FOR CAMERAMEN—Developing, 1c; printing, 5c (slow printer). Intensifying and reducing extra; titles, 8c. GEO KINGSBURY, Star Special, 337 W. 46th St., New York City. 'Phone, 3255 Bryant.

$50.00 BUYS—A motion picture camera and tripod complete. Address S. H., care of M. P. World, N. Y. City.

WE BUY—Sell or exchange Motion cameras, all makes. Sole United States agents for Prestwich cameras. Eight thousand feet of perforated negative for sale at 2½c per foot. You will get a square deal if you trade with the MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., 810 Broadway, New York.

THE MASTER HAND

A Wonderful Three Reel Feature

MAN vs. BEAST, Thrilling, Educational and Entertaining

SOME CHOICE TERRITORY LEFT

Territory Selling Fast    Greatest Three Reel Feature Produced This Year

Write at Once for Information and Territory

Our next Release, "THE BROKEN SPRING ROSE." Ready November 1st

THE CROWN FEATURE FILM CO.    Toledo, Ohio

Now Ready for Booking

WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION
110 W. 40TH ST., N.Y.
— PRESENTS —
PROTÉA

A mile of film with a thrill in every foot

FOR TERMS AND PARTICULARS ASK ANY OF OUR OFFICES LOCATED IN:

New York, 110 W. 40th St.
Cleveland, 420 Columbia Bldg.
Minneapolis, 410 Temple Court
Indianapolis, Willoughby Bldg.
Kansas City, 821 Gloyd Bldg.
Pittsburg, 210 4th Avenue
Buffalo, White Bldg.
Philadelphia, 1316 Vine St.
Detroit, 68 Griswold St.
Boston, 1074 Boylston St.
Chicago, 37 So. Wabash Ave.
Cincinnati, 224½ E. 4th St.
Atlanta, 519 Forsyth Bldg.
St. Louis, 804 Pine Street
Dallas, Andrews Bldg.

WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION

110 W. 40th Street, New York City

BLACHÉ Feat

Action takes place in two hemispheres. Picturesque array of types. Elephants. Palace scenes. Big, sensational situations; thrilling fights full of suspense. Narrow escapes. Race across the Atlantic. The usual variety of paper, together with booklets, heralds, etc. Elaborate settings; all-star cast and snappy story replete with interest.

THE STAR O

A Story of Intrigue, Mys

OPEN TERRITORY Wire bid for the following single states or groups:

ALABAMA
ALASKA
ARKANSAS
CANADA (Western)
COLORADO
FLORIDA GEORGIA
IOWA
ILLINOIS (Southern)
INDIANA
KANSAS
KENTUCKY
LOUISIANA
MISSOURI

MONTANA
MINNESOTA
NEBRASKA
NORTH DAKOTA
NEW MEXICO
NEW JERSEY (Northern)
NEW YORK CITY
NEW YORK STATE
OKLAHOMA (Northern)
SOUTH CAROLINA
SOUTH DAKOTA
UTAH
WYOMING
WISCONSIN

Blaché Features (Incorporated)

ure Production

A traditionally unlucky diamond is stolen—Thief, English engineer, escapes through tunnel he has dug for the purpose—Snake poisons thief—Dies—American fights Hindu for possession—American gets it—Race across Atlantic followed by Hindu—Hindu conspires to get it—Joins a gang of crooks and cut-throats—Complications developing thrilling scenes of mystery and intrigue and fight essue.

F INDIA

FOUR REELS

tery, Fight and Sensation

SOLD Bookings may be secured from the following exchanges:

| | |
|---|---|
| Arizona | Golden Gate Film Exchange, 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal. |
| California | Golden Gate Film Exchange, 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal. |
| Canada | (Eastern) Consolidated Film Co., Ltd., 295 St. Catherine St., W., Montreal, Can. |
| Connecticut | Famous Players Film Co., 100 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. |
| Delaware | Electric Theatre & Supply Co., 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa. |
| Dist. of Columbia | Electric Theatre & Supply Co., 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa. |
| Idaho | Northwestern Feature Film Co., 329 Oak Street, Portland, Ore. |
| Illinois | (Northern) Union Film Company, 167 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill. |
| Maine | Famous Players Film Co., 100 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. |
| Maryland | Electric Theatre & Supply Co., 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa. |
| Massachusetts | Famous Players Film Co., 100 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. |
| Michigan | Casino Company, 2206 Dime Bank Bldg., Detroit, Mich. |
| Nevada | Golden Gate Film Exchange, 234 Eddy Street, San Francisco, Cal. |
| New Hampshire | Famous Players Film Co., 100 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. |
| New Jersey | (Southern) Electric Theatre & Supply Co., 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa. |
| Oklahoma | (Southern) Big Four Feature Film Co., Praetorian Bldg., Dallas, Tex. |
| Ohio | Liberty Feature Film Co., 306 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland, O. |
| Oregon | Northwestern Feature Film Co., 329 Oak Street, Portland, Ore. |
| Pennsylvania | (Eastern) Electric Theatre & Supply Co., 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa. |
| Pennsylvania | (Western) Weiland Feature Film Co., and World's Famous Feature Film Co., 212 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. |
| Rhode Island | Famous Players Film Co., 100 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. |
| Texas | Big Four Feature Film Co., Praetorian Bldg., Dallas, Tex. |
| Vermont | Famous Players Film Co., 100 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. |
| Washington | Northwestern Feature Film Co., 329 Oak Street, Portland, Ore. |
| West Virginia | Weiland Feature Film Co., and World's Famous Feature Film Co., 212 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. |

Fort Lee, New Jersey

$200

BUYS AND INSTALLS IN YOUR THEATRE A

Kinemacolor Machine

SEND FOR NEW PRICE SCHEDULE OF

Kinemacolor Service

(TWENTY DOLLARS AND UPWARDS)

CHICAGO
538 S. Dearborn Street

NEW YORK
1600 Broadway

LOUISVILLE
538 Majestic Theatre Building

---

THE FACTORY

FOR

FEATURE

FILMS

---

Lowest Prices
Prompt Deliveries
All Work Guaranteed

⁂

COMMERCIAL
Motion Pictures Co.
INC.

102 West 101st St.
NEW YORK CITY

GREAT NORTHERN

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND THE PIONEER CONCERN IN THE FIELD OF FEATURES ANNOUNCES

THE SECRET OF THE OLD CABINET

IN FOUR PARTS Copyrighted 1913 INFRINGERS BEWARE

A SURPASSING PHOTO DRAMA FILLED WITH THRILLS

A Strong Story of Human Interest Culminating in a Most Realistic Plunge of an Auto from the Cliffs

TERRITORIAL RIGHTS NOW SELLING

Artistic One, Three and Six Sheet Posters. Enlarged Photos and Descriptive Heralds. WRITE—PHONE—WIRE

EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORPORATION PROGRAMME

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO. 42 EAST 14th ST.
NEW YORK CITY

MÉLIÈS FILMS

Another Japanese Multiple!

The YELLOW SLAVE

THREE PART FEATURE

Greater and grander than THE JAPANESE SWORD MAKER. Watch for the release date.

COPYRIGHTED, 1913, BY G. MELIES

---

Nov. 13th

The JUDGMENT OF BUDDHA

IN TWO PARTS

Thrilling story of punishment imposed by a god
PRODUCED AMONG THE RUINS OF ANGKOR, CAMBODIA, FRENCH INDO-CHINA

PRODUCED IN JAPAN.

---

PASQUALI AMERICAN Co. Inc.

110 W. 40th St.
1904 World's Tower Building
New York City

ALBERT AMATO, Pres.
WILLIAM J. LEE, Mgr.

JUST A FEW MORE STATES LEFT

THE POWER OF INNOCENCE

IN THREE PARTS

A RACE WITH DEATH

IN TWO PARTS

THE BRIGANDS DAUGHTER

IN FOUR PARTS

ALL HAVE FULL LINE OF ADVERTISING

P C A

PASQUALI FILMS PROTECTED BY COPYRIGHT

What a Face Did!

THIS head of Morgan, appearing in an advertisement a few weeks ago, awoke two state right buyers to the relation between Morgan brains, Morgan judgment, Morgan quickness of action and

"The Exclusive Program"

Don't you want to do Big Things?

---

Exclusive Supply Corporation

220 West 42d Street, New York City

---

Personality in Electric Economizer Building

Who was first to build an A. C. Electric Economizer?—"Hallberg."

Who was first to build an Electric Economizer for 110, 220 and 550 V. direct current?—"Hallberg."

Who was first to manufacture and offer for sale an Economizer to change alternating to direct current?—"Hallberg."

What Economizers and current savers have been copied as near as possible by all other makers of similar devices?—The "Hallberg."

Who would you naturally suppose has the most experience and best knowledge of your requirements?—"Hallberg."

In view of the above, who would be the best man for you to patronize to get the very best results?—"Hallberg."

Do you realize that when you go to some of these very large concerns and place your orders for electric current controllers, that you have to deal with some clerk or salesman who really does not know very much about the business?

These fellows simply recite from memory the statements made by the manufacturers, and you really get the information second or third hand, whereas when you deal with me you are in direct touch with the inventor, and I have time to devote individually to each one of you to make a success of your own particular installation. In other words, my organization is compact. I am a specialist in this line, and the electric current saver, regulator and Economizer business with me is practically my entire business and not merely a drop in the bucket, as it is with some of the other concerns making this kind of device, merely as a side line, in connection with which the Moving Picture Business is only one-thousandth part or less of their business. Think this over.

Hugh Hoffman, of the Editorial Staff of the Moving Picture World, said on May 31, 1913: "The success of the HALLBERG Economizer was so emphatic that Hallberg became a sort of Moses to moving picture theatre managers." He also said, referring to Current Savers and Economizers: "In a way he is the daddy of them all and they are all his children."

This is strong talk, but represents absolute facts—

I am not only an expert on the electrical end of your business, but during the past six years I have equipped theatres completely with opera chairs, all makes of moving picture machines and every known kind of supplies and equipment. This has put me in particularly close touch with the varying requirements for your theatres, and on account of my being, previous to going into this business, a consulting engineer, my experience in that line has been of tremendous value to me in assisting you to secure the most satisfactory results in connection with the entire equipment of your theatre.

I sell all makes of machinery, apparatus and supplies, and I can make liberal allowance for your old moving picture machines and current savers in trade for the new modern machines and for the celebrated line of "HALLBERG" ECONOMIZERS, and I particularly call your attention to the "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZERS.

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY.

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 Pages, Costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG

"THE HOUSE OF QUALITY"

36 EAST 23d STREET - NEW YORK

SULZER VINDICATED!

Do you, Mr. State Rights Buyer, know what that means? His people have sent him back to the Legislature by an overwhelming vote, and his lecture tour will help him electrify the world with his exposures.

Now is the time to get

"The Shame OF THE Empire State"

in four reels. Sulzer himself is the leading man, and territory is going fast enough to prove that the buyers know a winner when they see it. Don't be timid — we can deal quickly. You just send us a wire and we will come back so quick the speed will make you dizzy. Remember this—we are no fly-by-nights or star chasers. We don't deal in humbug, and have been in business long enough for you to know us. If you don't, you will want to for a long while after first acquaintance.

PAPER?—IMMENSE!

RUBY
FEATURE PLAY

RUBY
FEATURE FILM
CO.
145 W. 45th Street
NEW YORK

---

A Portentous Announcement of Paramount Interest

The most stupendous and important deal yet in motion pictures

THE ECLAIR OF PARIS has secured the entire world's exclusive rights to produce in motion picture form the world-famous stories of the

Immortal Jules Verne

at an enormous and almost prohibitive price which runs into staggering figures.

A few of the first productions to be placed on the market shortly—

"The Children of Captain Grant"

(In 7 colossal and massive reels)

"The Black Indies"

(In 6 stupendous parts)

and

"20,000 Leagues Under the Sea"

(In 6 wonderful and astounding reels)

The world-famous masterpiece of the celebrated JULES VERNE. A story known and loved by everyone on the face of the civilized globe.

A Supreme Effort in Motion Pictures

Eclair Film Company
225 West 42nd Street
New York City

MUSIC — THE VERY LATEST — MUSIC

ORGAN ORCHESTRIONS

PLAYS TWO WAYS

AUTOMATICALLY
AND
BY HAND

MEETS EVERY REQUIREMENT

An instrument of this kind will meet the requirements of any first-class picture theatre. You can play popular, classic, sacred or dance pieces, as the instrument is only limited to the kind of music desired.

BUILT FOR ANY GIVEN SPACE.

THEY REPRODUCE THE PLAYING OF THE GREATEST ORGANISTS

ELIMINATE EXPERIMENTS

When you purchase a WELTE instrument you eliminate experiments. Your value is represented in every detail, as is attested by being in the homes of the wealthiest and most representative people in the world.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

M. WELTE & SONS, Inc., 273 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. City
ESTABLISHED 1832

---

FOUR EVERY WEEK

Feature Service Supreme

FOUR EVERY WEEK

GREAT BIG COIN-GETTING HOUSE-FILLING FEATURE PRODUCTIONS

WAR CORRESPONDENTS
Four reel ITALA

DR. NICHOLSON AND BLUE DIAMOND
Four reel F. R. A.

HELEN GARDNER RELEASES

SISTER TO CARMEN
WIFE OF CAIN ZIGOMAR III
BALAOO
(New Copies)

200 WINNERS ALREADY AND FOUR MORE EVERY WEEK
Note M. & F. Film Co. purchased by us Oct. 20
BIG NEW OFFICES, FIFTH FLOOR, POWERS BUILDING
WABASH & MONROE, CHICAGO

GENERAL SPECIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY, *Inc.
WILLIAM HERSHBERG, Pres. A. G. SPENCER, Sec. and Treas.

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS.......... 727
AT THE SIGN OF THE FLAMING ARCS..... 742
BIG ADVERTISING MELON TO BE CUT..... 720
E. NICHOLS TALKS.................... 721
BUFFALO ............................ 749
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES ...... 752
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES.. 750
CHICAGO LETTER ..................... 722
"CHILD STEALERS OF PARIS, THE" (Imp). 721
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 735
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)... 736
CORRESPONDENCE ..................... 747
"EIGHTY MILLION WOMEN WANT—— ?" (Unique) ............ 741
FACTS AND COMMENTS.................. 711
ILLINOIS ........................... 748
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES ........... 778
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES........... 808
IN THE SOUTHWEST.................... 758
INQUIRIES .......................... 730
LICENSED FILM STORIES............... 760
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.............. 810
LOUISVILLE ......................... 758
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES....... 743
MICHIGAN ........................... 749
MISSOURI ........................... 749
MISS PICKFORD AT HER BEST........... 718
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE..
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR............. 724
MUCH ADO ABOUT A COMMA.............. 716
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE............... 725
NEW JERSEY MOTION PICTURE COMMISSION........................... 719
NEW ENGLAND AND CANADA.............. 747
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN.... 723
"OCTOROON, THE" (Kalem)............. 716
OHIO ............................... 736
OKLAHOMA CONVENTION ................ 740
ORGANIZATION ....................... 739
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE ............... 729
PHILADELPHIA ....................... 754
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT .............. 731
RISING STARS........................ 712
RIVERVIEW THEATER, THE.............. 715
SPRINGFIELD ........................ 756
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 760
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).... 778
"SUBTERRANEAN CITY, THE" (Kleine)..... 717
THEATER OF REALIZATION, THE......... 714
TO TEST OHIO CENSOR LAW............. 739
UNIVERSAL EUROPEAN COMPANY HOME. 720
WASHINGTON, D. C.................... 754
WISCONSIN .......................... 754

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.

KIEWERT C. L. & CO.................807
REISINGER HUGO ....................811

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT CO.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO................767
BELL & HOWELL......................813
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO.................791
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS...............815
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO.............772
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO. ..............815
HALBERG, J. H......................803
HOKE, GEO. M., SUPPLY CO...........815
KLEINE OPTICAL CO .................704
PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO.......772
SMITH, L. C., & CO.................813
STRELINGER, CHAS. A., & CO.........764
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC MFG. CO ......762

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.

ALL STAR FILM CORP.................701
AMMEX .............................775
APEX FILM CO.......................792-3
BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG...............791
BELMONT FILM CO....................787
BLACHE FEATURES ...................798-9
BLINKHORN, ALBERT .................757
CALIFORNIA M. P. CORP..............758
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO............817
CROWN FEATURE FILM CO..............796
EUROPEAN FEATURE FILM CO...........813
FAIR FEATURE FILM CO...............785
FAMOUS PLAYERS ....................698-99
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO...............783
FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA...........794
FILMS LLOYD, INC. .................773
GENERAL FILM CO....................702-3
GENERAL SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO......805
GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO ..................................801
HELGAR CORP .......................812
ITALA FILM CO .....................761
JUNGLE FILM CO.....................770-1
NEW YORK FILM CO ..................777
PASQUALI-AMERICAN FILM CO..........802
PILOT FILM CO .....................779
PROGRESSIVE PRODUCING CO...........795
RUBY FEATURES .....................804
STRANGLERS OF PARIS FILM CO........769
TRUE FEATURES .....................765
U. K. FILM CO .....................776
UNIQUE FEATURES ...................763
VERNON FILM CO.....................814
WARNER'S FEATURES .................781
WORLD'S SPECIAL FILMS CORP.........755-97

FILM BROKERS.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS..........816-17

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.

TRAINER, C. W. MFG. CO.............764

FILM EXCHANGES.

BRADENBURG, G. W...................767
CHICAGO M. P. SUPPLY CO............772
ECONOMY FILM CO....................764-72
EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CO................803
GRAPHIC FEATURE FILM CO............813
GREATER N. Y. FILM RENTAL CO.......810
HETZ, L. ..........................764
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE...............766
M. P. SUPPLY CO ...................767
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE.....772
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO..............767

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.

AMERICAN ..........................809
BRONCHO, M. P. CO..................759
ECLAIR ............................804
GAUMONT CO. .......................789
KAY-BEE ...........................759
KEYSTONE ..........................759
NEW MAJESTIC ......................818
THANHOUSER ........................690
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURERS...692-3-4-5

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.

EDISON ............................707
ESSANAY ...........................691
KALEM .............................700-10
KINEMACOLOR .......................800
KLEINE, GEO. ......................705
LUBIN .............................708
MELIES ............................802
PATHE FRERES ......................706
SELIG .............................819
VITAGRAPH .........................709

LENS MANUFACTURERS.

GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN ................791

MISCELLANEOUS.

ADVANCE M. P. CO...................772
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS .........796
COMMERCIAL M. P. CO................800
DEARBORN NOVELTY CO................815
EASTMAN KODAK CO...................813
GUNBY BROS. .......................762
HARRIS, W. ........................766
HORSLEY, DAVID ....................812
KRAUS MFG. CO......................791
LORD MFG. CO.......................814
NATIONAL TICKET CO.................808
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO........791
ONE DROP OIL CO....................772
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO..772
PHOTO-CINES CO ....................812
PHOTOPLAY CO., INC.................813
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.................813
RUSSELL UNIFORM CO.................762
SARGENT, E. W......................817
SPITZ, B. .........................817
STEBBINS, C. M. ...................776
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE.........772
THEATRE RECORD LEDGER CO...........815
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.......813
TURNER-HALSEY CO. .................764
VISCO MOTOR OIL CO.................776
WOODRUFF, ELEANOR .................754

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.

AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO..........815
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO...........815
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD ...............817

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER SALES CO......766
DEAGAN, J. C.......................816
SEEBURG, J. P. PIANO CO............816
SINN, C. E.........................764
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH ................813
WELTE, M., & SON ..................805

PROJECTION SCREENS.

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO..............814
POWERS ............................820
PRECISION MACHINE CO. .............751

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.

ANDREWS, A. H. CO..................817
BENNETT SEATING CO.................817
HARDESTY MFG. CO...................817
STAFFORD, E. H.....................817
STEEL FURNITURE CO.................817
WISCONSIN SEATING CO...............817

POSTERS & FRAMES.

AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. .......752
A. B. C. CO........................806
GENERAL FILM CO ...................753
NEWMAN MFG. CO.....................817
THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO..........814

PROJECTION SCREENS.

AMERICAN THEATRE CURTAIN CO........816
GENTER, J. H.......................812
MIRROR SCREEN CO...................766

SONG & ADVERTISING SLIDES.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE CO..............764
ECKER BROS. .......................762
NEVER BREAK SLIDE CO...............817
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO............813

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.

DECORATOR'S SUPPLY CO..............815

ONE, THREE and SIX SHEETS NOW READY for

BIOGRAPH'S
"BY MAN'S LAW"
In Two Parts
Released November 22nd

LUBIN'S
"PARTNERS IN CRIME"
In Three Reels
Released November 20th

KALEM'S
"The Express Car Mystery"
in Two Parts
Released November 19th
(Two styles of one sheets for this)

WE also have THREE SHEETS for all the One Reel Subjects of LUBIN, KALEM and BIOGRAPH, for the week of November 17th to 22d except the Kalem Friday

A. B. C. COMPANY :: :: Cleveland, Ohio

NEW PRICES

HAVE GONE INTO EFFECT ON

BIO CARBONS

RECOGNIZED BIO CARBONS BRAND STANDARD MIL

"THE CARBON YOU WANT"

EVERY LIVE DEALER AND EXCHANGE
CARRIES A BOUNTIFUL SUPPLY

BECAUSE

JOY COMES TO ALL

EXHIBITORS AND OPERATORS

USING

BIO CARBONS

RECOGNIZED BIO CARBONS BRAND STANDARD MIL

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

| NEW YORK | MILWAUKEE | SAN FRANCISCO |
|---|---|---|
| 165 Greenwich St. | 114 Huron St. | 143 Second St. |

And all Live Film Exchanges and Supply Dealers

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

Nov. 8—The Haunted House (Comedy-Drama)..1000
Nov. 10—Martha's Decision (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 13—An Assisted Proposal (Comedy)......1000
Nov. 15—The Drummer's Honeymoon (Com.)..1000
Nov. 17—The Trail of the Lost Chord (2 parts—Drama) ..... ..................2000
Nov. 20—The Tale of the Ticker (Drama) .....
Nov. 20—A Modern Steel Plant (Edu.) .....
Nov. 22—Calamity Anne's Dream (Drama).....1000

AMBROSIO.

Oct. 4—The Wild Guardian (2 parts—Drama).2000
Oct. 11—Chopin's Nocturne (2 parts—Drama).2000
Oct. 18—The Two Mothers (2 parts—Drama)..2000

APOLLO.

Oct. 5—The Rube Boss (Comedy)............
Oct. 12—Ketchem and Killem (Comedy)......
Oct. 19—One Round O'Brien Comes East (Com.)
Oct. 26—The Boomerang Curve (Comedy) .....
Nov. 2—His Nobs the Plumber (Comedy).....

BISON.

Oct. 28—The Black Masks (2 parts—Drama).
Nov. 1—From Dawn to Dark (2 parts—Dr.).
Nov. 4—Captain Kidd (3 parts—Drama)......
Nov. 8—The Prairie Trail (2 parts—Drama)..
Nov. 11—Madonna of the Slums (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 15—Lasca (2 parts—Drama)............
Nov. 18—The Raid of the Human Tigers (3 parts—Drama)............ .......
Nov.22—Wynona's Vengeance (2 parts—Dr.)..

BRONCHO.

Oct. 15—The Reaping (Drama)................
Oct. 22—The Black Sheep (2 parts—Drama)..
Oct 29—From Out the Storm (2 parts—Drama)
Nov 5—The Veteran (2 parts—Drama).......
Nov. 12—The Impostor (2 parts—Drama).......
Nov. 19—The War Correspondent (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 26—The Reformation (Drama)..........

CRYSTAL.

Nov. 2—A Hidden Love (Drama)............
Nov. 4—Girls Will Be Boys (Comedy)........
Nov. 4—It's a Shame to Take the Money (Comedy)..........................
Nov. 9—When Duty Calls (Drama)..........
Nov. 11—Oh! You Pearl (Comedy)............
Nov. 11—Baldy Belmont Wins a Prize (Comedy)
Nov. 16—Out of the Grave (Drama)..........
Nov. 18—Her Secretaries (Comedy)............
Nov. 18—Percy's New Mamma (Comedy)......

DOMINO.

Oct. 23—Heart of Kathleen (2 parts—Drama).2000
Oct. 30—Widow Maloney's Faith (2 parts—Drama) ..........................
Nov. 6—The Judgment (2 parts—Drama)....
Nov. 13—The Ghost (2 parts—Drama)..........

ECLAIR.

Nov. 2—Success with De-Feet (Comedy).....
Nov. 2—Organisms Which Inhabit Stagnant Water (Zoology) ................
Nov. 5—The Reformation of Calliope (2 parts—Drama)..........................
Nov. 9—The Amblystona (Zoology) ..........
Nov. 9—Oh! What a Dream (Comedy).......
Nov. 12—Lady Babble (3 parts—Drama)......
Nov. 16—Unseen Metamorphoses (Scientific)...
Nov 16—Does Max Snore? (Comedy)..........
Nov [illegible]—Partners (2 parts—Drama)..... ....
Nov [illegible]—Oh! You Rubber (Comedy)... .......
Nov [illegible]—Soldiers Drilling in Turkestan (Military) .. ........................

FRONTIER.

Oct. 16—Curing the Doctor (Comedy).........
Oct. 18—The Brute (Drama)..................
Oct. 23—Miss Fairweather Out West (Comedy)
Oct. 25—Jim's Atonement (Drama).............
Oct. 30—When Spirits Walk (Comedy)......
Nov. 1—His Conscience (Drama).............
Nov. 6—Slim Gets the Reward (Comedy).....
Nov. 8—The Girl and the Bandit (Drama)....
Nov. 13—Caught At His Own Game (Comedy)..
Nov. 15—The Bond That Binds (Drama)......
Nov. 20—Slim Becomes a Detective (Com.)...
Nov. 22—The Double Cross (Drama)..........

GAUMONT.

Oct. 21—Dolly's Stratagem (Comedy).........1000
Oct. 22—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 85 (News)...1000
Oct. 23—Tiny Tim Kidnaps a Baby (Comedy)..1000
Oct. 28—The Accusing Eyes (Drama)..........
Oct. 29—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 86 (News)...
Oct. 30—Mexican Pearl Smugglers (Drama)....
Nov. 4—The Interrupted Message (Drama)....
Nov. 5—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 87 (News)....
Nov. 6—Leonce and Poupette Seek a Divorce (Comedy)..........................
Nov. 11—The Bank Messenger (Drama)......
Nov. 12—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 88..........
Nov. 13—The Heart of a Doll (Drama)........
Nov. 18—Leonce and the Milkmaid (Com.)....
Nov. 19—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 89 (News)...
Nov. 20—Oscar Finances a Theater..........

GEM.

Oct. 13—The Surf Maidens (Comedy)..........
Oct. 20—His Double Surprise (Comedy).......
Oct. 20—A Trip Through Tunis and Algiers (Sc.)

GREAT NORTHERN.

Oct. 18—A Husband's Strategy (Drama)......
Oct. 25—A Family Mixup (Comedy)..........
Nov. 1—A Dilemma (Comedy)................
Nov. 1—An Isle in the Baltic Sea (Scenic)..
Nov. 8—A Bogus Hero (Comedy).............

IMP.

Oct. 20—The Big Sister (2 parts—Drama)....2000
Oct. 23—The Anarchist (Drama)..............
Oct. 27—Jane of Moth-Eaten Farm (Drama)..
Oct. 30—His Hour of Triumph (2 parts—Dr.)..
Nov. 3—The Temptation of Jane (2 parts—Drama)..........................
Nov. 6—The Old Parlor (Drama)............
Nov. 10—On Pine Mountain (Drama)...........
Nov. 13—Levi and McGinnis Running for Office (2 parts—Comedy) ............ ....
Nov. 17—Who Killed Olga Carew? (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov 20—The Child Stealers of Paris (Drama)

JOKER.

Nov. 5—Mike and Jake Go Fishing (Comedy)
Nov. 8—Love and Limburger (Comedy).... .
Nov. 12—Mike and Jake Among the Cannibals (Comedy) ........................
Nov. 15—Almost an Actress (Comedy).........
Nov. 19—Mike and Jake at the Beach (Com.)
Nov. 22—The Stinger Stung (Comedy).........

KAY BEE.

Oct. 31—Borrowed Gold (Drama).............
Nov. 7—An Indian's Honor (Drama)..........
Nov. 11—For Mother's Sake (Drama).........
Nov. 14—Efficacy of Prayer (Drama)..........

KEYSTONE.

Oct. 30—Speed Kings Tetzlaff and Earl Cooper (Sports)..........................
Nov. 3—Fatty at San Diego (Comedy).......
Nov. 6—Louis' Sickness at Sea (Comedy)....
Nov. 10—Small Time Act (Comedy)...........
Nov. 10—The Milk We Drink (Educational)....

KOMIC.

Oct. 16—Old Heads and Young Hearts (Com.)
Oct. 23—Caught In His Own Net (Comedy)....
Oct. 28—Deceiving Dad (Comedy)..............
Nov. 6—Poor John (Comedy)................
Nov. 6—Caused By a Clock (Comedy)........
Nov. 13—An Affair of Honor (Comedy)........
Nov. 13—Bobby on Her Mettle (Comedy)......

LUX.

Oct. 24—When a Man's Married (Comedy).. 750
Oct. 24—Terrible Bobby (Comedy).. ........ 235
Oct. 31—Mabel Feigns Indisposition (Comedy). 575
Oct. 31—Percy's Heroism (Comedy).. ....... 410
Nov. 7—The Amateur Detective (Comedy).... 590
Nov. 7—Roman Rivers (Scenic) . ....... 312

MAJESTIC.

Oct. 25—Vengeance (Drama) ................
Oct. 26—The Scenario Writer (Comedy).......
Oct. 28—The Oath of O'Tsuru San (2 parts—Drama)..........................
Nov. 1—(No Release This Date).............
Nov. 2—The Marriage of Niatana (Drama)...
Nov. 4—The Ward of the Senior Class (Drama)
Nov. 8—Levinsky's Holiday (Comedy).........
Nov. 9—The Bravest Man (Drama)...........
Nov. 11—The Rivals (Comedy)................
Nov. 15—The Pitch That Defiles (Drama).....

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

Oct. 13—Mutual Weekly, No. 42 (News)......
Oct. 20—Mutual Weekly, No. 43 (News)......
Oct. 27—Mutual Weekly, No. 44 (News)......
Nov 3—Mutual Weekly, No. 45 (News)......
Nov. 10—Mutual Weekly, No. 46 (News)......
Nov. 17—Mutual Weekly, No. 47 (News)......

NESTOR.

Nov. 5—Western Hearts (Drama)............
Nov. 7—His Wife's Burglar (Comedy).......
Nov. 12—In the End (Drama)................
Nov. 14—Love, Luck and a Paint Brush (Com.)
Nov. 19—The Golden Princess Mine (Drama)..
Nov. 21—An Elephant On His Hands (Comedy)

POWERS.

Nov. 3—The Lesson the Children Taught (Com.)
Nov. 7—The Heart of a Cracksman (Drama)
Nov. 10—From Mine to Mint (Educational)....
Nov. 14—The Cracksman's Reformation (Dr.)..
Nov. 17—The Doctor's Orders (Drama)........
Nov. 17—Cotton Time in Arkansas (Ind.)....
Nov. 21—A Stolen Identity (2 parts—Dr).....

PRINCESS.

Oct. 24—Lobster Salad and Milk (Comedy).....
Oct. 31—Algy's Awful Auto (Comedy)........

RAMO.

Sept. 6—The Black Opal (Drama).............1000
Oct. 1—Cards (Feature—[illegible] parts—Drama).....
Oct. 15—The Current (Feature—[illegible] parts—Dr.).

RELIANCE.

Nov. 1—The Colonel's Oath (Drama)..........
Nov. 3—A Sure Cure (Comedy)..............
Nov. 5—The Dress of Lolita (Drama)........
Nov. 8—Two Men and a Mule—Series 3 (Com.)
Nov. 10—The Power of the Sea (Drama)......
Nov. 12—The Bracelet (Drama)...............
Nov. 15—For Love of a Man (2 parts—Dr.)..
Nov. 17—Two Men and a Mule —Series No. 4 (Comedy)..........................

REX.

Nov. 2—Jewels of Sacrifice (Drama)........
Nov. 6—The Primeval Test (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 9—The Haunted Bride (Comedy-Drama)
Nov. 13—The Missionary Box (Drama).........
Nov. 16—The Blood Brotherhood (Drama)......
Nov. 20—Fires of Fate (2 parts—Drama)......
Nov. 23—His Old-Fashioned Dad (Com.-Dr.)....

THANHOUSER.

Oct. 21—The Mystery of the Haunted Hotel (Drama)..........................
Oct. 24—The Old Folks at Home (Drama).....
Oct. 26—The Silver Tongued Orator (Com.-Dr.)
Oct. 28—How Flimy Won His Sweetheart (Comedy)..........................
Oct. 31—A Twentieth Century Farmer (Drama)
Nov. 2—The Water Cure (Comedy)...........
Nov. 4—The Junior Partner (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 7—Little Brother (Drama)..............
Nov. 9—Looking For Trouble (Com.-Dr.)......
Nov. 11—The Campaign Managers (Com.-Dr.)..
Nov. 14—The Children's Hour (Drama).......

VICTOR.

Oct. 27—The Restless Spirit (3 parts—Drama)
Oct. 31—The Spender (2 parts—Drama)......
Nov. 3—The Ring of Sorrow (Drama)........
Nov. 7—The End of the Road (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 10—The Passerby (2 parts—Drama)......
Nov. 14—His Wife's Child (2 parts—Drama)..
Nov. 17—Forgotten Women (Drama)..........
Nov. 21—Where the Hop Vine Twines (Drama)

FEATURES.

(A. Blinkhorn)

Nov. 10—Kissing Cup (Hepworth—4 parts—Dr.)

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES
Five Thousand - - $1.25
Ten Thousand - - $2.50
Twenty Thousand - - $4.50
Twenty-five Thousand - $5.50
Fifty Thousand - - $6.50
One Hundred Thousand - $8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

SEE AMERICANS FIRST

FLYING A FEATURE FILMS

THE TRAIL OF THE LOST CHORD

Produced by
THOS. RICKETTS

1-3-6 Sheet
Lithographs

1-3-6 Sheet
Lithographs

Release, Monday Nov. 17, 1913

The Tale of the Ticker and A Modern Steel Plant
Release, Thursday, Nov. 20, 1913
Calamity Anne's Dream
Release, Saturday, Nov. 22, 1913

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.
CHICAGO.

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph (Special).

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Patheplay, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Vitagraph, (Special).

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Lubin, Vitagraph (Special).

Saturday— Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Vitagraph, (Special).

BIOGRAPH.

Oct. 27—An Evening With Wilder Spender (Comedy) ........................
Oct. 30—A Barber Cure (Comedy)..................
Oct. 30—Boarders and Bombs (Comedy)........
Nov. 1—The Clock Stopped (Drama)..........
Nov. 3—Diversion (Drama)..................
Nov. 6—On the Hands of the Black Hands (Comedy)...........................
Nov. 6—Where's the Baby (Comedy).........
Nov. 8—Old Coupons (Drama)................
Nov. 10—No Place for Father (Drama).......
Nov. 13—Mrs. Casey's Gorilla (Comedy)......
Nov. 13—Mixed Nuts (Comedy)...............
Nov. 15—His Inspiration (Drama) ...........
Nov. 17—A Cure for Suffragettes (Comedy)...
Nov. 17—He's a Lawyer (Comedy)..... ......
Nov. 20 The Detective's Stratagem (Drama)..
Nov. 22 By Man's Law (2 parts Drama)....

EDISON.

Oct. 24—Silas Marner (Special—2 parts—Dr.)..2000
Oct. 25—A Proposal from Nobody (Being the fourth story of 'Who Will Marry Mary"—Drama) ....................1000
Oct. 27—Across Swiftcurrent Pass On Horseback (Scenic) ...................... 400
Oct. 27—A Hornet's Nest (Comedy)............ 600
Oct. 28—A Daughter of the Wilderness (Dr.)..1000
Oct. 29—The Horrible Example (Comedy)......1000
Oct. 31—Janet of the Dunes (Special—2 parts —Drama) ..........................2000
Nov. 1—A Woodland Paradise (Comedy).......1000
Nov. 3—Wild Wales (Scenic)................ 350
Nov. 3—Porgy's Bouquet (Comedy)........... 650
Nov. 4—Tommy's Stratagem (Comedy)........1000
Nov. 6—Archie and the Bell Boy (Comedy)..1000
Nov. 7—A Face From the Past (Special—2 parts—Drama)........................2000
Nov. 8—Elise the Forester's Daughter (Dr.)..1000
Nov. 10—Camping With the Blackfeet (Manners and Customs) ........................ 500
Nov. 10—Seth's Woodpile (Comedy)............ 500
Nov. 11—The Doctor's Duty (Drama).........1000
Nov. 12—His Nephew's Scheme (Comedy)....1000
Nov. 14—The Phantom Signal (Special—2 parts —Drama) ...........................2000
Nov. 15—Getting a Patient (Comedy).........1000
Nov. 17—Nora's Boarders (Comedy)...........1000
Nov. 18—A Cause for Thankfulness (Drama)..1000
Nov. 19—The Girl in the House Boat (Com.)..1000
Nov. 21—A Good Sport (Special—2 parts—Comedy)...................... ..2000
Nov. 22—A Proposal Deferred "Who Will Marry Mary" No. 5 (Drama).. 1000

ESSANAY.

Oct. 22—Day by Day (Comedy)...............1000
Oct. 23—The Kid Sheriff (Drama)............1000
Oct. 24—The Love Lute of Romany (2 parts—Drama) ...........................2000
Oct. 25—Broncho Billy's Elopement (Drama)..1000
Oct. 28—Thy Will Be Done (Drama)..........1000
Oct. 29—Cupid and Three (Comedy)...........1000
Oct. 30—Greed for Gold (Drama)..............1000
Oct. 31—The Toll of the Marshes (Special—Drama—2 parts) ....................2000
Nov. 1—The Doctor's Duty (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 4—Quicksands of Sin (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 5—Their Wives' Indiscretion (Comedy)..1000
Nov. 6—The Rustler's Step-daughter (Drama).1000
Nov. 7—The Death Weight (Special—2 parts—Drama)...............................2000
Nov. 8—Broncho Billy's Secret (Drama)......1000
Nov. 11—The Man Outside (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 12—The Last Laugh (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 13—The New Schoolmarm of Green River (Drama) ............................1000
Nov. 14—The Boomerang (Special—2 parts—Drama) .............................2000
Nov. 15—Alkali Ike's Auto (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 18—The Lost Chord (Drama)............1000
Nov. 19 The Usual Way (Comedy)...........1000
Nov. 20—The Cowboy Samaritan (Drama)....1000
Nov. 21—The End of the Circle (Special—2 parts Drama) ......................2000
Nov. 22—Broncho Billy's First Arrest (Drama).1000

KALEM.

Oct. 24—Jimmie's Finish (Comedy)...........1000
Oct. 24—Betty Buttin and the Bad Man (Com.)
Oct. 25—A Railroader's Warning (Drama)....1000
Oct. 27—High-born Child and Beggar (Drama).
Oct. 27—Sports in Merrie England (Sports)....
Oct. 29—Motion Picture Dancing Lessons (Special—3 parts—Dances) ...............3000
Oct. 31—The Speed Limit (Comedy)............
Oct. 31—The Granite Industry (Industrial)....
Nov. 1—The President's Special (Drama)......1000
Nov. 3—The Fatal Shot (Special—2 parts—Drama.)..........................2000
Nov. 5—The Man Who Vanished (Special—2 parts—Drama)........................2000
Nov. 7—Tightwad's Present (Comedy).......
Nov. 7—The Marble Industry (Industrial)....
Nov. 8—The Silent Warning (Drama)........1000
Nov. 10—The Runaway Freight (Special—2 parts —Drama) ...........................2000
Nov. 12 Our New Minister (Special—3 parts—Drama) ..............................3000
Nov. 14—The Fickle Freak (Comedy).........
Nov. 14—Hypnotizing Mamie (Comedy)........
Nov. 15—Against Desperate Odds (Drama)....1000
Nov. 17 The Stolen Tapestries (Drama).......1000
Nov. 19 The Express Car Mystery (Special—2 parts—Drama)....................2000
Nov. 21 The Laundress and the Lady (Com.)
Nov. 21 The Dublin Horse Show (Topical)...
Nov. 22 Primitive Man (Drama).............1000

GEORGE KLEINE.

Oct. 14—The Last Minute (Eclipse—Special—2 parts—Drama)........................
Oct. 21—The Wheels of Justice (Cines—Special —2 parts—Drama) ...............
Oct. 28—The Rajah's Diamond Rose (Eclipse—2 parts—Drama—Special) ..........
Nov. 4—Zuma, the Gypsy (Cines—2 parts—Drama—Special) ...................
Nov. 11—The Penalty (Cines—Special—2 parts —Drama)............................
Nov. 18—For the Love of a Toreador (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) ..........
Nov. 25 The Subterranean City; or Trailing the Jewel Thieves (Eclipse—2 parts—Special—Drama) ...................

LUBIN.

Oct. 27—The Man of Him (Drama)............1000
Oct. 28—Making Good (Comedy)................ 400
Oct. 28—Giving Bill a Rest (Comedy).......... 600
Oct. 30—The Rattlesnake (Special—2 parts—Drama) ................................2000
Oct. 31—The Momentous Decision (Drama)....1000
Nov. 1—When the Prison Doors Opened (Dr.).1000
Nov. 3—The Double Chase (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 4—Magic Melody (Drama)..............1000
Nov. 6—The Price of Victory (Special—2 parts—Drama)........................2000
Nov. 7—Cocoanut Industry (Industrial)....... 400
Nov. 7—Getting the Best of Dad (Comedy).. 600
Nov. 8—Hiawanda's Cross (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 10—The Locked Room (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 11—A Miracle of Love (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 13—The Sea Eternal (Special—2 parts—Drama) ..............................2000
Nov. 14—When the Clock Stopped (Drama)....1000
Nov. 15—Whose Is It? (Comedy).............. 400
Nov. 15—Badly Wanted (Comedy)............ 600
Nov. 17—The Two Fathers (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 18—Shadows (Drama)......................1000
Nov. 20 Partners In Crime (Special—3 parts—Dr.) .. . ... ..........3000
Nov. 21 His Chorus Girl Wife (Drama).......1000
Nov. 22—The Harmless One (Drama)..........1000

MELIES.

Oct. 2—Things Japanese (Typical).............1000
Oct. 9—Cast Amid Boomerang Throwers (Dr.).1000
Oct. 16—Scenes of Saigon, Cochin China (Sc.)..1000
Oct. 23—Old and New Tahiti (Drama)........ 850
Oct. 28—Grand Opening of the Schichijio Bridge, Kyoto, Japan (Scenic)............. 150
Oct. 30—A Japanese Wedding (Manners and Customs)..........................
Oct. 30—A Japanese Shoemaker at Work (Typical)...........................
Nov. 6—Sidney and Its Harbor (Travel).....1000

PATHEPLAY.

Oct. 24—Honfleur, an Old Coast Town of Northern France (Scenic)..............
Oct. 24—Breeding Trout by the Million (Indus.).
Oct. 25—Gypsy Love (Drama)..................1000
Oct. 27—Pathe's Weekly No. 62 (News)........
Oct. 28—The Spinners of Speech (Industrial)..
Oct. 29—When Childhood Wins (Drama)........
Oct. 30—Pathe's Weekly No. 63 (News)........
Oct. 30—In Love and War (Special—2 parts—Drama) ..................................
Oct. 31—Love's Deception (Drama)..............
Nov. 1—Too Many Tenants (Comedy)....... ..
Nov. 3—Pathe's Weekly, No. 64 (News)... .
Nov. 4—The Vaudeville Star's Vacation (Com.)
Nov. 5—A Yellow Streak (Drama)....... ..
Nov. 6—Pathe's Weekly, No. 65 (News) .. .
Nov. 6—Race Memories (Special—2 parts—Drama)...............................
Nov. 7—A Phony Alarm (Comedy)....... ...
Nov. 8—Tortoises At Close Range (Nat. Hist.)
Nov. 8—Egyptian Temples (Architecture)
Nov. 8—Ice Cutting in Sweden (Ind.) .
Nov. 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 66 (News). .
Nov. 11—Winter Sports in Switzerland (Sports)
Nov. 11—Siberia's Holy Lake (Travel)........
Nov. 12—Lizard Lore (Zoology)......... ..
Nov. 12—The Coast of California Near Carmel-By-the-Sea (Scenic)........... . .
Nov. 13—Pathe's Weekly, No. 67 (News). .
Nov. 13—A Slave of Satan (Special—2 parts —Drama)... ............ . .
Nov. 14—Butterfly Preservation (Entomology)
Nov. 14—The Slate Industry (Industrial) .
Nov. 15—In the Same Boat (Comedy).
Nov. 17—Pathe's Weekly, No. 68 (News)
Nov. 18—Mr. Gaston from Paris (Comedy)
Nov. 18—Flowers of Japan (Horticulture)
Nov. 19—By Impulse (Com.-Dr.).. .. ..
Nov. 20—Pathe's Weekly, No. 69 (News).....
Nov. 20—The Green-Eyed Monster of Jealousy (Special—3 parts—Drama) . ..
Nov. 21 Natives of Australia (Manners and Customs) .. ............... . .
Nov. 21—The Pond Snail (Zoology).. . .
Nov. 21—In the Spanish Pyrenees (Travel). .
Nov. 22—Kenton's Heir (Drama).......

SELIG.

Oct. 21—Dishwash Dick's Counterfeit (Comedy)
Oct. 21—Surf and Sunset on the Indian Ocean (Scenic) .........................
Oct. 22—Dorothy's Adoption (Drama)..........
Oct. 23—Life for Life (Drama)..............
Oct. 24—Destiny of the Sea (Drama)........
Oct. 27—The Pendulum of Fate (Special—2 parts —drama) ..........................2000
Oct. 28—When May Weds December (Drama)..1000
Oct. 29—Two Sacks of Potatoes (Comedy)... .
Oct. 29—A Muddle in Horse Thieves (Comedy).
Oct. 30—Old Doc Yak and the Artist's Dream (Comedy) ..........................1000
Oct. 31—The Dangling Noose (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 3—Hope (Special—2 parts—Drama) . .. 2000
Nov. 4—Slipping Fingers (Drama)........ ...1000
Nov. 5—The Probationer (Drama)....... .. ..1000
Nov. 6—The Conversion of Mr. Anti (Drama) 1000
Nov. 7—The Schoolmarm's Shooting Match (Comedy).............................
Nov. 7—Views Along the Rhine (Travel).....
Nov. 10—Phantoms (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
Nov. 11—Movin' Pitchers (Comedy)...........1000
Nov. 12—Trying Out No. 707 (Drama)........1000
Nov. 13—The Child of the Prairie (Drama)....1000
Nov. 14—A Cure for Carelessness (Comedy)..
Nov. 14—The Matterhorn, Switzerland (Travel)
Nov. 17—The Escape of Jim Dolan (Special—2 parts—Drama) .......... . 2000
Nov. 18—The Port of Missing Women (Drama)..1000
Nov. 19—The Touch of a Child (Drama 1000
Nov. 20—An Actor's Romance (Drama. 1000
Nov. 21—Outwitted by Billy (Drama 1000

VITAGRAPH.

Oct. 21—Luella's Love Story (Drama).........1000
Oct. 22—Sleuths Unawares (Comedy)..........
Oct. 22—Low Caste Burmese (Topical)........
Oct. 23—The Doctor's Secret (Drama)........1000
Oct. 24—On Their Wedding Eve (Comedy)..1000
Oct. 25—The Next Generation (Special—2 parts —Drama) ..........................2000
Oct. 27—At the Sign of the Lost Angel (Dr.).1000
Oct. 28—In the Shadow (Drama)..............1000
Oct. 29—Father's Hatband (Comedy)...........1000
Oct. 30—Bianca (Drama) .......................1000
Oct. 31—Fatty's Affair of Honor (Comedy)....
Oct. 31—Peggy's Burglar (Comedy)............
Nov 1—The Warmakers (Special—2 parts—Drama) ...............................2000
Nov. 3—The King's Man (Drama)............1000
Nov. 4—The Silver Bachelorhood (Drama)....1000
Nov. 5—The Hoodoo Umbrella (Comedy)....
Nov. 5—Ancient Temples of Karnak (Travel)
Nov. 6—A Broken Melody (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 7—Flaming Hearts (Comedy)...........1000
Nov. 8—The Diver (Special—2 parts—(Dr.)..2000
Nov. 10—Thieves (Drama) ......................1000
Nov. 11—The Price of Thoughtlessness (Drama)
Nov. 11—The Canals of Venice (Travel).......
Nov. 12—An Elopement at Home (Comedy)...1000
Nov. 13—The Right Man (Drama)............1000
Nov. 14—Fanny's Conspiracy (Comedy)........1000
Nov. 15—Jerry's Mother-in-Law (Special—2 parts—Drama) .........................2000
Nov. 17—Tangled Threads (Drama)... .. 1000
Nov. 18—His Last Fight (Drama) ... 1000
Nov. 19—Why I Am Here (Comedy)..
Nov. 19—Farming In Ancient Thebes (Agricult.)
Nov. 20—The Sale of a Heart (Drama . 1000
Nov. 21—The Schemers (Comedy)..............1000
Nov. 22—The Whimsical Threads of Destiny (Special—2 parts—Drama)....... .2000

Greater New York Film Rental Company
116-118 East Fourteenth Street, New York
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

Exhibitors Appreciate Price Reduction
on
"ELECTRA" PINK LABEL CARBONS

Resolution

EXTRACT FROM MINUTES OF
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS ASS'N OF GREATER N. Y.

HELD AT No. 136 THIRD AVENUE, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17th, 1913

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of this Organization the following resolution was unanimously carried:—

WHEREAS, the tariff on carbons was high and unreasonable and, whereas, MR. HUGO REISINGER in making a personal appearance before the tariff committee and inducing them to lower the prices on all carbons, the Exhibitors to derive the benefit of this lowered cost:

BE IT RESOLVED, that a vote of thanks be extended to Mr. Hugo Reisinger.

HUGO REISINGER

11 Broadway New York

STANDARD PROJECTOR CARBON

Over 5,000 Exhibitors the World Over Are Using the World's Best Projection Surface,

MIRROROIDE

The only rough or matte metalized projection surface on earth. MIRROROIDE Screens and Curtains are made in silver white, silver flesh, and silver amber (pale gold), two grades. A, medium. B, heavy, matte, insuring perfect projection, regardless of angle, without haze, glare, eye strain, or that terrible hazy, out-of-focus effect so peculiar to all other screens.

OUR FIVE YEAR GUARANTEE

Your protection. Mirroroide Can't Crack, Peel, Tarnish or Turn Black. It's quality from the cloth (canvas) up. It can be washed with castile soap and water.

LET US SHOW YOU

GET our large free samples, postage paid. Write now.
LET US GIVE YOU THE EVIDENCE OF YOUR OWN EYES.

THE J. H. GENTER CO. Newburgh, N. Y., U. S. A.

---

THE PHOTO CINES CAMERA AND ENSIGN CINE FILM

An entirely new method of film action insuring steady exposure—equipped with Zeiss Tessar Lens (F.3.5).

Send for Circular

ENSIGN CINE FILM

Positive 2¾c. per ft. Negative 3c. per ft.
Perforating, ¼c. per ft. additional.

THE PHOTO CINES CO.
24 East 13th Street, NEW YORK

---

TO THE TRADE

David Horsley

begs to announce that he has secured the American agency for

Lumiere Film

Raw stock, perforated and unperforated, now on hand ready for immediate shipment.

Write for interesting prices.

DAVID HORSLEY
1600 BROADWAY
NEW YORK

---

Helen Gardner

in

"A Princess of Bagdad"

An Original Arabian Nights' Story. Written and Directed by Charles L. Gaskill.
Copyrighted, 1913, by Helen Gardner.

READY FOR DELIVERY

Made at Miss Helen Gardner's Studio at Tappan-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., U. S. A.

Sole Selling Agents—THE HELGAR CORPORATION, No. 472 Fulton Street, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
New York Office, 145 West 45th Street, Suite 813

"Agfa"

MOTION PICTURE FILM
Used by Makers of Quality Films
WRITE FOR PRICES
Sole American Agents
Raw Film Supply Company
15 East 26th Street New York, N. Y.

Photoplay Company, Inc.
19 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The headquarters for all standard projecting machines. Full line of accessories and supplies

Expert Repairing on All Machines
Write us for terms and catalogues.

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR
An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service. Nearly 3,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:
110 Volts, 60 Cycles....................$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles.................... 50.00

Prices for special transformers to control other voltages and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
217 West Illinois Street :: :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

NOTICE TO EXHIBITORS

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of
L. G. MERCER handling a Moving Picture Circus Film, please wire us his address, our expense

GRAPHIC FEATURE FILM CO., 167 West Washington Street, Chicago

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

JUST RELEASED!

TWO RAMOS:
"The Current" 3 Reels "Cards" 3 Reels

ONE ITALA:
"Unmasked" 3 Reels

Our paper will draw the crowds, and the films will electrify your audience.

Booking now for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey

European Feature Film Co.
'Phone, 5307 Bryant 220 West 42d St. Room 1608 Candler Bldg

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 670 | Film Exchanges, U. S. | $3.50 |
| 70 | Manufacturers and Studios, U. S. | 1.00 |
| 34 | Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers | 1.00 |
| 231 | Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries | 3.00 |
| 520 | Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries | 3.00 |

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880.

THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET.
L.C.SMITH CO
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

For $6.50 You can get a One-Sheet Easel Poster Frame Solid oak body covered with 2½-in. wide angle Brass—turned edge, glass front, detachable compoboard back solid brass tilting easel and legs.

Prices on all of our other styles and sizes of Frames in proportion
All prices F. O. B. our only factory, Cleveland, Ohio

(We are originators of this type of frame.)

ASK us to quote you on anything you may need in Lobby Displays, especially Brass Railings, Grills, Easels, Kick Plates, Push Plates, etc. Our Goods Best. Prices Right. We are producers of Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of any description.

New York Agents, Yerkes Sound Effect Co., 42nd St. & Broadway.
Virginia and W. Va. Agents, Theatre Supply Co., Roanoke, Va.

THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO., Inc.
1232 EAST THIRD STREET CLEVELAND, OHIO

---

$55 Flaming Arc Lamp for $20

Would you be interested in buying at a second-hand price a lot or a pair of Brand New Flaming Arc Lamps? 3000 candle power; minimum life per trim, 26 hours.

We have quite a good many of these—our Lord Luminator—on hand due to over-production, and in order to realize will sell them for $20.00 each, f. o. b. factory. The regular selling price is from $40.00 to $55.00.

Wire or write us how many you want, and, if not sold out, we will ship C.O.D. Lamps burn two in series on 110 volts D. C. or A. C.

References: Buick Motor Company, Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, Standard Steel Works Company, Coney Island & Brooklyn R. R. Company, Hamburg-American S. S. Line, Keith's Theatre, and the Tennis and Racquet Club of New York.

Lord Manufacturing Company
Bush Terminal No. 7 Brooklyn, N. Y.

---

STOP! READ! ACT!

"The Secret of the Mine"

IN THREE PARTS

Copyrighted 1913 Length 2750 Feet

Territories selling fast but a few good States are still unsold.

Artistic one, three and six sheets, Heralds and Photographs.

Get busy before it is too late.

VERNON FILM CO.
1134 Vine Street Philadelphia, Penna.
Walnut 3150

---

WHAT IS MACHINE SATISFACTION?

The MOTIOGRAPH

It fulfills eeery requirement of an EXHIBITOR

That is why the MOTIOGRAPH is replacing so many other makes of machines. It gives entire satisfaction, because it is a real built machine, and is guaranteed in every respect, which makes a satisfied customer.

Write us today for a Machine that will stand the heavy grind.

MANUFACTURED AND GUARANTEED BY

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.

Eastern Office:
21 E. 14th St., New York

564-572 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

Western Office:
833 Market St., San Francisco

BRIGHTASDAY CURTAIN PROCESS

SELLS FOR
$7.50
PER SET OF CANS

—and not $2.50 as recently quoted in this magazine. It was a mistake pure and simple and not intended as a cut in price.

While we appreciate the many hundreds of replies and orders accepting our $2.50 rate, we want you to distinctly understand that there is not enough profit in this WONDERFUL CURTAIN EMULSION to pay for this ad—much less allow us to slash the price.

Exhibitors who have ordered or intend to order from the

BUCKEYE FILM EXCHANGE.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.
CALIFORNIA FILM EXCHANGE.
All branches.
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE,
OMAHA, NEB.
GENERAL FILM CO.,
VANCOUVER, B. C.
CANADIAN FILM EXCHANGE,
All branches.

will please note that BRIGHTASDAY sells for $7.50, so kindly do not misunderstand us this time.

Please remember, Mr. Exhibitor, that BRIGHTASDAY CURTAIN EMULSION is the only dope and a guarantee is just as good by one of the above exchanges as from this office.

LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE, Minneapolis, Minn.

---

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE $20 TO $50 PER NIGHT WITH OUR NEW 1913 FIRE-PROOF MACHINE AND LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT

COMPLETE TRAVELING OUTFITS FOR SCHOOLS CHURCHES LODGES AND SMALL TOWNS A SPECIALTY

WE FURNISH YOU WITH FILMS & EVERYTHING AND START YOU INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS WITH A COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL OUTFIT ON A SMALL PAYMENT DOWN THE BALANCE YOU PAY OUT OF YOUR PROFITS WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG

DEAL DIRECT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS

EVERY MACHINE GUARANTEED

Dearborn Novelty Co., Dept. M. P.
537 So. Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ills.

---

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING

WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US!

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
175 N State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

---

MAKE MOVING PICTURES

WITH

Our Ideal Moving Picture Camera

Excellently constructed, beautifully finished, simple to operate, fitted up with a B. & L. Zeiss Tessar Lens, I. C., F 3-5, one of the best and fastest lenses in the market; holds 200 feet stock.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue

PRICE COMPLETE $75.00

Motion Picture Camera Co., Inc.
Dept. A 5 West 14th Street, New York

---

AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS

are acknowledged by the leading expert film producers to be the finest and most accurate Cameras in the world.

We also manufacture a complete line of Studio and Dark Room Equipment.

Distributers for Eastman Raw Film

Send for Catalogues

American Cinematograph Co.
617-631 W. Jackson Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

---

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St. :: CHICAGO, ILL.

---

Good Light Means Big Crowds

The Sandow Moving Picture Electric Light Plant gives perfect light any time you want it, at 1-10 the cost of public service. Light enough to ship as baggage. Carry your own electric lights. Catalog 201 tells you how and how much. Want it?

Detroit Motor Car Supply Company, Detroit, Michigan

---

In Answering Advertisements Please Mention
The Moving Picture World

---

During September

37 Motion Picture Theatres

in twenty-two cities installed Wurlitzer Music. Why don't you? It pays

20 BRANCHES WURLITZER 20 BRANCHES
CINCINNATI

AUTOMATIC MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

SIMPLICITY • RELIABILITY • ENDURANCE
SEEBURG

PIANOS AND ORCHESTRIONS

FOR THE MOVING PICTURE THEATRE

The "Seeburg Idea" in connection with automatic pianos and orchestrions means "Simplicity," "Reliability" and "Endurance," giving maximum merit at a minimum price. For further particulars write

J. P. Seeburg Piano Co.
MANUFACTURERS

900-902-904 Republic Bldg., Chicago

Only Three Prints Left

IN THE TOILS OF THE DEVIL

Copyrighted 1913 BRAND NEW 2500 feet each

Made by the famous MILANO COMPANY of Italy.

To close out immediately, will give rights for several States not already sold with each copy.

1-3-6 sheets and photos.

A FEATURE BARGAIN

WRITE OR WIRE AT ONCE

International Film Traders
5 West 14th St. Film Importers and Dealers New York

Quality* and *Service

Our aim in the manufacture of

Radium Gold Fibre Screens

has always been to maintain the highest degree of QUALITY possible.

Our SERVICE department was created especially to enable users of our screens to secure best results possible.

WE ARE NOT SATISFIED UNTIL YOU ARE

Write our nearest office about your screen trouble or requirements.

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Company
105 N. Main Street, Sole Manufacturers, ST. LOUIS, MO.

G. H. CALLAGHAN, 1405 Broadway, New York
GEORGE BRECK, 70 Turk St., San Francisco, Cal.
DISTRIBUTORS

THE WONDERFUL

UNAPHONE

is the greatest all around attraction for a moving picture theatre. It is the most remarkable musical novelty instrument ever made. Played from piano keyboard, easy to operate and moderate in cost. Write today for descriptive catalogue "F."

J. C. DEAGAN, Deagan Building
1776 Berteau Ave. CHICAGO, U. S. A.

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT

STAFFORD Chairs excel all others.

Heavy Five Ply seats and backs.

The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO

We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG [illegible]

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR SALE 50 FEATURES
First Class Condition

Elegant Advertising Matter. 1000 COMMERCIALS

VERY CHEAP

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS
5 WEST 14th STREET, NEW YORK

OPERA CHAIRS

Latest and Best in Seats

SEND FOR OUR PRICES BEFORE BUYING

BENNETT SEATING CO
127 EAST PEARL ST
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Steel standards will not break

STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS

AGENCIES:

Fletcher W. Dickerman,
61 North Seventh St.,
Newark, N. J.

California Seating Co.,
1110 Van Nuys Bldg.,
Los Angeles, Cal.

H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave. Seattle, Wash.

Feidner-Wagner Co.
508 Marshall Bldg.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

L-B Mfg. Co.,
S. E. Cor. 6th & Vine Sts., Phila., Pa.

The Wisconsin Seating Company
New London, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theaters and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use. Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich. New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburg: 318 Bissell Blk. Philadelphia: 1943 Market St. Nashville, Tenn.: 315 No. 4th Ave.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The A. H. Andrews Co.

Branches in all Leading Cities

New York Office, 1165 Broadway.
Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, [illegible] Mission St.

THE "STANDARDIZED" THEATRE CHAIRS

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

Don't fail to visit our complete New York showroom, 101-103 4th Ave.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St.,
Cincinnati, O.
Established 1882

A G-E Rectifier

will make your pictures more brilliant and at the same time reduce the cost of electric current.

General Electric Company
General Office Schenectady, N. Y.

4488

LOOK HERE

Mr. Proprietor and Manager. Stop that broken slide expense at once, by ordering some Never Break Slides. Just send for circular.

NEVER BREAK SLIDE COMPANY, Omaha, Nebr.

WHAT FILM DO YOU DESIRE?

I am in a position to furnish any film, old or new, at lowest prices. Address,

B. SPITZ, 108 WEST 116th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

Mr. Commercial Photographer, for best work and rates, send to

The Chicago Feature Film Co.
1408-22 Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Of All The Cameras Exhibited

At The Recent Kinema-Art Exposition N. Y.

PATHE SELECTED THE "JUNIOR CAMERA"

For Their Own High Class Film Work

YOU ARE ENTERTAINING GREAT RISK BUYING GOODS FROM MUSHROOM MFGS. BUILDING CAMERAS OVER NIGHT

HERE IS PROOF THAT MY JUNIOR CAMERA IS GOOD

Mr Manager, Traveller, Scientist Sportsman -

BUY THE JUNIOR CAMERA

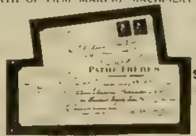
$50,000 WORTH OF FILM MAKING MACHINERY IN STOCK

Established 1896

30 YEARS A MECHANIC

Made CAMERAS ever since

Own 30 PATENTS



PATHE FRERES

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

NEW YORK

Sargent's Photoplay Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

EPES WINTHROP SARGENT
Box 70, Madison Square Station, NEW YORK CITY

The Most Marvelous Thing in States-Rights History---the Way Florence Roberts "SAPHO" Prices Held Up!

Not one owner of a "SAPHO" state right "cut prices" to get business. With all the competition, prices on the FLORENCE ROBERTS (American) VERSION OF "SAPHO" held up! Considering that competition, there must be an interesting reason for the way our "SAPHO" rates held. This is the reason: A SUPERIOR PICTURE. The American exhibitor will not use an inferior film when just a little more money means a SUPERIOR one. The great Florence Roberts "SAPHO" is recognized everywhere as the perfectly produced "SAPHO," the popular "SAPHO," with a popular American star and a popular American cast. The big "legitimate" theaters have used it for full weeks as a regular "show" and this has also recommended it as YOUR "SAPHO." When will you HAVE IT?

There Are No Favorites Like New Majestic Favorites, and a Look at These Reels Proves It!

Billy Garwood, Lamar Johnstone, Francelia Billington, Billie West, Vera Sisson, Ernest Joy, Howard Davies, Victory Bateman—there are no screen favorites like them, combined in one grand company, that is! The latest three Majestics will make you yell your head off for New Majestic films and New Majestic favorites. They are "THE BRAVEST MAN," a logical story of cowboy life, released Sunday, November 9th; then "THE RIVALS," a comedy subject that's 'immense," released Tuesday, November 11th; and "THE PITCH THAT DEFILES," a drama with genuine meaning, released Saturday, November 15th. And sliding from one-reelers to two-reelers, did you get our Jap-American acted two reeler, "THE OATH OF O'TSURU SAN," released a little while ago? Why not let us prove that our two-reelers are as good as our "singles"?

"NEW MAJESTIC"

There Are No Favorites Like New Majestic Favorites

Business Offices: New Rochelle, N. Y. All-Year-Round Studios; Brooklyn Heights, Los Angeles, Cal.

THE BRAVEST MAN

Selig

The Standard Strength, the Varied Interest and the Unimpaired Excellence of the Selig General Service will not be in the Least Affected Adversely by "Special" Releases. Particular Attention is Invited to the Tonicity, Variety and Quality of the Current Service.

---

"THE ESCAPE OF JIM DOLAN"

A play, big, vivid and vital, instinct with the breath and virility of the open West—is one of the latest words in the silent drama that tells a story which may be read as it runs. Jim Dolan is an ideal type of Westerner, who incurs the hatred of a devilish deputy and suffers in consequence as the victim of circumstantial or "planted" evidence. His escape from prison, his wild ride on relays of horses, his capture by Apache Indians, who bind him to the tail of a wild horse, and his ingenious escape, breathing through his rifle barrel by lying at the bottom of the ford—are some of the big moments of this wonderful series of hair-breadth escapes.

IN TWO REELS. RELEASED NOVEMBER 17th

---

November 18th "THE PORT OF MISSING WOMEN"

A clever playlet, illustrates a spirited sermon, without cant, on one of the most vexing social problems of the time. It is bright, cheerful and picturesque.

November 19th "THE TOUCH OF A CHILD"

A young mother with a gift for song allows vanity to estrange her husband, and leaves her home for the stage. How she is brought back again, is the interesting detail of this play.

November 20th "AN ACTOR'S ROMANCE"

An actor out of work, and unhappily hungry, resourceful in the art of make-up, answers an advertisement to become a butler in a wealthy family. Eventually the daughter of the house falls in love with him, and he lives easily every after.

November 21st "OUTWITTED BY BILLY"

Unnatural grand-parents conspire to wreck the life of the mother of the child left in their charge. How innocent youth outwits unscrupulous old age makes a thrilling story that moves the emotions mightily.

SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

BRANCH OFFICES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
EXECUTIVE OFFICES 20 E. RANDOLPH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL., U.S.A.

The Big Features of

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6A

Which Accomplish Perfect Projection

UNLESS your operator has the proper materials to work with, he cannot accomplish perfect results.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6A gives him the confidence of knowledge which enables him to do his best. He knows that by means of the film is always kept in motion, the lower loop is maintained automatically and dark screens are impossible.

Our Loop Setter

Our Intermittent Movement—

many times stronger than any other make; longer period of picture on screen is obtained; films are better protected and quicker of motion; and greater definition and clearer pictures are accomplished.

THESE FEATURES ARE EXCLUSIVE

Catalogue G gives full details.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
88-90 Gold Street :: :: New York City
The Leading Makers of Motion Picture Machines

Vol. 18, No. 8 November 22, 1913 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Thor, Lord of the Jungle" (Selig).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

For exclusive first-run use for a full year by iron-clad contract Ask for the contract! Clamor for the contract! INSIST ON the contract! It is all-protective.

Make Your Exchange Give You The "Thanhouser 'Big' Productions"

"Thanhouser 'Big' Productions"

"One a month, on the FIRST of the month," are FOUR REEL films that are BIG in story, setting and cast. Always released on the first day of the month and always yours on the first day of the month, if you get that contract now.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| ALWAYS ON THE "FIRST" | JANUARYFEBRUARYMARCHAPRILMAYJUNE | 1 | JULYAUGUSTSEPTEMBEROCTOBERNOVEMBERDECEMBER | ALWAYS ON THE "FIRST" |

December 1. Maude Fealy in "THE LEGEND OF PROVENCE"

---

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

Sunday, November 16

"HE COULDN'T LOSE"

He had to, in order to win a fortune under the terms of an odd will—but he couldn't!

Tuesday, November 18

"BABY'S JOY RIDE"

It was the tonneau of her papa's car, but papa didn't know it, or mamma either, so there was great confusion in the household.

Friday, November 21

"THE CLOTHES LINE QUARREL"

It "split" the two families who had lived 'longside each other for many friendly years, and they "wouldn't talk" until their very youngest members brought about peace.

Thanhouser Stars! Thanhouser Quality

Thanhouser Features!

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

ROBIN TC HOOD

FIVE-A-WEEK

Essanay

RELEASED FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21st! RELEASED FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21st!

"THE END OF THE CIRCLE"

(IN TWO PARTS)

A TRULY HEART INTEREST WESTERN DRAMA WITH MANY THRILLING AND EXCITING SITUATIONS. THE STORY IS UNIQUE AND INTERESTING THROUGHOUT. THE PHOTOGRAPHY IS EXCELLENT. HERALDS AND POSTERS NOW READY.

Released Tuesday, November 18th.

"THE LOST CHORD"

A magnificently beautiful drama of love and art. Richard C. Travers, Lillian Drew and Bryant Washburn featured.

---

Released Wednesday, November 19th.

"THE USUAL WAY"

A splendid comedy of laughs. There are enough amusing situations in this to warrant good feature advertising.

---

Released Thursday, November 20th.

"THE COWBOY SAMARITAN"

A drama of the West depicting the love of a cowboy for a child. Photography and portrayal excellent.

---

Released Saturday, November 22nd.

"BRONCHO BILLY'S FIRST ARREST"

This feature "BRONCHO BILLY" drama is filled with thrilling situations. Mr. G. M. ANDERSON featured.

COMING FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th! COMING FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th!

"THE BRAND OF EVIL"

(IN TWO PARTS)

A DRAMA OF EAST INDIA THAT WILL MAKE THE CHILLS CREEP UP AND DOWN YOUR SPINE. A TOURIST STEALS THE "EYE" OF THE SACRED GOD AND IS FOLLOWED TO AMERICA BY A REVENGEFUL NATIVE. IT'S EXCITING, NERVE-RACKING AND THRILLING. THOMAS COMMERFORD, E. H. CALVERT, RUTH STONEHOUSE AND RICHARD C. TRAVERS AT THEIR BEST. HERALDS AND POSTERS ARE NOW READY.

OUR POSTERS ARE DISTINCTIVE. They will boom your business. Lithographs are in full four colors, 35c each. You can order these from your exchange or direct from Essanay Film Mfg. Co., 521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of ESSANAY players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the PLAYERS' PHOTO CO., 177 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

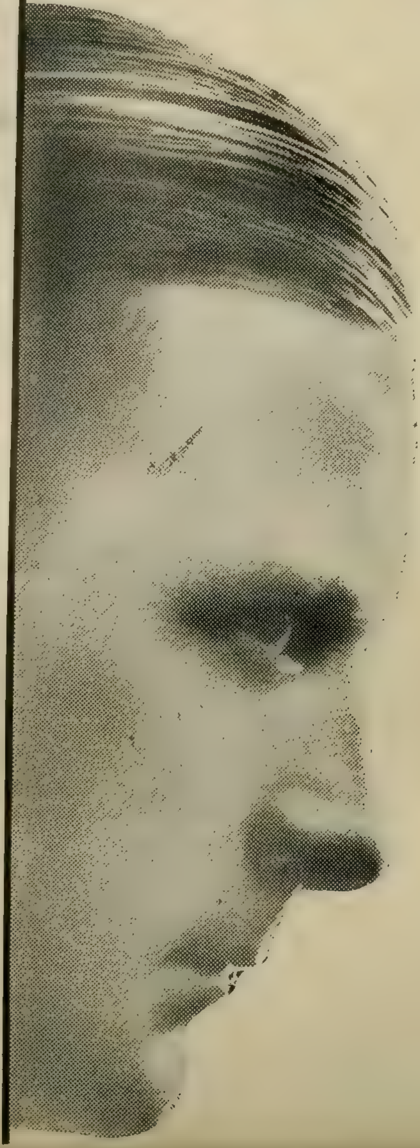
Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill.
Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona



Coming! UNIVERSAL FILMS Coming!

King Baggot's greatest work will startle the people of the whole world when he is seen in this sensation!

"ABSINTHE"

(Approx. 3500 feet in length)

King Baggot, directed by Herbert Brenon and supported by Miss Leah Baird—the very same combination that gave you "Ivanhoe"—will fairly electrify the moving picture "fans" of the world when "Absinthe" is released. It is without doubt the most powerful piece of work Mr. Baggot has ever done, far surpassing his still-talked-of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." "Absinthe" is intensely gripping and true to life. This is the picture which caused Mr. Baggot to actually live among the absinthe drinkers of Paris for weeks to get "local color." He got it! And you'll see it in "Absinthe." It is too big for three reels and will be approximately 3500 feet in length.

Watch for further particulars.

Five More Tremendous 3-Reelers Coming!

Warren Kerrigan in "Rory of the Bogs"

Supported by Jessalyn Van Trump and a tremendous company.

Francis Ford in "The Bride of Mystery"

With Grace Cunard in the title role. A powerful melodrama.

The Smalleys in "A Poor Jew's Generosity"

Totally different from any Christmas film you ever saw!

Eclair All Star Cast in "Over the Cliffs"

The best feature the American-Eclair Company ever made!

David Hartford in "Under the Black Flag"

With Cleo Madison. This is the first "Gold Seal" release.

Wanted—Comedy Directors!

We are going to make more comedies and we want the best available directors to make them; directors who can stage comedies fully as good as our already famous "Joker" films. None but the very best need take the trouble to apply. All communications strictly confidential.

Wanted—Comedy Scenarios!

We will pay the highest price in the world for comedy scenarios, but they must contain real comedy and be worthy of the highest price in the world. Address your envelope "Comedy Scenario Dept., Universal Film Mfg. Co., Hollywood, California." Jot down that address right now!

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

Carl Laemmle, President

"The Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

Here's ANOTHER NEW

ON TUESDAY, DEC. 2nd, and every Tuesday thereafter, "Gold Seal" films will take the place of the regular Tuesday

---

UNIVERSAL FILM MAN

CARL LAEMMLE, President MECCA BUILDING, BROADWAY AT

WANTED

The name and address of every exhibitor who is not receiving our weekly publication, THE UNIVERSAL WEEKLY. No matter what films you are using we want you to keep posted about that Universal Program.

UNIVERSAL BRAND!

"101-Bison" on that Universal Program. This has no effect whatsoever on the Saturday "101 Bison." The first "Gold Seal" release will be a three-reel melodramatic masterpiece, "Under the Black Flag." It is every bit as wonderful as "Captain Kidd." See that you get it! Posters that will pack your house!

WE FULLY EXPECT that "Gold Seal" features will establish themselves with the public almost instantly—in fact there is every reason why they should equal the marvelous record that our "Joker" films have made. Every "Gold Seal" film will be lavish and spectacular, and will be produced as only the largest and best film concern in the world can produce them.

OUR REASON for discontinuing the Tuesday "101 Bison" and substituting the "Gold Seal" brand is that our two "101-Bisons" per week have been confusing to the theatre-going public. They have grown to expect western, cowboy, Indian or military pictures every time they see a "101-Bison" advertised, when, as a matter of fact, we have released such films as "Robinson Crusoe" and similar subjects under that brand.

EXHIBITORS and exchanges have asked us to avoid this confusion, and the result is the new "Gold Seal" brand. Under this brand we will release nothing but great big spectacular productions, and no picture will be branded as a "Gold Seal" unless it is EXTRAORDINARY. The first "Gold Seal" release will be a three-reel feature entitled "Under the Black Flag." It is one of our pirate series of which "Captain Kidd" was the first — and it is every bit as strong as "Captain Kidd." The release date will be Tuesday, Dec. 2nd.

UFACTURING COMPANY

48th STREET, NEW YORK "Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

If you are not getting THE UNIVERSAL WEEKLY, fill in this coupon or send us the information on a postal card and we will put you on our FREE mailing list for three months. DON'T NEGLECT THIS. Do it THIS VERY MINUTE!

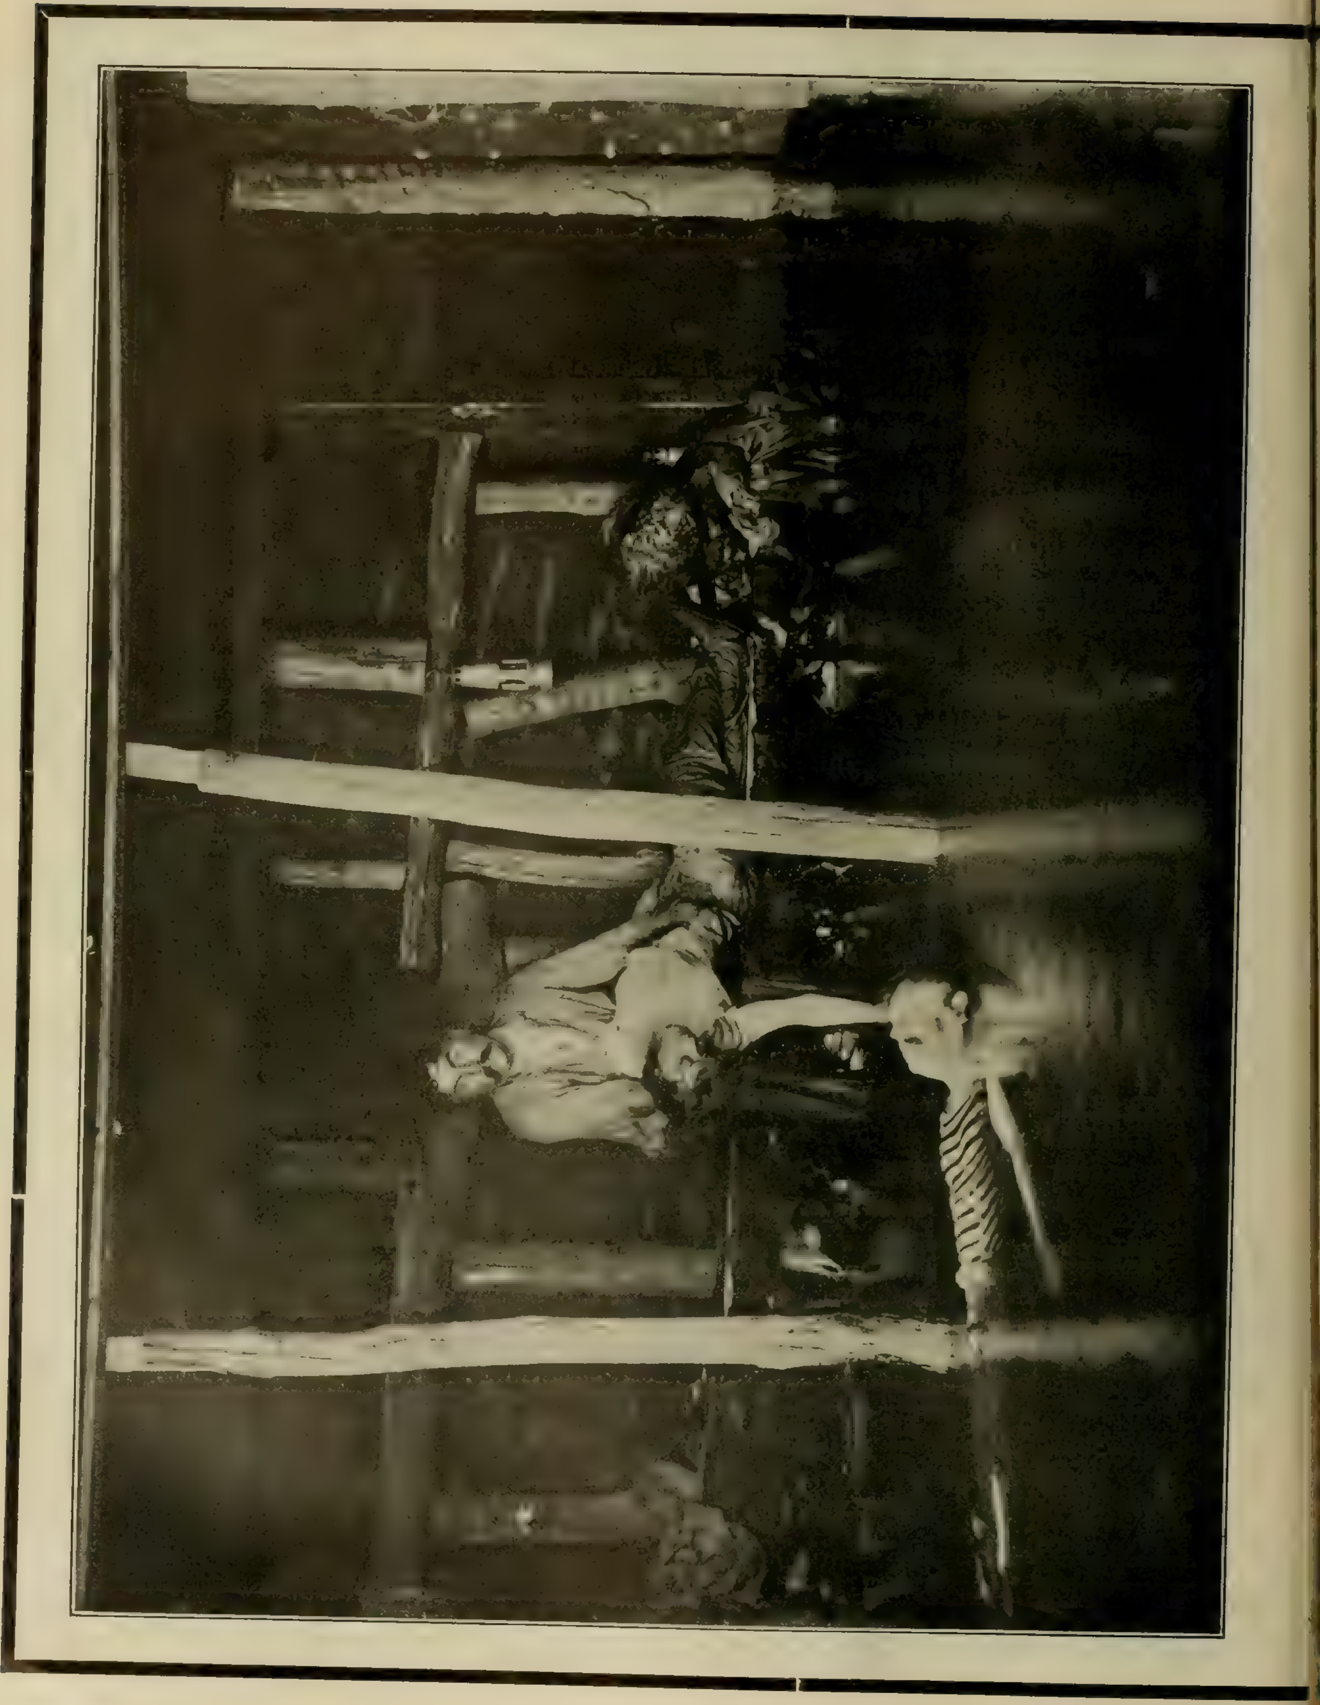
☞

(Name of Theatre) ____________________

(Proprietor) ____________________

(Street Address) ____________________

(City) __________ (State) __________



WATCH! WATCH!

IN SIX REELS COMING IN SIX REELS

GERMINAL

BY EMILE ZOLA

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

"LEAH KLESCHNA"
Dec. 10.

DANIEL F

Presents the interna

"LEAH KL

the drama of a

Judge R. B. Lindsey, the famous Presiding Justice of the Juvenile Court at Denver, declares that human nature is the same in every breast and that if the right appeal is made to people who go astray, there is always a chance to lead them into the light. This theory is advocated in "Leah Kleschna," the story of a woman's redemption.

"Leah Kleschna" is sure to be one of the most important and emphatic successes in the history of the motion picture, everywhere and all the time.

By the Noted
C. M. S.

with the distinguished

CARLOTTA

In Motion
RELEASED

It is human nature of the highest kind to feel keenly for those who go wrong. "Leah Kleschna" is absorbingly interesting in its vast appeal, and its directness, simplicity and power are irresistible. The moral is strong, and touches a responsive and sympathetic chord in the heart of all humanity.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
TIMES BUILDING
NEW YORK

"LEAH KLESCHNA"
Dec. 10.

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

ROHMAN

tionally famous play

ESCHNA"

woman's regeneration

"Leah Kleschna" will make a profound impression on the screen. It ascends far above the plane of the drama that merely interests and thrills. It proves that the soul of good in one who has almost involuntarily been led into a career of crime can be reached and the better nature awakened.

"Leah Kleschna" is polite melodrama with a sharply defined psychological undercurrent, and contains a great dramatic moral.

ramatist
IcCLELLAN,

merican Actress

NILLSON

Carlotta Nillson's Past Successes:

"Diana Dobson,"
"Letty,"
"Hedda Gabler,"
"This Woman and That Man,"
"The Three of Us."

ictures.
ECEMBER 10th.

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRES.
DANIEL FROHMAN
MANAGING DIRECTOR

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

A Racing Melodrama

Kissing Cup

FOUR PARTS

A jockey is kidnapped, a pursuit in a racing automobile and a spectacular flight in an aeroplane bring the jockey to the track in time to ride home a winner. A love story helps to make this a feature

150 Scenes and each one a Thriller

Wm. Fox has booked
KISSING CUP
for his entire circuit

Advertising Matter includes 1, 3 and 6 sheet Booklets, Lobby Photos, Lithographs, Heralds, Newspaper Cuts

CHARLES DICKENS'

David Copperfield

Produced by Hepworth's, London, under the personal direction of Thomas J. Bentley, the world's greatest authority on the works of Dickens

SEVEN PARTS

Valuable Territory Still Unsold

Wm. Fox has booked
DAVID COPPERFIELD
for his entire circuit

COMING
Another Hepworth's Masterpiece
Oliver Goldsmith's
"The Vicar of Wakefield"
3 Parts

A. BLINKHORN

Sole American and Canadian Agent

Suite 1903
World's Tower Building
110 WEST 40th STREET
NEW YORK

COMING
General Film Agency's (London)
"The Lure of a Woman"
3 Parts

I HELP YOU HELP THE EXHIBITOR

This Stunning 6-Sheet

is a 5-color reproduction of an elaborate oil painting executed by BEN WELLS, the foremost poster artist in America. This 6-sheet and a striking 3-sheet and two styles of 1-sheets (also designed by Mr. Wells himself) are to advertise our first "Gold Seal" release, "Under the Black Flag," a 3-reel pirate production by Otis Turner. This remarkably unique paper may be secured by your exchange from the

MORGAN LITHOGRAPH CO., CLEVELAND, O.

Get your paper immediately and begin boosting this feature at once. It will be released Tuesday, December 2nd.

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.
CARL LAEMMLE, President
Mecca Bldg., Broadway at 48th St., New York, N. Y.

Fortune

Fortune favored Bill, the man who fished with bare hooks and caught a bag of money. Bill is the great exception. Exceptions are interesting—that's why we follow the fortunes of Bill.

Bill hit upon the happy idea of investing his money in a motion picture show. He went from city to city, looking over every picture house that was advertised for sale. Proprietors of these houses invariably assured Bill that their operating expenses were little—that they were using a low grade service which was "plenty good enough and cost scarcely anything." But none of these houses was doing a profitable business, so Bill went home and built a fine new theatre of his own. He spared nothing in showy decorations, upholstered seats and fine equipments. But when it came to selecting film service, Bill was once more at sea. He fell back on his old habit of studying the advertisements. An inexperienced man, even though he uses the brains God gave him, can be misled, and so was Bill.

He put on a "sensational" program, bolstered up with a "feature" that had cost more money to advertise than to manufacture.

Bill's fishing had made him famous, and his house was packed the first night with curious townfolk. The show, of course, was bad, and the people openly expressed their disgust and resolved never to come back again. Bill had about given up to despair when a man, attracted by the tremendous crowd pouring out, (which he mistook for evidence of great success) bought Bill out for ten times his investment. Same old Bill.

Moral—

The houses showing high-grade pictures are making money, and are seldom, if ever, advertised for sale. A low-grade service is a false economy, and will never fool the "fans," no matter how fine the theatre and its equipments. Bill's experience should be a warning—not a temptation.

General Film service is the exhibitor's only guarantee of success. It furnishes him with the one thing the people are willing and anxious to spend their money on over and over again:—Well balanced programs of the finest pictures that are now, or ever have been marketed. Selections from the output of the ten great manufacturers of the world.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY (Inc.)
200 Fifth Avenue New York

FORTUNE

The Quality of Mercy

Selig. Two Reels. Released November 24th.

Two young men from the city, visiting a farm, find Emma Leighton, niece of the farmer, very lonely and discontented.

Unfortunately, Harvey Manning is a clubman and not of the best type. Paul Mason, his friend, knows this and remonstrates with him for trifling with the affections of an innocent girl.

Harvey returns to the city and succeeds in inducing Emma to go to his home with him. Here, in order to allay her scruples, he asks Paul to arrange to have someone resembling a preacher perform a sham marriage ceremony.

Paul, however, has secured a genuine preacher, unbeknown to Harvey.

Shortly afterward, Harvey notifies her that she is not his wife and is no longer wanted. At the same time she learns that both he and Paul have been killed in an automobile accident.

Returning to the country with her baby, she finds herself ostracised.

Dr. Hartley, her old sweetheart, stands by her and asks her to marry him. After a while she consents, and she is astonished to find the minister called to marry them the same who had performed the former ceremony. Thus is lifted the blight on the birthright of her son.

Subterranean City

Kline-Eclipse. Two Reels. Released November 25th.

The central theme of this great European crook story centers about a wealthy and resourceful gang of jewel thieves of Paris, who build a "Subterranean City" wherein their ill-gotten loot is stored and where unique machines are shown actually manufacturing jewelry.

One of the odd props used in this picture is a gigantic hydraulic press, with which the chemicals constituting diamonds are compressed into large stones.

The thrilling escape of "Arizona Bill" from this great press, where he had been placed to die a horrible death, marks a situation both unique and powerful.

The Plot of India's Hillmen

Kalem. Two Reels. Released November 26th.

Lieutenant Maxam; connected with a British Command in India, has invented a new form of high explosive. Count Savanoff, a Russian spy in league with a band of Indian Hillmen, succeeds in stealing the formula and abducting the Lieutenant. His faithful servant follows.

Plotting to entice the British troops to death, Savanoff and the Hillmen place the deadly explosive among the rocks in a mountain pass through which they must come. A fierce battle ensues and the Hillmen, forgetting the deadly trap, cross over the spot where the explosive is buried. A tremendous upheaval occurs, wiping out the Hillmen almost to the last man. Faithful Zurah leads the troops to Maxam's prison and the young Lieutenant is released.

A Waif of the Desert

Lubin. Two Reels. Released November 27th.

Chispa Munro and Zeke Stevens, sole survivors of a desert tragedy in which a party of twenty-four had perished of the fever, live in a lumber camp where Zeke has become part owner.

Her own companion is Injun Jack, who has faithfully guarded her from childhood. Zeke finds that a fierce love has grown up in his heart for Chispa.

Another party arriving at the camp consists of Mrs. Osborn and her daughter Grace, who have come as guests of Grace's fiance, Harry Sinclair.

Complications arise when Chispa becomes interested in young Sinclair.

Sinclair is wounded during an interview wth Zeke, and Zeke is arrested, but later freed. Matters clear up partially when Sinclair tells Zeke that he does not love Chispa, but intends to marry Grace.

Chispa, who overhears this, is overcome with grief, and disappears. After a search, she is found, and both pairs of lovers are reunited.

The Faithless Friend

Pathe. Two Reels. Released November 27th.

With fearless devotion, Harold is nursing his friend Fred through an attack of smallpox in a small mining camp when he himself contracts the malady.

While ill, a letter comes to Harold from his sweetheart, telling him to come home as she has inherited a large sum of money.

Fred, seeing the letter, abandons the faithful Harold and, going East, tells Ruth that Harold is dead.

After her first grief is over he woos and weds her. Harold, in the meantime, recovers and joins some wandering Indians. Sick of humanity because of his friend's desertion, he becomes a renegade and an adopted Indian.

In an attack on a wagon train, a white man is killed, and he discovers in the corpse his faithless friend Fred. A white woman brought captive to him proves to be Ruth.

He tells her of her husband's treachery and her old love for him is renewed. They escape from the Indians and start life anew.

The Brand of Evil

Essanay. Two Reels. Released November 28th.

Haunted for twenty years by fear of the vengeance of the Orient, Morton, who has stolen the jewelled eye of an idol in the wilds of India, finds that at last the Hindoos have found him out.

His daughter Judith, alone in a room in her home, sees the "dark man" and is stunned with fear.

A little later she disappears, and the same day the hand that had plucked the eye from the idol turns black.

Morton, broken under the strain, returns the eye to the Hindoos, and his daughter reappears, but under the hypnotic influence of a Hindoo, Karino.

Karino sends the eye back to India, but remains to wreak further vengeance on Morton. Karino is killed in a hand-to-hand struggle. Judith's mind returns and Morton's hand regains its normal color.

The Gunmaker of Moscow

Edison. Two Reels. Released November 28th.

Coveting the wealth of his ward, the beautiful Rosalind Valdai, Olga, Duke of Tula, plans to force her to marry him.

Rosalind, admired by all the young noblemen of the Court of Peter the Great, is especially courted by the young Count Conrad Damonoff.

She is in love with Ruric Nevel, the gunmaker of Moscow.

Olga plans to get Count Damonoff out of the way, so that he, as the nearest relation, will inherit his fortune. Failing in his attempts to remove both Damonoff and Ruric, he is also foiled in his final effort to force Rosalind to marry him, by the timely aid of Valdimir, a mysterious monk who had been befriended by Ruric and later, throwing off his hood, discloses himself as Peter, Czar of All the Russias.

He banishes the astonished Duke and bestows on the happy Ruric the title of Duke of Tula and the hand of Rosalind Valdi.

The Golden Pathway

Vitagraph. Two Reels. Released November 29th.

Disinherited because he had married an artist's model, James Evans and his young wife decide to comply with the conditions of the will, which states that the nephew shall inherit the fortune and his wife get a large allowance if they secure a divorce.

Unable to stand the separation, they decide love is better than riches.

They are rewarded for their honesty and sincerity by finding that the millionaire uncle has left a later will, leaving all the vast fortune to the nephew if at the end of six months he proves that his love for his wife is greater than his fondness for riches.

General Film Company (Inc.)

200 Fifth Avenue, New York

Kleine Condensers Cannot Discolor

Made of Optical Glass

We Have Just Received a New Consignment of

KLEINE CONDENSERS

Made of optical glass. No longer need you be troubled with cheap condensers made of common, moulded glass. A clean, new stock of especially made Kleine condensers solves the problem of a sharp, clear picture.

Ordinary condensers are made of common glass moulded. A MOULDED glass cannot have an exact spherical surface—hence the light is REFRACTED and does not properly concentrate.

KLEINE CONDENSERS ARE THE ONLY CONDENSERS MADE OF GROUND OPTICAL GLASS.

Kleine condensers cannot discolor. Remember that. It is a vital and important thought in buying condensers.

PRICES

(White Label)

(Best grade imported optical glass, absolutely colorless and highly annealed.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 4½ | in. diameter, 5½—6½—7½—8½—9½ inch focus - | Price $1.25 |
| 5 | in. diameter, 7½—9—10—12 inch focus - - - | Price 1.75 |
| 6 | in. diameter, 9—10—12 inch focus - - - - | Price 2.25 |

KLEINE OPTICAL COMPANY

GEORGE KLEINE, President 166 N. STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

FIRST OF THE NEW CELIO RELEASES
KLEINE-CELIO
"VENOMOUS TONGUES"

(IN TWO PARTS)

(Copyright, 1913, by George Kleine)

For Release Tuesday, December 2, 1913

Distinctly a story of a world-old evil—Gossip! Featuring Miss Francesca Bertini, that talented and beautiful Italian actress, in a story prettily balanced and essentially human, you will delight in this, the initial offering of the new Celio studios.

Charles Raleigh and Clara Burton loved each other in secret, but, believing each other indifferent, both maintained silence. In time Clara married Conway, a dear friend of Charles, and, in the course of events, Charles came to pay the newly married couple a lengthy visit.

Then the gossiping tongues of Clara's friends wagged with the tales of the early affection of Charles and Clara. These vicious stories, coming to the attention of Conway, sent that gentleman scurrying to the club to invite the husband of the scandal-monger to fight!

Clara knew his intention to borrow Charles' pistols and ask him to serve as second. Charles, who had taken up private lodgings when the scandal broke, was, therefore, electrified by a visit from Clara, who came to plead with him to use his influence to prevent the duel. Then suddenly a servant announced Conway. The panic-stricken couple did what you and I might do under the same circumstances. Charles beckoned her hastily to his bedroom to hide. Conway affectionately shook hands with his friend and asked for the pistols. Charles brought them, when, his eye catching sight of his wife's pocket-book, Conway's overtaxed nerves gave way. Rushing into the bedroom, he fired blindly, thereby sending an innocent soul into the chaos of everlasting night, another addition to the Devil's harvest of gossip-victims.

Later, in searching for evidence, he finds her diary and reads therein his own doom and her innocence.

You will like "VENOMOUS TONGUES." It touches a sympathetic chord in every breast.

RELEASED THROUGH GENERAL FILM CO.
1, 3 and 6 sheet with all Kleine Subjects

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.

PATHEPLAY

Featuring

Frank Chance

Manager of

The New York American Baseball Team

TWO REELS

Released Thursday December Fourth

This fine Baseball Comedy will fill your house. The famous player and manager proves himself to be an actor of decided merit. He is the star of

THE BEST BASEBALL PLAY EVER PRODUCED

Baseball's Peerless Leader

EDISON

The Gunmaker of Moscow

A Story of Peter the Great, in Two Parts Released Friday, November 28th

Duke Olga wants money. Wealthy young Damanoff and Ruric, the gunmaker, are rivals for his ward, Rosalind. Damanoff's death would make him heir to a fortune, so he instigates a duel between the rivals. Ruric wounds Damanoff, and Olga sends Savotano to poison him. Ruric, learning of the plot, saves Damanoff, and the Duke, baffled in that direction, determines upon a forced marriage with Rosalind, who is very wealthy. Rosalind writes to Ruric, who appeals to Valdimir, a friendly, mysterious monk. Ruric and the monk enter the Duke's palace and, in a great dramatic scene, the monk casts off his cowl and discloses—Peter the Great!

COMING EDISON SINGLE REELS

The Vanishing Cracksman

First of the "Chronicles of Cleek," a series of detective mysteries produced in collaboration with "Short Stories."

Released Tuesday, November 25th.

*A Sense of Humor

The boys get up an Indian raid for Reggie. Never again!

Released Wednesday, November 26th.

A Royal Romance

The princess loves in vain.

Released Saturday, November 29th.

*Wanted, A Burglar

And the editor's daughter was the burglar.

(On the same reel)

South African Whaling Industry

Released Monday, December 1st.

The Price of Human Lives

A Red Cross Seal Story

Produced in co-operation with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Released Tuesday, December 2nd.

*The Thrifty Janitor

He sublets the Blythes' apartment. Then the row begins.

Released Wednesday, December 3rd.

 One sheet.  One and three sheets.  One, three and six sheets by the Morgan Lithograph Co.

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison
Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope Type "D"

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc.

239 Lakeside Avenue Orange, N. J

LUBIN · FILMS

LOOK FOR OUR MULTIPLE PICTURES EVERY THURSDAY

"A WAIF OF THE DESERT" Two Reel Thursday, November 27th

A dramatic emigrant story, a tragedy of the Plains.

---

"WHEN MOUNTAIN AND VALLEY MEET"

Two Reel Released Thursday, December 4th

This picture is an Idyl, a pastoral poem, and for the artistic eye will be a delight. The scenes picture towering mountains and peaceful valleys and the loves born of each. It is a romance of New Mexico, with the color of the tropics, so real and beautiful that it is entrancing. It is doubtless the most high-class fantasy ever released from our Studio, and will enjoy an unlimited vogue. See it and dream of it.

---

"HYDRAULIC WORKS ON THE ADDA"

400 feet Thursday, December 11th

A demonstration of marvelous engineering.

---

"HIS BEST FRIEND" 1600 feet Thursday, December 11th

A beautiful comedy-drama with a story of loyal friendship.

---

Five Releases Each Week

"SHADOWS" 1000 feet Tuesday, November 18th

A strange and intense story of supposed hereditary insanity.

"PARTNERS IN CRIME" 3000 feet Thursday, November 20th

A powerful story of a gang of swell yeggmen.

"HIS CHORUS GIRL WIFE" 1000 feet Friday, November 21st

A melodrama containing many eventualities but a happy denouement.

"THE HARMLESS ONE" 1000 feet Saturday, November 22nd

An excellent lesson, to watch incipient insanity.

"JUST CISSY'S LITTLE WAY" 1000 feet Monday, November 24th

Cissy really loves the gink, but teases him immoderately.

Lubin Five-Color Posters, One, Three and Six Sheets
From Your Exchange or A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING CO. PHILADELPHIA U.S.A

VITAGRAPH

"TANGLED THREADS" Comedy-Drama Monday, November 17th

The major objects to his daughter's marriage. He gets tangled up in Cupid's web and gladly withdraws his objections. Funny complications happily solved.

---

"HIS LAST FIGHT" Drama Tuesday, November 18th

His early encounters do not reflect much credit upon him. His last, in defence of a helpless woman and her husband on the high seas, is nobly fought. Featuring RALPH INCE, supported by Anita Stewart and Gladden James.

---

"WHY I AM HERE"
"FARMING IN ANCIENT THEBES"
Comedy and Topical
Wednesday, November 19th

1. It is a SAD tale, mates, with a FUNNY story of how it happened. Featuring SIDNEY DREW, supported by Anita Stewart. 2. Scenes on the banks of the River Nile.

---

"THE SALE OF A HEART"

Drama, Thursday, Nov. 20th

Through an accident, a beautiful girl is saved from marrying a rich libertine and marries a man worthy of her. Featuring MAURICE COSTELLO, supported by Mary Charleson, Tefft Johnson and Brinsley Shaw.

"THE SCHEMERS"
Comedy
Friday, Nov. 21st

They play a little game on each other. Hubby thinks he is a little smarter than his wife. Neither has anything on the other. Featuring JOHN BUNNY and FLORA FINCH.

---

"THE WHIMSICAL THREADS OF DESTINY"
Drama, Special Feature in two parts, Saturday, Nov. 22nd

To inherit a fortune, a desperate woman plots to poison her rival. The young equestrienne, while jumping through a blazing hoop, is terribly injured. The wicked plot fails and love is victorious. Featuring CHARLES KENT and JULIA SWAYNE GORDON.

SIX A WEEK

| | |
|---|---|
| "THE LEADING LADY"—Drama— | MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24th. |
| "LITTLE KAINTUCK"—Drama— | TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25th. |
| "FELLOW VOYAGERS""TEMPLES & STATUES OF ROME" Comedy & Topical— | WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th. |
| "THE CURE"—Drama— | THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27th. |
| "BETTY IN THE LION'S DEN"—Comedy— | FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th. |
| "THE GOLDEN PATHWAY"—Drama, Special Feature in Two Parts— | SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th. |

---

The Vitagraph Company releases a special feature in two parts every Saturday, and a comedy every Wednesday and Friday.

---

Vitagraph one, three and six sheet posters — 7 x 9 photos of Vitagraph players.

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA
East 15th St. and Locust Ave.
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The Octoroon

A Three Part Adaptation of Dion Boucicault's Masterpiece

Millions have seen this great drama since it was first produced, fifty-two years ago. Think of the advertising "The Octoroon" has received in that period. You, Mr. Exhibitor, reap the benefit of this advertising when you show this superb photoplay adaptation. Can you afford to pass this up?

Secure the co-operation of your local newspapers by supplying them with cuts for this great feature. Send for the four two-column coarse-screen cuts. Price 60 cents each.

Released Monday, December 1st
Two Special One-Sheet and Special 3 and 6-Sheet Posters

THE CAVE MEN'S WAR

A Two Part Story of Prehistoric Days

The events leading up to the discovery of the bow and arrow and the desperate encounters between the savage tribes will hold your patrons spellbound.

Released Wednesday, December 3rd
Two Special One-Sheet and Special 3 and 6-Sheet Posters

WHILE FATHER TELEPHONED

Imprisoned in a 'phone booth, Dad can only rage as the lovers get married. One continuous laugh.

(On the same reel)

ANDREW CARNEGIE'S GIFT TO THE WORLD

Showing a series of superb views of the new Peace Palace at the Hague. Also other topical features.

Released Friday, December 5th

THE FOOT PRINT CLUE

The mob raging for an innocent man's life, and the noble attempt of the boy he has aided to save him, are two of the breathless incidents.

Released Saturday, December 6th
Special 1 and 3-Sheet Posters

---

Notice to Exhibitors

Kalem wishes to announce that its releases for the regular program will at all times be fully as good as its releases for Exclusive Service.

TRADE KALEN MARK

Kalem Company

235-239 West 23rd Street :: New York

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr....................President
E. J. Chalmers ....... .............Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie ..........Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.

Western Office—169 West Washington Street (Post Building), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands..............................$3.00 per year
Canada .......................................... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (postpaid)..................... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.
Display Advertising Rates made known on application.
Classified Advertising—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The index for this issue will be found on page 938)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, November 22, 1913

Died in the Fordham Hospital, New York City, on Nov. 7th., Kathryn Ripp, twenty-one years of age. After a four months illness and only at the threshold of life, this faithful assistant in the New York Office of the Moving Picture World has entered into rest. Her co-workers tender this simple tribute of love to her memory.

Facts and Comments

THE Moving Picture World has always been for a clean screen, and for this very reason it deplores the foolish zeal of those reformers who want to bring about the millennium in a hurry. An inordinate zeal is bad. The reformers who demand the impossible play into the hands of the enemy. We are moved to make these remarks after reading an ordinance which the ministers of a town in Florida have prepared and which has been adopted by the city government there. The ordinance contains many excellent points, but they are nullified by this clause: "Whoever shall exhibit any film representing . . . any bacchanalian feast or any drinking in any saloon or other place where men resort for the purpose of drinking shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than two years, or both, at the discretion of the court." Drinking in moderation has from time immemorial existed, and in all likelihood will continue to exist for ages to come. In many countries men go to social functions and attend public ceremonies amid drinking. There are drinking scenes in the best stories and on the canvases of the greatest painters. The development of a story may make it necessary to show drinking in a place where men gather for the purpose of drinking. The very object of the picture may be the pillorying of drinking to excess or may be a pictorial sermon on temperance. To subject a man to fine and imprisonment for showing such pictures is to defeat true and practical reforms and to alienate the sound public sentiment in the community.

* * *

THE election of John Purroy Mitchel to the office of Mayor of New York ought to be a lesson for the exhibitors' organization in this city. The organization committed itself and tried to commit the entire profession in the city to the candidacy of a man who was overwhelmingly defeated. They made themselves conspicuous by lively campaigning for a lost cause. The man they antagonized, without even the shadow of an excuse, will enter the Mayor's office in a few weeks. Happily he is not of the narrow-minded type of politicians who visit vengeance upon their opponents. He will without question give the exhibitors fair and courteous treatment. Supposing now it were otherwise—what would be the result? The entire industry would be made to suffer through the foolish political meddling of a local exhibitors' organization. We hope that the warning will be heeded hereafter and the organized exhibitors will stay out of partisan politics, whether they are located in New York or in Ohio or elsewhere.

* * *

IN measuring the coming developments in kinematography we must not lose sight of the influence of such institutions as the Y. M. C. A. We have no detailed statistics to guide us, but it is evident from many communications sent to this paper by men prominent in Y. M. C. A. work that they are doing splendid service. A branch in one of the busy industrial cities of New England has just installed what the secretary calls "one of the best motion picture outfits to be found anywhere in the United States." According to our informant, a special motion picture performance was given to "the pastors, Sunday school superintendents and Sunday school teachers, the idea being to let these people see just what kind of pictures we are running, so that hereafter when any person asks what kind of pictures we are running at the Y. M. C. A. and whether they recommend them or not, their reply will be based upon actual knowledge." No greater service could be rendered to the motion picture. Seeing is believing. The mists of ignorance and prejudice disappear before the plain truth.

*

It is especially gratifying to us to learn from our correspondent that "in launching this project, the Y. M. C. A. has received the very heartiest co-operation from the moving picture men in the city and their operators, so much so that they have saved us a good many dollars and helped us to get this splendid high-grade outfit." This speaks well for the intelligence and the progressive spirit of the exhibitors, but it does not surprise us in the least. The personnel of the men engaged in the exhibition of motion pictures has improved vastly and the process is still going on.

What's New?

By Louis Reeves Harrison

THE speedy oblivion that overtakes both good and bad releases has been a matter of regret with those who sigh for immortality in these dreadfully mortal days, but there is a cheering side to their disappearance—their producers will not be pursued by the consequences of their acts. And could there be anything more appalling than the prospect of viewing them over again? Is not life enough of a burden as it is? When you gaze stolidly upon the cowboys who get on their horses and ride away in the dust, or at the comedian, in wig, chin-whiskers and putty nose, make faces, does it not make you as excited as if some kind man opened the back of his watch and told you to "see the wheels go round"?

Of all the good things we enjoy, one of the best is an ability to forget, especially for those scribes whose duty it is to write the funeral notices for a small army of defunct photoplays. Imagine the glow of intellectual excitement they feel after the ceremonies are over. Imagine the thrill of relief that comes to a patient reviewer after sitting through an hour or two of conventional rehabilitations of threadbare theatrics. That they never have to repeat the experience so far as the screen exhibitions they have reviewed are concerned is almost the one thing that makes their precarious lives supportable.

There are occasional plays that deserve to be revived, but the elimination of the great majority will prove no serious loss, especially those based on condescension, which stoop to make their meaning clear to the woefully misjudged mixed audience attending picture shows. Most of these are little short of an offense to intelligent people. Few, indeed, will be photodramas of the future that will appeal to universal interest, but it begins to look as though producers were trying to bring out screen plays intended for the widest possible acceptance.

That is the trend. There is some definite end visible among the more noted releases, especially those containing one or more themes of immediate and widespread interest. Whether or not they hit the bullseye, they aim at something. The innovator is yet to come, the bold individual who will carry no dead weights of tradition and convention, the smasher of records and clay idols. He will probably portray unheroic modern life just as it is, the while illuminating dreary paths of realism with a glow of creative imagination, injecting poetry into pantomime, dignity, weight and purpose into the general delineation.

Close scrutiny of some of the new features now in preparation reveals a strong leaning toward investigation of laws regulating human society and those of our development—sociological stories are in high favor—and these are flavored with observations on abnormal mental states among individuals, dramas founded on peculiar phases of the human mind. These are fascinating subjects when handled with intelligence, and offer a rich field to dramatist of screen or stage. Detective stories, especially those involving a clash of ingenious minds, seem to make a hit with all classes in the audience.

Symbolism counts in strange fashion. It brightens the dryest realism to exhibit a symbol on the screen that suggests or reflects some purpose at first invisible—it operates as a stimulus to curiosity, to a desire to go further into the hidden meaning of the presentation, but most powerful are those productions where the characters themselves are symbols of certain tendencies common to us all. A character which becomes the symbol of self-struggle, of combat between base desires and finer ideals, is bound to stir us with comprehensive sympathy.

Stories presenting human nature in its understood and accepted moods are bound to be more popular than those of mere incident, those that read like a newspaper report, but some of the newest themes explore the unsurveyed tracts, as did Shakespeare in Hamlet and Lear. I watched a large audience sit enthralled by a photodrama which, consciously or unconsciously, got at one of the mysteries of character, one that afforded insight into the moral conditions of birth and environment that made that character possible. It seemed as though something never before understood was being brought within the range of our comprehension.

One great advantage screen plays enjoy over those of the stage is opportunity to depict the circumstances that lead up to a remarkable situation, and, in like manner, also, they may broaden our view by showing how excusable other people are for differing from our pet ideals. Such plays are humanizing, and they exert a distinctive charm over the modern mind, constantly engaged in exploring the depths of truth, wearied to death of error. Most of us are sick of sordid men and women who seek to exploit themselves at the expense of their fellow-creatures and hunger for the era of kindly intelligence that shall make life beautiful as well as bearable for us all.

One thing quite new and contributory to the bearableness of existence is the change that has come over the spirit of the average motion picture producer. He has ceased to fear that the output of his intelligence would be beyond ours. Press critics and reviewers have been mainly responsible for this new and cheering state of enlightenment, especially those capable ones accorded free expression of their honest convictions, the only kind that command respect, to say nothing of attention, but the open market has materially helped to enlarge the perspective of gentlemen who provide the leading feature plays.

We have suddenly ceased to be barbarians and as suddenly achieved a standard of taste that insists upon the best there is to be had. The most delightful part of this discovery, that the majority of people are intelligent enough to appreciate what is offered by the studios, is the rivalry that is bound to ensue. No longer a mere means of cheap amusement, moving pictures may soar as high as directorial comprehension can reach without causing the "heterogeneous mass" to crane its necks. "Amusement" is a very much misunderstood word, literally and otherwise. It means, to begin with, absorbed thought, and is subject to variation until it may mean the reverse of its original definition.

In truth, amusement has to be redefined with each generation, because its general significance, "what engages the mind," must be modified to suit the fundamental emotions of the people. The old sense was to prevent the tedium of idleness, the new one to provide entertainment that is thought-stimulating. We are waiting and ready to be informed on the meaning of the mysteries of our lives, on the complexities that we fear, on the hopes we may realize. We crave what is new in its appeal to taste and culture in this art as in all others, and, in our heart of hearts, we feel that its coming cannot be too soon.

"Action"

By W. Stephen Bush

I DREAD to think into what abysmal follies the cry for "Action and More Action" will yet lead us. Perhaps at a not far distant day scenarios will be written for acrobats only. There is no doubt when it comes to action the acrobat surpasses every other performer on the stage. Judged by this cry for "Action," started by some low-brow bell-wether and bleatingly echoed ever since by the vast flock of imitators, the performance of Forbes-Robertson, the foremost actor of his generation, seems dreadfully dull and inadequate alongside of the clown or the "tumbler" who stands on his head or lies on his back and keeps kicking a painted barrel or a set of balls.

What these shouters of "Action" mean is, of course, not dramatic action at all. Dramatic art to them is a Chinese puzzle, and if their lives depended on it they could not tell whether a play is well constructed or ill constructed. What they mean by "action" is some kind of a new accident. This demand for "action" has created a new species of "artists." We know of several men regularly making the rounds of the producers, offering to take a chance of breaking their necks at so much per chance. If the offer of the hare-brained fatalist appeals to the producer, a scenario writer is called in and a plot is made to order. This is called a "drama full of action," and the fall from the cliff or the plunge from the airship is featured on the six-sheets. This sort of thing is all right for a limited period of time, but, once started on this road, it is impossible to put on the brakes, and your films begin to "skid."

Feed your audience on highly spiced sensations and how long will you be able to keep it up? The appetite for the shilling shocker grows by what it feeds upon. From accident it goes to crime, starting with misdemeanors, slowly working up to the felonies and ending up, say, with one plain murder. By this time your audience is thirsting for more blood. You will have to resort to fancy murders and finally to wholesale murder with trimmings. In Italy they have reached this stage, and Heaven only knows what some of the cheaper producers there will do next. I saw a "feature" in Naples in which, by the end of the second reel, every important character in the play was either dead or dying, and I was mortally afraid that the operator and his helper might leave the booth and start killing off the audience. I thought they would probably begin with the foreigners in the audience, and as I look very un-Italian and would afford an ample target for even the poorest marksman, I thought it wise to leave as unostentatiously as possible.

How long is this grovelling before the low-brow element in the industry going to continue? Will it eventually invade even the good studios and make slaughter-houses out of what should be temples of art? Must we lower our artistic and dramatic standards because a score or two of "old-time showmen" look upon the American public as a lot of neurotics who are on the point of being carried off to sanitariums and asylums? Do we want to alienate the constantly growing number of the friends of the motion picture among the best classes in the community? Whom are we going to please with these "crazy-quilt" pictures?

Again and again I have heard exhibitors say of good, clean dramatic features, which were sensational enough but did not subordinate the plot to the "shock" or the "accident": "It's good, I like it, but I know my audience would not stand for it." Why not give your audience a chance? By far the most successful and highest-priced films of today are adaptations of legitimate stage successes, and not one of these can by any stretch of the imagination be called an "accident" or "tank drama." If a good legitimate drama pleases me, why should it not please others? Am I made of finer clay and are other mortals a hundred per cent. duller in perception than I am? Why not ask these questions of yourself when you are tempted to believe that you are able to see the charms and beauties of a picture and that your patrons would be entirely incapable of enjoying them.

We are not, however, restricted to a choice between varieties of drama and comedy. I am loath to believe that the foolish thriller appeals to any sort of human intelligence, but let us for the sake of argument assume that such thrillers are needed for certain audiences and in certain localities. Is it impossible to vary this diet? Will it be said that the public are hungry for these pictorial nightmares every day in the year and that they want nothing else? Some years ago an exhibitor in the Pennsylvania coal regions said that his miners after being buried alive in the dark depths wanted nothing but "raw stuff." My friend's definition of "raw stuff" was very strong. When I suggested to him that a few really good and interesting scenic pictures might be acceptable to his audience now and then, he kindly pitied my ignorance, but agreed to make the experiment just to show how wrong I was. When the scenic pictures were shown, there was an element which protested, but before the evening was over the regular and most valuable patrons of the theatre overruled the noisy ones and shamed them into silence. At least a dozen men and women stopped in the lobby on their way home and took pains to assure the exhibitor of their approval of the scenic pictures.

This principle of giving the public what it wants is a most excellent one, but let us be sure that the public have plainly expressed their preferences. Let us be sure, too, that they have had a fair chance to see the vast variety which the motion picture alone affords. If you have not tried your patrons with good, clean drama you cannot be sure of whether they would like it or not. If you have never offered them any entertainingly educational numbers on your program, do not reach any conclusion as to their preferences until you have done so.

I readily admit that under the order of things now rapidly passing away, the exhibitor was restricted in his choice, and it was an almost hopeless undertaking to suit the tastes of his audiences as they should have been suited. Today the exhibitor who fails to do his own choosing will soon fall behind, and will be overtaken by the man who uses his own judgment in selecting every inch of film that goes on his program. The stereotyped and ready-made program will no longer do. The responsibility of selection can no longer be evaded.

I venture to say that in six months from now the industry as a whole and the good name of the motion picture will have grown immensely because of the progressive and discriminating exhibitor who has learned to be the master of his show.

I also venture to predict that even before the end of the next six months this silly cry for "Action" will die away and the producers who cater to the better things will be on top. The motion picture theater is neither a dime museum nor a circus nor a wild mixture of the two.

"The Brand of Evil" (Essanay)

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

THE Essanay publicity matter pronounces "The Brand of Evil" "an unusually strong mystery drama of East India," and it is without doubt. But it has still more to commend it. The atmosphere of mysticism has been retained throughout, although the locale has been changed from the land of Gautama Siddartha to that of the Christian, where the baleful results of wrongdoing are revealed to us in uncanny fashion.

The scenario, which has been written by Edward T. Lowe, Jr., is well constructed, fanciful, and of compelling interest. That blackened, withered hand of the adventurer, the mark placed by an occult power on the man who has stolen the jeweled eye of the god in the native temple, holds us spellbound at the end, as we see it renew its wonted color and symmetry before the eye of the camera and our own. Here is a mystery for the curious and a puzzle for the wise!

Scene from "The Brand of Evil" (Essanay).

Director Harry McRae Webster has surpassed himself in furnishing a perfection of detail for this production. The scenes are chiefly interiors, in India and elsewhere, and they show both intelligent familiarity with the requirements and nice artistic skill in creating the necessary effects. The interior of the Buddha temple affects the mind with a peculiar sense of dread and mystery. All these scenes were built in the Essanay studio, under Mr. Webster's supervision.

I believe everyone who views this two-part subject will agree with me when I pronounce the photography superfine. There are several startling scenes in which double exposure is cleverly utilized.

It is difficult to decide whether Morton, the adventurer, or Karino, the East Indian priest, affords the stronger characterization, in the respective care of Thomas Commerford and E. H. Calvert. The latter, perhaps, carries off the palm for his very effective impersonation of a weird, foreign personality. His make-up and costuming of the character are most appropriate.

Miss Ruth Stonehouse is pleasingly attractive and satisfying in the part of Judith, daughter of Morton. While under the hypnotic spell of the East Indian priest, she never fails to convey the impression that she is in an abnormal mental state. Howard, the fiance of Judith, is very acceptably presented by Richard C. Travers, who was formerly with the Lubin forces. We shall look for some good things in the art photodramatic from this capable juvenile actor.

An adventurer called Morton, during an exploration trip in central India, steals the precious stone which forms the eye of a hideous idol in one of the temples. The sacrilege is discovered shortly afterward by one of the priests, and vengeance is sworn against the perpetrators of the outrage.

Twenty years pass by and Morton, grown old and feeble, lives a secluded life with his only daughter Judith. Morton had carried with him, as a continual reminder of his violation of the Hindu temple, a blackened and withered left hand—the hand which had desecrated the god whom the natives worshipped. He was always obsessed by the fear that he was being tracked by the Hindu priests and that he would be discovered.

Morton kept the flashing orb of the god secreted in his library. One day, after he had placed it for safer keeping in a space cut out of the leaves of a large volume between two heavy covers, he joined his daughter in the sitting room. There he found her under the influence of some strange spell that made her oblivious of him or her surroundings. Then he knew that Karino, the dreaded priest, and his followers were upon him.

Judith does not even recognize her lover, Howard, who, like her father, is distracted over her condition. To add to their misery and horror, Judith disappears. It is then that Howard prevails on Morton to bring forth the stolen eye from its secret hiding place and leave it exposed, so that the East Indians may find it should they gain entrance to the house. Next morning the gem has disappeared. The same day Judith returns, but is still suffering from the strange malady that affected her before her disappearance. Doctors fail to effect a cure.

One day Morton is strangely affected and advises Howard that he is still being followed by his deadly enemy, and is in great peril. Howard, chancing to look out of a window, catches sight of a native East Indian priest about to enter the house. He seizes Morton and hastily assists him behind a portiere. The Indian enters the room, and hearing a noise behind the curtain makes a fierce thrust with his dagger. The latter just misses Howard, who stabs the Indian in the wrist with his sword. A fierce struggle ensues which ends in the shooting of the priest by Morton.

At the instant of the priest's death, the physician and nurse attending Judith are astonished by her immediate recovery. The wonder is still further increased the following day when Morton's blackened hand regains its normal color, in the twinkling of an eye. A change of scene in the pictures gives the reason. The eye of the god had at that moment been restored to its place in the sacred temple, in far away India.

The release date is November 28.

PATENTS COMPANY CASE.

Hearings Are Resumed With Frank L. Dyer on the Witness Stand.

The hearings in the case of the United States Government against the Motion Picture Patents Company, the General Film Company, and others, were resumed Monday in Room 159 of the Manhattan Hotel, 42nd Street and Madison Avenue. The expected cross-examination of H. N. Marvin was postponed, as the counsel for the defense claimed they were not through with their direct examination of the witness. Frank L. Dyer, the president of the General Film Company, was then called to the stand. His testimony was along the same lines as that of the previous witness, Marvin, and developed little that was new. He gave a short history of the litigation which preceded the formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company and then explained in some detail the compromise between the litigants and the agreement which laid the foundation for the new conditions in the industry.

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT AT ROUND TABLE CLUB.

At the first monthly meeting of the Round Table Club, held at the Hotel Astor, October 26th, George K. Rolands, the well known scenario writer and motion picture director, made an address in which he advocated many reforms concerning the higher realms of dramatic art as related to the motion picture as a means of theatrical entertainment.

The Round Table Club is an exclusive organization of women, the larger part of whom have attained eminent heights in the fields of literature and the drama. Among those present was Mme. Pilar-Morin, the French pantomimiste, who expressed herself as fully in accord with Mr. Roland's views.

David W. Griffith

The Art Director and His Work.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

"EVERY important piece of literature, as every important work of plastic art, is the expression of a personality, and it is not the material of it but the mind behind it that invites critical interpretation."

"Lawrence" Griffith—such was his stage name—is one of those strange combinations, a realist in action and a mystic in temperament, who sees clearly the beauty about him and can transfer his artistic impressions to others because of that side of him which is eminently practical. He was a playwright by tendency, an actor from opportunity, a motion picture director by force of circumstances. He would have succeeded as a dramatist—he was working toward that end—but, while he was looking out of the front door for Histrionic Fame to drive up in a coach and four, there came a modest knock at the back door, and a poor little, ragged, half-starved New Art was there begging for a wee bit of stimulus and a spark of the fire of genius to keep from freezing to death.

This was only about five years ago. New Art was only a boy, but his haggard appearance and the exhausting life he had led made him appear older than he was. Larry became interested when the strange-looking boy produced a magic lantern and showed that he could throw an image on the wall that visualized motion. The playwright, by nature clairvoyant, by training accustomed to concentrate on a thousand and one problems of structure, form and treatment, saw instantly that New Art's magic lantern had possibilities undeveloped and not even dreamed of by the overpractical men who had been putting it to use.

They saw that it visualized motion, and that was the limitation of their vision. It was used to show moving trains and boats and horses and men. There were some primitive attempts at dramas, but they had no other name than "moving pictures," and this led to the profound conclusion, with few exceptions, that all the characters must be on the jump from the time they appeared until the hero died, or was embraced. Actors were told to lift their knees high in walking and be doing something every moment while the camera was recording the action. A performer was not earning his salary, he was not a moving picture, if he stood still for a few seconds.

In appreciation, not as a compliment, it may be safely said that Griffith started the young stranger on an entirely new road and contributed more than any other man of those days to the New Art's splendid progress. He had that faculty of mystics and dreamers that enables them to project their minds into futurity. The invisible world to come exists in definite form only for those who combine in their mental makeup three powers—those of keen observation, close reasoning, and illuminating imagination. Such men usually leave the world better off for their presence in it, especially when they are able to help themselves on to material success, such as Griffith has done, and to wider opportunity.

DAVID W. GRIFFITH.
Director of Photoplays.

Probably others saw what Griffith saw in the future possibilities, but they lacked the outlet or the courage to break away from accepted ideas and introduce violent changes. There was need for courage. Nearly all "practical" men, those concerned with material rather than ideal considerations, opposed Griffith's work as wildly speculative and unsuited to what they honestly regarded as a commercial proposition rather than as an art. They still exist. There is still need for courage. But Griffith has blazed a path of glory for what is yet to become one of the mightiest instruments of thought transference, and the way is clear for men of creative genius to follow.

He started to depict emotion of the slow and intense kind. Just as a storm gathers, just as there are shimmerings of light and distant grumbling of thunder, before there is an outburst, he taught his interpreters to exhibit feeling. He dared try to show the subtle shades of thought, the deep-running undercurrents of passion, all the fascinating phases of human existence as we encounter them in real life. "But, Mr. Griffith," some practical gentleman would say, "you must keep in mind that this is strictly a commercial proposition. Give the people what they want."

A commercial proposition that depends for its very existence upon creative talent, whose structure is the work of selective taste, plastic imagination and power to formulate self-expression, ceases to be a good one from the moment it shrivels to a pulseless skeleton. All the traps to snare the unwary purchaser, all business schemes to market the mediocre, are short-lived. When there appears a man of fine artistic instincts, one inclined to give the best that is in him to the people—that is what they want—he is to be treasured. I know of no sounder common sense than to stimulate such men with encouragement—the very delicacy of their powers of discriminating makes them self-doubting.

I have sharply criticised several of the Griffith productions—he is in a state of evolution quite as much as the art itself—but there is a surprising charm in nearly everything he does when unhampered. His best interpreters give us the essence of this or that emotion instead of moving around like a lot of lay figures worked by invisible strings. He peels away the rind of human character; tears away the mask and bares the soul that has been hiding behind it. Motion often wearies the eye and confuses the understanding. He will fasten attention with immobility and suddenly transform silent mystery into tremendous revelation.

In a period of dull preparation, before the main action is under way, he will spread out before our eyes some beautiful or comprehensive tableau as compensation. Even when character and purpose begin to emerge from his visions of loveliness, when the architecture of the drama begins to assume importance, he plants a flower here or there, occasional tender notes in the large composition, like the man of dreams that he is. He is starting anew, and I hope his fondest dreams will be realized. I hope for the sake of the New Art that he has befriended that his finest conceptions will be materialized in grandeur or beauty on the screen.

Moving picture audiences are rapidly becoming critical, and men of discerning taste will be needed to respond, or even direct, this change. What has been said by a brilliant writer on dramatic subjects in general applies: "The decreasing insistence in plot, and a correspondingly stronger emphasis on character portrayal is one of the most hopeful signs of the times." With men of genius among writers and producers, the New Art will soon be a distinct one, unsurpassed by any other in its possibilities, ethical and artistic.

---

Mr. Griffith was born in Louisville, Ky., the exact date of which event is not revealed by his biographer, but he was eighteen years of age when he first stepped upon the theatrical stage. A varied experience in stock companies, vaudeville and legitimate productions on the Pacific coast was his before he became known to the picture makers. One season he was leading man for Nance O'Neil, and this is believed to have marked his highest attainment in that line. About this time Mr. Griffith took to writing plays, some of which were produced in stock. It was in an effort to secure the production of a more pretentious effort in playwriting that he came east, and it was his failure in that effort that compelled him to seek employment with the most humble players in the picture studios. Engaged as an extra man at the Biograph Studio, he soon displayed such a marked talent in the art of picture production that he was given an opportunity to direct. At first his efforts along this line were hindered by the traditions of the studio, but the providential absence of the chief director for a few days gave him the opportunity he sought to stage a picture as he desired, and his reputation was made. This happened in the summer of 1908, and from that time until the summer of 1911 all Biograph productions—two each week—were made by Mr. Griffith. During that time the name of Biograph became famous the world over, and the art of staging pictures was revolutionized. From 1911 to the time of leaving the Biograph Mr. Griffith has had some assistance in the producing department, but he still turned out his quota of pictures, and can easily claim a total of five hundred productions during the five years he served as chief director of the Biograph.

While many of Mr. Griffith's ideas have been adopted by others to the general betterment of American pictures, probably the best service he performed for the art in America was the training he gave to the actors and actresses who worked with him and who now occupy lucrative positions by reason of that experience. Among those who acknowledge the benefit of the early instruction given by Mr. Griffith will be found these names: Mary Pickford, Harry Solter, Florence Lawrence, Arthur Johnson, Marion Leonard, Stannar E. V. Taylor, David Miles, Owen Moore, Thomas Ince, James Kirkwood, Henry Walthall, Flora

Finch, Fred Mace, Frank Grandin, Frank Powell, George Nicholls, Wilfred Lucas, Mack Sennett, William Cabanne, Mabel Normand, Dot Bernard, Bessie McCoy, Blanche Sweet, Billy Quirk, Charles Mehls, Clara McDowell, Tony O'Sullivan, Dell Henderson, Edward Dillon, Charles Murray, Lionel Barrymore, Vivian Prescott, Flo Labadie, Dorothy Davenport, May Marsh, Herbert Pryor, Ashley Miller, Barney O'Neil, Courtenay Foote, Gertrude Pryor, and many others who have since gained more or less applause from picture fans.

"Lost at Sea"

Cecile Guyon and Charles Krauss Do Fine Acting in a Three-Part Union Features Subject.

By George Blaisdell.

THERE will be released by Union Features, on November 20, a three-part picture in which the leads are played by those talented performers, Miss Cecile Guyon and Charles Krauss. The subject is entitled, "Lost at Sea," and is produced by the Paris Eclair Company. Besides the two players mentioned there also appear in the cast Mr. Liabel and Mlle. Andriot. The picture will carry on its excellent acting. Fortifying this are good natural backgrounds, the best of these being of a cliff-bound island against the sides of which runs a heavy surf. The story is simple. In a nutshell, it is of a ship's crew setting out in a vessel the seaworthiness of which is in question. The craft comes to grief and the crew in a small boat reaches an uninhabited island. All but one of the men die of exposure and starvation. The survivor is rescued by a steamer and reaches home just in time to interrupt the wedding of his sweetheart and the son of his owner.

Scene from "Lost at Sea" (Union Features).

The feature of the picture is the work of Miss Guyon. It is always a pleasure to see her in a cast. It seems to make little difference as to the character of the portrayal she is called upon to do. She is equally efficient in all. In "Lost at Sea" she is a young woman of humble circumstances. She pleads with her lover not to sail in the ship which by wise old salts is said to be "done." As the ship departs she is in fear. When no word comes back her despair is complete. Later, when time has softened the blow, she still clings to the memory of her old lover. When Lucien, the son of the shipowner, pleads for her hand in marriage, she hesitates, hoping against hope. Finally she agrees that if in six months no word comes of the sailor that is lost she will marry Lucien. The time elapses. Lucien and his father come to Yvonne's home to celebrate the betrothal. Snow is falling. Yvonne makes a brave effort to be happy. A tramp makes application for shelter. He is brought into the room and seated by the great fireplace. Yvonne attends on the stranger. As she removes the hood from his face she recognizes her Pierre. It is a dramatic moment. The sailor does not know her. He is in a high fever. He is taken upstairs and put to bed. The betrothal party is broken up. It is when the fever has abated and the shipwrecked man is again in possession of his reason that we witness one of the best scenes in the picture. Yvonne is tenderness itself. Miss Guyon is a mistress of the art of love-making—in fact, she is in a class by herself. There is a happy ending to the story, in spite of the very natural sorrow of Lucien over losing his bride.

Mr. Krauss as the sailor gives a strong interpretation. Mr. Liabel as the shipowner will attract attention by his sympathetic portrayal. Throughout the story runs the atmosphere of the sea. The photography is excellent.

"The Child Detective."

A Three-Reel Picture by Belmont Feature Films Tells a Good Story.

By H. C. Judson.

A GOOD story well told is the best comment that can be given to a feature offering; it is the quality that the people most want. A recent release by the Belmont Feature Film Company, called "The Child Detective, or Shadows of Life," gives us a story full of interest without much dragging and very little padding. Its noticeable weakness is that the producer, as though trying to escape these two defects, hurried his action. The semblance of real life is lost in some of the scenes due to awkward, unnatural entrances and exits. This leaves in the spectator's mind the impression that they are unimportant steps in the narative and that they are hurried on and off the screen. Much also of the story is told by subtitles.

The picture introduces the story as told by a tramp to a kindly man who has just given him a dinner. We learn that he has been a convict, lately out of prison, yet repentant and sorry for the wrong he has done and even glad that he has been punished for it. As he talks, the scenes that preceded his crime of twenty years ago are re-enacted. We find him in a home with his father, mother and brother and a girl adopted into the family, as we are shown, when a child, and with whom both brothers are in love. The older (the one who is talking) is shown by his own admission to be the more astute, and he has won the father's consent to marry the girl, who gladly acquiesces though she seems to love the younger—she is very obedient and not much of a character. As the tramp continues his story, we find that he was weak; he was jealous of his brother; was a gambler, and was heavily in debt. His jealousy is the cause of fisticuffs between the two. The younger brother knocks the older down and the father, decidedly partial to the elder, orders him from the house. The gambling debt is the cause, a bit later, of a theft of money by the older brother from his father and the attempt to do this entails the choking of the father into unconsciousness. The old man has had a chance to see the older brother, but in a mask and dressed in the clothes of the younger brother whom the older brother knows will soon be found in the house; for he has stolen in to see his mother. All this works out just as he intended it to and he would have succeeded in fastening the crime on the other had not a newsboy whom the younger brother once had helped, spied on the older brother and then witnessed against him. We have suspected early in the narrative that the man the tramp is telling his sad story to is the newsboy grown-up. This turns out to be fact and, through his means, the tramp is returned to his friends who forgive him and take him back into the fold.

Scene from "The Child Detective" (Belmont).

WANTS A "ST. BONIFACE" PICTURE.

Mr. F. Schulte, of Remsen, Iowa, writes the Moving Picture World to urge that some motion picture manufacturer undertake a picture based upon the life of St. Boniface, the patron saint of the German Catholic. He says that St. Boniface occupies somewhat the same relation to the Church in Germany that St. Patrick does to that of Ireland, and believes that the subject would be a good one. We pass the suggestion along.

"Traffic in Souls"

Director George Tucker with a Large Imp Company Produces a Stirring Six-Part Melodrama of Today.

By George Blaisdell.

It is with no light heart that a reviewer of motion pictures with an ordinary sense of responsibility can approach this production. Its theme is indicated in the title. It is a big subject—one that has been given grave consideration by many thoughtful men and women. These divide naturally into two groups—one favoring battling with the evil, or, as the more advanced would phrase it, the evils of the evil, in the old-time secret way; the other would come into the open and fight a condition as ancient as the beginnings of history with modern weapons—and the chief of these publicity. To those who hold the latter of these opinions, "Traffic in Souls" will be warmly welcomed. The picture is bound to arouse bitter antagonism. Surely its friends, and among these are the members of the National Board of Censorship, are entitled to ask that the production be seen before it is condemned.

Scene from "The Traffic In Souls" (Imp).

Walter MacNamara is the author of the script. George Tucker produces it. These two as well as the more prominent members of the augmented Imp Company which participated in filming the story gave much thought to matters of ethics and of policy. Their work has been carefully reviewed by the censors. Several eliminations have been made. The story as it stands contains practically nothing of the lure of underworld life. It does show much of the sordid and brutal side of it—of the scheming villainy of the underling procurers and of the smug respectability of the man higher up, and also of the wretched condition of the lash-cowed victims. On the other hand, the forces of law and order, represented by many fine types of policemen, are upheld throughout the six parts of the picture. The moral of the story is impressively clear; there are contained in it warnings for the girl of the city as well as the girl from the country—and for parents, also.

On the dramatic side "Traffic in Souls" has unusual power. There are many stirring situations—of heart interest and of suspense. The action unfolds smoothly, coherently, and always interestingly. It is a story written for the screen—one of the few we have had of its length. Its advantage over many adaptations—those made by any other than the most skillful—is apparent in the beginning. You don't have to wait until the picture is half down before you can place and properly identify your characters. There is an excellent cast and an unusually large one. The interest will center around the efforts of Mary Barton, splendidly played by Jane Gail, to recover a younger sister who has been lured into the clutches of a cadet. Mary's chief aid is Burke, her policeman-sweetheart, intelligently portrayed by Matt Moore.

The two girls, employed in a candy store, live with their father, an invalid inventor. The younger one attracts the attention of the System. A cadet is detailed to capture her. To establish an acquaintance over the counter is easy. Then comes the invitation to a dinner, then to a dance, then the employment of a "safe" taxi driver, and the drugged girl is behind locked doors in a brothel. The older sister is discharged when the kidnapping becomes public—too much notoriety for the store. Mary is enabled through the intercession of one of her customers to obtain a position as secretary to a business man, so she thinks. When she puts to her ear the receiver of a dictagraph she recognizes the voice of the man who took away her sister. She follows the wires down the fire escape and sees the chief agents of the System at work. Mary goes to her father, who turns over to her and Burke his invention for intensifying sound waves and recording dictagraph conversations. The following day the apparatus, which has been installed in the offices, records on cylinders the conversation of the social outlaws and provides evidence that will convict. These bits of wax are turned over to the police captain, who sends out a detail of men, filling three automobiles. The house, which has been located before by the young patrolman, is quickly surrounded, the controllers are arrested after a fierce battle and the victims released. The head of the System, out on bail, arrives home to learn of the death of his wife and the insanity of his daughter.

Three scenes that markedly stand out are the fight of Burke when he follows, into the house, the two immigrant girls who have been misled—a melee in which bannisters are wrecked; the pistol battle on the stairs and on the roofs during the raid, and the assaults of the mob on the heads of the System as they are released under bail by the court. Many of the episodes in the house as the victims fight their captors are thrillingly realistic. The demonstrably easy fashion in which girls on incoming steamships, girls coming into the city by rail and those who live in large communities are brought into the clutches of powers that prey will serve to cause thought on the part of the most stolid. The treatment of the police side of the story is deserving of all praise. The views of the station are many. We get a look-in on the camaraderie of the bluecoats off duty and we see some of the dangers and temptations to which they are subjected when on duty.

William Welsh, as the man higher up, gives a fine performance. Others prominent in the cast are Howard Crampton, Ethel Grandin, William Turner, William Cavanaugh, Arthur Hunter, William Burbidge and Laura Huntley. All types are selected with rare discrimination. There may be diverse opinions as to the wisdom of exhibiting this picture. If such exhibition serve to quicken the official or public conscience in lethargic communities; if it help to preserve to society any one of the "fifty thousand girls who disappear every year"; if it tend to make more difficult the vocation of unspeakable traders, then indeed will there have been substantial excuse for the making of this melodrama of today.

---

PICTURE BUSINESS IN TEXAS.

Receiver for General Film Branches in That State Makes Good Showing in His Report.

W. A. Wroe, who was appointed receiver for the branches of the General Film Company at Dallas and Houston, Texas, in an action brought by the Attorney-General of that State under the State anti-trust laws, has made his report to the fifty-eighth district court at Beaumont, Texas. The report covers business done at the branch exchanges from February 1, 1913, to October 18 of the same year, a period of eight and one-half months.

The report shows the receipts from the rental of films during that period to be $357,270.91, and the expenses to be $348,550.09, leaving a balance of $3,720.82. The statement explains that the item of expense includes $307,602 paid to the General Film Company for pictures, also that the receiver gets $1,000 per month, that the attorneys for the receiver have been paid $750 a month, and a clerk $75 a month. J. M. Cummings, manager, gets $100 per month.

The actual monthly payrolls of the two offices are Dallas, $551; Houston, $147.50. That of Dallas is $31 more than it was a year ago. The weekly receipts for rentals one year ago were $5,500, but for this year they are $9,500. When the receiver took charge thirty-six reels were being leased weekly to supply 160 theaters; to-day sixty-two reels weekly are necessary to supply 300 theaters.

The present resources are given as $256,990—an increase of $121,759, and the liabilities are given as $13,200. Looks like a good showing for the picture business in Texas.

MACE BACK TO CALIFORNIA.

Fred Mace and his Apollo comiques have left New York for Los Angeles. They had been operating East, pending the completion of a studio in the Brooklyn Heights section of the beautiful California city. They are due there by the time this appears in print. In the party are Marguerite Loveridge, "Bud" Duncan, Harry Edwards, George W. Peters, cameraman, and Mace. A "One Round O'Brien" story will be the first picture tackled by the returning Apolloites. Another prizefighter will have to be found for the picture by Mr. Mace, as his "contracted" fighter, "Bull" Young, was killed in a California bout while the Apolloites were East.

CHICAGO LETTER

By JAS. S. McQUADE

AS announced in my last letter, the Chicago council building committee held a meeting Friday, November 7, at which expert opinions were heard on the ventilation ordinance, with the possible view of amending the latter so far as it affects moving picture theaters.

Theodore Weinshank, of Indianapolis, was the first speaker, as an expert for members of the Chicago Exhibitors' Association. He was followed by a Mr. Garner, president of the Garner Ventilating System, who held the floor fully as long as all the other experts combined. This system is one of those which have received the sanction of the health department; but, as stated in a former letter, any system that meets the requirements is acceptable to Dr. Young.

Mr. Garner refused to be interrupted by laymen, exhibitors included, or to answer any questions coming from this source, but was willing to respond to any queries made by members of the building committee or experts. He claimed that his twenty-five years' experience on the subject might serve to enlighten the members of the building committee. He stated that he was simply a contractor for his own firm and speaking for it.

The question, "Why was Mr. Garner permitted to speak at all?" naturally suggests itself to any thinking mind. He was not an expert, in the logical acceptance of the term, as he was naturally biased in the interests of his firm. His protracted speech was brought to an end by Chairman Clancy, who reminded him that other experts were awaiting a hearing.

Professor McCormick, of the Armour's Institute, followed. The professor invited questions from the committee, and discussed dioxide and bacterial tests for the atmosphere in theaters. He was decidedly willing to go on record as being in favor of the dioxide tests, instead of air measurements—1,200 cubic feet or 1,500 cubic feet per person, as the case might be. His answer to a question, as to air conditions in the moving picture theaters visited by him, was that he had found the air fairly good, as an average, in all of them.

Health Commissioner Dr. Young then arose and denounced Chicago moving picture theaters generally as "abominable holes"; and declared that he did not budge one inch from the ordinance as originally drafted.

Alderman Powers then requested permission from the chairman to question Dr. Young. He asked why Dr. Young has resorted to drastic measures against moving picture theaters, pending the proposed amendment of the ventilation ordinance, after having promised the building committee that no action would be taken until the committee had decided what changes, if any, should be made.

Dr. Young replied that no drastic action had been taken.

Alderman Powers then handed a letter to the chairman for reading. Dr. Young claimed the letter as his, and asked Mr. Powers why it had been handed to the chairman and not to him, saying that he would read it himself. He then laid the letter before him on the table and proceeded with his remarks.

Alderman Powers interrupted, and asked that the chairman request Dr. Young to read the letter aloud, so that the committee could hear it.

Dr. Young then read the communication, which was addressed to F. O. Nielson, Parkway Theater, 2736 N. Clark Street, dated November 3, 1913, and signed by the chief sanitary inspector of the city.

Following is the letter: "The records of this Bureau show that on July 1, 1913, a notice was issued to provide adequate ventilation for the theater located at 2736 N. Clark Street. On August 7, 1913, the work had not been done and your license for the last half of the current year was granted only after plans for this work had been filed and approved. The inspector reports under date of October 30, 1913, that you have taken no further steps in the matter and apparently do not intend to comply with the pending notice.

"In view of these facts the Department will give you five days in which to show cause why this theater should not be closed."

After the reading, Alderman Powers asked Dr. Young why he had sent out the letter after having given assurance to the committee that such action would not be taken.

Dr. Young denied that he had ever given such assurance.

Alderman Powers then asked Dr. Hill, the assistant of Dr. Young, if he had not given his assurance.

"Maybe I did," answered Dr. Hill, "but I did not speak for Dr. Young."

Dr. Young, taking the floor, said in heat: "As far as this letter is concerned, this contemptible rat, F. O. Nielson, after submitting a set of plans which were approved by this Department, and having received a license on these conditions, he is now trying to squirm and wriggle out of it. Concerning my fairness to this man, I may say that I served him five days' notice to visit my department and show cause why he should not be closed. He has never been near me. The law does not say I may close him, but that I shall close him; and I will."

Mr. Nielsen then jumped to his feet and addressed the committee, apologizing to the chairman for his breech of the rules that experts only were permitted to speak at the meeting.

"In justice to Dr. Young and myself, under these circumstances, I must say that a grievous mistake has been made," he began. "I have never submitted a plan of any kind to any department—building, sanitary or health, or any other department in the city hall—for the ventilation of the Parkway Theater. If I had, you, Dr. Young, or the head of any other department, would certainly have a copy. If you, gentlemen, or Dr. Young, or any man in this room can produce a set of plans on the ventilation of the Parkway Theater, I will give you, or him, the theater.

"In answer to the accusation that I have never made an effort to show cause why I should not be closed, I have visited the health department on three consecutive days (November 4, 5 and 6), sitting for one and one-half hours, on the day last mentioned, awaiting an interview with Dr. Young. I gave my card on each occasion to a boy in the office, but I failed to see Dr. Young."

"What do you say to that, Dr. Young?" asked Alderman Powers.

Dr. Young made no reply, but his assistant, Dr. Hill, arose and said: "There are lots of times when plans are submitted to this Department which have come in from ventilating contractors, who are estimating and submitting figures on theaters, and, I suppose, this may have been such a set of plans."

Mr. Nielson replied that at no time had any contractor—heating, ventilating or otherwise—submitted plans or figures for his approval, or given him an estimate on such work. "If any such plans have been submitted to this or any other department, it has been without my knowledge or consent," he said. "Furthermore, I want to say here that I represent myself only. I have no partners who might take steps without my knowledge. It is not a corporation. I do, and speak, for myself only, and I know what I am talking about."

Alderman Schaeffer, father of the ordinance, then made a motion that no action be taken by the health commissioner while the amendment of the ordinance was pending.

Before the motion had time to be seconded, Dr. Young said: "If the committee will assume full responsibility—which I will not, under the circumstances—I will hold off; but, if every city department is to be tied up while the amendment to an ordinance is pending, the health department might as well go out of business."

Alderman George Pretzell rose quickly, as Dr. Young resumed his seat, and said: "I move that the health commissioner be authorized to use his own judgment in enforcing the ordinance." The resolution was carried without dissent.

The Parkway Theater is still open and showing to fine business. More millionaires visit this picture theater than any other house of the same kind in the city. Mr. Nielson is one of the most intelligent and progressive picture theater managers in the country. The Parkway is finely ventilated, as all its patrons can testify. It is looked upon as a model for projection, well selected and admirably presented programs, and for clean, wholesome air and surroundings.

Intelligent and Sane Censorship Demanded.

My old friend, Ben E. Drum, branch manager of the General Film Co., in Denver, writes me anent the films picturing the tango and other up-to-date dances which were recently barred in Chicago.

"They were run in two of the biggest houses here for four days," writes Mr. Drum. "Both houses did capacity business, without a word of reproof or dissatisfaction as regards the moral effect. In fact, the sentiments of Dean Hart, as quoted in the enclosed clipping, expresses the sentiment of Denver in general.

The clipping, which gives the opinion of the Very Reverend H. Martyn Hart, the Episcopalian head of St. Johns, which houses Denver's most exclusive congregation, is quoted herewith, in part:

"I may say that I find nothing objectionable to them in the least. They were pretty, some of them exceedingly artistic and I would not object to any young man and woman in my parish dancing anything I saw on the screen—IF they danced it JUST as I saw it.

"Of course, I can see how these, like other dances, degenerate into vehicles for deplorable vulgarity, but that was not true of the dances I saw.

"I think my attitude on the dance question is pretty well understood in Denver. I am certainly not what could be called 'narrow' on that subject. I recognize the necessity for such exhilarating exercises as the dance and, for that reason, have a dancing class in connection with the cathedral, where young men and women, who do not have large homes, where dances are possible, can have them in the chapel of St. John's one night out of every week. There were seventy in attendance at our weekly dance last night.

"Reason is a rare thing, but it should be exercised regarding the late dances as well as everything else."

The attention of Major Funkhouser, second deputy superintendent of police, Chicago, the lady reformers of Chicago, and Chicago's ten police women is respectively drawn to the very reverend gentleman's opinion. It would appear from the foregoing excerpt that lay people are sometimes as sadly out of place in judging of matters spiritual and moral as are men of the frock, sometimes, in matters of hard-headed business.

Moral: Let us have a national censorship of pictures that will spare well-intentioned men and women the hardship of going beyond the limits of the respective fields to which they are adapted. If other branches of industry and the professions were subjected to similar supervision as that to which moving pictures is subjected, every man would be his own policeman, lawyer, doctor, father, confessor, judge, jury, etc., etc., etc., all through the list. It is about time that moving picture censorship should show both intelligence and sanity.

Director Wharton Talks About "Buffalo Bill" Series.

Theodore Wharton, of the Essanay forces, who directed the Buffalo Bill series of pictures out West, returned to the city Thursday, November 6, accompanied by Mrs. Wharton and Mr. Hargan, expert cameraman.

Mr. Wharton paid a pleasant call at the World office after his return, and gave a most entertaining accounting of his trials, tribulations and triumphs while assuming command of the big field force in the Dakota hills.

It is not ofter that a civilian is within his rights when he orders generals and ex-generals of the U. S. army around, but there were times when it was necessary for Director Wharton to issue "orders," in the nature of requests, so as to get his pictures right.

The Sioux tribe of the Brules Indians was so impressed by the courteous rule of the "picture chief" that the chiefs adopted Mr. Wharton, making him an honorary member of the tribe and giving him the name of Chief Wambli Wicasa, which means the Eagle Man.

Mrs. V R. Day, wife of Essanay's genial manager, was another favored visitor. The Indians were so impressed by Mrs. Day's kindness and personality that they adopted her as a daughter of the tribe, and bestowed on her a name that means "good Ogallala woman."

Mr. Wharton tells me that four battles will be shown in the series of pictures taken, viz.: "Wounded Knee," "The Battle of the Missions," "War Bonnet," and "Summit Springs." General Miles and the officers accompanying him had nothing to do with the first-named battle or the two last.

Colonel Sickles, now Colonel of the 12th U. S. cavalry, and a lieutenant of the famous 7th U. S. cavalry, at the original battle of Wounded Knee, participated in the pictured battle taken by Mr. Wharton. The taking occupied two days, and about 13,000 feet of negative were used. Of course, this will be cut down to conform with afterwork and condensation.

General Miles was present at the Battle of the Mission, the site being about five miles from Pine Ridge, near the old Mission school there. These pictures practically cover the war of the Messiah, which lasted from 1890 to 1891. Prominent spectacles are the peace council between General Miles and the Sioux chiefs, at the General's headquarters; a grand review of the U. S. troops engaged, at the close of the war, and the return of hostile Brules to their homes, under General Lee, in 1891.

Colonel Cody (Buffalo Bill) will be seen as a prominent figure in the Battle of War Bonnet, which followed the Custer massacre in 1876, and also in the Battle of Summit Springs, fought in 1869.

It will take about six weeks to complete the work, Mr. Wharton says, but this will be done in Chicago.

On the return trip Director Wharton stopped over at Fort Robinson, Neb., where he and his wife were royally entertained by the colonel and officers of the 12th U. S. cavalry. This regiment has been organized since the Spanish-American War, and is considered a "crack" arm of the service Mr. Wharton took about 800 feet of negative, showing remarkable feats of horsemanship and daring by the officers and men of the regiment.

Chicago Film Brevities.

William A. Hopp, manager of the Standard Film Exchange branch of the Universal Film Mfg. Co., was suddenly stricken at his home, Sunday evening, November 2nd, with a violent hemorrhage, due to an ulceration of the stomach. The attending physician rushed him to St. Joseph's Hospital, where the flow of blood was stopped with serum. An X-Ray examination was made and it was found necessary to perform an operation, which has been scheduled for Thursday, November 13. The attending physicians are confident that the operation will be a success and that Mr. Hopp will be out and around in a comparatively short time. His many friends look forward to his speedy recovery.

* * *

David Mundstuk, formerly owner of the M. & F. Feature Film Corporation, this city, has decided to go into the manufacturing and importing of films, with headquarters in New York City. He will leave for New York about Saturday, November 15th.

* * *

C. H. Shook, pianist of the White House Theater, Western and North Avenues, this city, paid us a visit last week. He stated that this house is showing to excellent business with licensed service at five cents admission. Frank Holub, proprietor, installed a new ventilation system in this house, last September.

* * *

H. H. Buckwalter, expert traveling camera man for the Selig Polyscope Co., has been putting up for some time at the Hotel Tivoli, Ancon, on the Panama zone. He will remain there for some time to make a complete educational series of pictures showing the Canal from its earliest ages until the official opening in 1915.

* * *

J. A. Mahara, of Mahara Minstrels, and Wm. F. Wood, the "Passion Play" man, have secured nine Southern states for the Foster Photoplay Co.'s productions of this city, directed and acted by colored people. Mr. Wood called at the Chicago office and stated that they would open offices shortly in New Orleans.

* * *

F. P. Bloomfield, traveling representative for the Radium Gold Fiber Screen, writes from Pittsburgh, that he is doing extraordinary business there.

* * *

E. A. Westcott, Minneapolis, representative of the Famous Players product, visited the city Tuesday, November 4th. Bert Barnett has purchased the state rights for Wisconsin, Minnesota, and North and South Dakota. Mr. Westcott is his assistant. The office, which has been established three months, is now doing flourishing business. Mr. Westcott states that the Famous Players product is in big demand in his section, and that the subjects are giving unusual satisfaction wherever placed. All the best theaters make a point of securing them. Minneapolis is the central booking point for the states mentioned, and Mr. Barnett and Mr. Westcott attend to the distributing of films. The office is at 555 Temple Court, Minneapolis.

* * *

J. Parker Read, Jr., who introduced "The Mystery of the Maine," "The Garden of Allah," and other features, is in town with one of his latest productions, entitled "Victory," a five-reel thriller of love, war and conspiracy, which was made with the aid of the U. S. Atlantic fleet and its war hydroplanes, etc. Secretary of Navy Daniels, Rear Admiral Badger, of the Atlantic fleet, and other notable officials actually take part in this feature. Mr. Read will be in town a few days, long enough to dispose of the rights for Illinois. Mr. Read also brought with him his latest production, in six parts, "The Stranglers of Paris," a dramatization of Belot's famous novel, by David Belasco. Mr. Read is confident that this feature will prove one of the sensations of the year. The rights to this feature are controlled by the Motion Drama Co, Candler Building, New York, of which Mr. Read is general manager.

* * *

A new brand of film that is almost ready to make its bid for public favor has been named "Dacotah." This brand is being put out by a new film manufacturing concern, the Daclede Film Corporation, with factory and office in St. Louis. The company will also have offices in New York and Chicago. The company will start out with two three-reel releases a month, and, as it has already a guaranteed market, the manufacturers are already confident that in the near future they will be able to put out a multiple feature every week. Joseph Hopp, formerly owner of the Standard Film Exchange, this city, has been named for president. H. J. Lindsay, a well-known St. Louis capitalist and business man, will be one of the active men and officers of the company. The Exclusive Supply Corporation has already announced this brand of film under the name of "Daclede" Films, which henceforth will be known as the "Dacotah."

SCREEN CLUB HOUSEWARMING NOVEMBER 22.

The housewarming of the Screen Club has been postponed until the evening of Saturday, November 22, in order that all members might have sufficient notice of the festive occasion.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

OPEN MEETING OF PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITORS.

The Philadelphia branch of organized exhibitors held a meeting Sunday, November 9, on the seventh floor of the Parkway Building, Broad and Cherry Street. The meeting had been called by Mr. E. A. Jeffries to discuss, among other things, ways and means of increasing the membership. Mr. Emmanuel acted as secretary. Mr. Stiefel thought that one of the urgent needs of the hour was to agree upon a minimum number of reels to be exhibited for five cents. He expressed the opinion that the exhibitors should get into touch with the exchanges on this question and refuse service to men who tried to ruin the business. Similar views were voiced by Mr. Benn, but no action was taken.

On the question of increasing the membership, Mr. Chas. Siegel declared his views at some length. He said he believed that he had belonged to the organization from the very first and that he regretted the diminution of the membership. He moved that a committee be appointed to issue an urgent invitation to all exhibitors of Philadelphia and Eastern Pennsylvania to attend a big meeting to be held on the first Sunday in December in the Parkway Building at 2:30 p.m. Several members spoke in favor of the motion, which was carried unanimously.

A motion was made to extend the privileges of the floor to W. Stephen Bush, who had been present at the birth of the movement for an organization in Philadelphia and Pennsylvania. Mr. Bush when invited to speak pointed out the willingness of the Moving Picture World to assist in arousing a greater interest among the exhibitors and promised to give the coming meeting on Sunday, December 7th, all the publicity possible. Several exhibitors then favored a campaign of publicity in the daily press as well. Mr. Benn took occasion to say that he considered the Moving Picture World as the best guide in such matters and that he hoped the meeting would be a success. A resolution was passed inviting the World representative to attend the meeting on the first Sunday in December. Several new members joined the organization. The chair appointed as a committee to make the meeting a success the following members: Charles Siegel, Emmanuel, Greenbaum, Benn and Fisher. This committee will hold its first meeting next Friday in the Parkway Building.

NOTICE.

To the Members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

On January 26th, 1914, the National Executive Committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America will hold its semi-annual meeting at the Sinton Hotel, Cincinnati, Ohio.

At this meeting the executive committee will hear all grievances and complaints and take action thereon.

The national secretary urges all members of the league in good standing to file their complaints at the earliest possible moment with the secretary of their state branch or the secretary of their local in writing. The secretaries in turn file same with the national secretary, or if a member is able to attend the meeting and present his grievance in person, he is cordially invited to do so.

G. H. Wiley, National Secretary, 1615 East 8th St., Kansas City, Mo.

TEXAS CONVENTION AT FORT WORTH.

Active preparations are being made for a rousing meeting of motion picture exhibitors of the state of Texas, at Fort Worth, on Monday and Tuesday, November 24 and 25. Headquarters will be at the Westbrook Hotel and a reduced rate on all railroads has been secured on account of the Fort Worth Fat Stock and Horse Show, which happens

Banquet of Exhibitors—Kansas State Convention, Hutchinson, Kas., Oct. 21, 1913.

during the same week. According to the program there will be lots of business to be taken care of at this meeting. An election of officers will be held; the delegates to the New York national convention will make a report; the question of ownership of theaters by exchanges will be discussed and the questions of "The Open Market Program," the "Restriction of Program," "The Poster Question" and "Service" will all come up for discussion and there is likely to be some lively "talkfest."

Remember the date and get on the job.

CENSORSHIP OF FILMS IN NORWAY.

The Norwegian Government has just issued regulations for the censorship of kinemtaograph films intended for public exhibition. Under these regulations all films must first be registered and numbered, and will then be examined, in private, by number, by two officials appointed for that purpose; these two may call in a third person to help them in their decisions if necessary. Films that are approved will have a stamp affixed, but all films, whether approved or not, will have to pay fees at the time of registration.

The censorship will have little effect on the Christiania cinematograph shows, as the expense will be divided by the shows in other cities of Norway that rent the films after they are used here. There are about 25 picture shows in Christiania, the majority of which use American films, which are most popular, as well as French, German, Danish, and Swedish films.

KINEMATOGRAPH BUSINESS IN HUNGARY.

In Fiume, Hungary, which city has a population of 51,000, there are seven picture shows. Susak, population of 10,000, which is a part of Fiume, there is but one picture house. The theaters are not large, their seating capacities running from 150 to 370 persons. Shows are given every hour from 5 until 10, and no one is allowed to enter during the exhibition. The programs in most places are changed three times a week, but in one of the larger places only twice. The exchanges govern the price of the rental of film by the number of times it has been run. Programs usually cost from $7 a day up to $58 a day, but the average price is about $12 a day. Another item which adds to the price of film is the changing from one language into another the titles and subtitles. American films are well received, especially those depicting cowboy and Indian scenes. The American comedy film also goes well. The city tax of picture shows is governed by the amount of rent. Receipts vary from $16 to $80 a day for the smaller places and for the larger ones from $25 to $175. The newest kinematograph theater, which was started in February last, claims to have cleared $30,000 the first three months. The method of advertising employed by the managers of picture houses is that of billboards and handbills. No electric signs are used outside of the houses. Some of the managers print their own programs, in which the stories of the films to be exhibited are printed in two languages—Italian and Hungarian. The well managed houses are very profitable.

OPENS TO GOOD BUSINESS.

After undergoing extensive improvements the Gem theater, Rushville, Ind., which was formerly known as the Palace, was opened by its new manager, Charles R. Rasor, who recently purchased the house from Earl Breedlove. On the opening night the theater played to capacity business with the Universal program. In the operating room there is a Power's 6-A and a Fort Wayne compensarc. The pictures are projected on a Gold Fiber screen. I. W. Rasor, brother of the owner, is assistant manager.

BEAUTIFUL PRINCESS THEATER IS OPENED

Messrs. Carr & Sehad, Reading, Pa., recently purchased the old Crescent theater, that city, and transformed it into the beautiful Princess. The entire theater has been renovated, repainted and redecorated, making it one of the best picture houses in Reading. Besides showing the features of the Famous Players Company, the management has booked the productions of the All Star Feature Corporation.

NEW THEATER IN HENDERSON, KY.

A new $12,000 picture theater, of which A. L. Ward will be the manager, is being built in Henderson, Ky. The dimensions of the structure are 100 feet by 34 feet, and it will seat about 800 persons, with balcony. In the operating room there will be two Standard machines. Velvet carpets will be the covering in all the aisles. The front of the theater will be of white marble with mirrors and prism glass doors.

PICTURES POPULAR AT LAKEWOOD, N. J.

Sumner Clarke, manager of the Bijou Theater, Lakewood, N. J., has been making pictures popular with the millionaire residents and visitors of that well-known resort. Last season Mrs. George Gould became interested in the pictures shown at the Bijou to the extent that she occasionally engaged the house for private exhibitions for her guests and servants at Georgian Court. Later Mrs. Gould installed a projecting machine at Georgian Court and now gives frequent entertainments for her guests.

For all that Mrs. Gould has not forgotten the Bijou, for she is still a patron of the house, only recently paying it a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Drexel, and her husband, remaining throughout the program. In the audience at the same time were several hundred members of the Daughters of Pocahontas, then holding a convention at Lakewood. By chance Miss Mary Pickford was also present. On another evening Miss Pickford and a party of friends visited the Bijou to see "The New York Hat," a Biograph picture, the script of which was written by Little Mary and in which she played the lead. Surely Mr. Clarke is in right at Lakewood.

MADAME ORLOFF.

Madame Orloff, the distinguished Viennese actress, has joined the forces of the Great Northern Film Co. for a number of feature productions in which she will be fitted with parts commensurate with her splendid histrionic ability. Madame Orloff enjoys the distinction of being one of the most talented women on the European stage and during her successful career she has played many parts. The audiences of the principal royal opera houses have welcomed her with acclaim, and it was not without considerable persuasion that she consented to accept an engagement with the Great Northern Film Co. She will be seen in the leading role in "Atlantis," the big twelve reel feature, and in other distinctive productions which are to follow she will play the leading female role. She has the power of depicting emotion, but her art is not confined to this side alone, as she has been hailed as both clever and versatile.

Madame Orloff, Now with Great Northern.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

A WELL-KNOWN exhibitor from the West, while on a visit to this city last week, made some comments on present conditions in the motion picture field that are worthy of special attention on the part of the honest and legitimate producers, renters and exhibitors. "The time has arrived," said he, "for these people to get together and devise effective means whereby the guerrillas in the business can be effectively squelched. This presents a difficult problem. It is one for which, many will say, there is no solution; but it must be solved. If it is not, the lawless producers and others will ultimately eat to the very heart of the legitimate end of the business and throw it into a state of demoralization. I have discussed the matter at length with many of the most prominent men in the field. All agree that something must be done, but very few seem able to suggest an effective remedy. It is the old story of avarice being pitted against honest effort. There are producers who turn out anything that they think will get the money, regardless of the sentiments or rights of all other people. And these enemies of legitimate art and industry have willing confederates in a host of renters and exhibitors who are devoid of principle."

* * *

"The real seat of the evil," continued the exhibitor, "is not in the larger cities and towns. In such places the mischief-makers fear contact with the organized exhibitors and regulations of picture theaters. They ply their trade in the small places and by shrewdly working upon local pride, get into the houses, pictures of a most questionable character. Judging from the character and number of complaints that have come in from the better class of people in such places one may conclude that ere long there will be an outburst that will bring the censorship question before the people again in a most formidable shape. I am unalterably opposed to official censorship. I believe such measures unconstitutional and will fight against them to the last. I know that much of the strife occasioned over the subject has been due to prejudice against the pictures, and those who have promoted it have received little consideration at my hands; but if the guerrillas are allowed to continue their work I fear the censorship agitators may win to their cause many who think of them as I do."

* * *

"I have in my hand," said the exhibitor, "a copy of a publication sent me by an exhibitor in a good-sized country town who complains of just what I am talking about. The newspaper contains a paragraph reading: 'Tonight! ———, your own town boy, in the big dramatic three reel,' etc. The names of the player and the film are omitted as the quotation is used simply to illustrate methods employed, and not to bring up a discussion of the film itself at this time. My friend writes that it is by such methods that certain people get upon the screens subjects that irritate the class of people who are always on the alert for something to back them up in censorship agitation. 'That fellow packed his house that night because the player was a local favorite. I had a splendid and unquestionable program, but went to the bad. But that is not what hurts. Since the production many people have been criticising the motion picture business generally, some of them declaring that the producers are taking backward steps and if they continued making such pictures censorship would be necessary to stop them.'"

* * *

"Now," continued the visiting exhibitor, "I have authoritative information that several free-lance producers are planning to carry out through the country the same methods that were employed in the small town I have spoken of. It is their intention to get into the casts people who are favorites in certain localities and slip over the subjects on the strength of local pride, regardless of any merits or faults the picture itself may have. I may add that the scheme is not original with these promoters. An old time extravaganza is being prepared in your city for revival and the promoter is making up the large cast and chorus of favorites in various parts of the country, who will be heralded in their respective localities. I understand that the scheme of this promoter was accidentally learned of by the picture people, who lost no time in putting it to use."

The exhibitor was asked if he could suggest any remedy for the evil he complained of. In response, he said but one thing had impressed itself upon his mind, and that was a campaign of publicity. It must be a campaign of immense scope, and necessarily expensive. It must be one of education. It will be one, if undertaken, that no individual exhibitor can conduct. It must be national in character with the combined backing of all the manufacturers, renters and exhibitors who are trying to maintain the proper standard of productions from an intelligent and artistic standpoint, and are endeavoring to comply with the wishes of those advocating reasonable censorship. This campaign, the exhibitor added, can be successfully conducted through the various publications devoted to the motion picture business, as well as local newspapers. By this means it is hoped the people will be so educated that they will discriminate against the free-lances to an extent that the questionable productions and houses will become segregated, and finally go out of business. In the large cities such places will have longer life, because much of their patronage is transient; but eventually they, too, will feel the force of the campaign on account of its effect in the homes of the transients. The expenses attending the campaign can be reduced to a minimum by national co-operation. At all events, they will be much less than the expenses attending a national fight for censorship; a result that must follow if the work of the guerrillas is not curbed. They are working on the theory that they are exempt from danger of censorship regulations for two reasons: First, the legitimate people cannot place it upon them without becoming subject to it themselves. Second, if others attempt to place censorship the legitimates will fight it as unconstitutional.

* * *

"What do you mean by the term 'Guerrilla'?" the exhibitor was asked.

"Well," he replied, "a guerrilla is one who promotes an irregular mode of warfare. The fellows I speak of are out for the coin regardless of the manner in which they get it; regardless of law, or decency, and absolutely indifferent to the welfare of the motion picture business as a whole."

* * *

A woman standing high in the estimation of the leading theatrical managers, professionally and otherwise, was almost pathetic in her description of existing conditions while visiting a motion picture studio recently. In applying for a position she said, "I can see you are surprised that I should seek this employment, but I really have no alternative. A year ago I would have rejected all offers from a picture concern. Now I am ready for almost any offer you may make. The theatrical business is in a most demoralized state. During the past summer I studied parts for two different companies, but both of them have gone into cold storage. I rehearsed with one of them up to last week, when the management informed me that the outlook on the road was so precarious the backers had decided to spend no more money. I asked if the elections had anything to do with the conditions and was told they had little bearing; there was a general slump; and that the picture business had the call on the people. The storage houses uptown are filled with the effects of shows that failed to get started on the road, or were called in soon after getting started. People who have not gone over to the picture studios are playing vaudeville time. I would surprise you if I named some of the people who are playing what they call the minor circuits under other names than those they were known by in the regular theaters. The picture business has made wonderful strides and the wonderful work done in the studios make it deserving of the recognition given it by the people, but in the face of all that, we professional people feel that it is a surrendering of professional dignity to take part in that line of work. However, I suppose I must surrender. Will you give me a job?" Upon being informed that the waiting lists at the motion picture studios are as large, if not larger, than those at the regular booking offices, the woman remarked, "Yes I heard that; and I suppose that there is so much good material on the lists that the poor souls who failed to see what was coming must stand at the tail end of the line. It looks like 'back to the mines' for most of us, and with no mines working."

---

LEASES THEATER.

The Adelphia theater, Reynoldsville, Pa., owned by M. M. Fisher, has been leased for one year by Charles Evans, beginning Thanksgiving Day. Mr. Evans expects to use the house exclusively for the exploitation of moving pictures. It has a seating capacity of 1,000. The house was erected in 1908 and cost $15,000 to build.

The Welte Autograph Organ

A New Feat of Wizardry in Reproducing the Individual Work of Celebrated Organists.

Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman.

THERE are times when reviewing is a positive pleasure but I did not think this would be one of the times, which was an entirely mistaken idea. When I drew the assignment to cover the Welte Autograph Organ I wondered what in the world an autograph organ could be, and upon inquiring about it could find no one who could tell just what it was.

The Welte address brought me to an elegant establishment on Fifth Avenue. It was like stepping into a palatial drawing room, what with the handsome furniture and rugs, decorated walls and polished instruments. It then began to develop that M. Welte & Sons, Inc., is an institution that dates back to 1832. Edwin Welte, a grandson of the founder, is in charge of the American branch of the firm, the original headquarters being located at Freiburg, Germany. It also began to appear that the first orchestrion of any kind was publicly demonstrated in 1849 by the first M. Welte. There are records to show that the first organ or orchestrion played by paper music rolls with pneumatic action was invented in 1885 by his son Emil. Thus it will be seen that the Welte family goes pretty far back in the business of manufacturing self playing instruments.

Meanwhile orchestrions and player-pianos have become so common that it was up to the third generation of the Welte family to do something to keep its reputation above the average. Accordingly, in 1906, Edwin Welte and his brother-in-law Karl Bockisch, brought out the Welte-Mignon Autograph player which is no doubt the highest type of mechanical music that has ever been obtained. The Welte-Mignon Autograph process was applied first to the piano and in 1912, just a year ago, to the organ.

The Autograph process, as the name implies, is a record made from actual performance. In other words the Weltes have perfected a recording apparatus by which the exact interpretation of any musician may be duplicated by mechanical means, with all its light and shade and other artistic technique. As Caruso sings to the recording phonograph, so Paderewski plays upon the Welte recording keyboard, and his work comes out even more true than Caruso's because there is no loss of tone with the piano or organ as there is with the phonograph.

This was the state of affairs on the day of the visit to the Welte place of business. I listened first to the Welte-Mignon piano. A record of Liszt's arrangement of Wagner's "Pilgrims Chorus," played by Joseph Hofmann, was put on and the instrument, after being started, received no further assistance, but did all the regulating by itself. It is quite easy to conceive how it might be possible to regulate accelerandos and retards by mechanical means, but the real test of all automatic players lies in the touch. Most listeners can tell an ordinary player-piano as far away as they can hear one. In my own case I have always been an avowed enemy of the mechanical player with its deadly eternal fortissimo and monotonous drumming that never varies in tempo or touch, but I can truthfully say that this Welte instrument gave me the surprise of my life. It controls the touch. I cannot express it better than by saying that a constant vision of the great artist was forced upon me. I could see his powerful hands working up to his climax, carrying the melody strong in the base cleff with the lighter arpeggios echoing in the treble.

At the end of this selection, Miss Myrtle Elvyn, the noted concert pianist and favorite pupil of Godowski, dropped in. A record of a Chopin Ballad as played by Paderewski was put on and the listeners settled back for another treat. The general dolce treatment of the song was a great contrast to the lion-like Hofmann number but therein was shown the excellent control the Welte instrument has over the touch. It is an instrument with brains inside of it, and as Paderewski went over the difficult passages I could see Miss Elvyn grip the arm of her chair in breathless admiration. Mr. Welte then put on a couple of records that had been made by Miss Elvyn herself; the "Humoresque" by P. Tschaikowsky and a Barcarolle by Rubenstein. These records were ot much value in demonstrating how this marvelous instrument can even discriminate between the touch of a man and that of a woman.

Turning then to the great organ a short concert of much beauty was given by records of such eminent organists as Edwin H. Lemare, the famous English organist, Jos. Bonnot, of Paris, and Prof. Samuel Baldwin, organist of the College of the City of New York. It is upon the organ that the Welte concern is devoting its particular attention these days. Scarcely much more than a year having passed since this secret recording process was applied to the organ, its inventors have accomplished perfect results with an instrument that is far more complicated than the piano. To make a long story short they have succeeded in reproducing the exact work of the organist, not only in the matter of touch but in the control of the instrumentation.

The Welte organ is, upon the whole, better adapted for places of public entertainment than is the Welte-Mignon piano player. This is, of course, by virtue of the greater majesty of the organ and its space filling powers. There is a dignity that hedges about the organ that the piano can never hope to obtain. Especially is this true of musical accompaniment for the motion picture. But one of the difficulties of organ music for the picture theater is the scarcity of good organists who are obtainable for that sort of work. It is reasonable to suppose that any theater that can afford the luxury of having an organ is a theater that gives exhibitions all day. A really high class organist could not and would not play constantly for so long a time. If he were willing to do so the long grind would cause him to grow stale before the day was half over, and he would not play with the same thoroughness thereafter. The Welte people consider that with their instrument the all-day organist will be a practical proposition. It will allow him when tired to start a record of some well known organist's work and reserve his own powers until they are required for the specific work of playing to the big feature.

Jos. Bonnot, Organist, Paris—Making a Record for the Welte Autograph Organ.

The possibilities of local advertising with such an instrument are many. The wise manager through the right kind of press work could stir up an interest in it by first dwelling upon its history, in small installments, in the local papers. Then when the townspeople became sufficiently acquainted with the true import of the instrument, concert programs for the day could be advertised, giving the names of the famous organists who participate, even using their photographs as lobby attractions. The Welte Company have photographs of most of these organists, taken at the organ at the recording studios of which there are two, one at Poughkeepsie, New York, and the other at Freiburg, Germany.

These Welte Autograph Organs are built in different sizes, either as a complete instrument containing bellows and pipes in one artistically designed case, or made to fit any space. For example; the pipes and wind chest may be placed in the cellar of the theater, while the console with the music roll is placed in the orchestra pit, or having parts of the pipes on one side of the proscenium arch and the solo parts on the other. Surely it is a wonderful instrument and well worthy of the investigation of any exhibitor.

---

NEW THEATER FOR ASHLAND, WIS.

In the early part of next spring, Latts Bros, proprietors of the Bijou theater, Ashland, Wis., will build a $15,000 picture house. It will be located in Second street.

Moving Picture Educator

CATALOG OF EDUCATIONAL RELEASES.

July to Sept., 1913.

By the Rev. E. Boudinot Stockton, S. T. B.

FOLLOWING each title is given the volume and page of the Moving Picture World where the synopsis and comment on that particular picture is to be found, the volume number before, the page number after the colon. The notes following certain of the titles are not intended as synopses, but merely as hints on the uses for which the picture is or has been found available. We give below a list of the abbreviations used in the catalog. The months are indicated by the abbreviations, Jl. for July, Ag. for August and S. for September.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 2r, 3r, etc., | means | two-reel, three reel, etc. |
| n.s.p. | " | no synopsis published to date. |
| n.c.p. | " | no comment published to date. |
| sp.rev. | " | special review |
| mfg. | " | manufacturer's advance note. |
| adv. | " | advertisement. |
| music | " | suggestions as to appropriate music given in M. P. W. on vol. and page quoted. |

GENERAL TOPICS.

Newspapers.

Animated Weekly. Universal Jl 2, 9, 16, 23, 30; Ag 6, 13, 20, 27; S 3, 10, 17, 24. (17:240, 354, 458, 562, 672, 774, 878, 990, 1106, 1216, 1318, 1426, 18:80.)

Gaumont Weekly. Gaumont Jl 2, 9, 16, 23, 30; Ag 6, 13, 20, 27; S 3, 10, 17, 24. (17:360, 572, 780, 1430.)

Mutual Weekly. Mutual Jl 2, 9, 16, 23, 30; Ag 6, 13, 20, 27; S 3, 10, 17, 24. (17:240, 568, 678; 780, 884, 1000, 1106, 1218, 1328, 18:84.)

Pathe's Weekly. Pathe Jl 3, 7, 10, 14, 17, 21, 24, 28, 31; Ag 4, 7, 11, 14, 18, 21, 25, 28; S 1, 4, 8, 11, 15, 18, 22, 25, 29. (17:232, 344, 346, 558, 668, 764, 986, 1096; 1314, 1210, 1420, 18:66, 184.)

Journalism.

A Great Metropolitan Newspaper. Edison 22Jl. (17:456; 536.) Shows how the New York Herald is printed.

Laying the Corner Stone of the New Examiner Building. Majestic 6S. (n.s.p., 17:1176.) The new office of the San Francisco Examiner."

PSYCHOLOGY AND RELIGION.

Palmistry.

Palmistry. Gaumont 22Jl. (17:370; 430.) Shows the history of palmistry from its earliest beginnings to the present day.

Religion.

A Roman Catholic Mission in China. Eclair 13Jl. (17:354, 538, sp.rev. 15:583.)

Holy Cities in Japan. Eclair 3Ag. (17:774; 637.)

The Consecration of a Buddhist Priest. Pathe 4Jl. (17:1394; n.c.p.)

SOCIOLOGY.

Penal Problems and Institutions.

The Fight for Right. Reliance 2r, 9Ag. (17:678; 745; mfg. 642; sp.rev. 724.) Deals with the problem of prison labor.

The Golden Jubilee of the New York Catholic Protectory. Majestic 1Jl. (17:86; 206.)

Army and Navy. War.

In and Around Scutari After Its Capture. Pathe 22Jl. (17:346; 536.)

Reunion of the Blue and Gray at Gettysburg. Special Event Feature Co. Jl. (n.s.p.; 17:322.)

Life on Board of an American Man-of-War. Kinemacolor m Jl. (Syn. 17:246.)

Army Manoeuvers at Governor's Island. Majestic 13Jl. (com. 17:429.)

Drills on Board U. S. California. Kalem 13S. (com. 17:391.)

Exercises of the 23d French Dragoons. Pathe 11Jl. (com. 17:427.)

Artillery Practice at Montauk Point. Majestic 17Ag. (com. 17:962.)

Secret and Benevolent Societies.

The Elks at Rochester. Gem 18Ag. (n.s. or n.c.p.)

The Shriners' Parade and Sports at Los Angeles, California, 1912. Kinemacolor Jl. (Syn. 17:90.

Manners and Customs.

The Celestial Republic. Vitagraph 4Ag. (com. 17:743.)

The Sultan of Sulu. Selig 2Jl. (17:388; 319.)

In Moroland. Selig 24Jl. (Adv. 17:285.)

Daily Doings in Manila. Pathe 29Jl. (17:454; 637.)

With the Natives of New Zealand. Pathe 6Ag. (17:558; 843.)

With the Natives of New Zealand. Pathe 4S. (com. 17:1283.)

Costume and Private Life.

The New York Fashion Show. Nugent. 29S. (Adv. 17:1413; sp.rev. 18:32.)

Home Life in Japan. Melies 18S. (17:1316; 18:48.)

A Day with a Hindu Family. Pathe 20Ag. (17:988; 1175.)

A Chinese Funeral. Melies 17Jl. (17:234, 535.)

A Japanese Funeral. Melies 18S. (17:1316, 18:48.)

Public and Social Life.

River Life in Hong Kong, China. Vitagraph 19Jl. (Com. 17:536.)

Cosmopolitan Life in Cairo, Egypt. Pathe 15Ag. (17:778, 961.)

Children of the Tenements. Kalem 5S. (Syn. 17:982.)

The Flower Festival at Pasadena, California. Rex 13Jl. (Com. 17:429.)

Japanese Dances. Melies 24Jl. (Com. 17:635, mfg. 53.)

Fairy Tales.

Beauty and the Beast. Rex 3r. 10Jl. (Com. 16:490; sp.rev. 1340.)

The Sleeping Beauty. Warner's Features 3r. Jl. (Com. 17:430.)

SCIENCE.

Physics.

Magnets. Gaumont 14Ag. (Com. 17:846, sp.rev. 17:949.)

Chemistry.

Hydrogen. Eclair 14S. (Syn. 17:1318.)

Geological Phenomena.

In the Land of Fire. Melies 21Ag. (17:874; 1067.)

Hot Springs and Geysers of New Zealand. Pathe 18S. (17:1210; 18:48.)

Biology.

Parasites of the Frog. Itala Ag. (Com. 17:745.)

Zoology.

Ocean Life.

Atom Life in the Deep. Gaumont 1Jl. (Syn. 17:44.)

Denizens of the Deep. Pathe 15Jl. (17:232, 420.)

Curious Sea Creatures. Pathe 29Jl. (17:452; 637.)

Wonders of the Briny Deep. Kalem 1Ag. (17:446, 743.)

Invertebrates.

Microscopic Animalculae Found in Stagnant Water. Mutual Educational 31Jl. (Syn. 17:778.)

Echinoderms. Mutual Educational 17Jl. (Syn. 17:464.)

Articulates.

Sea Worms. Eclair 24Ag. (17:774; 961.)

The Habits of Field Spiders. Eclair 7S. (17:992; 1069.)

Fishes. Amphibia.

Curious Fish. Eclair 21S. (17:1318; 1177.)

The Fish with a Storage Battery in its Brain. Pathe 27S. (17:1420; 18:155.)

Toad Traits. Pathe 18S. (17:1210; 18:48.)

Reptiles.

The Lizard. Pathe 22Ag. (17:766; 1068.)

Strange Traits of Serpents. Pathe 20Ag. (17:764; 1067.)

Vipers at Home. Pathe 25Jl. (17:346; 636.)

Birds.

The Snowy Egret and its Extermination. Pathe 16Jl. (17:232; 535; sp.rev. 184.)

Birds of Prey. Pathe 26S. (17:1420; 18:155.)

Mammals.

An Intimate Study of the Mole. Essanay 7Ag. (17:558; 843.)

The Otter. Pathe 5S. (17:088; 1283.)

APPLIED SCIENCE.

Hygiene.

First Aid to Injured. Edison 20Ag. (17:758; 1067.)

Engineering.

Building the Chattanooga Light and Power Dam. Essanay 24Jl. (17:342; 635.)

Agriculture.

Dynamite, the New Farm Hand. Pathe 12Jl. (17:78; 428.)

The Rice Industry. Melies 3Jl. (16:1394; 17:319.)

Making Hay with Special Machinery. Essanay 20Ag. (Syn. 17:766.)

The Coffee Industry in Jamaica. Lubin 24Jl. (17:338; 635.)

Animal Breeding.

The Sacred Gazelles of the Park of Nara. Eclair 20Jl. (17:564; 429.)

Fancy Fowls. Selig 16Jl. (Com. 17:535.)

The Duck Raising Industry. Essanay 17S. (17:1202; 18:47.)

The Largest Duck Farm in the World. Kalem 26S. (17:1308; 18:155.)

Dairy Products.

The Sanitary Dairy Plant, Washington, D. C. Gem. 22S. (Com. 17:1393.)

Industries.

The Production of Wine in France. Gaumont 3Jl. (Syn. 17:244.)

The Sago Industry in Borneo. Pathe 25S. (17:1420; 18:156.)

A 30,000 Barrel Oil Gusher on Fire. S. A. Guy. Ag. (Adv. 17:1002.) The burning of the gusher on the Star Oil Company's lease of three fractional sections in the Caddo oil field, at Mooringsport, Louisiana.

Porcelain. Pathe 11Jl. (17:78; 427.)

The Concrete Industry. Kalem 18Jl. (17:228; 536.)

A Knife of Fire. Edison 23Jl. (17:456; 635.) Shows how steel is cut by means of the oxy-acetylene flame.

From Iron Ore to Polished Steel. Farrel Co. S. (Adv. 17:977.) Takem at the Farrel plant of the U. S. Steel Corporation at Farrel, Pa.

Manufactures.

How Diamonds are Made. Eclair 6Jl. (17:354; 205.)
The Kelp Industry. Keystone 25Ag. (Com. 17:1060.)
The Making of Tapestry. Gaumont 8Jl. (17:300; 206.)

Handicrafts. Trades.

Cabinet Making. Gaumont 11S. (Adv. 17:1103.)
The Panama Hat Industry. Lubin 12S. (17:1084; 1392.)

FINE ARTS.

Parks and Monuments.

Golden Gate Park and its Environs. American 7Ag. (Syn. 17:566.)
Japanese Gardens. Mutual Educational 3Jl. (Syn. 17:44.)
Piasa, Italy and its Curious Monuments. Pathe 4Jl. (Syn. 16:1394.)
The Taj Mahal, Agra, India. Selig 26S. (Com. 18:155.)

Religious Architecture.

Mont St. Michel. Pathe 8Ag. (17:558; 843.)

Music: Songs.

Her Rosary. Reliance 16Jl. (17:358; 321.) An interpretation of the song "The Rosary."

Sports and Amusements.

Moro Pastimes. Selig 15Ag. (17:605.)
The Series of Tallulah Falls, Georgia. Edison 3S. (17:980; 1283.) The well known summer resort.

Public Amusements

Coney Island, New York's Summer Playground. Kalem 8Ag. (17:556; 843.)

Theater. The Stage.

Arizona. All Star Features 6r, S. (Adv. 17:649; sp.rev. 18:27.) Photodramatization of Augustus Thomas' play of same title.
Caste. Edison 2r, 12S. (17:1086; 1392; sp.rev. 1048.) Photodramatization of Thomas Robertson's play of same title.
Shenandoah. Kalem 3r, 4Jl. (16:1386; n.c.p., sp.rev. 1339.) Photodramatization of Bronson Howard's drama of same title.
The Streets of New York. Pilot 3r, Jl. (17:468; 430.) Photodramatization of Dion Boucicault's play of same title.
Trooper Billy. Kalem 2r, 17S. (17:1208; 18:48.) Adapted from Frederick Paulding's drama.
Tannhauser. Thanhouser 3r, 15Jl. (17:356; 429.) Adapted from the opera of the same title.

Scientific Amusements.

The Flea Circus. Solax 9Jl. (17:88; 49.)

Athletic Sports.

Giants vs. Athletics. Commercial M. P. Co. 2r, S. (Adv. 18:201.)
British-American Polo Match. Powers 2Jl. (n.s. or c.p.)
Auto Polo, the New Thriller. Pathe 20Ag. (Syn. 17:766.)
Up Mont Blanc. Gaumont 7Ag. (17:886; 845.)

Racing.

The Derby, 1913. Gaumont Jl. (Adv. 17:239.)

LITERATURE.

English.

Poetry.

The Pied Piper of Hamlin. Edison 16Ag. (17:664; 1067.) Robert Browning's poem.
The Green Eye of the Yellow God. Edison 13S. (17:1086; 1391; sp. rev. 1048.) From the poem by J. M. Hayes.
Evangeline. Canadian-Bioscope 4r, S. (Adv. 17:1095.) Longfellow's poem of the same title.
Hiawatha. Kinemacolor Jl. (Syn. 17:470.) Longfellow's poem of the same title.
King Robert of Sicily. Essanay 2r, 4Ag. (Syn. 17:556.) From one of the poems in Longfellow's "Tales of a Wayside Inn."
The Bells. Edison 29Jl. (17:456, 637.) Suggested by Edgar Allen Poe's poem of same title.
Twickenham Ferry. Reliance 15s. (17:1324; 1285; sp. rev. 1157.) Illustrating the ballad of the same title.

Drama.

The Rivals. Kinemacolor S. (sp.rev. 17:1155 & 1373.) From Sheridan's drama of the same title.
Everyman. Kinemacolor Ag. (sp.rev. 17:823.) Adapted from the morality play of the same title.

Fiction.

The Glow-Worm. Reliance 6S. (Com. 17:1177.) From the novel by William Levering Comfort.
Joyce of the North Woods. Edison 2r, 29Ag. (17:868; 1176.) From the novel by Harriet T. Comstock.
Robinson Crusoe. Bison 3r, 29Jl. (17:458; sp.rev. 16:29.) From Daniel Defoe's tale of same title.
Dolly Varden. Edison 5Ag. (17:552; 744.) From a part of Charles Dickens' "Barnaby Rudge."
Little Dorrit. Thanhouser 3r, 29Jl. (17:570; 638; sp.rev. 616.) From Charles Dickens' novel of same title.
Pickwick Papers. Vitagraph 5S. (Com. 17:283.) The Adventure of the Hunting Party from the novel by Charles Dickens.
Tess of the d'Urbervilles. Famous Players 5r, 1S. (Syn. 17:1221; sp. rev. 1155.) From the dramatization of Thomas Hardy's novel of same title.
The Stolen Woman. Reliance 2r, 20S. (17:1324; 1286.) From the story by Eleanor Ingram in "Lippincott's Magazine."
The Invaders. Kalem 2r, 27Ag. (17:872; 1176; sp.rev. 827.) Adapted from John Lloyd's novel.
The Last Days of Pompeii. Ambrosio 8r. Jl. (Syn. 18:518; sp.rev. 363.) From Bulwer-Lytton's novel of same title.
The Last Days of Pompeii. Pasquali 8r, Ag. (Adv. 17:763.) From Bulwer-Lytton's novel of same title.
In the Bishop's Carriage. Famous Players 4r, 10S. (Syn. 18:72; sp.rev. 1266.) From Miriam Michelson's story of same title.
The Scapegoat. American 2r. 28Jl. (Syn. 17:464.) From William Hamilton Osborne's story.
Moths. Thanhouser 4r, S. (Adv. 384; 698; 914.) From the novel by Ouida.
The Rightful Heir. Edison 12Ag. (17:664; 844.) From Sir Gilbert Parker's story, "The Lane That Had No Turning."
The Pit and the Pendulum. Solax 3r, 18 Ag. (Com. 17:537; sp.rev. 644.) From Edgar Allen Poe's Tale.
Hard Cash. Edison 2r, 26S. (17:366; 18:156; sp.rev. 17:263.) From Charles Reade's novel of same title.
Ivanhoe. Imp 3r, 22S. (17:1318; 1286, sp.rev. 1051; production note 17:517.) From Sir Walter Scott's novel of same title.
Rob Roy. Eclair 3r, 17S. (17:426; 1286.) From Sir Walter Scott's novel of same title.
Uncle Tom's Cabin. Imp. 3r, 25Ag. (17:880; 496.) From Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel of same title.
The Mystery of West Sedgwick. Edison 2r, 22Ag. (Syn. 17:769; sp.rev. 619.) From the story, "The Gold Bag," by Carolyn Wells.
Winsome Winnie's Way. Edison 7Jl. (17:68; 322.) From the story by Carolyn Wells.

German, Dutch and Danish Drama.

The Robbers. Edison 2Ag. (17:552, 743.) From Friedrich Schiller's drama.
Pelleas and Melisande. Bison 2r, 2S. (n.s. or c.p., mfg. 17:967; sp.rev. 16:477.) From Maeterlink's drama.
King Rene's Daughter. Thanhouser 3r, 1Jl. (17:86, 206; sp.rev. 191.) From Ibsen's drama.

French Drama and Fiction.

Sapho. Majestic 6r, S. (n.s. c.p.; mfg. 17:49 & 1397, sp.rev. 18:30.) From the play by Alphonse Daudet.
The Mystery of the Yellow Room. Union Features 3r, S. (Syn. 17:1328.) From the novel by Gaston Leroux.

Italian Fiction.

The Betrothed. Pasquali 6r, Ag. (n.s. or c.p.; sp.rev. 17:964 & 1047.) From A. Manzoni's novel, "I Promessi Sposi."

Russian Drama.

The Living Corpse. Warner's Features 4r, S. (Com. 18:50.) From Tolstoi's drama.

HISTORY.

Sixty Years a Queen. Barker 6r, S. (Adv. 17:1319; mfg. 1291.) A resume of the great events of the reign of Queen Victoria, 1837-1901.
The 225th Anniversary of the Huguenot's Landing. Thanhouser 3Ag. (Adv. 17:590.)

GEOGRAPHY. TRAVEL.

Mountains.

Through Mountains Majestic. Gaumont 24Jl. (17:570; 429.)
In the Caucasian Mountains. Pathe 2S. (17:988; 1176.)
Ausable Chasm, the Grand Canyon of New York. Pathe 6Ag. (17:558; 842.)
Through the Cumberland Mountains, Tennessee. Essanay 31Jl. (17:446; 842.)
Blazing a New Trail in Glacier National Park, Montana. Pathe 25S. (17:1420; 18:156.)
The Granite Dells of Prescott, Arizona. Selig 4Ag. (Com. 17:744.)
Where Clouds and Mountains Meet. Pathe 2Ag. (17:454; 743.) The Yosemite, California.
The Deschutes Canyon, Washington. Pathe 30S. (18:66; 263.)

Caverns.

A Trip to the Grottos of Baume, France. Pathe 25Jl. (17:346; 636.)

Rivers and Lakes.

Harnessed Falls of the Northwest. Pathe 19S. (17:1314; 18:47.)
The Valley of the Bourne, France. Pathe 29Ag. (17:988; 1175.)
A Little Trip Along the Hudson. Pathe 12Jl. (17:78, 428.)
On the Lakes of Bayrisch, Bavaria. Pathe 15Ag. (17:668; 960.)
The Lakes of Salzburg. Gaumont 12Ag. (17:886; 638.)

Europe.

England and Ireland.

Dublin. Gem 7Jl. (Com. 17:321.)
Cornwall, the English Riviera. Edison 17S. (17:1206; 18:47.)

France.

The Road to Morez. Pathe 20Ag. (17:988; 1175.)
Picturesque Jura. Pathe 15Ag. (17:668; 960.)
The Port of Marseilles. Pathe 15Jl. (Syn. 17:232.)
On the Roads of Dauphine. Pathe 11Jl. (Com. 17:427.)
See also above under Army and Navy, Industries and Religious Architecture.

Italy.

Genoa, the Principal Port of Italy. Pathe 8Ag. (17:558; 843.)
A Promenade in Rome. Pathe 27S. (Com. 18:155.)
In the Abruzzi. Pathe 5S. (17:988; 1283.)
Sicily, the Picturesque. Pathe 26S. (17:1420; 18:155.)

Spain and Russia.

Beautiful Catalogue. Pathe 18Jl. (17:232; 536.)
In Weird Crimea. Pathe 22Jl. (17:346; 536.)

Norway and Sweden.

The Trondhjem Railway. Great Northern 5Jl. (n.s. or c.p.)
From the South of Sweden. Great Northern 23Ag. (n.s. or c.p.)
Views of Stockholm, Sweden. Nestor 10S. (n.s. or c.p.)

Turkey and the Balkan Principalities.

Through Turkey and the Black Sea. Mutual Educational 24Jl. ( Syn. 17:464).
Constantinople, the Pearl of the Bosphorus. Pathe 27S. (17:1420; 18:155.)
In and Around Scutari After its Capture. Pathe 22Jl. (17:346 536.)

Asia.

For China see above under Religion, Manners and Customs, Costume and Private Life and Public and Social Life.

Japan.

Sight Seeing in Japan. Vitagraph 1Jl. (Com. 17:205).
See also above under Religion, Costume and Private Life, Public and Social Life and Parks and Monuments.

India. Hindustan.

In and About Calcutta. Vitagraph 20Ag. (17:758; 1067.)
Quaint Calcutta. Vitagraph 28Ag. (17: 868; 1175.)
Colombo, Capital of the Island of Ceylon. Pathe 2Ag. (17:454; 743.)
See also above under Costume and Private Life and Parks and Monuments.

Palestine. The Holy Land.

Jerusalem and the Holy Land. Edison 16S. (Syn. 17:1206.)

Malay Peninsula.

A Day at Singapore. Melies 4S. (17:1092; 1283.)
Scenes in Singapore. Vitagraph 23S (17:1304; 18:48.)
The Peninsula Straighis Settlements Vitagraph 27Ag. (Adv. 17:817.)
Saigon, Cochin China. Mutual Educational 10Jl. (Syn. 17:244.)

Africa.

In the Land of Dates. Gaumont 31Jl. (Syn. 17:678.)
Quaint Spots in Cairo Egypt. Edison 27Ag. (17:868; 858 & 1175.)
See also above under Public and Social Life.

United States.

New York City.

Historic New York. Kalem 2Jl. (Syn. 16:1386.)
Cosmopolitan New York. Kalem 11Jl (17:76; 427.)
See also above under Public and Social Life and Public Amusements.

Georgia and Tennessee.

Battlefields Around Chattanooga. Edison 13Ag. (17:664; 960.)
Up Lookout Mountain on the Electric Incline. Essanay 13Ag. (17:664; 960.)
See also above under Engineering.
Historic Georgia. Kalem 23Jl. (17:346; 635.)
See also above under Sports and Amusements.

Mountain and Pacific States.

Over the Great Divide into Colorado. Edison 7Jl. (17:68; 320.)
The Grand Canyon of Arizona. Edison 30Jl. (17:456; 842.)
The Grand Canyon of Arizona. Majestic 19Ag. (Com. 17:962.)
Los Angeles Harbor, California. Keystone 1S. (Com. 17:1069.)
See also above under Public and Social Life and Parks and Monuments.
Opportunity and a Million Acres. Pathe 24Jl. (17:346; 635.) Harney County, Oregon.

Oceania.

For Borneo see above under Industries.

The Philippines.

Scenes in Moroland. Selig 20Ag. (Com. 17: 1067.)
See also above under Manners and Customs and Sports and Amusements.

Java.

Snapshots of Java. Melies 7Ag. (17:670; 843.)
See also above under Public and Social Life and Agriculture.
For New Zealand see above under Manners and Customs and Geological Phenomena.

Polynesia.

The Island of Tonga. Pathe 24Jl. (17:346; 635.)
Tahiti, the Picturesque. Pathe 13S. (17:1096; 1391.)
Scenes in Honolulu. Vitagraph 25Jl. (Syn. 17:340.)

ARCHEOLOGY.

A Visit to the Ruins of Pompeii. Pathe 22Ag. (17:766; 1068.)

BIOGRAPHY.

The Life of St. Patrick. Life of St. Patrick Co. 4r, Ag. (Adv. 17:789.)

---

PROPER PICTURES AT THE RIGHT TIME.

The wise man in his proverbs wrote: "There is a time for everything." Experience has proved the truth and wisdom of this proverb. Nothing is so distracting as the untimely inappropriate, and unsuitable. The "out of place" subject (however good it may be), is robbed of its value. In like manner, the timely and appropriate subject (even if slightly inferior), finds its value enhanced by its timely and appropriate application. It has ever been the custom of the Moving Picture Educator, to approach the greater seasons of the year by calling to the minds of the exhibitors, the great advantages to be gained by securing especial, timely and filling programs for that particular season. We are now approaching a season which is perhaps the most important of all holiday seasons, in that its application to life and times are more diverse than any other season. The great American Thanksgiving festival is fourfold. It is historical, patriotic, religious and social. This gives great freedom of selection for most suitable pictures. On account of this variety of demand and the well known fact that manufacturers hold a large number of subjects especially adapted for this occasion, it would be impossible to submit any list on this page; suffice it to say that every exhibitor knows that he has only to make his especial wishes known for a Thanksgiving supply of pictures and his desires can easily be met. It would be unseemly to run a common place, everyday program on either Thanksgiving Eve or Thanksgiving Day. The catalogues of the makers show many especially made "Thanksgiving subjects."

Should these prove insufficient there are many pictures under the other four classes mentioned above that would be exceedingly and usefully appropriate. The "Family and Home-Life subjects," can easily be emphasized. Many historical pictures of the John Alden time and type, complied with many others of early Colonial days, enlarge the list of suitable subjects.

Others are to be found in the patriotic columns which abound in early patriotic enthusiasm. Then there are those of a semi-religious trend of which many are founded upon incidents not remotely associated with timely ideas.

Special Advantages.

Anywhere and everywhere throughout the United States the moving picture exhibitor secures to himself the cordial support of all classes of people when he takes advantage of so great an occasion as that which Thanksgiving Day presents to prove that the moving picture is also equal to the occasion and rises superior to its more ordinary and common place surroundings, to meet the needs of a mighty opportunity. Again, the public at large not only appreciate the timely adaptations presented to them, but eagerly seize upon the occasion to see again, and cherish incidents of the past which bind with stronger ties the facts and traditions of those scenes and occasions which gave birth to a holiday, the like of which is not enjoyed by any other nation on earth. Therefore, make your Thanksgiving Day program well worth while.

Notes of Interest.

The uses of the moving picture in the government service is evidenced by the following extract from a letter received at this office from the Department of Agriculture. "The Rural Organization Service now employs two men who attend to the projection of pictures in connection with our work. Just at present the number of films throughout the Department is very limited and the different bureaus are immediately taking steps to have pictures taken along lines for the greatest public good. The first trip of our young men with the only films available was concluded recently in North Carolina. They are now here working to increase the number of films in the Department."

The growth of the uses of films for educational purposes is always a pleasure to notice on this page, when that growth is under the government direction, as in this instance, it is more commendable than usual.

Another Good Suggestion for the New Name.

Mr. A. H. Girber, of St. Louis, Missouri, in answer to the suggestion that there might yet be coined an all comprehensive term for the motion picture, comes forth as follows:

"In response to your request for a more comprehensive name for moving pictures and the houses where they are exhibited, I desire to offer the word Theodram. The word is made up from two Greek words, Theoreo, view, and Drao, to perform, and means literally, performing views or pictures.

The etymology of the word is as good as any of the many coined words such as Photograph, Telegraph, Telephone, and so on, it has a pleasant sound and is perfectly adaptable to all phases of moving picture activities; for instance, if the word is adopted, you will be able to turn to the Theodramatic page of your morning paper and read the criticisms of the latest Theodrama written by your favorite Theodramatist and produced in the Theodram the night before. Hoping that this suggestion may prove to be helpful."

* * *

The Vitagraph Company have ready for early release a two reel film entitled "Daniel." The subject is taken from "The Book of the Prophet Daniel" and deals with incidents of the life and times of Daniel and his associates Shadrach, Meshack and Abednigo. A full review will be found in the pages of the Moving Picture World which has done justice to the production. From the standpoint of the interested Bible student the scene of Daniel in the Lion's Den will be at once the most interesting, as it is the most familiar, the triumph of the Hebrew young men is thoroughly shown even from "The Burning Fiery Furnace."

* * *

The Edison Company are releasing a "Jerusalem and the Holy Land." On account of the frequency with which this subject is being produced it must be evident that each succeeding film must contain that which its predecessors lack. There are always special religious gatherings in the "Holy City" and there can be no doubt that in time most of these will be filmed. This most recent release promises some additional scenes in the immediate vicinity of Jerusalem including Jericho and Nazareth. The film is also arranged "in geographical sequence for the benefit of those who know their Bible." This means that it must have been prepared with some distinctly educational object in view; under such circumstances it will be a welcome addition to the already large list which it will no doubt ably supplement.

W. H. J.

---

GARDEN THEATER, WHEELING, W. Va.

The Island Amusement Company, Wheeling, West Va., recently opened its Garden theater in Zane Street, that city, to good business. In the evening of the opening day it was impossible to secure standing room. Quite a number of moving picture parties were given. It is evident that the better class of inhabitants of Wheeling appreciate a good picture house, for the streets in the vicinity of the Garden were lined with automobiles of the wealthy. The house exhibits the Mutual program.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Several Styles.

THE Society Theater, Seattle, sends several styles of advertising sheets that it has used from time to time. We like best the Society Theater Film Index, which is quite elaborately done with a design head working in all the licensed trademarks. There is some editorial comment, part of it clipped, some film announcements and some reading matter germane to the pictures, but not relating to any particular release. They use a local events reel Friday and Saturday and this paragraph tells part of the story:

> On account of the cloudy weather last Saturday we were unable to have a moving picture taken of the children at the matinee, but hope to be able to this Saturday.
>
> It is not necessary for the children to pay an admission to the show in order to be in the picture, as we will take all who come. The picture taken will be shown the following Saturday on our screen. All desiring to be in the picture should be in front of the theater not later than 1:30 p. m. Saturday.

It is newsy and well edited; the sort of house organ that makes more business than the mere announcement of the films, because the general matter makes for general interest You must give the fans something to feed their fires with or interest will die.

By way of contrast they send programs from last year and 1911. The latter is the bare announcement of titles, the second gives a small reader, but shows a tendency to get into the later chatty style. It shows a steady and consistent improvement. Manager George W. Ring writes that this department supplies him with a lot of the material—and the issues prove it.

Academic Advertising.

Recently we spoke of the first issue of the Academian, issued by the Academy of Music, Selma, Ala., and asked to see more. The second to seventh issues show a steady and rapid improvement, better paper, better press work and better text. It is a twelve page sheet with a lot of advertising, probably enough to get the sheet out clear of expense, but the advertising does not intrude on the text and there is room for gossip as well as talk of the releases. Where heralds are used they are bound up with the rest instead of merely being slipped in, a much better way and one that insures a copy going with each issue.

Here is a square cut paragraph from one of the issues that can be used by others:

> When you would ponder on the strangeness of things as they are, read a few stories in the "popular" fifteen cent magazines, recall the pictures you have seen, then consider that they want to increase the power of censorship over pictures.

Some of the proofreading is pretty bad, but it is a pity we cannot give in full the story of how the editor posed with other exhibitors for the Vitagraph picture last summer during the Convention. It is well written and would interest even though the writer drops a letter and says "they emitted us to take part, etc.," and he winds up with this sage advice:

> Whenever you see a man with what you consider a "cinch job" try to recall what he was doing five or ten years ago, then go work that hard yourself.

We are going to give more of this stuff later for the benefit of other program publishers. It is one of the most readable sheets we get.

From the Arcade.

The Arcade Theater, Tientsin, sends in a double batch of stuff, including a bill in Chinese ideograph, with the familiar "Spirit of '76" used to illustrate Kalem's "Sheridan's Ride," the cut standing up oddly from the Chinese type.

Something unusually pretentious is a four page and cover folder for "The Cowboy Millionaire" done in black and silver with a cut cover to let through an illustration on the first page. The other three pages are given to a reprint of Mr. McQuade's story in this paper. The Arcade seems to be going in more heavily for the Chinese trade, for all specials are now advertised in ideograph with illustrations. Tientsin is a little out of the beaten track, but they get up a lot of good advertising. September 26th they celebrated their fourth anniversary with a special bill and extra features and decorations. When a company can make good with a limited foreign population and such natives as can be admitted to the same theater, they are deserving of all praise.

Coming Edisons.

The first of the Cleek stories is listed for Edison release November 25th under the title of "The Vanishing Cracksman." Since "His Misjudgment" a number of the Henshew stories have been produced by the Edison Company with excellent effect and with the simultaneous publication of these stories, another Mary series is at the disposal of the exhibitor and is capable of being played back as were the Mary stories. Most children have read "Sylvanus Cobb," and his "Gunmaker of Moscow" has been done in two spirited reels. It should be worth a little extra booming. It is dated the 28th. Gladys Hulette is the author of "A Royal Romance," released the 29th. The interest in the player should give an added interest to the film, which is the story of a musician who woos a princess and wins her heart if not her hand. "A Good Sport," dated the 21st, is by Charles E. Van Loan, the author of "One Round O'Brien." This is the story recently appearing in the Saturday Evening Post, a capital story and one lending itself admirably to filming. They are all pictures that can be used in an advertising way. With Van Loan, for instance, regularly writing for three or four magazines each month, he should have a big following all over the country. Play up the author as well as the play, and talk it up to your patrons. Don't just hire a film and show it. Get all there is out of it—and there's a lot in it.

Poles and "Pola" Bears.

The Shawmut Avenue Theater, Boston, advertises that on Thursday nights it will have a slippery pole climbing contest. If they cannot get the crowd with a straight show a pole-climbing contest is eight degrees better than an Amateur Night. We do not like amateur night, for it encourages a certain spirit of lawlessness the rest of the week. For a half week they announced eight "pola" bears. Too bad Colonel Roosevelt has gone a-sailing, otherwise he might make the house famous through one of his nature faker denunciations. With a piano-playing contest on Monday and a dancing contest on another, it reminds us of what one of the house people said of a burlesque show. Monday was a song contest, Tuesday the country store, Wednesday Cabaret night, Thursday wrestling and Friday Amateur night. Saturday they had the full regular show by way of a novelty and it was a real novelty.

Mr. Stalling's Scheme.

We have spoken of Mr. Stalling's scheme. He has been good enough to send his printing. The scheme has been explained. This matter, therefore, is self-explanatory.

> ANGELUS THEATER
> School Children's Season Matinee Certificate
> Issued to..........................Age......
> School........................Grade........
> This will admit the above scholar to each and every EDUCATIONAL MATINEE given under the supervision of the Spanish Fork Public Schools at the Angelus each and every Wednesday
> Beginning 9/17/13. Ending 1/28'14.
> ..................................Teacher
> A. L. Stallings......................Manager
> Not transferable. Good for Educational Matinees only

> To the Parents:
>
> Arrangements have been made with the management of the Angelus Theater to give an educational program at the Angelus, each and every Wednesday for a period of twenty weeks. The programs will be under the supervision of the public schools and each and every subject will be shown subject to our approval. These programs will be entertaining as well as educating and the parents are urged to help the children secure a season ticket. The twenty weeks' course will be given for fifty cents, making each matinee the small sum of two and one-half cents.
>
> Motion pictures are one of the greatest educators we have at the present time, and this system is being carried on in all the larger cities through the United States.
>
> During the season several parents' days will be given, thereby giving the mothers a chance to visit the performance and see what is being offered their children in the way of educational amusement.
>
> Each Wednesday night will be devoted to educational night. We trust that you will all take advantage of this and see for yourselves what wonderful things are being done in motion pictures.
>
> Help in a good cause by placing the educational motion picture where it belongs, namely, in the public schools.

We Like It.

We like the idea of the Rex Theater, Calgary, which runs a weekly program of the feature productions. It is a well-printed four-page publication, with one page of advertisements which gives space only to the features. This may seem like poor policy to some people, but isn't it better to properly advertise the pulling feature than to divide the space between a number of items, not one of which is given the proper space or attention? If you ask us, it is. If you can make a man interested in one thing and he comes to the theater to see that and finds other interesting matters which have been merely hinted at, we think the general effect will be better than the half completed notices of three or four other subjects to none of which sufficient space can be devoted to give the proper pull.

If you had real green turtle soup and bread and butter on the same bill of fare, would you give the same advertising to each? We think that the Rex has the right basic idea, but we do not think that at least a mention of the other reels would hurt, could the titles be obtained in time.

A Public Notice.

H. Fickensheimer, of the Cozy Theater, writes from Portales, N. M.:

> As I have been greatly benefited by the advertising department of the World, I thought I would contribute my mite. The "Public Notice," however, is not my own idea. The copy was given me > by Mr. Paine, a representative of the General Film Company, Oklahoma City office. It certainly is a business getter for a small town, and will get an exhibitor the money. I would appreciate it if you would know of any exhibitors willing to exchange advertising.

Please note that Mr. Fickensheimer wishes to exchange advertising with others. This department can only indicate the copy. It cannot often give the display. The idea is worth thinking over. The notice follows:

> PUBLIC NOTICE!
>
> Contagious Disease
>
> Doctors Amazed--Portales a Center
>
> DON'T BE ALARMED
>
> During the County Fair a Disease has broken out in Portales which has been named "Blueatas." The symptoms of this Disease are very simple. First the patient feels melancholy, despondent, gloomy, and low in spirits.
>
> A cure has been discovered which will hereafter be called "Laughteratus." After taking this cure the patient feels joyful, gay and mirthful, which is peculiar to the human species. Every one is advised to take this cure by seeing the big comedy program at the Cosy tonite. Six reels will be shown. Admission, children under twelve, 10 cents; adults, 15 cents. Seven o'clock sharp.

In the original the top line is in 96 point Gothic, the next in 36 point, the third line in 30 point and the fourth in 14 point. The body type is 12 point.

From the "Peg."

L. Freeman, of the Furby theater, Winnipeg, writes a chatty letter and promises more. It is to be hoped that he is a man of his word. Here is what he says:

> I have pleasure in inclosing a little of my publicity matter for your opinion. You will find also part of a dodger advertising "The Message to Headquarters" (the printer is now fired). The mayor of Winnipeg sent one of his men around and asked me to have them all destroyed as he took exception to the wording and claimed it would have a bad effect upon children. The matter in the dodger was from "Reel Life" and explained all that was in the film. I called upon the mayor and asked what it was that he thought unfit to publish. I got a polite (?) reply that I was advertising the red light district, and he did not like the words Rescues, Abductions and Gun-play by the mounted police. After I left him the Censor came to the theater and wanted me to cut out parts. This I refused to do and referred him to the Mutual. The film had been passed once and permit issued. I hope you like the other dodgers. Kindly let me hear your opinion on the mayor of our burg.
>
> The Beauty Contest starts next Thursday and I think it will be a big success. I have more entries than I need. The first prize cost me nothing and I received 20% off on the other two.
>
> If you could give me one or two stunts to use here I should be greatly obliged, there is something on nearly every day, but I should like a new one for a change. I have some up my sleeve, but would like to hear from you first. It may be of some advantage to your readers if I explain one or two of my stunts now in use. Hundreds know them already, but there's a big bunch of newcomers in the field to-day and more coming. Ladies Coupon Night—Double tickets used all the week. Ladies keep coupon half draw for lucky number Monday nights. 1st prize (cost $3). Pie Eating Contest. 5 blueberry pies and long table. Boys have hands tied behind. One who eats his pie in shortest time $2, and $1 (cost $4). Bargain day, slip in two cheese reels and watch your box office girl. Amateur Night, nuf' said. Biggest draw of all. Babies Beauty Contest by slides. Also Ladies' Contest.
>
> Business is pretty good in the city. The Victoria Theater opens to-day, vaudeville and pictures 10c.-25c., until recently pictures only Strand Hippodrome doing big business with vaudeville (4 acts and good), 5 reels 1st run. Mat. 10c. Evening 20c. Furby doing all we can handle. Our theater is shortly to be enlarged to enable us to hold them all.
>
> A FEW LINES'
> Drop in and see us.
>
> —
>
> Always the best all ways.
>
> The Time—The Place—The Girl.
> 2-11 p. m.—Furby Theater—for Company
>
> —
>
> If it's the best you desire, it's here.
> If it's here, IT IS THE BEST
>
> —
>
> The cold is out—The warm is in
> And our Keystone always gets the grin.
>
> —
>
> If you're married we wish you joy.
> Come to the show with your girl or boy

A Little Lurid.

We think that the advertising objected to is a little too lurid. It emphasizes a comparatively unimportant section of the film and draws particular attention to matters that most public officials do object to. There was plenty in the subject that could have been played up with advantage in legitimate and interesting fashion. The incidents alluded to are essential to an interesting story and were probably passed by the censors on that account, but they should not have been played up so specifically even if they were mentioned in "Reel Life." The big thrill is the secret service man strung up by the heels and this could have been used to good advantage and without official intervention where the emphasis on the less important features created the impression that the film was other than what it was and so brought about a clash with the officials, which always is to be regretted.

The beauty contest, like the baby contest, is run by means of slides. All are welcome to send in their photographs and slides are made of the twelve most attractive pictures and these are voted upon. There is always more or less of a back kick on such schemes through the disappointment of the losers and the inevitable charge of their friends that the ballot was stuffed. They are good things to keep away from as a rule.

Mr. Freeman should read back for some schemes. Two come to mind at the moment, the battle royal in which half a dozen boys are given soft gloves and the one who lasts the longest gets the prize. Given boys who are not afraid of being hit, and there is a lot of fun in this indiscriminate mixup. Where the laws permit boxing, a couple of awkward boxers, each in a barrel so placed that the contestants are within easy distance of each other gives a good effect, particularly if the barrels tumble over now and then. Frank Howie, of the old London theater, is responsible for the aerial boxing match, in which two boys are suspended from ropes from the flies, the ropes being long enough to give plenty of swing. They are set to swinging and the boy landing the greater number of blows on the other before they come to rest too far apart to hit each other wins the prize.

But there is something wrong with a house that cannot pull the business with a straight show and has to resort to a special feature every night. A first class program and no junk films should get the business in most houses.

A Letter from a Lady.

Mrs. R. L. Beck, of Dunlap, Iowa, wants to know if there are so few women managers as the silence of the suffragette sex would indicate. We would like to know ourselves. There was Miss Dollie Spurr, for example. She used to send in a lot of good stuff, but her long silence would seem to suggest that she has married and quit the business. If she hasn't, we wish she would get on the mailing list again. Mrs. Beck writes:

> It seems there are very few lady managers of picture shows, or else they are backward about saying so. I have seen so many good things in The Moving Picture World and so many have voiced my sentiments exactly. One asked the other day why we saw so much drunkeness in the films and asked why he could not get more pictures with sober characters. Let me whisper to those who are running in small towns that if you insist on having nothing but good, clean pictures your exchange will give you what you ask for. Study your people. Listen to the remarks as the crowd goes out. You can tell pretty well whether or not your pictures are pleasing. One thing to remember is that if you can get the church people with the right sort of films you can still retain the patronage of most of the non-churchgoers. In the large towns it is not possible to get acquainted with your audiences, but in the small towns you can make them your friends. Notice the youngsters. They like it and they will want to come back just because they are noticed. Our people here will not take kindly to the news weekly that is so popular in most places. I seldom make promises, but I did promise that I would not try to force a weekly on them, and they appreciate it. They do not like the parades which form so large a portion of the average weekly.
>
> In the summer I run an airdome and get a good crowd whenever the weather is at all fit to be out in. Now we are quartered in a small place while waiting the completion of our new building, but we are holding our patrons. In a recent issue you asked if managers thought that the use of features interfered with the variety of the program. It is my experience that it does to a certain extent. If the feature is a good one it will hold and draw the crowd for a couple of nights, but the next change should be single reels. A three reel subject once in a while is well enough.

It is our own opinion that a variety of subjects is better, since if the one feature is a poor one the entire show is bad, while in a three or four reel program there must be something that pleases, and yet, on the other hand, B. Nichols, who handles Biograph and Kalem in the European market and for whose opinion we have the greatest respect, thinks that America must follow the European lead and resort to features, filling in with one reel subjects to make up length where necessary. Certain it is that the multiple reel is upon us and that the manager cannot make too close a study of the value or disadvantage of the multiple reel as it affects his own house. We are not trying to guide opinion, but to reflect it, and we will appreciate the opinions of others.

Programs Wanted.

J. C. Finney wants some programs from other exhibitors to guide him in the preparation of one of his own. Will some of the exhibitors please oblige him? Address him at the New Star Theater, Sheridan, Wyo. We are sorry that we cannot supply Mr. Finney with a list direct, but it would require more time than we can spare to compile such a list for him, and brother exhibitors have been so courteous in responding to other requests of this sort that we are certain that he will presently have a wide assortment to select from.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by Epes Winthrop Sargent

Send to "Spec."

OUR old friend "Spec," otherwise Frank E. Woods, the former Spectator of the Dramatic Mirror, is now with the Mutual Film Corporation at Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue, New York City, acting as script head for David Griffiths. He wants good scripts of any sort, particularly those that will suit Reliance, Majestic, Komic and Apollo. When Mr. Woods promises quick action and prompt pay he means what he says. No man in the business can see a story more clearly and no one is more courteous in observing the rights of authors. Send him your best, but only your best. Don't empty your morgue. Send only the cream. He is in touch with many star writers, but he wants variety.

Help! Help!

Very evidently some of our readers did not give heed to Mrs. Brandon's statement that only the scripts of experienced writers would be considered, or perhaps she neglected to say "Honest!" At any rate, this is what she says:

> Never in all my days have I seen such a raft of piffle as has been sent in to me by so-called authors, who claim to be acting upon information gleaned from your column. Will you kindly say for me, if space permits, that I cannot be too emphatic about the statement, no scripts considered except from authors who have three or more produced acceptances to their credit. Nothing but typewritten scripts will be read; neither will scripts that do not contain stamps be read. As a number of the really conscientious Photoplaywrights can testify, Eclair is appreciative of the merits of good plots and action, and shows its appreciation by mailing a check the very day the signed contract is received from the author.
>
> As a matter of fact, never in my knowledge of script buying has any company observed a dispatch of paying for scripts that can be compared with Eclair's. On this score successful authors might do well to chalk up Eclair for a first reading of any split-reel travesties; exceptional one-reel comedies—or two and three reel modern dramas (mostly indoor work, requiring no costumes), which they are about to launch.

Now be nice to a lady.

Three New Inquest Circles.

In case you live in Shreveport, La., please note that H. A. Peterman, Jr., Box 455, that city, wants to start a circle of Inquesters. He is conducting a photoplay page in the Picture News, the Saenger Brothers' house organ, and wants to get in line with Julian Louis Lamothe, who was the first to run a department in a theater program.

The addresses of founders of similar circles in Salt Lake City, Utah, and Decatur, Ill., will be supplied on receipt of a stamped and addressed envelope from a resident of either place.

Please note that it does you no good to ask for the address of a circle conductor a few hundred miles away. You won't get it. The idea of requiring the application is to head off the man in Jacksonville from bothering with requests for advice the man in San Francisco, Sandusky or Skowhegan.

Out On Time.

At last the Photoplay Author has lived up to our optimistic beliefs. The November issue was out November first instead of December thirtieth, and Arthur Leeds assures us that this will be the regular thing hereafter. The magazine carries an interesting article on the photoplay in the Southwest by Burton C. Durand that will open the eyes of many city authors. Mr. Leeds has several signed articles as well as another chapter of the Leeds-Esenwein book. There are several newsy departments and this writer tells what he thinks of Mr. Horace G. Plimpton, of the Edison Company. It is a readable little sheet, and helpful.

Four!

A Chicago school is on the legal gridiron for making lying promises and circulating these promises through the mails.

If a correspondence school of the $2 marked down from $20 style ever told the truth, not a dollar would come in. This is the fourth school to be brought up on the carpet by the Post Office Department.

Wants His Money's Worth.

From a batch of letters received relative to the "ground rules" article in a recent issue, we select and print this postal card communication, hoping that the Big Boss doesn't see it. The anonymous correspondent writes:

> I pay ten cents a week to read the Photoplaywright. Therefore, I want ten cents worth. The stuff in last week's column isn't worth it. All the piffle about submitting scripts could have been boiled down to a few lines—and then been only of doubtful value. There is too much ego in that part of the cosmos—or at least in articles such as that. Give us meaty, usable instruction and we will swear by, not at you.

And yet no more valuable advice has been given in this department since its inception than the advice to play the game fairly and well. It does you no good to learn how to write scripts if you do not also learn how to sell, and the first rule of selling is to adjust yourself to the market instead of trying to form the market over again to suit yourself. We shall be sorry to lose "P. Entip's" ten cents a week, if that is necessary, but we contend that the ground rules argument is "meaty, usable instruction," as set forth above, if only P. Entip will see it in that light.

The only valid objection comes from Bill Kitchell, who sends a half sheet from a base ball guide pointing out that the ground rules hold only when the same are approved by the umpire and the captain of the opposing team. This is a technicality, but what can you expect from a man who lives in Newark and only comes to New York twice a year.

Testimony.

With the kickers kicking that they cannot sell, a rank outsider who does sell, William H. Kitchell, to wit, writes: "There always was a market for live stuff, and the market was never half so good as it is now." Maybe you won't believe this because your stories come back, but please note that the market is for live stuff and only for live stuff.

Fixity of Thought.

Ever hear of the man who was cured of the drink habit because he always went a certain route for his libations, and when they started to repave the street he could not follow his accustomed line of travel and by the time they had the street fixed up again he was over his craving for drink?

Lots of people write scripts the same way. They decide on a line of action and they must go over that route or not at all. If something blocks their way they call it off and start something else.

Just for example you decide that in scene six Mary gets a letter from George, reads it and sits down and answers it. Later on you find that two letters inserted in one scene is not workmanlike, but you cannot see how else to do it. You have decided on that plan of action and you cannot think of anything other than to shove the letter down and let George read it when he receives it, though you know it is better practice to have a letter on the screen when it first appears.

Possibly it never occurred to you to have an extra scene, after your present scene five, where George writes his letter and sends it to Mary. The letter is read then; we see him give it to a messenger. In the next scene Mary gets it and replies, and in that scene only her reply need be flashed upon the screen.

Don't get into set habits of thought. Cultivate flexibility. The script that seems all right may be bettered by a few changes, so watch to see if an alteration in the action will not make for betterment. We know of one script that worked to an unsatisfactory finish. When it came to writing the synopsis, the story ran past the indicated climax to a really good stopping point. After the synopsis page was taken out, a page and a half of typed matter was thrown out and the story re-started from there and worked to the new finish with a vastly better effect. There isn't a day in the year or an hour in the day when it is not possible to make over a script and better it. Don't make up your mind to one line of action and stick to it. Cultivate flexibility of thought.

Chiding Croy.

We do not like to hand it to a brother of the craft, but when Homer Croy, who has been an author of several sorts and also several kinds of editors, rises to remark about using nine and ten envelopes, we simply must grasp him by the hand—and spank his wrist. He very evidently never tried to put a fourteen-page script into a number nine envelope and then lick down the lid. Get tens and elevens and be blessed by all editors.

Coincidence.

If you go stumbling across the Sahara desert and come face to face with a man who by all regular rules should be selling soap and sugar in a town in Wisconsin, it is a coincidence. Probably your grocer friend could tell how he got there, seeing that he is there, but how about these chance encounters in photoplay?

If you move your leads from here to there and need some of the other characters "there," get some good reason, some plausible reason for their presence. Do not have them just happen along. Time was when coincidence would pass, but now editors have grown tired of the unexplained appearances, and the coincidence, unless it is very carefully explained, is apt to damn your chances of acceptance. It has put more than one promising but uninventive author out of business. Don't let it get you.

On Plots.

If more authors gave proper attention to their plots as such, there would be fewer complaints of poor plays. There is too strong a disposition to regard any series of actions as a plot, no matter where the actions lead to. Lately several produced plays and innumerable submitted scripts have run along the line of the criminal who gives up his life to save a little child. No doubt even some directors would be surprised to learn that this is not a true plot, but merely incident; yet there is no completion of the action. The man commits a crime and redeems himself, in theory, by saving a child's life. The film runs to a big scene, but not to a true climax, and no matter what the applause may be, it is not a story that satisfies when the first flush of excitement is over. The true test of the story is the impression that it leaves the next day. If there is no appreciable impression, it was not a good story. If there is a sense of dissatisfaction there is still less a good story, or perhaps no story at all.

Make certain first that your incident really tells a story. Then be certain that it tells an interesting story. After that try to get it into the best possible technical form, but no matter what the form, if the story is not there; if it does not grip, both the technique and the film have been wasted. More attention to plot and a little less to technique would help a lot. Mrs. Breuil, who has been getting as high as a hundred dollars a reel for her two reel stories since she left the Vitagraph (Pathe's Race Memories, to give one instance) remarked the other day that she had a lot of synopses that were not quite right and they would stay by her until they were right. She has an almost perfect command of technique, but her first care is to get the story exactly right before she constructs her plot of action and so it follows that her action, which is the translation of the plot into performance, must be right because her synopsis itself—the plot itself—is right. With her technical equipment she could gloss over a weak point with a sensation punch, but she is too conscientious a workman to scamp her plot for the sake of finishing up a story quickly. She must have a real plot before she begins work, and so it comes that her work commands the top prices.

Suppose you try plotting for a time without regard to the technique. Without plot, technique is worthless.

A Lesson In Contentment.

After a lot of noisy talk from the discontented unsuccessful, it is a positively restful pleasure to get a letter like this from a Southern correspondent, a woman who has found the way. She writes:

> Nearly nine months ago I came to you with my woes, asking your advice, which was freely given and profited by. Through the months of silence I have read your advice to others, for I am an ardent reader of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Being a housekeeper and a mother, I am not a very prolific writer, having written since I began (about a year ago) twenty-three plays, of which I have sold six for a total of $150. Eight I have withdrawn, some because they came back marked "old theme," and others I intend to rewrite, as I believe that I can improve on them. Two have been lost. I shall recopy those. Four are out at present. One I sold to the Frontier, two to the New York Motion Picture Company, and two to the Majestic. The four last were sold recently. The last sale, to the New York Motion Picture Company, for a Domino, brought me $50 and a kind note from the editor, saying it was one of the best stories sent in for some time.
>
> Recently I answered some woman's letter in a paper, who claimed that editors stole the plots, etc. Of course you know that type of letter. (We most assuredly do. E. W. S.) Since then I have received more than a dozen letters from would-be writers, asking for information. The letters were very funny, some of them seeming to think that they were conferring a favor upon me by letting me tell them what I have learned.

Here is a busy housewife and mother who can write and in her first year do slightly better than 25% of sales. She does not say that editors keep her scripts too long, that they pay too little, or anything of that sort. She goes her quiet way with a contented mind AND MAKES GOOD BECAUSE SHE IS CONTENTED. There is a lesson here for others. If you would put in half the energy on your scripts you spend in kicking, you would be much more apt to make good. A contented mind is one of the best assets of the real writer. You cannot do your best work if you feel that the plot will be stolen, that it will not bring a proper price or be held too long. It is a physical and moral impossibility to do your best work without the fullest incentive.

Cultivate contentment; not resignation but contentment, and like this woman who has won, you too may find success.

Good Advice.

In the New Orleans Spotlight, Julian Louis Lamothe, head of the Inquest Club there, offers this excellent advice:

> A practice which we have followed for over a year is to get in touch with another writer and work out a mutual criticism scheme. This is an excellent method of self-advancement? One writer can always see another's faults more clearly than his own, and he not only guards against his own errors, but against those present in the script he has criticised.

The only supplement to this should be the proviso that the other writer knows his business to the point where he can appreciate the mistakes. Given this criterion, the advice is sound. The writer will not make mistakes, knowing them to be mistakes. If he could see that they were mistakes he would not make them, but the outside man, not sharing the paternity of the story, can see the flaws and blemishes and point them out to the proud parent. Mr. Lamothe and Marc Jones are paired as critics, and have been for some time. It is a good scheme and it often will save the cost of professional criticism and, better still, help two persons instead of one.

Cheer Up.

Here is a paragraph from a letter we wrote recently to a newspaper man who wanted to know if it would pay him to stick to the game. It may cheer you up, too:

> As to sticking at the game, that is up to you. If you are willing to forget that you are a newspaper correspondent and short story writer and begin at the bottom, you stand a slightly better chance than the rank outsider, but don't get the foolish fancy that because you know all about story writing that you know all about photoplay; you don't, and so long as you think you do you never will. That is where a lot of the fiction writers have made their mistake. They knew it all before them came in and they have learned nothing since in consequence.
>
> The really big photoplay writer of tomorrow and the day after is not the man who is getting fifty and one hundred dollars a reel right now. Most of these chaps are magazine men who have broken into the game and toss off the stuff in return for the checks and leave some poor director the trouble of "fixing up" their script. The star of tomorrow is going to be the plodder of today, the man who is making possibly not more than ten per cent. of sales and learning more from his rejections than the self-sufficient fiction man ever will know about technique. And by technique I do not mean the mere form of writing the play, but the larger technique that tells a man what will not get over and what should be avoided. If you'll start where the rest did, clear down at the bottom, your climbing may be rapid, because you already know how to plot, but you must start in the cellar if you want to last all the way to the roof. The second story man is bound to get pinched in the long run.

It may seem a little hard to read of this man or that getting fabulous sums for stories (generally about three times the amount of the actual check), but if you keep plugging away, seeking to perfect yourself in the plot and its development for photoplay, you'll last longer and make more money than the man who breezes in with a magazine name and rests content with that.

Spotting Stories.

Learn to recognize plots, no matter how well disguised they may be. An author was telling the other day of a plot and how it came to be perceived, and did not recognize the fact that the history of the conception of the plot was in itself a plot of merit.

Ten chances to one that you pass by a score of good plots for every one you perceive. Start out some morning with the intention of seeing how many plots you can mark down by nightfall. Look for a plot in every little happening, a scrap of paper borne along by the breeze, a chance meeting with a friend, a burning house, a face at a window, almost anything will yield a plot if you have the imagination and the perception. Have a "plot day" and see what the catch will be. It at least will prove an interesting experiment.

Inquiries.

NOTE—No questions can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. A list of addresses to which photoplays may be sent will be mailed on receipt of a STAMPED AND ADDRESSED ENVELOPE. No question can be replied to that necessitates the handling of a script.

LOIS.—You surely are welcome back to the department. The Answers Man has missed you. Dave Kirkland, in "Broncho Billy Gets Square," is Dave himself, following a custom of using the player's own name. It was not True Boardman. Mr. Boardman was the brother in "Broncho Billy's Brother," and the gambler in "Broncho Billy's Gun Play," if you remember those. Miss Marguerite Loveridge was the bride in "Buck Richard's Bride." She is at present with Apollo, but is not in all of those Mace releases. She has also played with Biograph and Keystone and, as you say, is a competent and attractive actress. She is a sister of Miss Mae Marsh, of the Biograph, by the way. Don't wait so long between questions.

B. M.—There is a rather small market for war dramas. Try Kalem, Kay-Bee and western Universal. Few are using Mexican stories right now other than directors who make their own scripts. Try Selig.

A. E. B.—Infidelity should not be regarded as comedy material. The lighter crimes are more apt to pass in comedy than in dramas, but it all depends on the treatment in either case. Do not label your script a full or half reel. Given the same script, some directors would produce five hundred feet, and others twice that much.

RUBEENA.—Look here, Rubeena, you are getting so you scold your poor old Answers Man every other week. Naughty! We never said you didn't know how to spell "kind of;" we wrote it "kinda" ourselves.

LIGIOW.—Your letter is written on proper script paper, though a heavier weight would be better. You cannot determine the length of a play by any set rule. Send for the missing number.

S. H. V.—Your logic is interesting but specious. About 5,000 persons are trying to write scripts, and as fast as they drop out others come up, mostly coaxed to try by the glittering promises of the schools, but the fact remains that the field for real writers is not at present over crowded, nor even comfortably full. This fact is deduced from the inability of the editors to obtain a sufficient quantity of really first-class stuff.

G. E. M.—Please mention characters not leads. Miss Iva Shepard was Mme. Zigoletti in "A Friend of the Family." Miss Weber was not in that cast.

H. A. K.—The paper you use is rather thin. It will not prevent the sale of a script, but it will not help any. No one knows what some editors mean by the stuff they write on rejection slips. Sometimes it's the office boy. Ignore the comment and accept only the fact the story was not taken.

C. H.—One submission covers Kay-Bee, Broncho, Keystone and Domino.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

☞ Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 7.

BEST answer will be published and names of others sending in replies of excellence will be published in the Roll of Honor.

* * *

Suppose one of the bearings of your motor or generator became sufficiently hot to pull the babbitt, and it was necessary that you re-babbitt the same, what brand of babbitt would you use, and how would you go about the job? Explain in detail the various necessary steps of the whole performance.

Roll of Honor.

The following correspondents have sent in excellent replies to Question No. 1:

J. Stone, Albany, N. Y.
L. C. La Graw, Albany, N. Y.
W. L. Johnston, Toronto, Canada.
Henry Joesten, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The reply selected for publication is by Mr. Emmett E. Mickey, operator Luna Theater, Fostoria, Ohio. Mr. Mickey's reply is not more correct than some of the others, but it is put in very good form and is understandable throughout.

The reply of friend La Graw was correct, but too technical, as also was that of the Toronto brother. Brother Stone's reply was good, but some essential things he omitted, though I think he understands the field rheostat very well indeed.

Reply to Question No. 1 By Emmett E. Mickey.

The Question:

Explain in detail what a field rheostat of the generator or motor consists of. What it is for, and how it acts.

The Answer:

> A field rheostat consists of a number of resistances placed in series with the shunt windings of a generator or motor, through which all current flowing around the shunt winding, must pass. They are so arranged that they can be cut in or out of circuit, without breaking the circuit. The current enters at a movable lever, thence passing to the contact point upon which it happens to rest, then through the resistance in circuit to the windings of the field magnets. The business of the field rheostat is to control the electro motive force, or voltage. It regulates the amount of current flowing around the shunt winding (a wire wound around body of magnet. Ed.) of a generator or motor. The e.m.f. of a dynamo depends upon two things, viz: (1) The density of the magnetic flux, or, in other words, the number of lines of force between the poles of the magnets, and (2) The number of wires cutting through these lines of force per second. But instead of increasing or decreasing the speed, or amount of wire on the armature, in order to secure the cutting of a greater number of lines of force per second, we increase or decrease the magnetic density of the field magnets, thus increasing the number of lines of force, which is exactly what we do when we move the lever of the field rheostat, cutting resistance in or out of the circuit. The field rheostat is generally made up of a number of coils of wire (coiled for the sake of compactness) of a kind which offers high resistance to the flow of current, therefore, when we move the lever cutting out one or more of these resistance coils we allow more current to flow around the field magnets, and the greater the e.m.f. (voltage) the more current will be passed against a given resistance. So by cutting out resistance, less pressure is consumed, therefore, more current will be passed against the resistance of the field rheostat, which increases the ampere turns, or number of lines of force, thus raising the voltage of the dynamo.
>
> Now, the number of lines of force, or, in other words, the density of the magnetic field depends upon the number of ampere turns on the field pieces, which are equal to the number of turns of wire multiplied by the number of amperes flowing, therefore, by cutting in resistance, we lessen the ampere turns and decrease the number of lines of force, thus lowering the voltage. Given a good rheostat, with all the resistance in circuit and the generator running up to speed, the voltage should register zero.
>
> The field rheostat of a motor increases or decreases the speed of the motor, for, as the armature revolves, cutting lines of force, it also generates an e.m.f., which is called counter electro-motive force because it tends to flow in the opposite direction of that which is driving it. Now, the motor tends to develop a counter e.m.f. equal to that which is driving it, which it would do were there no load or friction, which is impossible. It will, however, be very near the same. Now to increase or decrease the speed of a motor, we must arrange it so the armature must run faster or slower in order to develop an e.m.f. nearly equal to that which is driving it, which we do in cutting in or out resistance at the field rheostat. By cutting in resistance you decrease the number of lines of force, thus reducing the speed of the armature, because it must run faster in order to develop an e.m.f. equal to that which is driving it. As I have said, the e.m.f. depends upon the number of lines of force, or, the number of wires entering through lines of force per second, therefore, in decreasing the number of lines of force, the armature must run faster in order to cut the same number of lines of force per second. While if we increase the number of lines of force by cutting out resistance at the field rheostat, the armature will decrease its speed, because it will not have to travel so fast to cut the same number of lines of force per second as it formerly did. If it kept traveling at the same rate of speed, it would develop a counter e.m.f. higher than that which is driving it, which would be impossible.

Overloaded.

Fred Yannut, Waddington, N. Y., writes:

> I have a small plant, consisting of one 6 h.p. engine and one 2½ k.w. 115 volt d.c. dynamo. This machine only pulls 12 incandescent lights and the projection arc. The outfit is new. The dynamo gets very hot, and the engine works badly and pounds very hard, though nothing is loose. What kind of an outfit should I have to run a projector and thirty or forty extra lights? Have been told that if I had a 3½ k.w., 60 volt dynamo my engine would do the work fine. With the present outfit I get splendid light; could ask for no better, but it is going to ruin very fast. My engine should use one pint of gasoline per h.p. hour and instead of this it is using a quart. Something wrong somewhere.

Your 2½ k.w. dynamo is too small, particularly in view of the fact that it is a 110 volt machine. It is rated at 2,500 watts, and 20 amperes at 110 volts is 2,200 watts—almost the entire capacity of your generator. You should have a 60 or 65 volt dynamo of 3½ k.w. capacity. As it is you are wasting the difference between 110 volts and about 50 volts in the necessary resistance. In other words, you are wasting more power than you are using, so far as the projection arc is concerned. In this connection I would suggest that you procure a copy of the motion picture Handbook, price $2.50, from the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, and study the action of resistance, pages 107 to 141 inclusive. You can reduce the load on your dynamo by cutting in more resistance. If your 6 h.p. engine is overloaded you certainly have a tremendous overload on the generator, and you will soon burn it out if you do not cut in additional resistance, and thus cut down the amperage. Better get a new generator right away—a 60 or 65 volt, 3½ k.w. machine.

The Guy at the Crank.

By Ernest Eade.

Operator at the Hanna Theater, Hanna, Alberta, Canada.

Did you ever go to a picture show,
To sit in the dark and stare,
And wonder how in creation
The pictures got up there?
It isn't the soft, slick manager
Whom you have got to thank;
It's the half-baked, oily son-of-a-gun,
Who cusses and twists the crank.

He goes to his little two-by-four,
Iron-lined like a prison cell;
He starts to make the film chase through,
And soon it's hotter than—well
You talk of the steamship stoker,
And the heat of his fire's bank,
But the stoker's dream is like ice cream
To the chump who turns the crank.

To the picture show is where you go
To sit in the dark and stare;
You forget there's another world outside
When you're snugly seated there;
You watch the actors play their parts;
To you it is all a dream,
But it's very real to the guy at the wheel
Of the picture show machine.

Oh, where do operators go
When they leave this vale of tears?
Is there some cool place in celestial space
Where they pass their after years?
Or do they mingle with the throng
Where sulphurous fumes are dank,
And hear Old Nick, when the flames are thick
Shout: "Hey, there! twist the crank."

Fuse Testing and Installation.

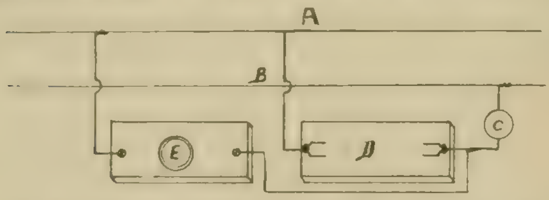
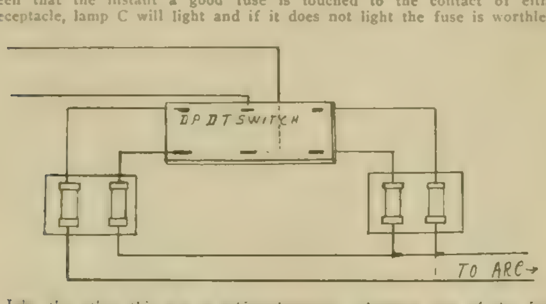
From Chicago [illegible]:

> It seems to me that there ought to be some quick, convenient and reliable way to test fuses. Can you suggest something? I would like also to have you set forth your views as to the best method of installing fuses on projection circuit.

You are perfectly correct, Chicago, in assuming there should be a convenient and reliable method for testing fuses, and if you have a Handbook you will find same described and illustrated on page 63, and the installation of projection circuit fuses, as well as a fuse tester, which I designed, is illustrated on page 64. For your benefit, however, I will re-illustrate them here.



The above illustration requires no explanation, other than to say that A and B are mains of any circuit which is always alive. C is an ordinary incandescent lamp of any c. p. D is an ordinary cartridge fuse receptacle, and E is an ordinary plug fuse receptacle. It will be readily seen that the instant a good fuse is touched to the contact of either receptacle, lamp C will light and if it does not light the fuse is worthless.



Like the other this one is self-explanatory. Suppose one of the fuses blows; you merely throw the switch over and instantly cut in the lines on a new set of fuses. Of course, if one of the new set blows immediately, then you will have to look for trouble. The advantage of this system is that it will often be the means of avoiding annoying delays. The switch should be located within reach of the operator. All that is required is two fuse receptacles and a double-pole double-throw switch of sufficient capacity to handle the current of the projection circuit.

From Canada.

Mr. C. Wallace, Hamilton, Ontario, writes:

> Concerning the matter of the slide illustrated in October 18th issue, I wish to say that making slides on glass without any sizing is quite possible, as I have been doing this for five years. The only thing I use is a fine pen and a good quality of drawing ink. For heavy letters use a stub or heavy pen. With regard to the double spot, concerning which we hear so much, I was troubled that way, but eliminated the difficulty by setting my carbons perfectly parallel, with the lower slightly in advance of the upper, setting my lamp at about a 15 degree angle from the perpendicular. The result was a perfect spot. Am using 60 cycle current through a Fort Wayne compensarc, with 50 amperes at the arc. Personally, I think the New Orleans brother's suggestion as to putting the questions in book form, without the answers, is a good one, selling the same at a reasonable price. Those who desire to learn would then have to get down to brass tacks and dig. This plan would give everyone, both in cities and small towns, the same chance. I have been operating for more than seven years, except for about a year I spent in the Canadian Westinghouse service in this city, but what I still don't know about operating would fill the British Museum. I spent the time with the Westinghouse Company at the princely salary of 15 cents an hour in order to acquire knowledge of electricity, but I do not regret it. I have one of your latest Handbooks, and there is nothing like it. Concerning the question in October 11th issue, it is a sticker to any one but an engineer, or an electrician far above the ordinary, and I admit that it sticks me, although I have tried to learn, and believe I am not altogether a failure. I am still looking for knowledge. I believe it would be a good move on your part to tell the boys what books on electrical theory you consider the best. I do not think there is an average of one operator in twenty who can answer either Question No. 1, or 2.

That is quite correct, brother, and yet the other nineteen operators are likely at any time to be called upon to take charge of and handle dynamos and motors. How are they going to do this intelligently unless they know something of electrical theory and practice? The questions may be difficult, granted, but on the other hand there would be no use in asking questions that a school boy could answer. I have received some very good replies to Nos. 1 and 2 already, and a couple of them are very complete indeed. As to the list of books, as I said before this is under consideration. I would ask operators to send in the names of any books which they have found to be of benefit. The knowledge necessary to answer most of the questions can be dug out of the second edition of the Handbook, but of course it is only set forth very briefly there, since to give all such matters in detail, together with the vast amount of other information necessary, would have made a book of a thousand pages. As to the proposition of putting the questions in book form, I thought that over, but I believe the present plan is the better one. As to the slide matter, I cannot understand how the ink is kept from spreading. My own experience is that ink will spread on raw glass.

Some Very Interesting Data.

(Continued from last week.)

Mr. Martin continues as follows concerning the illumination of auditoriums where projection is used:

> The first consideration is to avoid all sources of light which will cause glare. Wall brackets fall in this category and should never be placed in the range of vision between the spectator and the screen. Indirect illumination from chandeliers or cone lighting is highly preferable as it best avoids glare.
>
> The intensity of illumination should be graduated from the screen outward toward the rear of the auditorium, and should average about 0.2 foot candle at the level of the backs of the seats. The value at the rear where the movement of spectators is congested may generally be increased to one foot-candle with satisfactory results.

Mr. Martin, I think, treats a very large subject with much brevity. He is quite correct when he says the intensity of illumination should be graduated from the screen outward to the rear of the auditorium, but it is not much use in saying that the illumination should average about 0.2 foot-candle at the level of the backs of the seats without explaining, in a great deal of detail, just how the exhibitor, manager, or operator is to determine when his illumination reaches that density. If friend Martin has any practical scheme by means of which the average man can measure the light at his chair backs, and apply his rule, let him stand forth and be heard in the Department without undue delay. The editor of this department has seen a great many different lighting schemes, indirect and otherwise, in operation. In the first edition of his Handbook he illustrated and described a cone system of lighting, which he then believed, and still believes, to be the ideal system for a moving picture theater, provided it be properly and carefully applied. Which means, in other words, that the cones be made exactly right and the lights hung in them at exactly the right height. Side lights I am opposed to as a means of illumination. Wall brackets, no matter how artistic they may be, must either be so dull as to give off little or no illumination, or else it is annoying to the eye. They should be used, if used at all, purely for ornamentation. In my opinion, a great deal more light than friend Martin indicates can be used, without injuring the projection in the least, provided it be rightly done by a properly designed and carefully installed cone system of lighting. I am not very strong on the matter of light value when it comes to dealing in foot-candles, but, nevertheless, I think 0.2 of a foot-candle is very dim, and where the light comes straight down from above, and the direct rays cannot meet the eyes of the audience, I am very sure that a much more brilliant illumination can be had without injury to the projection or annoyance to the audience

Umph—and Likewise Huh.

Mr. J. N. Baker, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, says:

> We are confronted with the problem ("problem" is good: Ed.) of projecting a picture in a room 40 x 100 feet, having an 11 foot ceiling. The floor being flat, would you advise (a) using an 8-inch e. f. lens and projecting an 11-foot picture the full 100 feet, clearing the heads of the audience as best we can, or, (b) curtain off about 20 feet, and bringing the screen that distance ahead, thus making an 80-foot throw, and project a smaller picture, which could be shown correspondingly higher? I know in the Handbook you advise against the flat floor, but we are up against it and would be glad of advice. We could show on a plaster wall if using the entire length.

Such a room is absolutely unsuitable for moving picture purposes. If you show an 11-foot picture, the picture will come within three feet of the floor and the heads of persons entering will interfere in the light for a long way back; also the front row will have to be pretty well back from the screen to avoid interference. You would gain something, of course, by cutting off 20 feet, but, even so, no matter what you do you will have light interference when people come in and take a seat anwhere near the front. You can easily figure out just what the gain will be. Draw an elevation of the room to scale, figure the height of your picture and locate its lower edge, and from that draw a straight line to the lens location and you can then measure from that line to the floor at any point, and see just what the effect will be. Frankly, the only advice I can conscientiously give you would be not to use the room at all.

There is, however, one possibility, viz.: If there is a basement, and you can secure permission to lower the whole floor from front to back on a slope of about 3 or 4 feet, then you will have a fairly passable proposition. If this can be done, I would drop the front end of the floor down at least 3 or, if possible, 4 feet and make it level back for 20 or 30 feet, thence running a straight slope up to within about four feet of the entrance wall. This can be accomplished, if it can be done at all, by sawing the ends of the floor joists off flush with the wall and lowering the whole thing bodily. Possibly you can secure permission to do this by filing an indemnity bond, guaranteeing the owner against the cost of replacing the floor in its original position when you give up the lease.

Size of Picture.

Mr. J. W. Cohen, Pittston, Pennsyivania, inquires what size picture I would advise with a projection of about 75 feet in a hall 50 feet wide. Not more than 18 feet and not less than 16 feet. Between those figures suit yourself. Personally, I think I would prefer sixteen.

A Couple of Lines.

Mr. James R. Cheney, El Centro, California, writes as follows:

> Just a couple of lines to let you know we have recovered from the hot weather. In October 11th issue Texas asks ideas on interior coloring. The Theater Tulane (seating capacity 500), where I am employed, has been open since August 9th last, and is the prettiest and most up-to-date house in Imperial Valley. It has a cream ceiling and light brown walls (don't you mean tan color? Ed.) and an indirect lighting system consisting of six 40 watt lamps, with four side lights on either side, the latter being red. These lights use 25 watts each and burn throughout the show. Equipment is Power's 6A, projecting a 13½-foot picture, at 87 feet, with 30 amperes of current through a mercury arc rectifier. The house employs all union help, and is the only one in the Valley that does so. The manager, Mr. C. M. Applestil, has been in the business for twenty-five years and will stand for nothing but the best in projection, no matter what the cost may be. With regard to Lake View, Oregon's idea of the questions, I think he had a bum steer. I have been in the business a little more than five years, and have put in four of them in small towns, but when I finally got into a city I did not get lost. I believe that, for the benefit of the operator, it would be best not to publish the questions. Let them study.

That couple of lines of yours is some "couple," Brother Cheney, but it is all right at that. Will you kindly shake friend Applestil's hand for me! he is my kind of a manager, and the kind of manager who will succeed, too. As to your remark, "Let them study," well, that sounds easy, but the basic idea of the questions is not only to "let them study," but to induce them to study by giving them something to work on.

A Really Nice Piece of Work.

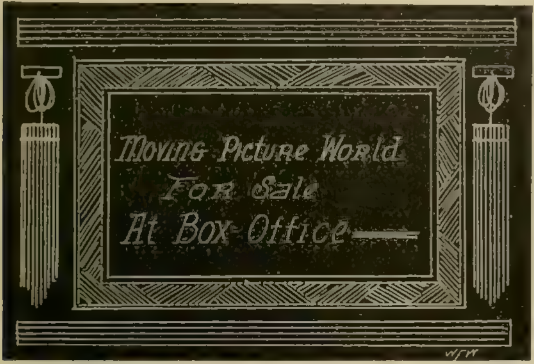
Mr. William F. Wood, Chicago, Illinois, sends in two slides for which he is entitled to much credit. They seem to be coated with some kind of water color preparation, which is perfectly white. Possibly it is a bon ami solution, I do not know. However, it is not the coating which interests me so much as the really nice work friend Wood has done in drawing the design. In the one shown he has covered the top and bottom bar of lines with purple gelatine, and the side ornament with canary yellow, the wording and its border being clear white. The colors cannot, of course, be shown in a cut. The other slide submitted is equally good, but of an entirely different design, being an ornamented circle in which is an announcement of three special films. I do not know that I ever saw an announcement slide which struck me as being more effective than are these, though it must be something of a job to make them. Brother Wood's letter is as follows:



> These slides are coated with a dope I make myself (What is it? Ed.) and the design is drawn with a steel point. With this coating it is possible to rest the hand on the same while working, without either rubbing or blotting. Mr. Kaho's sample slide, shown in issue of the 18th, is very pretty, but I am almost sure the brother did some transferring first. (Friend Kaho, first having placed one hand on Webster's unabridged dictionary, and the other in the region of his upper left hand vest pocket, swears he did not do anything of the kind, Ed.). The slides I am sending you have a very beautiful appearance on the screen, and can be read at a glance. They have been pronounced very artistic.

A New Projector Oil.

Mr. O. J. Sybert, Marietta, Ohio, sends a quart of Latchaw's Motion Picture Machine Oil, and says:

> Upon receipt of this oil I wish you would place it for a try-out and report results. The writer is interested in the company manufacturing this lubricant. We prepare several different oils, and have for some time been experimenting on a moving picture oil, and now we believe we have found one which is satisfactory in every respect.

The sending of a quart of oil to my office is not sufficient. I have no facilities here for testing out lubricants. If Mr. Sybert would care to send out samples, I will forward him the addresses of a dozen operators, to each of whom he must send one pint of the oil. They will report to me and I will decide as to the merits of the oil according to their reports. These operators will be men competent to make an intelligent test.

A Rewinder.

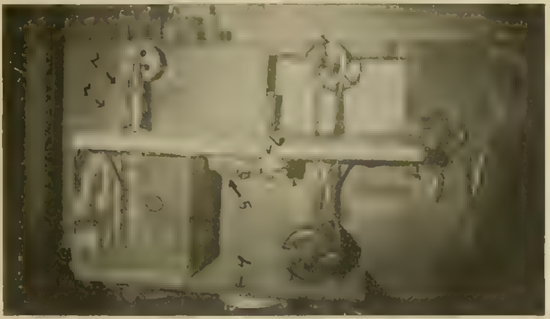
Mr. George Denniston, Ellsworth, Kansas, wants to know why all this talk about the questions. Says he does not believe that the publication of questions and replies will help anyone to pass an examination, except in cases where they possess real knowledge, since if they tried to pass simply through having learned something by heart they will get tangled up very quickly. He also remarks that there are many operators in small towns who, if given a chance, would make good men, and most of them are getting fair salaries considering the hours they put in. He says that Ellsworth has 2,000 population and that he runs two shows a night, of three reels each, no Sunday work, and gets $15.00 per week. Admission to the theater, 10 cents. He then continues:

> And now I will send something that may help someone. I tried a good many different makes of rewinders, but found them all objectionable in one way or another, so I re-constructed one as per enclosed photograph.
>
> I can find no fault in this machine, but lots of good. It runs so noiselessly that it cannot be heard ten feet away. Film may be rewound as tight as desired, and either fast or slow. Referring to the picture (0) is where the film box will set when the machine is finished; (1) is a flat pulley on the reel shaft; (2) a strip of hardwood which bears on the surface of 1, and (3) is a bolt attached to the rewinder standard passing through the hole in the hardwood strip with a thumb screw and washer on it. As will be seen, the tightening or loosening of this screw provides greater or less tension on the reel, and the film is rewound as desired. The other end of the machine very largely explains itself. The reel shaft carries a five-inch pulley; (4) is an adjustable rheostat to govern the speed of the motor, and (5) is a small 2 c.p. lamp under the heavy plate glass on the top of which the patching is done; (6) is a switch for the motor. Hardwood strip (2) is hinged at the bottom and there is a spiral spring between the thumb screw and the strip.



Many thanks, Brother Denniston, for the contribution of the rewinder photograph. Such a device would unquestionably be very effective. It is the best home-made rewinder I have seen up to date, and the application of the tension is in such excellent form as to be commended. With such a machine as this, as I have often pointed out, the rewinding can be done at slow speed, thus avoiding noise, and at the same time providing plenty of tension, so that the film will not require pulling down, but will be rewound tightly, thus preventing the formation of rain marks.

Greenville, Texas, Answered.

Port Arthur, Texas, writes:

> In October 24th issue I notice Greenville, Texas, is experiencing a bad flicker, or flashing, when using an ordinary three-wing shutter on d.c. I am of the same opinion as yourself, viz: that his trouble lies entirely in the shutter. I would suggest that probably Greenville is using the narrower type of shutter put out by the Power's Company, which, under certain conditions, gives a flicker or flashing effect, especially when using a semi-reflecting screen. I think if Greenville will procure from the Power's Company one of the wider blade shutters, such as they are now using, the trouble will cease.

If Port Arthur is right then Greenville's trouble is travel ghost, and not flicker, or flashing. If this is the fact and Greenville is using a long focal length lens he can probably remedy the defect as follows: get a soft leather strap, one inch wide by six inches long, and after passing it over the shutter shaft, between the bearings of the bracket, attach a small weight to its lower ends, the idea being to form a brake which will retard the shutter just enough so that it will be held constantly back against the gears. Having done this, set the shutter so that travel ghost is eliminated and the trouble will disappear. Don't overdo the weight matter, however, or the machine will run hard.

Economizer Trouble.

Los Angeles, California, says he is using a Preddey economizer, and, while it works all right on 30 or 35 amperage contacts, when he connects it to the 40 ampere lug it blows a 60 ampere fuse. Says he has examined it thoroughly and has found no sign of a short or other trouble. Has broken off the 35 ampere lug, and consequently has to use the 30, which gives too weak amperage.

I am afraid I cannot help you, Los Angeles. You had better install a rheostat temporarily and send your economizer back to the manufacturer for overhauling. If you have stated matters correctly there is something radically wrong with it somewhere. Have sent your letter to Brother Preddey.

National (Biscuit) Board He-Haw!

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Whether the [illegible] I cannot say. It [illegible] the careless man is not a good operator, and what is more he never will be. There is not an over supply of [illegible] operators in New York City, or anywhere else that I know of, [illegible] either poor or mediocre work. [illegible] of the Handbook. [illegible] You might as well leave it out altogether and use water only.

Testing for Grounds.

[illegible]

Don't Disturb Their Slumbers.

[illegible]

> [illegible]

[illegible]

A New Torch.

[illegible]

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

By F. H. Richardson

420 Pages Illustrated

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Comments on the Films

Licensed

"ELISE, THE FORESTER'S DAUGHTER" (Edison), November 8.—An out-of-door "woodsy" story, with Mary Fuller in a part like that of Babbie in "The Little Minister." The slight plot is made fascinating by her artistic work, ably assisted by Augustus Phillips and Harry Beaumont. The pastoral touches awaken the interest of the observer early in the film. A very pleasing offering.

"OLD COUPONS" (Biograph), November 8.—A very appealing character story, featuring an old man who makes his living collecting cigar coupons. A little girl befriends him and when he is fatally shot he leaves all his money to her. Fine photography, sincere acting, and a pleasing story combine to make this a successful release.

"THE SILENT WARNING" (Kalem), November 8.—This story has melodramatic moments and gets up a fair degree of interest. There are certain points which are not very clear. It is not shown just what purpose was to be served by blowing up the magazine, as this would not injure any construction work in charge of the foreman. The latter's love for the daughter of the Italian saloon keeper seemed also a little strange. This is quite entertaining in a way, but lacks the convincing quality. The photography is good.

"HIAWANDA'S CROSS (Lubin), November 8.—The close of this picture would have been more effective if it had been clearly shown that Hiawanda knew the full meaning of the cross and was willing to give up her people to follow it. Her religious impulses through the whole picture were too much taken for granted. Scenically this is a wonderfully entertaining reel, the settings being very beautiful. The love of the girl for the missionary was convincingly shown, but the spiritual side of the story is merely suggested. Romaine Fielding and Mary E. Ryan appear in the leading roles.

"BRONCHO BILLY'S SECRET" (Essanay), November 8.—A Western release of about ordinary interest, in which the girl's father robs a stage, is fatally shot in the subsequent pursuit, and Broncho Billy keeps knowledge of the crime from the girl. While not new in plot, the picture is well handled and convincingly portrayed throughout.

"TORTOISES AT CLOSE RANGE" (Patheplay), November 8.—An instructive insight is here afforded into the habits of the tortoise, both land and water varieties. The battle over a lizard at meal time was especially interesting. A pleasing nature study.

"EGYPTIAN TEMPLES" (Patheplay), November 8.—This, on same reel with above, gives views of the temples of Luxor and Edfou, now partly in ruins, statues of the Pharaohs and the famous Alley of the Sphinx. Well pictured and worth while.

"ICE CUTTING IN SWEDEN" (Patheplay), November 8.—Showing the systematic manner in which ice is harvested in Sweden and picturing hills of the product stored for market. On same reel with above.

"THE RUSTLER'S STEP-DAUGHTER" (Essanay), November 6.—A new version of "The Adventure at the Inn," in which the sheriff unknowingly takes refuge from the night in the cabin of the rustler. He is received cordially and later shown to his room. When the others of the gang are sent for, the girl—ill-used step-daughter of the rustler—gets word to the sheriff's men. The only weakness in the story is that the step-daughter is not badly enough treated to make her betrayal of her father's intentions natural. Then it might have been stated in a subtitle, at the proper time, that she was only a step-daughter. Economy of attention, natural, convincing acting and good sets make an excellent offering.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 65" (November 6).—There is even more news in this number than usual and one item is of great interest—it is a very clear picture of the battle between the strikers and the sheriff's posse in Colorado. These were taken from the firing line and are close up pictures.

"THEIR WIVES' INDISCRETION" (Essanay), November 5.—Add a mishap to an indiscretion and the result may be tragic; but we have here two mishaps added to two indiscretions and with comic results. It is a picture taken mostly out in two sail boats on some lake and might be called a summer flirtation story; for each of the two skippers, by a queer turn of fate, has the other's wife on his boat. It is light, pleasing and, with the exception of the fight of the wives in the water, free from vulgarity.

"A BROKEN MELODY" (Vitagraph), November 6.—A love-and-duty story with a detective on one hand and the daughter of a "wanted" embezzler on the other. We are introduced to the embezzler in the first scene and think him a kind of "Music Master" character. The story is developed without the loss of a stroke; but it has little that is essentially new. But there are plenty who will find it a very satisfactory offering. By W. Hanson Durham, it was produced by R. T. Thornby. The players do naturally; but nothing to add much to their reputations.

"THE CONVERSION OF MR. ANTI" (Selig), November 6.—Has a pleasant taste. The story is not really new, it shows how a grouchy old codger who never had any youth, is converted to see things with a different heart and to help the committee on children's playgrounds. With this human inner meaning that it has, it is prettily or humanly acted according to its needs and will be acceptable as entertainment. There is a love story running through it in which Margaret Prussing shows fine capabilities for romantic juvenile roles. Philip Lenoir is author and Willard Newell produced it. A good offering.

"SYDNEY AND ITS HARBOR" (Melies), November 6.—Makes one intimate with the great sea port of Australia and will be a fine offering to the ones who have the geography sense; but it is rather trying to the eyes and will give little to the ones who want only scenic quality. We found it valuably instructive and well worth while.

"WHERE'S THE BABY" (Biograph), November 6.—A farce with an elopment and a baby mix-up stirred in together. There was no laughter until the end when his babyship was given a before-the-curtain presentation. The audience watched the development to see how it was going to turn out and was amused at times.

"IN THE HANDS OF THE BLACK HANDS" (Biograph), November 6.—A burlesque farce of a town with a queer police force of darkies. There is a little excellent farce in it and the audience seemed to find it as a whole amusing.

"ARCHIE AND THE BELL-BOY" (Edison), November 5.—The idea set forth by this little farce by Alice Williams is rich in fun and it is made clear. Then the players, especially Yale Boss, as Archie, and Andy Clark, the bell-boy, have put real fun into its lesser situations, many of which won hearty laughter. Yet the picture has not been written to get over with much of a punch as a whole. The failure is more on account of padding than anything else. It was produced by C. Jay Williams.

"THE PROBATIONER" (Selig), November 5.—A very pleasing picture of a manly little ragamuffin, "Freckles" (Roy Clark), who, when very, very hungry, is caught stealing a loaf of bread and put on "probation" by the judge, who also sees that he is given "a chance." Just as he is making good, an unlucky train of circumstances makes it seem as though he had committed a theft, and from his benefactor—the acting of Roy puts this over with a punch. The picture closes when it is all straightened out. Edward Hungerford, the author, did a good piece of writing in it and Fred Huntly has produced it naturally and made an excellent offering of it. All the players help out by skillful work in their parts.

"THE HOODOO UMBRELLA" (Vitagraph), November 5.—A farce with plenty of knock-about business that made very little laughter. There is a group of excellent scenes showing the East River under Brooklyn Bridge. Hughie Mack and Kate Price play the leads.

"ANCIENT TEMPLES OF KARNAK" (Vitagraph), November 5.—On the same reel with the foregoing is this clearly photographed series of the ruins in the famous temple city of Egypt. These old stones have been often pictured; but will be acceptable again none the less.

"A YELLOW STREAK" (Patheplay), November 5.—A melodrama that surely has not been written in an artistic way. The players have acted "up to" their melodramatic roles and the producer has not succeeded in making his picture appear as like real life.

"FLAMING HEARTS" (Vitagraph), November 7.—Surely this is a large person's comedy. Josie Sadler and John Bunny and Hughie Mack make a lot of fun. The work of all is excellent—enough so to wake up even a morning crowd.

"VIEWS ALONG THE RHINE" (Selig), November 7.—Indifferent photography detracts from the charm of fine panoramic scenery.

"THE SCHOOLMARM'S SHOOTING MATCH" (Selig), November 7.—On the same reel is this comedy showing how the schoolma'am fooled the school trustees who made a collective offer of marriage. When it came her turn to shoot she fired directly at the camera, which apparently would indicate that the cartridge in her pistol was like the ones in the weapons of the men—blank—and that the bullet which smashed the bottle was fired from the side by some one else. The picture will mildly interest.

"A PHONY ALARM" (Patheplay), November 7.—Good comedy. The story might be described as a comedy of errors. Paul Panzer as a tragedian rehearsing with his telephone receiver off the hook starts much trouble and interferes with a wedding that had been scheduled. The producer was responsible for much osculatory exercise on the part of the bride and bridegroom to be. By the way, the telephone girl who appeared for just one scene happens to be the real thing. She looked the part and put over her bit well.

"NO PLACE FOR FATHER" (Biograph), November 10.—Not very interesting; it tells a story of a son who went away to find business in the city and there married a woman of fashion. The old man happens to come on a visit just as a ball is being held in his son's house and the son is a bit ashamed of the father's clothes. Later the father helps the son to replace money he has embezzled. It is a very artificial picture; and there are crude scenes and some camera consciousness, as when the son's chum waits for the father, not at the depot door, but just in front of the camera.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 66" (November 10).—Perhaps less real news interest that usual characterizes the topical this week; but there is a lively bit of a bull fight taken in Madrid. There are some excellent items.

"THE LOCKED ROOM" (Lubin), November 10.—The rancher's wife has the guest room of the home locked and refuses to let her husband see it. It has been shown that he is very popular in the village and, as the picture develops, it is made to seem as though some conspiracy is on between the wife and the "boys"; this goes to such lengths that the husband becomes jealous and at length forces his way into the room to find that they were preparing a surprise party for his birthday. The theme is too old for most audiences (judging from its reception by one audience here); but it has been well acted and as much as possible got from the situation. The script by Will M. Richey was produced by Bert Bracken.

"THIEVES" (Vitagraph), November 10.—A story with a good melodramatic punch; it is indeed very interesting. At the close of it we find that most satisfying of all melodramatic endings:—after the villainess has neatly been made to work her own confusion; the audience is left laughing at her; so it gets over vigorously. Mary O'Connor, the authoress, has done a good bit of picture writing and its producer, W. J. Bauman, has handled it commendably. There is not much high class acting in it; but the players have provided what was needed to make it effective.

"SETH'S WOODPILE" (Edison), November 10.—The idea behind this picture makes a very good basis for a comedy. It has been used before by the Essanay Company with the difference that the minister, played by Howard Missimer, was made to pick up the loaded stick which the thief has dropped on the street, while in this picture the thief listens to a sermon and takes the loaded stick back to Seth, the meanest man in town, who puts it in his own fire. Both are excellent offerings and both were enjoyed by the audiences thoroughly. Charles H. France is the author of this version. The characters seemed a bit fresher in the former version; but are real and natural in this one and very amusing. The scenes have been skillfully handled and the photography is excellent.

"CAMPING WITH THE BLACKFEET" (Edison), November 10.—A very able and interesting offering, showing how the remnant of the once powerful tribe of Blackfeet Indians live on their reservation in northwestern Montana. Chief Three Bears talks in sign language to the camera and then Mrs. Dog Ears also hands out a speech which gets over in fine shape. An excellent picture, which will please the average spectator a good deal. The comedy on the same reel is such as can be shown at any time even to a Sunday school.

"A MIRACLE OF LOVE" (Lubin), November 11.—Edwin Carewe and Ormi Hawley have the leads in this drama. The former has the role of a woman who thinks she is in bad health and imposes upon everybody until a physician discovers there is nothing the matter with her. Then a former convict whom she has aided wins her love and coaxes her to walk. The story is not notable for strength.

"MOVIN' PITCHERS" (Selig), November 11.—The picture is in just the quality class its title would indicate. It is juvenile comedy by and for small children. If there were even one smile in it the reviewer failed to connect with it. If it were desirable to take the children to a picture theater why take them to one the most prominent poster in front of which announced "The White Slave"?

"WINTER SPORTS IN SWITZERLAND" (Patheplay), November 11.—Many fine scenes which remind of other releases by the same company in previous years, but which nevertheless are worth while seeing again. The best of the views are of the bobsled riders, of skikjoring—men mounted on long skates drawn by horses—and ski jumping, the latter especially thrilling, in some instances there being three abreast.

"SIBERIA'S HOLY LAKE" (Patheplay), November 11.—On the same reel are these well photographed views of Lake Baikal and of the wilderness surrounding it.

"THE MAN OUTSIDE" (Essanay), November 11.—There is a thrilling denouement to this picture which even the amateurish portrayal by the butler cannot destroy. Harry Mainhall, the Man Outside, overacted his part when taken by the Angel into her home. He has done fine acting heretofore on the screen. Later, in his work outside the house and the denunciation of the butler, he was himself. It was an oversight keeping us in the dark for a half-dozen scenes as to the identity of the secretary. A good release, nevertheless.

"THE DOCTOR'S DUTY" (Edison), November 11.—The best thing in this picture, the best scene in any picture of the day, is the representation of Luke Fildes' painting "The Doctor," with Charles Ogle as the physician. To those who have felt—their emotions sharpened perhaps by bitter personal experience—the pathos of this remarkable painting the reproduction will strike deep. When the costermonger appeared at the home of the physician asking him to come to the bedside of his child, the illusion would have been heightened if we could have had a preliminary glimpse of the sickroom. It's a safe bet that the scene was taken and afterward cut out in order to appease the abominable Moloch of One Thousand Feet Limit. The photography of some of the interiors is unsatisfactory. Frank Hart and George Lessey produced the script.

"CANALS OF VENICE" (Vitagraph), November 11.—Well-photographed views of many interesting scenes, none of them, however, identified by title.

"THE PRICE OF THOUGHTLESSNESS" (Vitagraph), November 11.—On the same reel is this illustrated lecture for children and grown-ups, too, showing the evils of thoughtlessness when traveling the public highways. It is at times thrilling, and once, in the waiting room of the hospital, it is pathetic.

Licensed Specials.

"THE MAN WHO VANISHED" (Kalem), November 5.—A good two-part special. Its story is melodramatic and its situation, if one considers it in the cold light of what is likely, does not convince; but, while it is not exactly made plausible, it is so handled that a good many will not notice that the rich young man who was injured remained in the neighborhood of his home for over a month and even courted and wed a girl before he let anyone know what had happened to him. His staying away gave a chance to his villainous aunt and uncle to inherit his fortune as it was thought that he had been killed by the "accident" they had surreptitiously arranged with the prospects of inheriting in view. There is an evenly sustained interest all through. The players act with commendable naturalness and the picture can be relied upon as an offering.

"THE PRICE OF VICTORY" (Lubin), November 6.—Though a very emotional situation ends this picture, its love story, as compared with its battle scenes, is weak. Some of its glimpses of the battle are glorious with realism; but it was decidedly a mistake to show a view, clear from end to end, of that bridge. Both armies are fighting for it and when we see how insignificant it is and how shallow and narrow the stream is it spans, we wonder why either lost a man over it. There were one or two other scenes in the battle—a cavalry fight for one—that fell markedly below the standard, and it would have helped the picture as a whole if they had not been included. The producer's early scenes, telling a love story of the girl-spy kind, were far from worthy of the battle pictures which, as we have said, were almost all of them glorious. A good offering solely for its stirring and often beautifully posed pictures of battle.

"RACE MEMORIES" (Patheplay), November 6.—A pre-existence picture in which the former life scenes are given as the illusions of a scholar suffering from brain-fever. Yet they are woven into the story as a whole, including what actually happens in the present time world. The heroine is played by Lillian Wiggins; M. O. Penn plays the rich villain and Charles Arling the hero. There are scenes of the dream part of the story set in a forest with wild lions, etc., and they are made to chase the cave-man villain and his party. This scene made a woman in front of this reviewer jump up; but, as a whole, the offering did not seem impressive. The last half reel is very markedly padded.

"A FACE FROM THE PAST" (Edison), November 7.—There are good situations in these two reels. The story is interesting throughout, but is markedly so in the latter part. Mary Fuller plays a double role, first as the country girl who passes over her childhood sweetheart and marries the man from the city; secondly, as the daughter of the marriage whose mother is dead. Augustus Phillips is the unsuccessful suitor who becomes powerful and on the death of the woman who had disappointed him hammers the fortune of his rival—and ruins him. Frank McGlynn has the role of the banker who meets disaster and whose fortune is later restored to him by the man who caused its loss and who in return takes from him, with his consent, the daughter of the woman he had failed to win. Walter Edwin directs a picture that is well acted and well staged. Frank Blighton is the author.

"THE DIVER" (Vitagraph), November 8.—A two-reel feature number in which the chief figure is a famous diving woman, Mlle. Ideal. The remarkable swimming feat in the second reel, when she saves the life of a child about to be swept over Niagara Falls in a boat, is the strongest thing in the offering. The fore part of the story seemed rather below the Vitagraph standard, being in the nature of a common love intrigue, involving the husband of one woman and the lover of another. The spectacular features are of chief interest in this.

"THE RUN-AWAY FREIGHT" (Kalem), November 10.—A railroad story whose only short-coming is a not very convincing love interest. But this is not emphasized; for the picture depends mostly on its scenes of railroad life, of which there are many, full of suggestions of reality and deeply interesting. On a one-track road, a freight breaks in two and the rear part is left rolling backward down grade. The locomotive is unable to catch it because the air-brake broke before the accident to the train and the peril due to the wild part to an on-coming passenger train is made clear by flash views. At this juncture, the hero, who, for his mother's sake, has made himself seem a coward, boards the wild cars as they pass the station by leaping to the top of them (a bit of rather risky work) from the top of some stationary cars on the siding. This feat is done by William Brunton. Helen Holmes is natural in her role of telegraph-operator-heroine, and Lee Maloney is the villain; his is not a very convincing part.

"PHANTOMS" (Selig), November 10.—A good, strong offering. It is a freshly interesting, psychological study of theatrical people; but especially of one actress who, and this is most unusual in stories or in pictures, is convincingly made to seem, by her mental make-up and her whole experience, to be a true genius. It is she who sees the "phantoms" and who, at the end, falls into a beatific insanity in which her whole life is phantoms. This fate is dramatically effective, as it is made to come to her through a door left open in her own character. Her flighty impetuousness makes the situation by making her write a crazy letter to her lover; she was jealous of the time he gave to his dying mother. So her romance is nipped and, in spite of her brilliant success as an actress, it preys on her mind until she goes mad. The concomitant human things needed to make it a story and give it a habitation in real life are not wanting and we commend the picture as a desirable offering to the public. This leading character and the stage director are finely acted; but every character in the picture has been made life-like and interesting in themselves. W. E. Wing, the author, surely deserves high praise, and so do the producer and every one concerned.

"THE PENALTY" (Cines), November 11.—A man who commits justifiable homicide is treated throughout the two reels as an outlaw. At the end of the story he commits suicide with a weapon handed to him through the bars of his cell by his sweetheart. The story is not strong; it is devoid of holding quality; it shows no skill in construction. It could easily have been contained in one reel. While there were many fine backgrounds there was a lack of sharpness in the photography.

Independent

"THE CABARET SINGER" (Crystal), November 23.—Pearl White and Chester Barnett appear to good advantage in this dramatic story of a rich man's daughter who runs away from a good home to marry a scoundrel. This will hold the interest.

"THE DAYS OF '49" (Kay-Bee), November 21.—An Indian attack upon a wagon train always has a romantic aspect and the one opening this film is no exception. The story is conventional, the girl escaping to the cabin of two prospectors. Later she chooses one of them, who turns out to be a coward, and the other wins her love. Nothing very new in this, but it is acted with spirit and quite successful in its way.

"JANE'S BROTHER, THE PARANOIAC" (Imp), November 24.—George Tucker produces a strong drama from the pen of Walter MacNamara. There are many moments of suspense The story is of a lunatic who believes he is to be the headsman of Charles I. Jane Gail plays the daughter of the inmate of the insane asylum. One of the strong scenes is where the rejected lover (William Welsh) takes advantage of the hallucination of the escaped inmate to induce him to decapitate the favored suitor (William E. Shay), whom he has bound. The daughter, out in the fields with a rifle, is placed in the position of shooting at her father to save her lover. The picture is well made.

"LEONCE AND POUPETTE" (Gaumont), November 6.—A honeymoon farce with plenty of fun. It is quite French and could hardly have been made by an American producer, but is clear and will be understood. It gives us the amusing experiences of the two honeymooners, Leonce and Poupette, and depends a good deal on the sub-titles, but does not lack character studies. The photography is as usual in Gaumont offerings.

"LEONCE AND THE MILK MAID" (Gaumont), November 18.—Pretty rural backgrounds taken around some farm in France and gracefully acted lovemaking give this offering merit as an artistic picture. It tells no especially strong story, but it can hardly fail to please, because there is so much beauty in it.

"AN ELEPHANT ON HIS HANDS" (Nestor), November 21.—In this comedy it is probable that most of the fun will come from the antics of the animals, two of which are featured—a monkey and an elephant. The osculatory feats of the former are bound to convulse any house. The story is of a wife in love with animals and of a husband who abhors them. It is produced by Al Christie.

"THE STINGERS STUNG" or "JAKE AND MIKE IN THE OIL FIELDS" (Joker), November 22.—An eccentric comedy number of a not very original type. Ketchum and Skinum are a firm of oil crooks, who are finally outwitted after a series of mildly interesting scenes.

"THE HAUNTED BRIDE" (Rex), November 9.—Lois Weber, ably assisted by an excellent cast, plays the title role in this very commendable drama, produced by the Smalleys. The story tells of a young girl who, at her parents' urging, makes a marriage of convenience, leaving in the lurch thereby a very much disappointed lover who promises her to commit suicide and she, believing that he has committed this rash act, almost goes mad before she discovers that he has done anything but take his life by falling in love with another girl. The production is first rate.

"OH, YOU RUBBER" (Eclair), November 23. Lilly Bright, in this excellent comedy, whose hero is an overgrown rubber plant, plays her part of the servant girl in the family on whom the plant "is wished," with very good effect and wins her laugh every time she comes on. The acting on the whole is to be commended and the picture gets over in good shape.

"JAKE AND MIKE AT THE BEACH" (Joker), November 19.—This so-called comedy is not funny. It might furnish amusement for children or in houses situated in extremely primitive communities.

"HIS OLD-FASHIONED DAD" (Rex), November 23.—Marguerita Fischer and Robert Leonard, in a good cast, play the leads in this charming comedy which derives its title from the opinion of a young lover for his father's choice of a wife. The old man disproves that there is anything old fashioned about him in some very amusing situations. The whole is well rendered.

"MIKE AND JAKE AT COLLEGE" (Joker), November 5.—Max Asher and Harry McCoy make a very mirth-provoking pair in this laughable burlesque on college life The take-off on a football game would make a horse laugh.

"CALAMITY ANNE'S DREAM" (American), November 22.—This is another of the Calamity Anne series and the best so far offered. The woman, impersonated by Louise Lester, dreams that she and her burro are cast upon a desert island. The situations developing during the dream are of a quietly humorous sort. The film is a pleasing one.

"A MODERN STEEL PLANT" (American), November 20.—This half-reel presents some interesting views of the steel industry. It shows many of the various processes by which the product is manufactured, and finally gives a view of the rails being loaded on cars by magnets. Instructive and well pictured.

"THE TALE OF THE TICKER" (American), November 20.—A pleasing half-reel comedy drama, with above. Warren Kerrigan, Vivian Rich and Jack Richardson appear. The story is entertaining.

"THE GOLDEN PRINCESS MINE" (Nestor), November 19.—A young prospector and his sweetheart, the daughter of a ranchman, prove the undoing of a bad man in this drama of a lost gold mine and a friendless Indian. The production has an adventurous, romantic flavor which is rather pleasing.

"JIMMIE'S DECEPTION" (Powers), November 24.—This very clever comedy has much to commend it in the way it has been carried out by producer and actors, but its principal charm is in the amusing situation which it presents. It appears that Jimmie, a genuine small boy, does not care to take violin lessons and likes very much to play baseball. He therefore employs a street urchin who has a strong liking and some talent for music to take the lessons in his stead. The manner in which this scheme reacts on Jimmie, on his father and mother and others immediately concerned will hold anyone's attention. This is one of the best comedies we have seen in a long time.

"WHERE THE HOP VINE TWINES" (Victor), November 21.—We get a sidelight on hop raising, in addition to a charming love story, in this amusing little comedy and the characterizations are praiseworthy, particularly that of the young hop farmer who loses his girl to a city man. Out of this entanglement the story is woven and it will be well received.

"POOR JOHN" (Komic), November 6.—Good photography helps along this half-reel depicting the troubles of a henpecked husband. Some of the scenes are amusing.

"CAUSED BY A CLOCK" (Komic), November 6.—On same reel with above. This story of the alarm clock being mistaken for a bomb is familiar, but is here wrought out with sufficient freshness to bring out some laughter.

"MARTHA'S DECISION" (American), November 10.—The familiar story of the young girl who accepts a position in the city, wins the love of her employer, and then yearns for the old home and her country lover. The photography is rather light in places and the story none too strong, but at the same time it has a certain pull on the interest.

"THE POWER OF THE SEA" (Reliance), November 10.—This story has moments of quite strong interest. The scenes are laid on the sea coast. The girl's father has great belief in the cleansing effect of ocean waves and brings the intemperate man back to his senses. Later a rival appears and the girl indicates her love for him just in time to prevent a return to drink. The story lacks something in the way of force and conviction, but the characterizations were pleasing.

"AN AFFAIR OF HONOR" (Komic), November 13.—A sort of rough-house comedy, in which a thief plays a prominent part. He is discovered during a hand to hand conflict in the bedroom. Love and jealousy are at the bottom of the trouble. A fair comedy number.

"FRIDAY, THE THIRTEENTH" (Princess), November 14.—Quite a pleasing little comedy, with good characterizations and attractive scenes. The young husband dreams that all sorts of unpleasantness occurs on the fatal day, but when he awakes his experiences are exactly to the contrary. Slight, but well pictured and entertaining.

"A MAN AND A WOMAN" (Reliance), November 19.—A rather unfinished story, by M. B. Havey. The stoker and the rich girl are cast away on a desert island. Love finally overcomes his selfishness, but they are rescued and each takes up the former life. The story is interesting, but suggested something stronger in the way of a climax.

"THE RIVALS" (Majestic), November 11.—A low comedy offering, depicting warfare between the Dutch and the Irish. The humor, such as it is. is of the slapstick variety. The photography is good and there are a few rather amusing spots, but as a whole the film is very ordinary.

"THE CHILDREN'S HOUR" (Thanhouser), November 14.—A slight. but pretty and generally pleasing picture, illustrating Longfellow's well-known poem, "The Children's Hour." The old poet himself is seen at his fireside and the children gather round to hear him read. The words of the poem are shown at intervals. The pillow fight will appeal particularly to young observers.

"LOOKING FOR TROUBLE" (Thanhouser), November 9.—A child desiring to buy a ten-dollar doll invests 50 cents in an accident policy and tries to meet with an injury. Some of the attempts to get hurt were well pictured, but the idea did not seem particularly humorous as a whole. Hardly the sort of a scheme a child would attempt, it seemed.

"TEDDY LOOSEBELT FROM AFRICA" (Apollo), November 9.—A fairly amusing characterization of Theodore Roosevelt by Fred Mace. Fred goes on a hunting trip in the wilds of New Jersey. Bud Duncan impersonates the trained tiger. This is rather thin comedy, but just absurd enough in spots to be enjoyable.

"SLIM BECOMES A DETECTIVE" (Frontier), November 20.—This story of the simple country youth who takes a correspondence course in detective work is quite enjoyable. Three black cows with similar white markings served to confuse the amateur sleuth and he gets into all sorts of trouble. The story is not made the most of, but has considerable appeal as presented.

"THE DOUBLE CROSS" (Frontier), November 22.—A typical Western offering, with the photography none too clear in places. The story, with its rough outdoor settings, is rather breezy and entertaining. It relates how the girl turns tables on the gambler who fleeced her sweetheart just as they were about to be married. An ordinary release of the kind with a little better idea back of it than usual.

"A PAIR OF BEARS" (Imp), November 24.—A couple of live bears and some burlesque actors furnish the chief amusement in this number. The bears get loose and have many exciting experiences. Fairly amusing.

"THE CHILD STEALERS OF PARIS" (Imp), November 20.—King Baggot handles the lead in this drama concerning some divorced parents who are reunited by a chain of circumstances beginning with the kidnapping of their child. The scenes are laid in Paris which is generously depicted and we get some interesting sidelights on the abominable traffic in children which is carried on in the underworld of the French capital. The film has the double value of being instructive and presenting a pleasing story.

Independent Specials

"THE GIRL FROM ABROAD" (Film Releases of America).—The second title of this remarkable picture which was made in Stockholm is, "Or the Great Underworld." We do not dare commend it without reserve as a first-class offering for public amusement, because it is obscure even in its story, and though filled with scenes that show remarkable stage-craft and skillful acting, it will not be wholly understood, except by a very few. Professors of literature might take keen pleasure in it as a vividly presented illustration of a clearly marked trend in European literature: The mystical naturalistic. There is much to be said in favor of it. In the first place, we have had nothing at all like it. Then in acting, in the dancing (one character puts a world of meaning in dance steps) and in the manipulation of the scenes there is so much art that one is not bored even while he fails to catch the sense of what is going on, and finally—those underworld pictures are truly astonishing. We can't tell the story; we couldn't get it, but the picture is full of art.

"THE TRAIL OF THE LOST CHORD" (American), November 17.—This two-reel number is intended to illustrate the words of the familiar song poem. Edward Coxen appears as the monk and his life story is told in the pictures. The production as a whole is rather vague in meaning, the lost chord being symbolical of his dead wife. The words of the song seemed merely interpolated at intervals without any special bearing on the plot. There is a good deal of interest in the production, but it seemed wanting in numerous details that go to make up a strong offering.

"WYNONA'S VENGEANCE" (Bison 101), November 22.—Grace Cunard writes these two reels, full of action, and Francis Ford produces them. There is a stirring Indian fight at the beginning of the story, in which the redmen are practically wiped out. A little Indian girl is taken back to the fort and adopted by the Colonel, played by Mr. Ford. In a duel with the father of the child the Colonel is disfigured, and in later years he bears ill-will against the educated girl on account of the injury. It is during a fight between the soldiers and the Indians that the girl blows up the fort, thereby revenging herself for the slights that had been heaped upon her and furnishing a spectacle.

"THE WAR CORRESPONDENT" (Broncho), November 19.—This two-reel number, written by William H. Clifford, lacks the special quality of atmosphere usually found in this company's offerings. The war scenes are very good and well photographed, but the newspaper end of the story seemed rather modern in tone, perhaps because of the newspaper half tones on display in the office scenes and the up-to-date clothing of the reporters. The yarn holds the interest well, though not extremely convincing in parts. Tom's friend, the telegrapher, must have had sharp ears to hear the story through the wall of the guard house. But as a story this will pass and no doubt please many observers.

"PARTNERS" (Eclair), November 19.—This two-reel number gets a rather vague start, but later works up quite a strong interest. Barbara Tennant and Alec Francis are in the cast. Some of the scenic effects are striking. The story is one of the typical Northwestern offerings produced by this company; the most exciting scene is where the two men hang over the cliff and Dave cuts the rope in order that Jim may climb to safety.

"HIS WIFE'S CHILD" (Victor), November 14.—The heroine of this two-reel drama, characterized with unusual charm by Miss Lawrence, is the daughter of the rascal who runs away with another man's wife. The child's subsequent misfortunes and fortunes are very interesting to follow. She begins life without her mother, deserted by her drunken father, and subject to all the temptations of a young girl forced somehow to live in the underworld. She survives her environment, meets the man her mother deserted and they set in to outlive the old wrong. A pleasing touch of humor appears in the scene where the waif mistakes the wax model in a department store for a living being.

"THE WITCH OF SALEM" (Domino), November 20.—There is something very satisfying in this series of Puritan releases, and this film story, written by C. Gardner Sullivan, is no exception. The settings are in close harmony with historical incidents as we now know them; the Indians are in appearance about as tradition relates; the Puritan narrowness of spirit and superstition are well shown. In addition, the love story in this instance is new and pleasing in its development and the situations generally work up a strong interest. A good release.

"WHO KILLED OLGA CAREW" (Imp), November 17.—This is an unusual two reel production. Olga Carew is an adventuress in whom an artist becomes dangerously infatuated, when a friend interferes and with the help of a pretty farmer's daughter, manages to break the woman's hold on him. But the cure proves only temporary, and in order to make it more lasting the friend brings the country girl to the artist's studio in the city. During her visit Olga Carew is mysteriously murdered and as the circumstances point to the country girl she is arrested for the crime. At the trial the real murderer is discovered,—a pet ape of the artist. The manner by which it is discovered that the ape committed the murder is very striking, depending on the principle that the last image stamped on the retina of a living being's eye will be visible there after death. The film excites wonder.

"THE FATAL PLUNGE" (Eclectic). The scenes of this three-part offering, made abroad, stand out in their clear-cut photography like life. The story—it holds interest all through—is very melodramatic and deals with a count who marries a rich manufacturer's daughter, the picture's heroine, merely for her money. The last reel is devoted to the dastardly schemes of him and his villainous sister to get rid of the girl. But she has a stanch friend in a man who had been her lover and is now—her father being dead—the head of the manufacturing business. All this makes a tale, and not a picture of real life; but it interests. "The Fatal Plunge" is taken by the villain and his sister who go over the embankment together in an automobile. The players are graceful and human, if not at all times entirely clear in the sign-language of their pantomime; but it must be acknowledged that they do manage to get information to the audience and the action is perfectly clear at all times. The atmosphere of the whole is fresh and one can safely commend it as a creditable offering.

"WIVES" (Ramo).—An offering in three parts that might justly be termed a typical melodrama of New York City life. The photography is beautiful and we see well-chosen backgrounds taken on Morningside Heights, along Riverside Drive and elsewhere. The interiors are simple but effective; and some of the lighting effects are as lovely as can be. The story is sensational; it contrasts two women as wives, the one wholly selfish and without scruples, the other self-sacrificing, and its turning point is a stock market deal. There are views of the exchange and of society-life up-town. The man with the good wife wins—he didn't deserve to—although he loses in the deal with stocks. There is no hero to the story, though melodramatic, and it is a fault not a virtue; for in most things the picture is not at all realistic—the author wanted us to sympathize with, not hiss, the heroine's husband; yet the villain's husband has all the virtues. The acting is commendable; the picture was made artistically but weakly written. It is good entertainment.

MR. STEVANI IN NEW YORK.

Mr. M. A. Stevani, the president of the Raw Film Supply Company and the Ambrosio American Company, arrived on the "Olympia," November 12. He expects to remain here for about six weeks, and has a few important announcements to make regarding some big Ambrosio productions which will even excel the previous great features such as "Satan," "The Betrothed," and the "Last Days of Pompeii." The Ambrosio Company also has in preparation several other features ranging from three to eight reels, more particulars regarding which will shortly be announced.

FRED A. CLARK GOES TO EDISON.

Fred A. Clark.

One of the real old timers in the motion picture business is Fred A. Clark. He goes as far back as 1896, which puts him into the pioneer class. At the present time he is one of the most widely known projection machine salesmen on the planet known as Earth, but being a good American he has so far confined his ramblings only to the northern half of the western hemisphere.

Fred did not reach his present high altitude by any sudden bound. He sort of eased his way along by gradual steps. In 1896 his main stock in trade was a good knowledge of electricity and mechanics. Late in that year he was drafted as an operator on one of the first Lumiere machines to give exhibitions in Boston, his home city. Oddly enough, these first exhibitions in Boston were not in theaters but were given in department stores to attract trade, with liberal doses of advertising slides between reels. By this it will be seen that the use of moving pictures in department stores has been tested and found sound for lo these seventeen years.

Mr. Clark played the department store circuit until New England was thoroughly "ginned" in that respect. Then he settled down and became chief operator of the Pastime and other theaters in Boston. After that followed a varied experience of installing different types of projection machines in theaters throughout the country. Three years ago he was called by the Enterprise Optical Company, of Chicago, to fill the position of Eastern representative. Since that time he has become acquainted with motion picture men everywhere east of the Mississippi, while purveying the Motiograph machine.

And now he is to go with the Edison Company. Once more he will go over the same old road with the same old smile as traveling representative to exploit the Edison projector. He is looking forward with pleasure to meeting many old friends and many new ones in his travels.

Fred Clark has the one great qualification that every successful salesman must possess—personality. His quiet gentility wins him friends at first acquaintance and he never loses them. He is a survivor of more M. P. conventions than any other living man, which also speaks volumes for his capacity as a machine salesman.

S. M. BABER

Recently Appointed as European Representative of the Famous Players Film Co., with Headquarters in London.

Flickers

Broncho Billy.

WHO said something? Oh! yes, I got you. You're not used to the full page of flickers, are you? I'm not myself. I never tried to talk about a crowd before. I'm lucky to say something about one at a time and get away with it. The fact is, I have so many popular faces to reproduce this time, it is difficult to pick any one of them for the first. You see I have Broncho Billy, Chester Beecroft, Lottie Briscoe, W. E. Greene and A. C. Terwilliger. They are all familiar figures to the exhibitor, for different reasons.

* * *

Broncho Billy, our cowboy hero, needs no introduction whatever. He's the fellow that put the cow in cowboy. It has been my pleasure to meet him on several occasions in Chicago, and much to my surprise, I found him to be just like the rest of us fellows. You know on the screen he always has a gun handy and is willing to shoot at the drop of a hat. He holds up and robs stage coaches, snaps his fingers in the sheriff's face and is always being chased as a bad man. Sometimes he is caught and thrown in jail. But off the silent stage he acts just like one of us. He walks along the streets, looks in the store windows, never pulls his gun when he meets an officer of the law, and pays for every drink that comes over the bar, which are all contrary to the habits of the reel bad man. He is one of those who has made a success in the business both financially and from an artistic point of view. He is a prince of a fellow to meet and contrary to the general belief, though apparently a bad man, he has never been in the lock-up.

Lottie Briscoe.

* * *

W. E. Greene is another one of the well knowns. His connection with the film game dates away back to the beginning of exchange days. When the Sales Company was formed, his was the largest exchange in New England, so he was induced to handle their program. At the death of that organization and the birth of the Universal, he became a booster for the big U program, and only recently sold his interests in the picture end of the business to enter the exhibiting field, and is now identified with a corporation controlling a New England circuit. On account of his straightforward and aggressive business methods, there is no doubt as to the future success of his latest enterprise.

W. E. Greene.

* * *

Chester Beecroft is another one of the young benedicts who is making his presence felt as advertising manager of the General Film Company. Beecroft, until his connection with the General Film Company, was New York manager of the Billboard and has accumulated a host of friends. His clever writing of advertising has created considerable attention; in fact as much as the mud on his heels have done. You know he is a commuter, and sometimes it rains in the country, too. The accompanying cut is a good likeness of our friend, but for the fact that the photographer has given him a fine head of hair, something he does not possess. He has about a dozen or a dozen and a half at the most.

Chester Beecroft.

* * *

Happy Joe Miles, general manager of the Exclusive Supply Corporation, is a real boss now. He has always threatened to get a private office for himself if his friends didn't keep away from him during working hours, and he has now made his threat good, and we can't see him any more now unless a card precedes your little walk from the outer to the inner sanctum. I think that is the only reason he moved the company to new offices.

* * *

I presume Lottie Briscoe will redden up a little, and feel somewhat embarrassed when she finds herself alone among all these men, but it's all in the profession, and she's a fine little woman socially as well as professionally. Lottie is very well known among the picture fans and her popularity dates back to her work with the Imp Company, later with the Majestic, and last but best, her present berth with the Lubin Company. Under the direction of Arthur Johnson, as leading man and director, she has developed into one of the best leading women in the business.

* * *

Don Meaney, manager of publicity for Essanay, has just put out a new and novel advertising sheet in the form of a railroad timetable, which when received by the exhibitor, can be carried around without trouble in an inside pocket for future reference. They're pretty nifty little things. Get one.

* * *

It must be grand to hear beautiful music all day long and then get paid for listening to it. That sums up the daily life of Alfred C. Terwilliger, who is the orchestrion representative of the house of M. Welte & Sons, of 273 Fifth Avenue, New York. If his spirits get low at any time all he has to do is reach over and touch a button which will start an orchestrion going. If he is particularly blue he can touch two buttons and start two orchestrions, or even three or four, all according to how blue he feels.

Mr. Terwilliger is known probably to more park managers than to motion picture men at the time of writing, but it is quite certain that he will be in great demand among the latter before the year is out, as he is now pushing the Welte Philharmonic Autograph Organ, which is one of the greatest instruments for a picture house that has ever been invented. It is a reproducing organ that duplicates the exact performance of the organist who makes the original record.

Mr. Terwilliger's traveling territory is the U. S. and Canada. MAC.

Alfred C. Terwilliger.

Foreign Trade Notes

PARIS LETTER.

(Special Correspondence to THE WORLD.)

SOMETHING of a sensation has been caused here by the Police Prefect's announcement that he intends to prohibit the employment of any but non-flam films in Paris picture theaters. M. Hennion—the Prefect—called a meeting of prominent men in the trade, including: Pathé, Gaumont, Jourjon, of the Eclair Company; Louis Aubert (renter), and a representative of the Brothers Lumiere. The delegates admitted that in the interests of public safety non-flam film should be used. But it was pointed out to the Prefect that such a radical change could not be effected in a short period of time. M. Hennion agreed to consider the question of postponing the ratification of the regulation. Messrs. Pathé Freres are the only people ready to supply non-flam film in large quantities. This firm has recently built huge factories for the manufacture of patent non-flam film. Louis Aubert says manufacturers and renters will require four years to make the necessary arrangements for the supply of positives in accordance with the law. The entire trade anxiously awaits M. Hennion's decision.

* * *

Charles Urban's Kinemacolor theater will not be ready until November 25th.

* * *

The Societe des Films Menchen have prepared a film for the new revue at the Folies Bergere Music Hall. Joseph Menchen's new offices on the Boulevard des Italiens are now open.

* * *

The Gaumont Company exhibited an important subject entitled "L'Agonie de Byzance," for fourteen days at the Palace Hippodrome. The film depicts the capture of Constantinople by the Turks in 1453. The great success of the production was mainly due to the splendid orchestral and choral accompaniment which had been specially arranged by Henri Fevrier and Leon Moreau. One hundred musicians made up the orchestra. Another recent success at the Palace Hippodrome was Selig's "Alone in the Jungle." This film was shown at all the leading Paris picture theaters.

* * *

The Eclair Company are placing on the market a compact home cinematograph machine. This is specially suitable for educational work. It differs from other models inasmuch as the film is passed in a horizontal position. The "Kineclair" will be sold for about 70 dollars.

* * *

When was the first animated picture projected? M. Skramson, a cinematographer, says the exhibition was given at Amsterdam in 1893. The twentieth anniversary of this historic event is to be celebrated by M. Skramson and a few friends on December 10th.

* * *

World readers may be interested to know that the first display of moving pictures in Paris was given by Lumiere at the Grand Cafe, in 1896. Two of the oldest picture theaters in the French capital are the Theater Robert Houdin and St. Denis Cinema. The former is owned by the well known manufacturer of trick films, George Melies, brother of the American producer.

* * *

"Charlotte's Heart" is the title of the second film of the Charlotte Wiehé series. These photoplays are made in Paris by the Splendor Company. Charlotte Wiehé's husband is a director of the firm and author of many photoplays, notably "The Hand," a new version of which was recently put on the market.

* * *

C. de Morlhon, who produces the Valetta brand of photoplays, and used to be with Pathé Freres, will now market his productions.

* * *

Robert's sensational actuality "With the Greeks in the Firing Line," is featured at the Cinema Palace.

* * *

I shall not be surprised to see Joseph Menchen's "Miracle" presented at the Gaumont Palace Hippodrome. If it is, it will be the greatest moving picture show ever seen here.

* * *

People are wondering why the life targets have not yet appeared in Paris. The French patents of the invention have been for sale for a long time past, but new foreign ideas do not catch on very rapidly here. That is why the Selsior dancing pictures, as well as many other good novelties, are still unknown to Parisians.

* * *

A French firm is specializing in the supply of wedding souvenirs in the shape of cinematograph films. By circulars, engaged couples are being exhorted to have their wedding ceremony taken by a moving picture camera, in order that they may have for all time a permanent record of the happy event. The machines supplied with the reels are advertised as "conjugal model projectors."

* * *

The Universal Cinema vs the Continental Edison Company is an important case which is to be tried at the Tribunal of Commerce. Upon the result of the action depends whether showmen will be charged industrial rates for the electricity used in the projectors, or continue to pay lighting rates as heretofore.

* * *

The Colisee in the Champs Elysees is the fashionable picture theater of Paris. There society gathers and from time to time special afternoon cinematograph parties take place in the luxurious hall. The cinematograph has more than once been employed as an entertainer in drawing rooms of Parisian society, and it is said that at least one titled lady interests herself in the production of films.

* * *

A French firm is endeavoring to obtain permission from the Russian government to give picture shows on the trans-Siberian trains. The idea is to couple on to the train specially constructed cars. Price of seats will be twenty cents.

* * *

Edmond Bretel, of the Cosmograph Co., has opened an office in the Faubourg Montmartre for the purpose of renting his films direct.

* * *

Helfer has secured the agency for Hispano films for Germany, Austria and Russia.

* * *

The new Gaumont offices at Brussels are now being used. A staff of more than eighty is employed in handling the big business. The Gaumont Company have taken over the management of two large picturedromes, at Ghent and Antwerp.

JOHN CHER.

---

BRITISH NOTES.

(Special Correspondence to THE WORLD.)

THE stringent comments in the editorial notes of this journal in the issue of October 18th have been productive of heated discussion amongst one or two film producers and agents in London during the past week. An American—who, for the moment, must remain anonymous—acting as producer and general adviser to a firm of repute, bitterly resents the allegation that, with one or two exceptions, the products of British film manufacturers are worthy of close scrutiny by the customs officials. No doubt the references in the same note to France, Italy and Germany would meet with equal opposition in their respective centers, yet that would not alter the fact that "filthy" stuff is exported from these countries no more than my friend's contradiction disguises the production, even if in infinitesimal quantities, of questionable films in Great Britain. About eighteen months ago a well-known manufacturing concern in Eastern Europe fell into sudden disgrace through an unusually sordid "red light" drama they produced. But the damage they suffered from canceled orders was as nothing compared to the injury done to the British agency handling those films, and whose name, of course, appeared on the title piece. At present the financial columns of several daily newspapers simply teem with advertisements for capital for film production by mushroom concerns. After all, this cannot be wondered at, for similar conditions prevail in the U. S. A., and it invariably happens that the development of a new and promising industry is accompanied by the malpractices of organizations of disputable integrity whose existence can be covered with one or two slipshod productions to trap unwary investors.

* * *

The Famous Players Film Company, managed on this side by Sid. M. Baber, gave a private and press view yesterday of the visualized version of Thos. Hardy's famous creation, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles." The author is highly pleased with the picture, in which Mrs. Fiske takes the title role. The trade press speak enthusiastically of the production, but daily newspapers are coolly critical. More novels from the English classics will soon be preserved on celluloid. Dicken's "Old Curiosity Shop," and "The Cloister and the Hearth" are both being prepared, while I hear that an American agency is considering an elaborate and costly adaptation of Shakespeare's "Merry Wives."

* * *

The services of Arthur Finn, late of the Lubin and Mutual companies, have been secured by the British and Colonial Kinematograph Company as principal actor in a new series of "thrillers" they are to produce. By the way, the Endell Street warehouse of this firm was destroyed by fire the other day. An electric wire fused, and five minutes later the huge building was in flames. No one was injured, but damage to the extent of $250,000 was done, including the destruction of the negatives of the following: Part of the big "Waterloo" film, "Through the Clouds" (described a few weeks ago), "The Hour of Twelve," "The Tattooed Will," "The Broken Chisel," "The Master Crook," and "Guy Fawkes." All these were expensive features, upon which the company had been engaged for the past four months. Several copies had been booked, and in the case of the "Guy Fawkes" film which was being released as a special fifth of November attraction, an extensive advertising campaign had been begun. After the fire the producers and staff set to work immediately to reproduce the destroyed pictures, and have been working day and night since in three studios considerately loaned to the B. & C. Co. by Messrs. Urbanora Co. and Barker's.

* * *

The staff organization of the Transatlantic Film Company (the Universal) is now complete. As I stated before, Mr. J. D. Tippett is manager and Mr. John Avery will be his first lieutenant. Mr. A. Henderson and Mr. H. R. Hefford will be in the London offices, and Mr. Geo. R. Smith and Mr. Thomas Beach will deal with the provincial department.

* * *

At Barnsley, a few days ago, a man was fined for bringing the King's uniform into contempt. He was a soldier in a local battalion and he attired himself in the dress of the Coldstream Guards to advertise "The Battle of Waterloo" for a local theater.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

Information has reached our British correspondent that there is an immediate possibility of the French government prohibiting the use of ordinary celluloid films in that country. It has been well known for some time now that in many districts the mayors of French towns have imposed local restrictions permitting only the exhibition of pictures on non-flame base, but the interference of the government has not yet been suspected, so will, consequently, have far-reaching, or possibly disastrous effect.

SOME GARDNER PICTURES FOR WARNER.

The Helen Gardner Studio is now engaged in producing a series of twelve pictures, each 3000 feet in length, of original subjects which have been sold to the Helgar Corporation. Mr. Charles Gaskill, the director of this studio, prepares all his own picture plays and the above series will form a most interesting and unique contribution to the year's offerings. Miss Gardner, who is, of course, the central figure around which the plots develop, is too well known to the lovers of motion pictures and her work too popular with them to require more than a brief mention, and the mere fact that she is the feature practically insures the success of the productions. The first of the series "A Daughter of Pan," which has just been completed, is classical, the scenes being laid in ancient Greece. Its photography is most brilliant. The second of the series is entitled "Olga Treskof," a tragic story of Russian life, which in turn will be followed by an up to date comedy "The Girl with a Hole in Her Stocking." The above pictures will be distributed through the Warner Feature Film Company.

"After Death."

Strong True-Feature Drama in Two Parts.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE great beauty of this photodrama—it is constant and consistent from beginning to end—is of the kind that lends a charm all its own to screen production, but it is not paraded as an excuse for the play. It simply adds new value to a story of decided force admirably interpreted. The male types—the women are of minor consequence—are as fine as will often be seen grouped in one production. They are remarkable down to the servants, the honors going to Theodore Burgarth, formerly of the Irving Place Theater, New York, in the leading role.

It is said that art without sex is art without flavor, but "After Death" holds interest tight, with only a slender thread of love in it. It deals almost entirely in the affection of a generous father, a middle-aged nobleman, for his four sons. Three of these sons are living fast lives and constantly preying on their indulgent father. Their gambling and wine debts are all paid without a murmur by the warm-hearted old boy and put down to the follies of youth. He imagines that they are simply having their fling and will eventually become an honor to his family, while they are in reality representative of family decadence, yellow dogs, rapidly developing into social nuisances.

Scene from "After Death" (True Features).

His youngest son is more of a man, gradually losing all sympathy for his heartless brothers and unafraid to let them know how lacking in manly decency and gratitude they are. He has a little love affair with the daughter of a humble neighbor, asks her hand in marriage and brings down on his head a burst of parental rage when he announces his intentions at home. He is handed his slender share of his mother's property and dismissed from the house for his manliness and independence.

Meanwhile, a personage of importance has intimated to the mistaken nobleman that his three older boys are leading idle and dissolute lives and are destitute of respect for the one who has showered them with benefactions.

The dismissal of the younger son works upon the father's heart, and, conjoined to the warning he has received, induces him to take a step that is replete with dramatic possibilities. He conspires with a couple of trusted servants, two of the best of their type ever shown in photodrama, to set up a bier and send messages to all four sons of his sudden death, while he remains in concealment to watch the effect upon them. Some powerful scenes follow and lead to a happy ending, a delightful and original termination.

The last scene is one of beauty, and every one preceding it is invested with a charm that is felt. The exteriors are lovely and there is visible to the close observer an infinite amount of detail contributing to make the interiors a veritable feast to the eye artistic. Further than this, there is expression, even more important than beauty, that affects the emotions, a new and rather rare thing in moving pictures, though a highly-prized characteristic in modern paintings of rhythmic intensity. It is as though one sat watching a series of expressionist pictures in exquisite tints, where ordinarily hard lines, glaring lights and smudges instead of soft shadows make outdoor effects and those indoors as well almost as repulsive as old-fashioned wall paper. "After Death" is a work of art.

Paul W. Panzer on Tour

Popular Patheplayer Reports a Hearty Welcome at Pittsburgh Picture Houses.

Paul W. Panzer, the well-known Patheplayer, is making a tour of the theaters in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and surrounding territory. His first appearance was on October 13, at the Downtown Cameraphone Theater, of Pittsburgh. For the week following he was booked at other Cameraphone theaters. On October 15, he addressed a meeting of the Pennsylvania exhibitors at the Hotel Fort Pitt and was given a rousing reception. Mr. Panzer is following the route taken by Francis Bushman, of the Essanay Company. The Pathe comedian is advantaged by reason of the hearty support of his employers, who have placed at his disposal a number of films representing "big scenes" in some of his important pictures. A letter from James Waldo Fawcett, a Pittsburg newspaper man and editor of the Pittsburgh Mirror, contains interesting comments on Mr. Panzer's tour. Mr. Fawcett says it has been very successful, so much so, in fact, that several exhibitors have offered return bookings. One reason, perhaps, why the Patheplayer has been so well received is that he has made it a point to interest his audience by what he had to offer for entertainment.

Paul W. Panzer.

"Mr. Bushman, who lectured in this section a few months ago, has never been forgotten by the patrons of those theaters in which he appeared," writes Mr. Fawcett. "Several exhibitors have told me that an Essanay release in which Mr. Bushman is cast is always popular. I feel confident that Mr. Panzer's pictures will in future be even more popular than in the past. Hero worship is something tangible in the moving picture business. An exhibitor or a manufacturer can grind out dollars from the coffee mill into which he pours press material that creates an interest in the players cast in his pictures. The public has arrived at that stage where shadows on a screen will not suffice. Every player must be flesh and blood, living and breathing. And, of course, if the living player comes in person to be gazed upon and met, the public is all the better pleased. The future of the moving picture lies with the player. The manufacturer who fails to appreciate talent is doomed. Such lectures as are now being given by Mr. Panzer will be regarded with favor by the advertising man. They give him something definite to advertise."

---

NEW GENERAL FILM POSTER DEPARTMENTS.

George Balsdon, manager of the poster department of the General Film Company, is particularly busy these days installing branch offices of the department over which he has general supervision. He has just completed his work on the Kansas City Branch which was opened for business on November 17. From Kansas City he went to St. Louis where another branch will be installed and later he will perform the same operation in Atlanta and New Orleans. A complete line of posters, announcement slides, photographs, photo frames, banners, etc., will be obtainable from each branch in keeping with the policy of the General Film Company to give the exhibitor an unexcelled advertising service at each distributing point.

---

KLEINE'S "POMPEII" ENDORSED BY SCHOOL BOARD

The Board of Education of the City of New York has endorsed George Kleine's production of the Ambrosio version of "The Last Days of Pompeii," now playing the Bijou Theater, for teachers and pupils of all the grades of the public school system, as being of superior quality and a valuable aid in the pursuit of their studies, particularly of that period in Roman history in which the action of the story occurs. The Kleine production has scored a big hit and is playing to crowded houses at every performance.

ALL-STAR COMPANY BACK FROM CUBA.

The All-Star Feature Corporation Company, which for the past six weeks has been encamped in the field in and about Santiago, Cuba, producing in film version the famous play, "Soldiers of Fortune," from the pen of Richard Harding Davis, returned Wednesday, November 5, aboard the S. S. Oruba of the Royal Mail Line. A more pretentious gathering of literary and stage celebrities than that which was gathered together for the production of this play can not be imagined. Richard Harding Davis, the author, made the trip especially to be on hand to lend what assistance he could toward making the production accurate to his mind. Augustus Thomas, the dramatist of the original stage production, the adaptor into scenario form of the present film production, and the director-general of the All-Star Corporation was also with the company throughout the entire time and with the assistance of William F. Haddock directed the taking of the one hundred and eighty scenes which were made in Cuba.

---

ECLECTIC TO INCREASE OUTPUT.

The Eclectic Film Co. will shortly increase the number of its releases from two to three a month. It is quite within the range of probability that a short while after that, it may make a release every week. This company has, under preparation for early release, a number of the finest feature productions that the European market affords. "The Life of Napoleon" will be exploited in a stupendous film that will be placed on the American market shortly, and there is every reason to believe that it will be on par with "Les Miserables."

CARLOTTA NILLSON IN "LEAH KLESCHNA."

Few announcements of coming film productions have ever created so much comment in the trade as that of the Famous Players' production of the international dramatic success, "Leah Kleschna," with the distinguished American actress, Carlotta Nillson, in the stellar role, to be released on December 10th. This intensely dramatic story of a woman's regeneration, by the noted dramatist, C. M. S. McClellan, stirred the civilized world with its appeal for the criminal who has never been shown the right way to live, and has been termed one of the greatest sermons ever contained in a play. Its introduction in motion pictures, thus bringing its great moral lesson before the millions of photoplay followers, cannot but supplement the effective influence upon criminal and judicial procedure which the original production exerted.

Carlotta Nillson.

The situation of the woman burglar, reformed by the kindness of the man whose house she attempts to rob, affords unlimited opportunity for camera action. The girl trained by her father to be a thief and the associate of thieves, is brought into the light by the influence of a love of which she is hardly aware, and by kind words of persuasion spoken at the psychological moment when her spirit, hardened and rough by her past training, is just about to merge with the refining and regenerating influence with which she is suddenly brought into contact.

The play should make an irresistible impression on the screen, and contribute one of the greatest morals possible to incorporate in a film production.

ROSEMARY THEBY.

Paul W. Panzer.

Rosemary Theby in future will be identified with Lubin productions. The brilliant player of the Vitagraph masterpieces, "The Mills of the Gods" and "The Reincarnation of Karma," and who later added a score of Reliance successes to her remarkable record, is now leading woman for the Lubin actor-director, Harry C. Myers. Hardly two years in photoplay, Miss Theby's steady course upward is as interesting as it is exceptional. Her beauty, intelligence and womanliness have only partly contributed to her distinguished position: it is her positive gifts as an actress to which Miss Theby owes her prominence. Before making her small beginning in photoplay, Miss Theby had the benefit of thorough instruction in acting. She needed only to adapt her knowledge to the demands of the screen. That in itself gave her great advantage over the untried novice and when her chances came, one after another, they found her prepared and able to do herself justice. Miss Theby is singularly free from whims and fads. Her interest centers in her work. Her recreation comes from the opera during the winter, a few favorite authors and some close friends. Miss Theby is reticent and has said that she cares only to be known by what she gives of herself to the characters she plays.

THE PERILS OF BEING A MOVIE ACTOR.

When the steering gear went wrong, a taxi, containing Miss Fritzi Brunette, director Daly's leading woman, plunged wildly on the sidewalk, smashed its way through an iron railing and buried itself in the cellar below. Miss Brunette is still working for the Universal.

* * *

Harry Von Meter, as a Mexican, was smoking a cigarette in a tense gambling scene taken for the "Flying A" subject "A Child of the Desert." Sydney Ayres unexpectedly threw a deck of cards at Harry who was about to speak, causing him to swallow the cigarette with a gulp.

* * *

Right at the solemn and crucial moment of the action of "Through the Centuries," one of the new Selig dromedaries reached over and bit off an extra man's ear.

* * *

A number of scenes of "The Power of the Sea" (Reliance), were taken on the rolling billows. Tom Mills, in the leading role, showed a strange lack of interest. Director Vale called him to account sharply, telling him to "Feel the part!" Mills, who was striving heroically to keep from feeling the part, promptly gave an illustration of the "Power of the Sea" that was not in the script.

* * *

In the Universal play "Lasca," Jane Bernoudy and Harry Gant, in the leading roles, are the ones who undertake the dangerous job of fleeing before a great herd of stampeding cattle and then falling to the ground while the cattle rush over them. Harry and Jane are fond of outdoor sports.

CENSORSHIP ADVOCATED FOR MILWAUKEE.

D. K. Fischer, head of the Milwaukee exhibitors, advocates a censorship for his town which will provide for the supervision of all films not now passing under the view of the National Board. "The National Board is doing good work," said Mr. Fischer. "We need have no fear of pictures it has passed on." He added that if the national body would certify to the local authorities all subjects it has approved it would be a simple matter for the Milwaukee board to take proper care of what remained.

KATZ BUYS "WATERLOO" FOR NEW YORK.

The exhibiting rights to the "Battle of Waterloo," for New York City and State have been purchased by The High Grade Feature Film Co., of 220 West 42d Street, New York. This office has just been opened and is under the management of Mr. B. Katz.

"THE PORT OF DOOM" TOO MUCH SO.

Great as is the desire on the part of producers for realism in motion pictures, too much realism can often imperil a picture and defeat the very purposes for which it is introduced through the dangers involved by the actors, however cheerfully they accept them. This was illustrated last week, when the Famous Players sent its Laura Sawyer company down to Martha's Vineyard to sink a ship and do a number of thrilling stunts on the sea for its production, "The Port of Doom," a marine detective drama, and unquestionably the first play of its kind ever produced in pictures. J. Searle Dawley, the director, located a half-sunk vessel, made arrangements to use it in any manner he wished, and began the pleasant work of showing the crew penned in, working at the pumps for their lives, with the water surging into the holds and half-drowning them. This all comes under the heading of realism. It was so realistic that at times, aided by the convincing water, the actors thought they really were fighting for their lives. All were drenched to the skin, and the fact that they were compelled to wear their clothes increased their discomfort which Dawley termed it, but which was given other and shorter names by the victims. Without casting any reflection on the individual members of the company, it is doubtful whether any of them had ever been in such close contact with real "H-2-0" before.

When Dawley thought they had been sufficiently immersed—and it is only proper to intimate that he did not think so until quite a while after every one else did—they were taken back to Vineyard Haven. The tide was out, it was a stormy sea, and the little tug did all kinds of scenic railway stunts with the waves. Everyone became sick. From Vineyard Harbor they were to go to Providence to get the train back to New York. They made the seventeen miles between both points in autos, but missed the last surface car that connected with the last train that night. Dawley knew if he called for any more exertion than he already had, their exhaustion, exposure, hunger, weariness and what-not might invite severe colds, so he proclaimed the welcome edict that they would rest in Providence over night.

H. Lyman Broening, the cameraman, was about the first one to become susceptible to the sea. On the rough voyage back to Vineyard Haven, he said, between sighs, "I always wanted to join the Navy, but ——," three minutes later he completed his sentence: "the army for mine!"

HE "FOILED" THE ROBBERS.

A duly authenticated story comes from Jacksonville, Fla., of the thrilling rescue of a woman from the clutches of highwaymen by Jerry Austin, a Kalem player with Mr. Buell's company. The highwaymen—four of them—had driven up to the curb in an automobile and attacked the wife of a prominent citizen who was wearing $40,000 worth of jewelry—more or less. Austin, who is a six-footer, came along just then and pursuaded the four highwaymen to get into their machine and drive to the police station where they were locked up. When the hero's exploit became known the Mayor of Jacksonville extended to him the freedom of the city and the County Sheriff appointed him to be a deputy sheriff.

Scene from "Lady Babbie," a Three Reel Feature Released by the Eclair Co., November 12.

Among the Picture Theatres

News and Views of Houses Here and There

CRYSTAL THEATER, WACO, TEXAS.

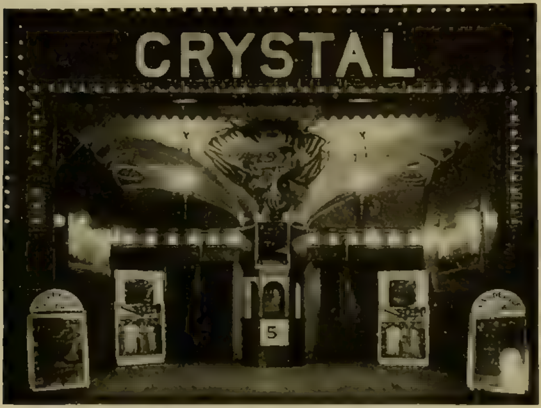
J. A. Lemke is the manager of the Crystal Theater, Waco, Texas, a photograph of which is herewith published. The building in which the theater is situated is outlined in electric lights, and when lit up has a very attractive appearance. As will be seen by the illustration, the posters are plain and neat, nothing of the blood-and-thunder variety being displayed. The Crystal seats 500. Mr. Lemke runs the Universal program only, and charges an admission price of five cents. He says that it is the most beautiful house in Waco. According to Mr. Lemke's description, the ceiling, which is mostly of concrete, is shell-shaped and has an allegorical panel running through the middle which represents Neptune, the God of the Seas. On the side walls of the house there are panels with views of seashores painted thereon. In the up-to-date projection room there are two Power's No. 6A machines and a mercury arc rectifier. Music is furnished by a Wurlitzer organ, but to keep posted on musical suggestions and all other data, Mr. Lemke reads The Moving Picture World, which, he says, "is the best of all papers."



Crystal Theater, Waco, Texas.

LYRIC THEATER, PRINEVILLE, OREGON.

The accompanying illustration of the Lyric Theater, Prineville, Ore., is the third house to be opened by L. C. Morgan, proprietor and manager. Mr. Morgan says that it is a little more pretentious than its predecessors, and has been doing a good business since its opening date on May 10 last. The house has a seating capacity of 220 in addition to the capacity of its sixteen boxes. "When I first opened a picture house here three years ago," says Mr. Morgan, "we had to haul our films sixty miles by stage, and we sometimes failed to show when roads were bad in winter, but we get good service now from the General Film Company's branch at Portland, Ore., and have no trouble at all."

Lyric Theater, Prineville, Oregon.

UNIVERSITY THEATER, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The inhabitants of the Southern part of California, especially the part near Los Angeles, are particularly proud of the University theater, located at 931 West Jefferson Street, that city, for the simple reason that it is a moving picture theater of the first order, according to data furnished us by the managers, Messrs. J. O. Canfield and C. J. Wagner. A feature of the house is its large mirror screen installed in the latter part of last April at an expense of $1000. The measurements of the screen are 12 feet by 16 feet, and the managers claim that it is a result of the large increase in patronage. According to the report of Messrs. Canfield & Wagner the commendatory remarks of the patrons of the University have been the means of bringing managers of picture houses in Los Angeles and its environs to the house to see the effect the screen has upon the large audiences the University always houses at every entertainment. All were highly pleased with the magnificence and clearness of projection. The University is the only theater in the Southern part of California to exploit a mirror screen, and the managers deserve credit for being the first in that part of the state to recognize the efficiency of this projection surface.

Another device that helps to give better projection at the University is the Mercury Arc Rectifier. The operating room, which is large, is built entirely of fireproof material. In addition to the Mercury Arc Rectifier the projection battery consists of an Edison Model B and a Motiograph machine. On one side of the projection chamber there has been allotted space for a little workshop where all tools and appurtenances pertaining to such a room are carefully laid away and within easy access in case of emergency.

The auditorium, which is 48 feet by 104 feet in measurement, has a seating capacity of 600 persons. There is a stage 6 feet by 20 feet, with a singer's booth on each side. There is a five-foot aisle on each side of the auditorium and a wide one running across the center. The exits are large and conveniently arranged. Fresh air constantly permeates the auditorium, for the ventilating system is perfect.

University Theater, Los Angeles, Cal.

Entertainments are given only in the evenings with the exception of the first Saturday of each month, when the managers put on a free show for the children in the vicinity. The University is the only house in Southern California to employ uniformed ushers. Moving pictures and songs constitute each entertainment.

"The Battle of Shiloh"

A Four-Part War Feature with Spectacular Battle Scenes. A Lubin Exclusive.

This four reel feature contains many splendid battle scenes and a fire in natural colors which is positively novel and startling. The scenario was written by Emmet Campbell Hall. Joseph Smiley was the producer. Here in frieb outline is the story.

Tom Winston, despite the pleadings of his sister Ellen, who is an ardent Confederate, goes North, and acquires a commission in the Federal army. Frank Carey has entered the Confederate service, though his sister Ethel furiously denounces him as a traitor, and asserts her intention of herself serving the Union. Both girls become identified with the secret service departments of the South and North, respectively. Tom is with Grant and Frank with Johnson, and the movements of the armies bring them into the neighborhood of their homes.

Tom watches his sister closely, and one night observes that she is using her fan in such manner as to make the dots and dashes of the Morse code, and Frank, concealed in the shrubbery, is making notes of the information. Tom discovers Frank, overpowers him, and succeeds in taking from him the memoranda, but allows Frank to escape. Tom places the memoranda in his pocket. The battle of Shiloh has begun, and Tom is given an important despatch ordering up supporting brigades. He proceeds on his mission but is wounded, unable to go on.

The memoranda taken from Frank is found in his pocket, and it is concluded that he is the supposed traitor. A drum-head courtmartial condemns him to be shot. The battle is now raging fiercely, the victorious Confederates pressing steadily forward. The Federal position is carried. Tom is captured and sent to the Confederate rear where he succeeds in eluding his guards. Despite the sentence hanging over him, he determines to rejoin his troops. Johnson is killed; the triumphant advance of the Confederates falters. Tom reaches the Union lines, he rallies a breaking regiment and leads a fierce charge. The tide of battle is turned. Frank is captured, the battle lulls the Confederates sullenly withdraw from the field. Tom is immediately arrested and placed under guard. Frank learns of the fate in store for Tom, and to save him, confesses himself to be the spy. Tom is released. Frank is held as a spy, but cleverly effects his escape. Frank goes to his home to attempt to induce his sister to go South with him, as he must accompany the southern army further into the Confederacy. Tom has gone to see his sister to endeavor to induce her to give up her dangerous work as a Confederate spy, and has been captured by a squad of Confederates while at his home. He sends a note to Ethel, informing her of his situation. Ethel secures several Federal troopers and makes her brother a prisoner. Under a white flag, Ethel and her squad approach the Winston home, and Ethel proposes an exchange of prisoners. This is agreed to, as well as a temporary truce. Then Tom and Ethel turn to the North, while Frank and Ellen ride away into the Confederacy.

The play is full of thrills and sensations, one being a most dangerous and realistic leap of one of the heroines from a high cliff into the raging river below. It will be released by the Exclusive Service Department of the General Film Company.

BURR McINTOSH BEFORE THE CAMERA.

Old-Time Actor, War Correspondent-Photographer and Publisher to Play Jo Vernon in All Star's "In Mizzoura."

Burr McIntosh, old-time actor, war correspondent-photographer, publisher and lecturer, has been engaged by Augustus Thomas to play the role of Jo Vernon, the big blacksmith, in "In Mizzoura," the stage success of twenty years ago. Mr. McIntosh created the character. Nat Goodwin had what was supposed to be the leading part in the character of the sheriff, but Mr. McIntosh made such a hit in the part that he divided honors with the comedian. For the last two years and more the versatile actor has been taking life easy in California. He is now in New York, getting ready for his first encounter with the camera. It is said the compnay will start next week for Florida, where the drama will be produced. The players will be under the immediate direction of Mr. Thomas. Director Lawrence McGill will be on the job.

Mr. McIntosh's first appearance on the stage was in Bartley Campbell's "Paquita," in New York, in 1885. He was continuously on the stage until the spring of 1898, when he went to Cuba as war correspondent and photographer for various publications. In October he was back on the boards again, where he remained until 1902, when he retired. In 1910-11 he put in fifty-four weeks in "A Gentleman from Mississippi." Mr. McIntosh has had much experience as a photographer, and for the past year has maintained a studio in San Francisco.

EXCLUSIVE HAS SPECIAL POSTER ARTIST.

"Show us the lithographs" has become a slogan of such significance in the sales of state right features that the Film Releases of America, realizing that artist work of the best commercial kind is absolutely needed, has engaged George McEvoy, a sketch artist of wide reputation and recognized ability, to draw all sketches for its posters.

Regular lithograph artists, while having value as good work-a-day journeymen, are incapable of producing posters of individuality for each of the many companies for whom they work in the course of their service. McEvoy's work, while high priced, is powerful in sturdy lines and delicate shadings, and his high degree of intelligence enables him to catch the conception and consummate it artistically. The first of McEvoy's work will be seen on the lithographs for "The Secret of Adrianople," the three reel subject which follows "Outlawed."

PHIL. MINDIL WITH MUTUAL.

Philip Mindil, widely known as the dean of the New York press agents, has been secured by the Mutual Film Corporation to conduct a department of publicity for the Mutual program. Mr. Mindil's wide experience and knowledge of mediums and methods should be of the greatest value to the Mutual.

Scenes from Lubin's Four-Part Feature "The Battle of Shiloh."

David Horsley Opens Lumiere Agency

In Spacious Quarters in the Mecca Building, He Is Prepared to Meet Buyers of Raw Stock.

As was announced to the trade last week, David Horsley has taken the American agency for Lumiere raw stock, both negative and positive. He has opened spacious quarters in Room 404, Mecca Building, 1600 Broadway. Roland E. Blaisdell, who has been with Mr. Horsley the past half year, is in charge. Before coming to Mr. Horsley, Mr. Blaisdell had had much experience in stock exchange and banking houses and also a selling training. It is Mr. Horsley's intention to surround himself with a competent technical staff, the members of which will take up with his customers any troubles they may have been having in their photographic department and will be glad to give formulas and advice upon a personal presentation or forwarding of details. "I have been a cameraman myself," said Mr. Horsley, "and any advice I may be able to give will be based on my personal experience."

Mr. David Horsley.

Mr. Horsley, as is well known to all in the film business who are not new-comers, is a film technician. His training has been thorough, embracing the whole business, from the taking of the picture to the turning out of the finished product—and selling it. He has specialized on photography; it is with him a hobby as well as a trade, or, speaking more truly, an art. Consequently when he went to Europe last summer it was the natural thing that he should look thoroughly into all matters appertaining to photography and especially into the raw stock market. It was as a result of his investigations that he sought and obtained the agency for Lumiere. "Every merchant thinks his goods are the best," said Mr. Horsley with his grim smile. "I myself think I have a good product. The negative stock is not so fast as some others, but when you get speed you have got to sacrifice something else. In the slower stock the comeraman has got more latitude; if he makes an error in exposure he has a vastly larger margin for correction in developing. We are going to furnish both negative and positive, and where perforating is desired it will be done on Bell & Howell machines under our own supervision in our own plant. The chief requirement in getting best photographic results is good negative stock suited to the work in hand; the next thing is correct perforation." Mr. Horsley also talked interestingly about static troubles and said he might have something to say later on this subject in a course of technical talks he proposes to give in his advertising.

"THE CAVEMEN'S WAR" (Two Reels. Kalem).

A most novel and daring conception forms the basis of this feature. For the first time in motion picture history a producer has attempted to depict on the screen one of the subtle and mysterious processes by which primitive man came out of his savagery and took the first step toward civilization. The men dwelling in caves and the men dwelling along the rocky arches of the sea-coast are in perpetual strife. The cavemen destroy the power of an enemy by breaking his wrists and he wanders about, a spectacle of pity and distress. He is finally saved and befriended by a savage who, aided by the ministrations of his wife, heals the broken wrist and restores the crippled man to his former health and strength. For this kindness the rescued savage makes poor requital. While the husband is away to war he seeks to steal the wife, and after some vain attempts to get the woman into his power seizes her at last and confines her in a cave. The bereaved husband roams about disconsolately.

Scene from "The Cavemen's War" (Kalem).

As one day he goes in search of food in the water armed with a pole and a rough sort of string, he discovers the principle of the bow and arrow. Slowly it dawns upon his struggling brain that here is a new weapon more apt for the obtaining of food and most dangerous to the enemy. He sees his wife on the beach pursued by the savage ingrate, and just as she is about to succumb to the latter's brutal and cruel embraces the husband draws his new found bow and, aiming at the faithless savage's heart, dispatches an arrow which goes directly to the heart of the foe. The latter tries to pull the arrow from his side, but in doing so leaves the sharp point behind and he dies in agony.

The settings of this feature are wonderfully good. It is, of course, an outdoor feature from beginning to end; rarely have the possibilities of the picture as a mirror of nature's beauties been used with more artistic discrimination than here. The picture has both an educational and psychological value.

ANOTHER KESSEL IN THE GAME.

Nicholas Kessel, a younger brother of Adam and Charles Kessel, of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, by purchasing and amalgamating the Regal Feature Film Company and A. B. C. Feature Film Company, has become quite a factor in the feature film business. The exchange will be located at 381 Sixth Avenue, New York City, and in addition to the fifty odd, two, three, four and five reel features he now has on hand, Mr. Kessel is in the field to purchase the best features that can be procured.

Mr. Kessel is a well-known real estate operator, but has been a student of the motion picture business from its inception.

ANN DREW VISITS NEW YORK.

Ann Drew, of New Majestic fame, is spending a two-week's vacation in New York. Miss Drew is the "lightning marriage" girl of the Majestic. She got engaged and married over-night. Now she is out of the films and in Manhattan to visit her parents. The Majestic eastern offices state that the next time they send a pretty New York girl all the way to their Los Angeles studios, a "no marriage" clause will be inserted in the contract.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE FALL OF CONSTANTINOPLE" (Gaumont).

The whole history of the Ottoman Turks is a romance. The thirteenth century had half run its course when a Seljuk Sultan was one day hard beset near Angora by a Mongol host. Ertoghrul, a member of the Oghuz family of Turks, was journeying from the banks of the Euphrates, when he unexpectedly came upon the battlefield of Angora. Loving a scrimmage and seeing that the weaker side was getting the worst of it, he led his four hundred riders into the fray and won the day.

Thus was the foundation of "Turkey in Europe" laid. Little did the impulsive Turk think that by his chivalrous act he had taken the first step towards founding an empire which, in the later centuries, has been and still is an intense political problem.

Scene from "The Fall of Constantinople" (Gaumont).

In two generations the little body of shepherds had possessed themselves of the whole of the northwest corner of Asia Minor. Before Orkhan, the new Sultan, lay a valuable prize. The wealthy provinces of the Byzantine Empire were falling to pieces. Constantinople was the goal of his ambition, and the value of the firm and equitable government of the Turk was known to the Greeks, who contrasted it with the persistent and perfidious intrigues of the Byzantine Emperor. Good and impartial government under the conditions obtaining was out of the question. Civil war had reduced the Empire, and the advent of the Turk would have been welcomed.

Slowly but persistently the Turks pushed further into Europe, and by the middle of the fifteenth century, were masters of all the country round Constantinople save the city itself. All attempts to win it had failed, and this film "The Fall of Constantinople," beautifully hand-colored, shows how Mohammed II succeeded in wresting the city from Constantine XIII., the last Christian Emperor of Constantinople.

Beautifully staged and wonderfully well acted, this colored film will unquestionably be in the greatest demand for long to come.

FOX BOOKS "COPPERFIELD" AND "KISSING CUP."

William Fox, the vaudeville magnate, has arranged to present in each of his houses, of the better class, two of the Hepworth features handled in America by Albert Blinkhorn. These two are: "David Copperfield," in seven reels, and "Kissing Cup," a four part racing melodrama with automobile and aeroplane complications.

"PARTNERS IN CRIME" (Lubin).

This three reel picture is purely melodrama, but the story is absolutely consistent and worthy of a stage production. It is full of the adventure of crook life, still a liberal quantity of honest heart interest. Love is the keynote, and crime the handicap, but everybody loves a lover and everybody will be satisfied with the denouement. The picture is directed by Harry Myers, who also plays the leading role.

Jansen and Dobley, widowers, are high class crooks. Their children, Frank Dobley and Esther Jansen, are sweethearts, but neither know of their fathers occupation. Frank, who is in a newspaper office, is assigned to run down a band of crooks and joins forces with Andrews, a detective. Frank is caught by the band and on the point of being killed by a bomb when he is rescued by Esther. Again they trail the bandits and Dobley, with some others, is caught. Dobley is captured by Andrews and sent to prison. Jansen then tells his daughter that she can never marry the son of a thief. Dobley escapes from jail, and in doing so, is wounded. Frank again agrees to assist Andrews in capturing the rest of the gang. Esther learns the truth and Jansen promises to assist the young people. Andrews is to go down the river looking for the band in their motor boat. Jansen learns of it and posts his men where they can kill the detective when he gets opposite their hiding place, but Frank takes Andrews place. Jansen finds out and swims the river to head him off, but is shot by the police. The rest of the band is caught. Frank goes to Esther's home to tell her of the death of her father and there finds his own father also dying.

Scene from "Partners In Crime" (Lubin).

ALBERT BLINKHORN'S IMPORTATIONS.

A. Blinkhorn reports having received a three reel feature of Florence Turner entitled "The Harper Mystery." It is a thrilling detective drama in which Miss Turner takes the role of a detective and very cleverly adopts many different disguises. A full report of this clever feature will be given probably next week. "Kissing Cup" and "David Copperfield" are in great demand and splendid sales are reported. "Kissing Cup" is a thrilling drama and "David Copperfield" is a true and exact version of Charles Dickens' masterpiece of that name. Other Blinkhorn features on the tapis and soon to be released are: "The Lure of a Woman" (General Film Agency, London, Berlin and Paris), three reels, and "The First Irish Pilgrimage to Lourdes" (General Film Agency, London, Berlin and Paris), two reels.

"BASEBALL'S PEERLESS LEADER" (Patheplay).

A very attractive drama with a pronounced outdoor atmosphere has been produced by the Pathe players under the title "Baseball's Peerless Leader," featuring Frank Chance, manager of the New York American team with Gwendolen Pates and Ned Burton. According to the story, Ethel Norwood's father is a baseball fan of the most rabid type. Incidentally he wishes to have his daughter marry an Italian count, a plan which does not meet with Ethel's approval. She leaves the count on the boat landing one day and goes cruising in her father's motor boat by herself, but the boat is wrecked on the rocks and Ethel thrown into the water. Shivering with the cold she finds her way to a bungalow near by. She finds no one in and makes herself at home, clothing herself in a man's robe which she finds and kindling a fire in the fire place. She is found asleep hours later by Frank Chance, the owner of the bungalow, and explains matters to him. Later her frantic parents, learning her whereabouts, come and get her and, angry at her escapade, send her to her grandparent's house where she is kept practically a prisoner. Chance is called away from an exciting baseball game by a note from her begging him to rescue her. She escapes in a baseball suit and the peerless leader, with his fair recruit, returns to the ball field in time to save the game and appease her father's wrath. Chance shows himself in this film to be an actor of no mean ability.

Scene from "Baseball's Peerless Leader" (Patheplay).

AS THE NAME SHRINKS THE FIRM GROWS.

The name of the Golden Gate Film Company, of San Francisco, Cal., has shrunk during the past week to "Golgate," by which name this firm will henceforth be known. But while the name was shrinking the business has been expanding. With San Francisco as its place of inception and official headquarters, this firm started business with a single exchange under the auspices of Sol. Lesser and Lester Kahn, the latter of whom is now deceased.

They were a couple of energetic young men who succeeded from the start. One by one they began to establish branches, until now they have fully equipped feature exchanges in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Butte, Mont.; Boise, Idaho, and Spokane, Wash., and, with the establishing of offices in Denver and Salt Lake City, this gives them nine complete offices handling the eleven States, following: California, Nevada, Arizona, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico. The Golgate Features Company has contracted for the entire output of the Exclusive Supply Corporation.

FIRST THANHOUSER "BIG" ONE.

The first of the so-called Thanhouser "Big Productions," which are issued to exhibitors for exclusive first-run service under regular contract, is "Maude Fealy in the Legend of Provence." There are four parts which take in many hundred scenes. Hundreds of people are employed in the "big scenes." James Cruze, Lila Chester and Carey Hastings, of the regular Thanhouser stock, support Miss Fealy. The "Big" productions will be issued at the rate of one a month, released the first day of the month. "Legend of Provence" goes out December 1st. The following "Big" release will be on January 1st and so on. C. J. Hite hit on the first-of-the-month release scheme as the easiest for exhibitors to remember. The "Provence" billing mentions Miss Fealy in a real theatrical way. It calls her the "late star of Thanhouser's 'Moths'," just as though the latter was a stage show.

"A FLORENTINE TRAGEDY" (Warner's Features).

This three-part feature is adapted from Oscar Wilde's famous play of the same name. Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude, the renowned English stars, supported by a cast of recognized artists, including Edith Bostwick and Wilfred Lucas.

For a bag of gold, Antonio sells his daughter in marriage to the greedy Simone. On the way to Simone's house, Bianca attracts the attention of Prince Guido Bardi, who makes love to her while his courtiers harass the lowly Simone. Bianca, with the help of Maria, an old woman of Simone's household, contrives to see the prince quite often. Once, while in the act of tossing him a rose from her window, she is seen by her husband, Simone, who warns her and swears he will kill the handsome prince. One night, while Simone is away, the prince calls to serenade Bianca. She bids him enter, saying the "Dragon" is not at home. Simone returns unexpectedly and surprises the lovers in each other's arms. Pretending he has seen nothing, he brings goblets of wine and knocks over the candle, as though by mistake. When Bianca returns with another light, Simone has engaged the prince in a duel to the death. He lunges with vicious strength and the prince is slain. Bianca professes admiration of her husband's strength and thereby saves her own life.

Scene from "A Florentine Tragedy" (Warner's Features).

GAUSMAN AND WEBER LAUNCH THE ACME LITHOGRAPH COMPANY.

The new lithographic printing shop of Gausman and Weber in the Marfield Building, corner of 47th Street and Broadway, New York City, is now complete. This new firm of lithographers has chosen an excellent site for its plant and has equipped it with all the best wrinkles for turning out first-class work in the poster line at high speed. The Marfield Building, where it has been located, is a brand new structure with glass front on both Broadway and on 47th Street, and this gives the best lighting on all the floors, but especially on the top, where the studio and presses are located. The equipment throughout is worthy of the young men who have launched the enterprise. Mr. James A. Gausman, the head of the concern, is well known in the picture business. He was with the Biograph Company for two years and following that with the New York Motion Picture Company for four and a half years, but left the picture game to take up poster work and was with the Metro Lithograph Company for eighteen months. Mr. L. P. Weber, his partner, has been in the business for twenty-five years. The new firm is now ready to turn out high-class posters and theatrical papers.

TWO FORTHCOMING PILOT FEATURES.

Director Bert Angeles, producer of Pilot's four-part feature "Across the Continent," has been busy assembling the film. The company predicts that this feature will become one of the most popular films ever produced in this country.

In its four-part feature "Hoodman Blind," now being produced by James Gordon, the Pilot Company will build a reproduction of the Thames embankment, and probably one of London's bridges. In "Across the Continent," it made a reproduction of New York's celebrated "Five Points," which it destroyed by fire.

"A MAN AND A WOMAN" (Reliance).

By lifting, from their surroundings, a man and a woman of two absolutely different stations in life and placing them together on a desert island, the author of "A Man and a Woman" has constructed a drama containing something more than mere amusement value The characters are brought right down close to Mother Earth where the battle for food and shelter is the first and only consideration.

The man is cast upon the island first and has managed to build himself a rude hut. Then a small raft is thrown upon the beach by the waves and the man rushes to it eagerly, thinking that it carries some of the necessities of life. When he discovers that the sea has brought him another mouth to feed in the form of a frail, helpless woman, he is disgusted and even steals the blanket that is covering her. The woman is placed in the position of a beggar, imploring favors from a big brute of a man who would not be permitted to touch even "the hem of her garment" under ordinary social conditions.

Scene from "A Man and a Woman" (Reliance).

After the couple are rescued by a passing steamer they assume their old positions in society—the woman once more bedecked in silks and jewels—the man shoveling coal in company with his fellow stokers. This exceptionally interesting drama which is backed by beautiful ocean scenery found in the neighborhood of Block Island, will be released on Wednesday, November 19th, with Irene Hunt and George Siegmann in the leading roles.

"THE PALE FACE SQUAW" (Laclede Feature).

A rattling good story is "The Pale Face Squaw," the first release of the Laclede brand of Western features. There's nothing remarkably new in the theme of the white child being carried off and raised by Indians, but after all there's "nothing new under the sun" and it's treatment and variety of the motive that counts. This story has that.

The Laclede director is a "heap big chief" with the Indians, as in this film he has made Indians act more like Indians with a hankering for scalps than has been seen in many a moon. These aborigines evidently do not believe or have been allowed to believe that dramatic art for Indians consists only in looking red in the face and wearing exaggerated aigrettes. They fight and fall as though they were under the eye of "Sitting Bull" himself and had a General Custer massacre to sweeten their tempers. Their falls from ponies going at breakneck gallops are hard enough to cure any self-respecting redskin of histrionic tendencies.

The Laclede brand has begun auspiciously and "The Pale Face Squaw" will gladden many a five, ten and twenty-five cent wigwam. This brand will be released through the Exclusive Supply Corporation.

RAVER AFTER PIRATES.

Harry R. Raver, president of the Itala Company, is taking steps to prevent the pirating of Itala films. Geo. W. Timble, of Algoma, Wis., purchased the state rights on "The War Correspondents" for Wisconsin and other states. Recently a Wisconsin feature film company has been attempting to book a so-called similar feature and Mr. Timble has been empowered, as are all Itala exhibitors, by the Itala Company to seize the film or any film infringing the Itala product if it comes in his territory.

EDISON COMPANY IN JACKSONVILLE.

A large company of players from the Edison studio are now working in Jacksonville, Fla., under the direction of C. Jay Williams.

"THE SECRET OF ADRIANOPLE" (Film Releases of America).

If ever a leading man was hard worked it is the young man who plays the parlous part of the spy in "The Secret of Adrianople," the multiple reel subject of the Film Releases of America. When he staggers over the embankment under the waiting rifles of his friends, engaged in keeping back the pursuing enemy, he is just about as tuckered out as he acts to be.

This subject, in the opinion of its sales force, is the best picture state rightistically speaking, since "Dr. Nicholson and the Blue Diamond." Heaven knows there's enough variety and catastrophe. They blow up motor-boats, pick off aeroplanes floating near the clouds, and make life and war generally uncomfortable for the spy.

Scene from "The Secret of Adrianople."

Well costumed, superbly staged and with an eye for military detail worthy of a Napoleon, "The Secret of Adrianople" is one which should be exposed early and often to eyes that will admire. Its Balkan War atmosphere helps toward the general effect.

"THE SPARTAN GIRL OF THE WEST" (American).

As owner of her own ranch, Winifred, Greenwood deports herself in a perfectly natural manner, becoming to one thoroughly accustomed to work on a ranch. Her acting is refined in every detail. The story is a gripping western tale in which she finds herself in love with a neighbor who later proves himself a rustler. She herself catches him in the act of leading her cattle away. Her pride and her spartan nature will not permit her to turn the guilty culprit over to the sheriff so she secretes him in her hay-loft and at night, without a tremor of sentiment, she bids him "go and forget."

Scene from "The Spartan Girl of the West."

Ed Coxen plays the part of the foreman in love with the Spartan Girl and George Field is the villain. The acting is on a par with that of this talented company and the photographic quality is the customary "Flying A" grade that always elicits highest commendation. The subject will be released November 27th.

ALL STAR TO PRODUCE "SHORE ACRES."

The late James A. Herne's great play of American life, "Shore Acres," is to be produced in motion picture form by the All Star Feature Corporation. It is announced at the offices of that corporation that President Harry R. Raver has entered into a contract with Mrs. James A. Herne, executrix of her husband's estate, for the exclusive rights to produce "Shore Acres" in motion picture form. This sets at rest considerable speculation as to what company had secured these rights and when the play is to be produced. Although at present no definite date has been set for the production, it is not probable that the production will be begun until the spring.

Augustus Thomas, director-general of the company, will adapt the play to scenario form and will produce it under his personal supervision. The closing of the rights for "Shore Acres" is considered a master stroke by the All Star. It has long been sought after and often reported as having been contracted for.

"VENOMOUS TONGUES" (Kleine-Celio).

"Venomous Tongues" is the appropriate title of a pretty story by which the new Kleine-Celio brand of film will be introduced to American play-goers Tuesday, December 2. Miss Francesca Bertini, that beautiful and talented Italian actress plays the lead with an able cast for support.

The story centers about a tragedy caused by idle gossip. In fact the malicious mischief of Mrs. Grundy is everywhere in evidence throughout the story. The settings are beautiful and the photography of this first offering sets a high standard. The work of Miss Bertini in the part of victim's gossip will elicit much praise.

"KISSING CUP" (Hepworth).

"Kissing Cup" is a racing melodrama that is full of thrills. Two racing automobiles, an aeroplane flight and a horse race with a nerve racking finish are but part of the many features that are found in this four reel play. It is cleverly acted and no regard was given to expense. The cast includes: Alec Worcester, Chrissie White, Harry Gilbey, and Flora Morris. Albert Blinkhorn, 110 West 40th Street, New York, has the American rights.

DES MOINES MAN PROMOTER OF THEATER.

A. H. Blank, formerly manager of the Casino Theater, Des Moines, Ia., announces that he has closed a contract for the Exclusive Service, of the General Film Company, which he will exhibit at his Star Theater in that city. Mr. Blank signed a sixteen year lease on the Odd Fellows Temple, a five story structure, situated on Des Moines' most prominent thoroughfare. After extensive alterations, figuring around $50,000 have been made, he will open a moving picture house which will be one of the most elaborate exclusive photoplay houses in the West. It will have a seating capacity of 1200. Mr. Blank also operates the Casino, a picture house in Charles City, Ia., which was completed about a month ago under his supervision. Business at this house is fine. At Davenport, Ia., Mr. Blank recently closed negotiations for another theater which will be called the Casino. He will spend about $20,000 for remodeling alone. By December 15th, it will be completed with a seating capacity of 700. The house will be the largest in Davenport.

BARON FASSINI—HEAD OF AMBROSIO.

Baron Fassini is the active head of the Cines Company, of Rome, Italy. The Baron was an officer in the Italian Navy prior to his connection with the film industry, and is generally known as one of the controlling factors of the film destinies of all Europe. Baron Fassini is the man who made "Quo Vadis?" possible.

The Baron may be found every day at the splendid executive offices of the Cines Company on the Via Appia Nuova right near the gate of St. John. He has a personality at once pleasing and impressive and his well-bred courtesy has charmed many a distinguished visitor to the vast Cines plant. The Baron is in the prime of life and is a picture of health. He speaks no English but has a polyglot secretary who does the interpreting fluently and gracefully.

RUBY'S SULZER FEATURE.

A current release that is selling at top-market prices, according to reports from the makers, is "The Shame of the Empire State," a four reel feature by the Ruby Film Co., featuring Ex-Governor Sulzer in a story. The film is not a political document; it shows the wheels within wheels that were responsible for the recent impeachment, and the actual facts with regard to the faith of Mrs. Sulzer in the innocence of her husband, with a strong romantic thread. Other features of the picture are a vivid portrayal of the election methods employed by corrupt politicians, and the excitement throughout the country is reflected in the film.

Now that Mr. Sulzer's election to the Legislature has practically constituted a public vindication, he starts on a nation-wide lecture tour which will no doubt keep the press busy printing his exposures. The film was made to be a permanent feature, regardless of Mr. Sulzer's participation in it.

SOUTHERN EXCHANGE MEN IN TOWN.

Mr. H. R. Mason, of the Southern States Exchange, is at present in the city in company with his new business constituent, John I. Pittmann, a man interested in several theatrical enterprises in the state of Texas, head office, Beaumont, Texas. Mr. Mason and Mr. Pittmann are contracted for seventy-five per cent. of the Exclusive Supply Corporation program and intend making their head offices at Atlanta, Ga.

"HER BROTHER'S PARD" (Ammex).

Here's the first of the Ammex three reel Westerns. In proportion to the fact that three reel features are in greater demand than are two reel features, is this subject more sincerely meritorious than its predecessors. Its directors had a good story to work with, and they have handled their material successfully.

How a man who, to save his life from the law when accused of murder, and through circumstantial evidence is seemingly guilty, adopts the name and the place of his dead friend, and what induces later to confess his masquerade, is the crisis of the story. There is heart interest as well as gun fire interest abundant, and the happy conclusion is reached plausibly and without exaggeration.

EMPIRE DOING GOOD BUSINESS.

Contrary to the report given in the correspondence columns in the issue of November 8, that the business of the Empire Theater, Portland, Me., was fair and that its future was doubtful, word comes from the manager of that house and from the treasurer of the Empire Amusement Company, which owns that theater, to the effect that business at the Empire is 100 per cent. better than had been anticipated.

"A STOLEN IDENTITY" (Powers).

Edwin August, author, actor and director of the Universal West Coast Organization, conceived, acted and directed this singular two-reel drama dealing with a crook who steals the identity of an honest citizen and comes near winning a fortune thereby. It contains numerous double exposures of the most surprising kind. It is a story of well-sustained suspense and gripping climaxes. Mr. August takes the part of both the victimized art lover and the unscrupulous crook. Ethel Davis plays the sweetheart of Ganton, Iva Shepard is Marx's accomplice, and Fred Gamble is the lawyer.

Scene from "The Stolen Identity" (Powers).

PILOT FEATURE EXHIBITED.

A private exhibition of Pilot's four-part feature "Across the Continent," was given at Loew's Broadway Theater, 41st St. and Broadway, Thursday, November 13th. The picture was directed by Bert Angeles, formerly of the Vitagraph Company. The cast includes Herbert Barrington and Mrs. Guy Standing; also Herbert Barry, formerly with the Vitagraph. One of the last scenes taken was Caesar being chased through the woods by a bear. A more realistic touch was added when the bear got loose and instead of chasing Caesar, turned on the property man.

Several territorial rights have already been disposed of on Pilot's four-part production, adapted from Oliver Doud Byron's famous play "Across the Continent."

KLEINE'S POMPEII MAKES HIT IN PORTLAND, ORE.

Melvin Winstock, manager of the Peoples Theater, Portland, Ore., wires the Moving Picture World that at the opening of the engagement of Kleine's "Last Days of Pompeii," at the Peoples on Sunday, November 9, over 6,700 paid admissions were taken and that more than two thousand persons were turned away. A record for Portland is expected to be made with this feature, which Mr. Winstock says is the best feature ever shown in Portland.

STATE RIGHTS BUYERS.

NOTE.—Exhibitors are requested to keep this list on file or copy from it the names of purchasers in their particular territories. These lists will not be republished and we cannot undertake to furnish back information by mail to those who have neglected to keep a record.

"THE GALLOWS OF THE GODS" (Film Releases of America—three reels).—Famous Players Film Company, Boston, Mass.; Weiland Film Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Electric Theater Supply Company, Philadelphia, Pa.; Golden Gate Film Exchange, San Francisco, Cal.; Exclusive Features, Inc., New York City; Northwestern Feature Film Company, Portland, Ore.; Electric Theater Supply Co., Baltimore, Md.; Golden Gate Film Exchange, Los Angeles, Cal.; Northwestern Feature Film Company, Seattle, Wash.

"THE BATTLE OF WATERLOO" (Waterloo Film Company—five reels) for New York City and State by The High Grade Feature Film Company, 220 West 22d Street, New York City.

"MYSTERIES OF PARIS" (Eclectic—nine reels), by Chas. J. Gorman, 665 Washington Street, Boston, Mass., for New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

"THE DOOM OF THE OCEAN" (Eclectic—three reels), by A. Podiker, 3860 Woodland avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, for Ohio.

"VENDETTA" (Eclectic) same purchaser and territory as "The Doom of the Ocean."

CLASSIC MUSIC GROWING IN FAVOR.

The character of picture play audiences is undoubtedly sustaining a high standard and constantly advancing, disputing the old idea that the picture play, as an entertainment for the common people, must of itself be ordinary. A few weeks ago, a well known American composer, Charles Wakefield Cadman, who is recognized as the foremost expositor of Indian music in this country, was visiting at Lyon and Healys, the largest music concern in the West, and someone made a slurring observation concerning moving picture audiences as it touched musical taste. Mr. Cadman promptly took up the question for backing his belief, for a considerable sum. A few nights later he went to a theater on the North Shore, where the regular line of films are run, and asked that the pianist and vocalist to take up a section from one of his concert programs. They did so, and the result demonstrated the truth of his belief, as enthusiasm was most marked. "The Winter's Breath," "The Land of the Sky-Blue Water" and other aboriginal classics were given with equal success. So that his critical guests, invited, paid the wager at once. There is no doubt that music of the classic character is growing more and more in favor with the picture theater audience.

NOTES OF THE TRADE.

THE fire department of Santa Barbara made a test run for speed which will be used in the "Flying A" production, "At Midnight," scheduled for release Nov. 29th. Stop watches were used by members of the department and a record run, not only pleasing to the department, but very effective on the screen, was secured.

* * *

The New York Motion Picture Corporation has purchased the three-masted sailing vessel, the "Fremont of New York." The purchase price was $12,000. Built in the Philadelphia Shipbuilding Yards in 1850, the "Fremont" has had a varied career, carrying the stars and stripes to almost every corner of the earth. In 1861 she was pressed into service by the Union forces and served in almost every capacity.

* * *

One of the finest of the series of classics yet released by Warner's Features, Inc., is "A Florentine Tragedy," which follows in detail the stage play written by Oscar Wilde.

* * *

Edwin Barbour, of the Lubin Scenario Department, has returned from a serious spell of sickness. On his return to the office he found his desk covered with American beauties from the Lubin admirers.

* * *

The Enterprise, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, in exhibiting its pictures at the Electrical Exposition and Motor Show of 1913 at Grand Central Palace, New York City, October 15th to 25th, inclusive, was given appreciative recognition by the presentation on the part of the management of a gold medal to the officers of the big U.

* * *

Tom Carrigan, who has been very busy in leading parts, notably the detective series of "The Man in the Street" during the past summer at the Selig Western studios, has gone East to join his wife, Mabel Taliaferro. It is quite possible that dramatic engagements will preclude Mr. Carrigan's appearances in picture films for some little time to come.

* * *

The organization of the World Special Films Corporation is gradually assuming large proportions. Offices are now open in thirteen (13) towns extending from New York to Kansas City.

* * *

Several scenes were taken by the Reliance director, Travers Vale, on the different decks of the "Imperator" together with an excellent view of the great boat getting under way for her latest ocean voyage. The title of the picture will be announced on the Mutual program at an early date.

* * *

Genial John Steppling, who has a list of successes after his name as long as the River Nile, has been engaged by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to play character parts in director Albert R. Christie's company at the Pacific Coast studios. For two years Mr. Steppling played leading comedy parts with the Eastern branch of the Essanay Company and he was the originator of the Billy McGrath series.

* * *

The Kinemacolor office staff and their friends held a merry Hallowe'en party in the Mecca Building on Election night. Among those present were Misses Eleanor Burger, Rose Saxon, May Andrews, Dorothy Wallace, Frances Gerard, May Reynolds, May Scott, Beatrice Levy, Leila Tischler, Violet Barnes, Martha Meyer and Mr. Arthur H. Sawyer, Robert C. Ogle, Jack F. Hughes, Mr. Hennessey, Mr. Sargent, Mr. William H. Hickey, Mort. Wiener, Leopold Allen and William Palm.

* * *

A. Warner, the busy vice-president of Warner's Features, Inc., no sooner returns to New York after an extended road trip than he packs his Gladstone and is off again to another part of the country. His present trip takes him to Montreal to open an office there—the first link of a chain that will extend across the Dominion from coast to coast.

ELEANOR WOODRUFF
The Ethel Barrymore of Motion Pictures
PATHEPLAY

CORRESPONDENCE

NEW ENGLAND AND CANADA.

FOR the first time in the history of the city of Boston, moving pictures were presented during a regular evening church service last night, i.e., October 26. At the Central Congregational church of Jamaica Plain two reels of pictures showing the first half of the "Passion Play" were presented under the direction of the Rev. Chauncey J. Hawkins, the pastor of the church. Rev. Hawkins, who is a very liberal minded man, and a beloved clergyman, feels that in no other way can he so well explain certain Bible stories, as by the use of the photoplay. Hereafter, pictures will be freely exhibited at the Congregational church.

The Theatrical Stage Employes' Union, Local 11, of Boston, at a meeting held October 26, congratulated Business Agent J. J. Barry, on his election as vice-president of the Boston Central Labor Union. Mr. Barry has also been elected a delegate of the International Stage Employes' Union of the American Federation of Labor Convention, to be held in Seattle next month. He is an ex-international president. The reports of the delegates at the recent District Council Convention of Stage Employes' Union, held at Manchester, N. H., were also received.

The Huntington Avenue Theater, Boston, is doing a nice business, although the Loew competition at the St. James is very sharp.

Mr. H. Hirsch, New England manager of the World Special Films Corporation, with offices at 1047 Boylston street, Boston, is not complaining of slow trade, although this concern is new to the New England territory. Mr. Hirsch tells us that among his best selling features are "Father John," "Two Sergeants," "Sapho," "Protea," "Golden Cross," "Blind Sculptor," "Heart of a Police Officer," "Jack," "Unknown Friend," "What the Gods Decree," "Nihilist's Daughter," and "For the Honor of the Family." "The Two Sargeants" is very well spoken of by the Woonsocket, R. I., Opera House, and the Palace Theater, Fall River, Mass., both of which used this feature. The Granite Square Theater, Manchester, N. H., booked "Sapho" and report good business with this feature.

Mr. I. Navogroski has opened his new theater at Westerly, R. I., and opening indications point to good trade at this house. Mr. R. D. Marson, 597 Washington street, Boston, installed the machines and other equipment. The house will offer a good grade of service, with special features from the Famous Players Film Company, Boston.

Manager Joseph A. McConville, of the New Portland Theater, Portland, Me., featured moving pictures of "East Lynne" last week, and a special added attraction was F. Eugene Farnsworth with travel talks.

Manager D. D. Leader, of the Empire Theater, Portland, Me., has a lecturer on his feature reel in the person of Dr. Harwood, who pleases his audiences. "In the Midst of the Jungle" was the feature the week of October 27.

William E. Reeves, manager of the Big Nickel Theater, at Portland, features the Mutual Weekly, while Mr. Moxley Blumenberg, of the Casco Theater, leads the way with the Pathe Weekly. Both these houses report good business.

Mr. J. W. Greely, manager of Greely's Theater, Portland, a vaudeville and picture house, has sublet his Pavilion, of the same city, to Barron & O'Brien, who will continue the Pavilion about as before.

Manager E. L. Knight, of the Bijou Theater, Springfield, Mass., featured Maud Fealy in "Moths," October 27-29, to good trade.

Mr. Walter Lindahan, manager of the Gilmore Theater, at Springfield, Mass., offers road shows, but his experiment of giving programs of pictures and vaudeville on Saturday, October 18, was so successful that the Gilmore will continue to offer the photoplay all year on Saturday.

The Broadway Theater, Springfield, of which D. D. Scullen is the manager, has made an offer to the Springfield Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis to set aside one night for the benefit of the Association, the whole proceeds to be devoted to them. This is a very liberal and pleasing offer for the Broadway Theater Company to make.

The Lyceum Theater, at Milford, Mass., has emerged from its renovation looking a great deal better than of yore. New opera chairs also help the looks of the Lyceum greatly.

On November 3, the Playhouse, formerly Hathaways' Theater, Lowell, Mass., reopened with a policy of vaudeville and photoplay programs. The new manager, Mr. Herbert Tibbetts, of Pittsfield, has made a good many changes in the house, and the Playhouse should get its share of the trade.

The Central Square Theater, Lynn, Mass., is undergoing very extensive repairs, and it is said that Colonel Stanton, who manages this house, will add vaudeville acts to his present bills of photoplays after the repairs are completed.

Lyman Howe and his travel pictures played an engagement at the Lawler Theater, Greenfield, Mass., last week, and Lawler Brothers report good business with the attraction.

On October 27, Fox's Theater, at Waterbury, Conn., changed managers, and Louis D. Garvey, is now at the Helm, succeeding Harry Fitzgerald, who has been placed at Jamaica, Long Island, to manage the Fox Theater there. Mr. Walter Thompson, of New York City, will be assistant manager.

The Harros Theater, of Deerfield, Mass., has been closed for some time, and it is not known when it will reopen.

Mr. Ernie Moule, manager of the Apollo Theater, at Brantford, Can., has also been appointed manager of the New Brant Theater, soon to open.

Albert Donaghy, manager of the Griffin Theater, at Woodstock, Can., plays road shows, but manages to find dates each week for vaudeville and picture programs.

Harry L. Cate tells us that he has decided to once again use the Universal program from manager J. A. Eslow, of the Universal's Boston offices.

Manager Fred Lovett will shortly open the large Academy of Music Theater at Haverhill, Mass., with Universal subjects and vaudeville. This house is new and thoroughly modern and up-to-the-minute in every way. Mr. Lovett comes to the Academy with an unusually successful record behind him.

Mr. R. D. Marson, 597 Washington street, Boston, tells us he has just purchased the rights for New England for the widely known Boston Spotlight. This lamp, which has given good service wherever used, is adapted for either a spot or flood light. An important feature of the Boston is the fact that it is safe, in that the closed terminals remove fire danger, due to sparks, etc. Mr. Marson is doing a very large business in moving picture supplies of all kinds and his mirror screen is a big seller.

Mr. Sam Grand, of Novelty Feature Films, 228 Tremont street, Boston, is doing very well with his features and supplies. "The Crime of the Camorra," a four-part feature, was booked in the Palace and South End theaters, Boston, this week, and both theaters turned them away.

Mr. Harry Asher, general manager Famous Players Film Company of New England, 100 Boylston street, Boston, is delighted over his new central offices at 31 Beach street, Boston, where he will be installed on or before December 1. Harry is setting a high water mark for the feature boys to emulate, as he is buying six features each week, in addition to the Famous Players product.

The New Imperial Theater, St. John, Canada, built by Keith & Albee, of New York City, on a central site, King Square, is undoubtedly one of the finest houses of entertainment in that section of the country. St. John has been a profitable proposition for the Keith interests for over seven years, and rather than continue the lease of an antiquated building, they invested in the new house. Nothing has been withheld to make the Imperial a truly Metropolitan theater in every way. The house occupies a lot 170 feet deep by 80 feet wide, and the frontal effect of the structure is particularly handsome, being of ornate architectural design, in terra cotta, polished granite, slate, glass, etc. The theater is of brick, stone, concrete and terra cotta, and the front part is laid off in office suites. The street is concreted in front of the Imperial, and ornamental iron light standards have been erected the full length of the property, giving colonade effect. Inside, the Imperial is most elaborate, the auditorium has perfect acoustic properties, and the line of vision is not obstructed at any angle. There are 800 leather chairs on the ground floor, six boxes, aggregating 100 seats and the balcony, holding 900. The gross capacity of the Imperial is 1,800. Mr. Walter H. Golding is managing the house, which offers picture programs.

Mr. Fred Thompson and his band of photoplayers, are still in and around the suburbs of Boston, where a reel "The Christian" is being filmed.

A new theater to cost $100,000, is promised for Malden, Mass., as a business block has been purchased for this purpose, and work is scheduled to be rushed ahead to raze the present structure to the ground. The location is Malden Square.

Manager Berman, of the Gem Theater, Winthrop, Mass., is doing a good business these days, and offers as a special attraction features from the Famous Players studios.

Moving pictures or no moving pictures, this is the nut which the selectmen of Needham, Mass., have before them to crack. The entire town is divided on the question and the selectmen are bound to make enemies no matter which way they decide the question, unless they can discover some middle course. On November 7, they considered the proposition following a three-hour discussion the night before in the Town Hall. Carl Erickson, of Dedham, made application for a license to run a vaudeville and photoplay house. Several hundred persons crowded into the hall and heard arguments pro and con. It was a very exciting session. E. A. Reimer outlined the project, which included the erection of a $15,000 brick building, in Great Plain avenue, opposite the common, with stores in front, and a theater in the rear, to seat 800. The Rev. A. W. Littlefield, whose church is at the rear of the proposed theater, sent a letter favoring the license, and Rev. C. E. Sawtelle, whose church is on the opposite side, vigorously opposed it. He was supported in his opposition by Rev. Arthur Wright, Rev. A. A. Cambridge, Mrs. F. L. Hutchinson, G. E. Arcutt, Prof. G. B. Haven, D. L. Smith, A. G. Curran, G. E. Mitchell, J. F. Bent and T. J. Crossman. Support was afforded the project by W. C. Carter, W. G. Rae, J. D. Cooke, Robert Coupe, T. A. Hickey, E. J. Lawlor and A. D. Hildreth. Louis A. Holman presented an alternative proposition in the shape of an application for a license to conduct moving picture shows in the town hall, twice weekly, by a corporation of ten Needham men, who would devote the profits of the enterprise to some public charity or utility. The debate was spirited and excitement ran high, scarcely a person leaving the hall during the three hours' session. Against the protests of the opponents of the license, Chairman Potter announced that all present would be permitted to vote, without regard to age or sex. The meeting endorsed Mr. Erickson's application by a vote of 230 to 195, several hundred not voting at all.

Although not at liberty at this writing to name the promoters, the writer has seen the perfected plans for a new theater on the White estate, just opposite the R. H. White Company, Washington street, Boston. This location is the most expensive in Boston, exactly in the very heart of the shopping district. The new house will seat 800 and will be erected at a cost of $125,000; it probably will be the finest and most artistic theater of its size in New England. A marble front is one of the unique features called for by the plans. Pictures and vaudeville are scheduled.

Manager J. A. Eslow, of the Universal's Boston offices, tells us that he has purchased a delivery automobile in the interests of his customers. This runabout will expedite service greatly, and will be used to deliver and pick up films at the depots, in place of messenger boys.

A new theater, to be devoted to vaudeville and pictures, is scheduled for Allston, Mass., to seat 1,800 persons. The estimated cost of the house is $80,000.

Manager Skates, of the General's Boston offices, is a very busy man nowadays, as the new Exclusive service is making a hit with New England exhibitors. Mr. Skates, as a special representative of the General Film Company, is taking an active hand on matters close to the hearts of Massachusetts' exhibitors. Which means legislative matters. Mr. Skates is getting things in such shape now as to be able to effectively oppose any unjust legislation that may come up in the next legislative session, and he also hopes to be able to make the present obnoxious "5 minute" law a thing of the past, before long. Exhibitors appreciate Mr. Skates' efforts in their behalf, and the latter is a very popular man these days.

The world's premier prize fighter, John L. Sullivan, has decided to use the Universal program for the house he just acquired in Brockton—the Empire.

The rejuvenated Academy of Music Theater at Haverhill, Mass., has reopened to the public, with a policy of vaudeville and pictures. The house has been completely rebuilt, and is a modern and up-to-the-minute house in every respect. Messrs. Duncan and Leavitt are the owners. Universal pictures were selected to "put the house across," while R. D. Marson, of 597 Washington street, Boston, was called upon to install Power's Cameragraph machines. The opening week's business was very satisfactory.

Mr. Nathan Gordon and his associates have taken over control of the Empire Theater, Chelsea, Mass., which is being conducted as a photoplay house by them. The Empire was unable to withstand the strong opposition of the Gordon house in Chelsea, but as both houses are now being run by the same interests, the former house will probably do a little better.

The Rev. J. S. Durkee, of the South Congregational Church at Brockton, Mass., is a firm believer in and user of photoplays, in connection with church work. Rev. Durkee is now using moving pictures as the feature attraction on Sunday nights, and the Central Congregational Church in Jamaica Plain, Mass., is doing likewise, as these columns have noted before. In New England the church is slowly but surely turning to the pictures as a legitimate form of relaxation.

Starting on November 19 at Tremont Temple, Boston, Chevalier L. Melano Rossi will give lectures on Peru and Bolivia, illustrated by motion pictures.

"Les Miserables" exceeded the expectations of its promoters at Tremont Temple, Boston, and the engagement was extended until it lasted twelve weeks. For the final two weeks, "Les Miserables" was exhibited twice each day without any break. The engagement has been more than ordinarily successful.

The Gem Theater, Winthrop, Mass., has installed a new Power's Cameragraph machine, bought of R. D. Marson. This house reports good business.

Herman Rifkin, of the Eastern Feature Film Company, 224 Tremont Street, Boston, states he has just bought the New England rights for "Gorki," the demon detective in the "Great Bank Robbery."

Harry Asher, general manager of the Famous Players' Film Company, of New England, 100 Boylston street, Boston, is doing a big business with his Famous Players, All Star and other releases. Mr. Asher tells us that he is now buying three features weekly in the open market to satisfy his customers. Most of these features, called "Class B," to distinguish them from the "Class A" subjects, are of a highly sensational flavor, and all of them have been passed by the National Board of Censorship.

Manager H. Hirsch, of the World Special Films Corporation, 1074 Boylston street, Boston, reports very brisk demand for "Protea," the five-reel masterpiece.

The Star Theater, Boston, has contracted for the "Battle of Gettysburg" for November 17 and 18.

Mr. L. Fisher, on the road for the Helen Gardiner productions, has struck the New England territory, where he is booking dates for "A Sister to Carmen" and "A Wife of Cain."

The True Feature Film Company, 110 West 40th street, New York, had representatives in Boston and nearby territory this week, and found a brisk demand for True Features.

Mr. E. J. Fisher has purchased the interest of Messrs. Bertrand and Pigeon, in the Dreamland Theater, on Twentieth street, Saskatoon, Sask., Canada. Mr. Fisher will be the manager and musical director. The house will offer a high grade all feature service, and the music will receive particular attention.

The annual tours of Dwight L. Elmendorf, artist, traveler and lecturer, are now taking place at Symphony Hall, Boston. Mr. Elmendorf has a great many very fine moving pictures, taken and colored by himself. The projection is particularly good, and the credit for this is due to Mr. F. H. White. Very interesting pictures of Ceylon, Southern and Western India, are proving business getters for Mr. Elmendorf.

The Provincial Council of Alberta, Canada, has just passed an order, that went into effect November 1, which kills all Sunday shows of photoplays in this territory. The council authorized the cancellation of any theater in the province doing business on Sundays. The new edict also provides for a provisional license fee, ranging from $150 to $500, according to capacity. Any theater in which photoplays form only one number on the program, are not included in this schedule. A straight license fee of $300 will be taxed such theaters, without regard to total seating capacity. Any temporary or transient moving picture entertainment is required to pay a license fee of $50. Moving picture operators are to be assessed a license fee of $10. Moving picture exchanges will be asked to contribute $300 yearly, as a license. Up to this time the photoplay houses of Edmonton had been licensed by the municipality, the fee being $10. Mr. Grant Churchill, owner of the Partola Theater, reports that he was successful when the Supreme Court of Alberta set aside the convictions of four proprietors on the charge of violating the "Lord's Day Act." Mr. Churchill says that the Managers' Protective Association of Edmonton will make a decided effort to have the new council order greatly modified, in several respects. With this as the purpose, Mr. Churchill will make every effort to organize every motion picture theater in the Province of Alberta. The present law is extremely unfair, according to Manager Churchill, who adds that a well knit, strongly organized body of exhibitors, should easily be able to show the Provincial Council the hardships entailed by present laws.

The good right hand of Harry Asher, general manager of the Famous Players' Film Company, of New England, Boston, is about worn out. The reason may be found in the fact that Harry's large circle of friends in the trade are all shaking his hand warmly, to congratulate him on his "one best feature" —Miss Sarah Schwartz—to whom Harry is to be married about January 1.

"The Port of Dooms," soon to be released by the Famous Players' people, is being produced in Boston Harbor. Such things as sinking ships are of frequent occurrence since Laura Sawyer and the other Famous Players took possession of the harbor.

Announcement is made that the public schools of Springfield, Mass., have decided to place motion pictures as a regular part of school instruction. Geography, history, science, literature and kindred subjects are now to be taught the pupils via the picture. This excellent plan is scheduled to go into effect by the first of the new year. At the next meeting of the Springfield school committee, it is expected that the members will vote to buy moving picure machines from the regular school appropriation. George D. Pratt, chairman of the Municipal Building Commission, wrote a letter to Mayor John A. Dennison, stating that the $250 for the purchase of a machine, to be used in connection with the school exhibition at the municipal group dedication exercises, would be taken from the amount raised at the $5 ball. Instructors at Springfield schools are reported as being jubilant over the new innovation, stating that it will help them greatly in their work.

"Captain Kidd," a Universal feature, was exhibited this week at the Comique Theater, Boston, and drew large trade.

Mr. E. A. Crawford, manager the Cumberland Theater at Brunswick, Me., reports good trade with his photoplay programs. The Cumberland also runs road shows now and then. The Pastime Theater, of Brunswick, in charge of W. O. Gould, reports brisk trade with pictures.

Hamilton, Can., has a new vaudeville and picture house in Griffin's Hippodrome, which opened its doors to the public on November 3, with a program of six acts of vaudeville and a large number of photoplays. John Griffin, of Toronto, Can., owns the Hippodrome, and he is very well known in Canadian theatrical circles, with a string of theaters. The house has a fine location in the heart of the city, in James street North. It is one of the most expensive and thoroughly modern theaters in Canada, with a total seating capacity of almost 1,700. The Hippodrome has been placed in charge of R. F. Nallin, a well known manager.

The Klein-Cines photodrama, "Quo Vadis?" was featured this week by the Empire Theater, Edmonton, Can. Business was very good, although the Empire as a rule offers road shows

Rev. Dr. D. G. McQueen, of the First Presbyterian Church, Edmonton, Can., and a delegation from the Edmonton Ministerial Association, interviewed the Hon. C. W. Cross, attorney-general of Alberta, last week, with regard to the breaking of the "Lord's Day Act" in Edmonton, and through the province. This is relative to Sunday shows of pictures. Silas H. Carpenter, chief of police, was present, and insisted that Edmonton was the most law abiding city in Canada. Hon. Cross promised the ministers assembled that legislation relative to motion picture theaters would be forthcoming. Right through the Dominion of Canada just now there is a great deal of agitation on the moving picture theaters, instituted by the clergy. Exhibitors in this territory write that it is about the same thing that the United States theaters formerly contended with.

Local capitalists of Ottawa, Can., are now busily engaged in the erection of a modern motion picture theater in Bank street. The new house promises to be the best in Ottawa, and will run to vaudeville and feature pictures.

Mr. Bayne Perrin, manager of the Empire Theater at London, Can., reports good trade, since the house re-opened on October 27, under new management. A policy of pictures only has been decided upon by Mr. Perrin.

A new photoplay house has been opened in East London, Can., and thus far business has been fair.

Mr. J. M. Winter, manager of the Temple Theater at London, Can., has been finding business quite good, although no vaudeville is used, in connection with the pictures.

Mr. F. Eugene Farnsworth and his travel talks and pictures, played a two-weeks' engagement at the New Portland Theater, Portland, Me., and drew very well. "One Hundred Years of Mormonism" proved an extra good money getter for Manager McConville, of the New Portland.

Mr. Nathan Robbins is now in charge of the Casco Theater, Portland, Me., succeeding Mr. Moxley C. Blumenberg, who has decided to enter another line of business in New York. Mr. Robbins intends to run the Casco along the lines laid down by Mr. Blumenberg, who raised the Casco to a very high grade standard. General film service, and features have done extremely well for the Casco. Mr. Blumenberg's many friends are sorry to lose him, but wish him all success in his new venture.

Springfield, Mass., is scheduled to have another theater, to be devoted to photoplays, as a permit for the erection of a house at 259 Bridge street has been granted the Geisha Amusement Company. The estimated cost of the building is $8,000. Mr. E. J. Pinney is the builder, while G. P. B. Alderman is the architect.

Mr. Herbert Tibbetts opened his Playhouse, Lowell, Mass., to a big house on November 3. Vaudeville and pictures is the policy. The Playhouse is an up-to-date theater.

Mr. "Nick" Lawler, of the Lawler Theater, Greenfield, Mass., is unusually busy these days. Mr Lawler is quite a politician, and this, in addition to the Lawler Theater, keeps "Nick" on the jump.

The Imperial Theater, St. John, Can., has enlarged its orchestra, and now has a seven-piece affair. This picture and vaudeville house is doing a fine business

Mr. Martin Toohey has succeeded Mr. Fred Haman as manager of the Scenic Temple, Providence, R. I

HENRY.

OHIO.

THE National Cash Register Company will establish a moving picture film plant at Dayton. The company is equipping a studio in connection with its extensive photographic department for the manufacture of films. John Clifford Cook, up until recently associated with the Kinemacolor Company in New York City, is in charge of the work of installing the studio and its photographic departments. The plant will have a maximum capacity of 25,000 feet of film a week and will depict all mechanical operations employed in the big factory and illustrate welfare work maintained by the company.

Manager D. P. Hopkins, of the Palm Theater, Painesville, will open the city hall auditorium as a film theater within a week for use until his new house, the Utopia, is completed.

The Lyric at Lima was slightly damaged by fire November 5. Pedestrians discovered flames above the entrance and saved the theater by promptly calling the fire department.

A machine that sells, records, counts and checks up tickets is under construction at the National Cash Register Company, Dayton, for the express use of motion picture houses.

The Dayton Daily News entertained three hundred school students at the production of "Quo Vadis?" at Memorial Hall.

Earle Williams, with the Eastern company of the Vitagraph Company of America, was a recent visitor at Lorain. He was the guest of Frank Faris, late of the Majestic Theater, with whom he had previously been in the theatrical business.

J. C. Walsh has plans drawn for a new theater at East Liverpool. He expects to erect a motion picture house to cost between $15,000 and $20,000, construction to begin immediately.

One thousand uniformed Boy Scouts of Cleveland saw the film, "The Making of a Boy Scout" at Gray's Armory the first night of its run here.

The old Temple Building, Scovil avenue and East 25th street, Cleveland, and the property on each side adjoining has been sold to J. Makoff, who plans the erection of a theater to cost $20,000.

The new Miles Theater, Cleveland, has contracted for all first runs from Warner's Features, Inc. The house will be open every Sunday afternoon and evening.

Theodore C. Lindsey will erect a new theater at Dayton, estimated to cost $100,000 and will contract for first run films.

The Market Square Theater, Cleveland, has been sold by the Atlas Amusement Company to F. C. Klegin, of Fremont, in consideration of $34,000. The Market Square was built about three years ago and is a modern playhouse with about 600 seats. It has been operated by the Atlas Amusement Company, with Arthur Himmelein as manager The new owner has taken possession.

Moving picture theaters will be established in several saloon properties vacated through the effect of the new State liquor license law at Sandusky.

The Star at Upper Sandusky catered to an unusually heavy business during the run of the three-reel film depicting the latest styles in women's garments. Manager Cuneo was enthusiastic at the success of the pictures.

Wooster merchants are giving coupons good for a ticket to the Alhambra with every twenty-five cent purchase.

J. L. Evans, of the Athenian Amusement Company, of Wheeling, W. Va., has purchased the holdings of O. G. Murray, lessee of the Orpheum Theater at Newark, through a deal conducted by W. R. Davidson, of Richmond, Ind. The new owner assumed charge November 1.

The Cleveland Press took a straw vote on the prospects in the mayorality election in twenty-six moving picture theaters.

J. Grossman has sold the Delmar, on Central avenue, Cleveland, to Sam Shagru.

Moving picture men have been assured there would be no arrests and no interference with their business until after December 4. Attorney-General Hogan and his special representative, R. M. Morgan, appeared in Federal Court and agreed with attorneys for the picture men that they would not attempt to enforce the new film censorship law until after that time. The step was taken after a phone conference with Governor Cox as an aftermath of the suit brought by the Mutual Film Company, of Cleveland, and the Mutual Film Company, of West Virginia, for an injunction.

BUCKEYE.

PITTSBURG.

THE World Special Corporation has opened an office and sales room at 210 Fourth avenue. Mr. Philip Adler is the manager.

Pittsburgh Local No. 1, Motion Piceure Exhibitors' Association of Pennsylvania, have removed to 210 Fourth avenue, in the same building with the World Special Film Corporation. The new quarters are much more convenient and comfortable.

Permits have been granted for the erection of two new motion picture theaters on the North Side. One will cost $50 000 and will be built at Federal and Reliance streets, and the other will cost $30,000 and will be located on Beaver avenue. C. E. Glenn will own and operate the latter house.

State charters have been issued to the following companies: [illegible] Amusement Company, incorporated by C. S. Goldstein, Harry Myers and C. Goldstein, with a capital stock of $10,000, and the Universal Amusement Company with a capital of $10,000, with the following incorporators: Matthew A Rapp, Stanley Lyon and Herbert R. Hahn.

The Continental Feature Film Company has leased the storeroom and basement at 420 Penn avenue, for a term of years

A building permit has been issued to Joseph Simolevitz for a motion picture theater in Centre avenue, Third ward, to cost $12,000.

James Demas has leased the property at Wylie avenue and Sixth street, for ten years, at an annual rental of $5,400. Mr. Demas will erect a motion picture theater on the plot, to cost about $10,000.

Now that election is over, it is very probable that some decision will be made on the protest of the moving picture theater owners objecting to the new ordinance limiting the standing capacity of a motion picture house to 10 per cent of its seating capacity. In Reply to the protest the Public Safety Committee ordered the motion picture men to appoint a committee of five who are to meet with the city solicitor and superintendents of the Bureaus of Building Inspection and Electricity and try to agree on an ordinance.

A 12,000 motion picture theater will be built on East Ohio street, North Side, for D. L. Clark.

Application for a state charter will be made by S. Leo Ruslander, Neil W. McGill and Malcom Goldsmith for the incorporation of a company to be called the Chatham Amusement Company, which will own and operate motion picture houses throughout the city.

D. L. MANLEY.

LOUISVILLE.

FROM the beginning which has already been made this season, it would seem that Louisville is to have some exceptional attractions in moving pictures going on all the time. Following the several big features which have been exhibited in the city within the past month or so, the great French production of Hugo's "Les Miserables" is now being presented at the Shubert Masonic. Patrons of the Photoplay are looking forward with considerable curiosity to this production, inasmuch as several short summaries of the Hugo novel have been presented in pictures, and the more detailed treatment possible in the multi-reel production promises much.

The Palace and Clifton Theaters, both located in the eastern part of Louisville, have in common a unique feature, at least as far as Louisville, is concerned. Both are operated in connection with dance halls, a 25-cent ticket entitling the holder to admission to both the picture show and the dance. The plan is a great success, according to Manager Johnson Musselman, of the Clifton, and is a revenue producer both ways. Mr. Musselman has also inaugurated another plan which is somewhat out of the ordinary, selling no tickets to his house unless there are seats available, unless, of course, standing room is satisfactory to the patron. This avoids the ill-feeling and the complaints which frequently result where the house is crowded to capacity regardless of the seating provisions, and has undoubtedly raised the Clifton considerably in the estimation of its patrons.

The Hopkins Theater, of Louisville, recently opened up for the season with a straight motion picture program. Last season's attempt with low-priced vaudeville was not especially successful, and with a competitor in this line in the National Theater, which will open shortly, the Hopkins management decided that pictures would give something more like a guaranty of a profitable season's business. Features will predominate, and Manager Bilger believes he will be able to draw crowds to his house by this plan.

The Orpheum management recently added much to the attractiveness of that popular Louisville house by installing a symphony orchestrion, which is one of the finest in the city.

Fred Sheldon, formerly with the O. T. Crawford Film Company, recently became connected with the Louisville branch of the Kinemacolor Company, and is working Kentucky and the South in the interest of the naturally colored films.

J. H. Brooks recently opened a new house in New Albany, known as the New Lyric. The house is using the Universal program, and its seating capacity of 350 is being taxed regularly.

E. H. Bingham, president of the Empress Feature Film Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., was a recent visitor to Louisville in the interest of his company. Another feature man who was in Louisville recently was Leon Bamberger, manager of the Peerless Feature Film Company, also of Indianapolis.

The new vaudeville playhouse, which has just been completed in Lexington on the site of the old Hippodrome Theater, has been named the Ada Meade, in honor of Miss Ada Meade, a well known young actress, who is a native of the Blue Grass city. Bishop Clay, president of the company which owns the theater, telegraphed Miss Meade for permission to name the playhouse in her honor, and she promptly wired an affirmative response. The house will be opened shortly, with a combined vaudeville and motion-picture program.

Sphar Swift and others are interested in the establishment of another moving picture show in Winchester, Ky., and have several new buildings in mind for that purpose. Plans will be perfected shortly, and definite announcement made as to the name, location and equipment of the proposed house.

Two buildings in Hazard, Ky., which are intended for use in part as motion picture houses, are well under way, and work is being pushed rapidly in order to complete them before cold weather sets in. The two structures belong to Kinner & Johnson and Antoine Zellers, respectively.

J. D. Thomas, of Marion, Ky., will remodel a building in that city, of brick, in order to fit it for theatrical purposes, at a cost of $5,000. Various improvements will be made to render the building perfectly comfortable, including a hot-water heating system, and it will be opened for business as soon as possible.

Work is progressing satisfactorily on the new building, which will house the picture show of E L. Rakes, at Sturgis, Ky. Mr Rakes' house was destroyed, with a number of other buildings, in a disastrous fire which swept the town several months ago, and he, like the other business men affected, promptly made arrangements to replace the structure destroyed with one which will be better in every way.

The management of the Star Amusement Company, which was recently incorporated at Nashville, Tenn., has announced that the Majestic Theater in Cedar Street, which the company will operate, will be for colored patrons only. Motion pictures and high-class vaudeville and dramatic performances, with colored performers, will be given. The company has for some time successfully conducted a picture show at 412 Cedar Street, known as the Star, and this will be continued after the Majestic is opened, which will be very soon.

The Southern States Theater Company, of Wheeling, W. Va., is planning to erect a theater at 3607 Jacob Street, in that city, with a seating capacity of 1,000, at a cost of $30,000. The building will be of brick and stucco.

Some of the advertisers in moving picture theaters are using slides which are provided with clock dials with movable hands. This gives the operator a chance to inform the audience of the correct time. However, most of the Louisville houses have their own clocks, which are properly illuminated, so that there is no real need of the advertising stunt in most cases. Providing a clock has become a matter of course with the average owner hereabouts.

The newspapers have discovered the moving picture theaters as accurate barometers of public opinion, the results in the way of applause, hisses, etc., accorded the presentation of the pictures of candidates for city offices in the moving picture shows have been regarded as peculiarly significant. The fact that a demonstration of this kind can be made without danger of revealing one's identity is said to be one of the reasons why political outbursts are regarded as having exceptional value in showing which way the wind is blowing.

The Majestic Theater, Louisville, has found the Kinemacolor reproductions of the "Promenade des Toilettes" at Gimbel Bros., New York, unusually popular, especially with its feminine patrons. The showing of the latest in handsome costumes and evening gowns has stirred the local audiences mightily, judging by the crowds which throng to the theater when a fashion show of this kind is billed.

The Mergenthaler Linotype Company illustrated a lecture on that subject, which was given in Louisville November 11, under the auspices of the Louisville Ben Franklin Club, with moving pictures. One of its New York representatives delivered the lecture.

In order to prove to the people of Louisville that it will soon supply natural gas to this city, and that work on its new pipe line from West Virginia fields is progressing as rapidly as possible, the Louisville Gas & Electric Company, a Byllesby corporation, recently had a film made showing construction operations along the line. The film was shown at Keith's Theater in Louisville.

Switow's New Grand Theater, New Albany, Ind., which was opened October 25, with fitting ceremony, was given a great send-off by an enthusiastic crowd. The theater, which is absolutely fireproof, has a seating capacity of 1,000, and is showing vaudeville and motion pictures. Ten cents admission is charged.

The National Theater, Louisville, which will show vaudeville and moving pictures, will open November 27, the exact date having finally been announced. The work of completing the theater has proceeded slowly, as it was due to be opened September 15.

The Novelty Theater, Louisville, believes that its policy of running a new feature daily, with a complete change of program, is a winner, as it has developed a big following of regular patrons who visit the theater every day.

The Walnut Theater, Louisville, which is showing vaudeville and pictures, putting on two features and two vaudeville acts, is doing a good business. It is using girl ushers and by careful attention to details, is rapidly building up a following.

Warren Kerrigan, who recently joined the Universal, has been honored by having a theater in his home town, New Albany, Ind., named after him.

W. Drollinger, who is booking the five-reel Ambrosio feature, "Satan," in Louisville, reports that practically all of the local houses have been signed up. The Hopkins will put it on for a two-day run.

Hooker & Wells, Scottsburg, Ind., have put in new opera chairs and a motor generator set in their theater in that city, the Scenic. They are playing to big business.

The Henryville, Ind., Amusement Company has added to its equipment through the purchase of a Baldwin piano from the Louisville store of the Baldwin Piano Company.

J. Ward, Campbellsville, Ky., has been in Louisville purchasing second-hand chairs and other equipment for a new moving picture theater he is opening there.

A. W. Walker, Bardstown, Ky., is planning opening a new showhouse at Bardstown Junction, Ky. Detailed plans will be ready in a few weeks.

H. O. Hammond, New Albany, Ind., has purchased control of the Majestic Theater, Jeffersonville, Ind. Both towns are suburbs of Louisville.

Herbert Kettrie is the proprietor of a new moving picture theater which has opened at New Philadelphia, Ind.

Jordan & Hammond, Campbellsburg, Ky., have decided to establish three moving picture theaters in that part of Kentucky. The exact location of the houses has not yet been decided on.

C. A. Wheeldon, Brodhead, Ky., has opened a moving picture theater at Twin Branch, W. Va. This is in the mountain district, which is being rapidly developed by coal and timber operators, and offers ample opportunity for moving picture enterprises.

Plans are being made by outside capitalists to establish a vaudeville and moving picture theater at Mt. Sterling, Ky. The identity of those interested has not been announced.

The Pastime Theater, Winchester, Ky., is to be enlarged. The building will be extended back 100 feet, and will have a seating capacity of 750 when the alterations are completed. The stage will also be enlarged so as to enable pretentious vaudeville acts to be staged. The Pastime is planning to use Kinemacolor service in the near future.

Hayden Freeman, H. B. Davis and Dunlap Murphy, Fulton, Ky., have purchased the Rex Theater in that city. They have publicly advertised for reports from their patrons as to their favorite films and players, and will endeavor to confine their attention to that line of pictures.

Spahr Swift, Winchester, Ky., has leased the first floor of the new George Building, and will equip it as a moving picture theater. He will expend $2500 in the equipment of the house. He plans to open December 15.

The several Louisville men who are prominent in the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Kentucky, are interested in the coming semi-annual meeting of the organization, which is to be held some time during November, probably in Louisville. The date has not been fixed as yet. L. J. Dittmar, Fred Dolle, Max Simons, H. B. Strube and Joseph Steurle, are among those who will attend.

Colored films are taking remarkably well through the South, according to L. J. Dittmar, manager of the Louisville branch of the Kinemacolor Company. Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Savannah, New Orleans and Mobile, are among the larger towns which have recently taken on this service, besides a number of smaller places.

The Majestic is one of the few places of amusement in Louisville which makes it easy for its patrons to get a drink of water. The Kentucky statute prohibiting the use of public drinking cups, resulted in the removal of the supply of drinking water in most theaters, as it was considered too expensive to furnish water and individual cups, as well, but the Majestic, and possibly two or three of the leading theaters, are now doing this.

Carpenter & Johnson, the Louisville firm which has been taking moving pictures of local events for reproduction in B. F. Keith's theater and elsewhere, have taken a number of unusually interesting pictures recently, including views of actual work on the pipe line which is being built to bring natural gas to Louisville from the West Virginia fields. A ditch-digger in action and a team of twenty horses dragging a load of iron pipe over the mountains near Middlesboro, Ky., are among the features which excited most interest. Not long ago Carpenter & Johnson were able to illustrate the possibilities of moving pictures for commercial purposes, being employed by the National Power Corporation, of Birmingham, Ala., to photograph an experiment made to test machinery on the Ohio Falls, designed to turn the water-power into electric current. These pictures will be used as an aid in the sale of the company's stock.

H. D. Ticknor, manager of the Standard Film Exchange, of Louisville, said recently that business is excellent with his company, the demand through Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama being especially good. Western dramas and comedies are best with him, the smaller exhibitors being especially eager to get films of this sort. The recent severe weather hurt business considerably with this class of exhibitors, according to Mr. Ticknor, but they have recovered, and are again going forward in nice shape.

The M. & C. Film Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., recently purchased the property of the Straws Mill Rod and Gun Club, which is located in the Silver Hills section, immediately across the Ohio river from Louisville, and will use the property in the production of Indian and other Western subjects. The site is an ideal one for the production of the kind of pictures handled by the company, and it is understood that operations will begin at once.

The Switow Amusement Company continues to build and acquire houses in this part of the country, and expects to add fifteen more to its string of a dozen within the next few months. "Switow's Dream," at Martinsville, Ind., will be completed by December 15, it is expected, and a site was purchased by the company not long ago at North Vernon, Ind., on which a house of the same name will be built. The Rex, the second house in the chain, at Bloomington, Ind., has been remodeled, and is practically a new house in appearance.

The makers of Callahan's White Plume Flour, a Louisville product, are out with a strong bid for popular favor in the shape of an offer of tickets to motion picture theaters in exchange for the tickets given with the flour.

Charles Gates, of Louisville, is looking over several sites in Bowling Green with a view to erecting and operating a motion picture theater in that city. He has taken an option on one of the most desirable, and will probably close the deal and start work on the building shortly.

Henry Guthrie, of Louisville, who is understood to represent a number of business men, is said to be negotiating for a lease on the new Ben Ali Theater, in Lexington, Ky., for a long term of years. The lease is held at a figure in the neighborhood of $15,000 a year. Mr. Guthrie has not stated to what purpose the theater will be turned if he and his associates acquire the lease.

The Lyric Theater, at Pineville, Ky., was thrown open to the public on the evening of November 1, in connection with addresses given during intermissions in the program by various well-known citizens regarding the issues raised in the local campaign. All of these talks were limited to five minutes, and with this assurance, good crowds jammed the theater all evening. Motion pictures of Pineville scenes were shown, besides the regular program, and added much to the interest of the audiences.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

GAUMONT'S

FALL OF CONSTANTINOPLE

A. D. 1453

IN THREE REELS

PHOTOS
HERALDS
Four Colored, Handsomely Designed 1 - 3 - 6 and 12 Sheet Posters

STATE RIGHTS MEN

EXHIBITORS

Do You Want To Make Money Quickly?
Then Book This Great Feature

IT IS ONE OF THE BEST HAND COLORED FILMS EVER STAGED BEFORE THE CAMERA

DO IT NOW

WIRE ORDERS FOR FILM AND PAPER TO

GAUMONT CO.

110 West 40th Street, New York City

FALL OF FILMS
Gaumont
CINEMA

CONSTANTINOPLE
FILMS
Gaumont
CINEMA

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| BIOGRAPH—A Cure for Suffragettes (Comedy) | |
| BIOGRAPH—He's a Lawyer (Comedy) | |
| EDISON—Nora's Boarders (Comedy) | 1000 |
| KALEM—The Stolen Tapestries (Drama) | 1000 |
| LUBIN—The Two Fathers (Comedy) | 1000 |
| PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 68 (News) | |
| SELIG—The Escape of Jim Dolan (Special—2 parts—Drama) | 2000 |
| VITAGRAPH—Tangled Threads (Drama) | 1000 |

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| CINES—For the Love of a Toreador (Special—2 parts—Drama) | |
| EDISON—A Cause for Thankfulness (Drama) | 1000 |
| ESSANAY—The Lost Chord (Drama) | 1000 |
| LUBIN—Shadows (Drama) | 1000 |
| PATHEPLAY—Mr. Gaston from Paris (Comedy) | |
| PATHEPLAY—Flowers of Japan (Horticulture) | |
| SELIG—The Port of Missing Women (Drama) | 1000 |
| VITAGRAPH—His Last Fight (Drama) | 1000 |

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| EDISON—The Girl in the Houseboat (Comedy) | 1000 |
| ESSANAY—The Usual Way (Comedy) | 1000 |
| KALEM—The Express Car Mystery (Special—2 parts—Drama) | 2000 |
| PATHEPLAY—By Impulse (Comedy-Drama) | |
| SELIG—The Touch of a Child (Drama) | 1000 |
| VITAGRAPH—Why I Am Here (Comedy) | |
| VITAGRAPH—Farming in Ancient Thebes (Agriculture) | |

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| BIOGRAPH—The Detective's Stratagem (Drama) | |
| ESSANAY—The Cowboy Samaritan (Drama) | 1000 |
| LUBIN—Partners in Crime (Special—3 parts—Drama) | 3000 |
| MELIES—Shooting the Famous Hozu Rapids of Japan (Sports) | |
| MELIES—A Lemon Plantation (Ind.) | |
| PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 69 (News) | |
| PATHEPLAY—The Green-eyed Monster of Jealousy (Special—2 parts—Drama) | |
| SELIG—An Actor's Romance (Drama) | 1000 |
| VITAGRAPH—The Sale of a Heart (Drama) | 1000 |

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21st, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| EDISON—A Good Sport (Special—2 parts—Comedy) | 2000 |
| ESSANAY—The End of the Circle (Spec.—2 parts—Dr.) | 2000 |
| KALEM—The Laundress and the Lady (Comedy) | |
| KALEM—The Dublin Horse Show (Topical) | |
| LUBIN—His Chorus Girl Wife (Drama) | 1000 |
| PATHEPLAY—Natives of Australia (Manners and Customs) | |
| PATHEPLAY—The Pond Snail (Zoology) | |
| PATHEPLAY—In the Spanish Pyrenees (Travel) | |
| SELIG—Outwitted by Billy (Drama) | 1000 |
| VITAGRAPH—The Schemers (Comedy) | 1000 |

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22nd, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| BIOGRAPH—By Man's Law (2 parts—Drama) | |
| EDISON—A Proposal Deferred—"Who Will Marry Mary" (No. 5—Drama) | |
| ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's First Arrest (Drama) | 1000 |
| KALEM—Primitive Man (Drama) | 1000 |
| LUBIN—The Harmless One (Drama) | 1000 |
| PATHEPLAY—Kenton's Heir (Drama) | |
| VITAGRAPH—The Whimsical Threads of Destiny (Special—2 parts—Drama) | 2000 |

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| BIOGRAPH—All for Science (Drama) | |
| EDISON—From Durban to Zululand (Scenic) | 500 |
| EDISON—Enoch and Ezra's First Smoke (Comedy) | 500 |
| KALEM—An Indian Maid's Strategy (Drama) | 1000 |
| LUBIN—Just Cissy's Little Way (Comedy) | 1000 |
| PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 70 (News) | |
| SELIG—The Quality of Mercy (Special—2 parts—Dr.) | 2000 |
| VITAGRAPH—The Leading Lady (Drama) | 1000 |

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| ECLIPSE—The Subterranean City; or Trailing the Jewel Thieves (Special—2 parts—Drama) | |
| EDISON—The Vanishing Cracksman (Drama) | 1000 |
| ESSANAY—The Little Substitute (Drama) | 1000 |
| LUBIN—Her Sick Father (Comedy) | 400 |
| LUBIN—The Lost Switch (Comedy) | 600 |
| PATHEPLAY—The Shadow of Shame (Drama) | |
| SELIG—Mounted Officer Flynn (Comedy) | 1000 |
| VITAGRAPH—Little Kaintuck (Drama) | 1000 |

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| EDISON—A Sense of Humor (Comedy) | 1000 |
| ESSANAY—Dollars-Pounds-Sense (Comedy) | 1000 |
| KALEM—The Plot of India's Hillmen (Special—2 parts—Drama) | 2000 |
| PATHEPLAY—The Elusive Turkey (Comedy) | |
| SELIG—Cupid in the Cow Camp (Comedy-Drama) | 1000 |
| VITAGRAPH—Fellow Voyagers (Comedy) | |
| VITAGRAPH—Temples and Statues of Rome (Architecture) | |

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| BIOGRAPH—A Circumstantial Hero (Comedy) | |
| BIOGRAPH—The Somnambulists (Comedy) | |
| ESSANAY—The Naming of the Rawhide Queen (Dr.) | 1000 |
| LUBIN—A Waif of the Desert (Special—2 parts Dr.) | 2000 |
| MELIES—The Japanese Judo | |
| PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 71 (News) | |
| PATHEPLAY—Old Nuremburg (Scenic) | |
| PATHEPLAY—The Faithless Friend (Special—2 parts—Drama) | |
| SELIG—A Message from Home (Drama) | 1000 |
| VITAGRAPH—The Cure (Drama) | 1000 |

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| EDISON—The Gunmaker of Moscow (Special—2 parts—Drama) | 2000 |
| ESSANAY—The Brand of Evil (Special—2 parts—Dr.) | 2000 |
| KALEM—The Good Old Summer Time (Comedy) | |
| KALEM—England's King at Liverpool (Topical) | |
| LUBIN—The Scapegrace (Drama) | 1000 |
| PATHEPLAY—Making Eight Ton Ropes (Industrial) | |
| PATHEPLAY—The Capital of Malay States (Scenic) | |
| PATHEPLAY—Fashions Law in the Swiss Cantons (Sociological) | |
| SELIG—The Supreme Moment (Drama) | 1000 |
| VITAGRAPH—Betty in the Lion's Den (Comedy) | 1000 |

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1913.

| | |
|---|---|
| BIOGRAPH—The Blue or the Gray (Drama) | |
| EDISON—A Royal Romance (Drama) | 1000 |
| ESSANAY—Sophie's Hero (Comedy) | 1000 |
| KALEM—In Peril of His Life (Drama) | 1000 |
| LUBIN—Turning the Table (Drama) | 1000 |
| PATHEPLAY—The Blight (Drama) | |
| VITAGRAPH—The Golden Pathway (Special—2 parts—Drama) | 2000 |

WE ARE CERTAINLY GLAD THAT SONG SLIDES HAVE COME BACK

because we have the best song slide service in America. One week's supply in one shipment in advance. Write for particulars.

AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. First National Bank Bldg. CHICAGO, ILL.

LOOK WHO'S HERE!

The Greatest Stars in the Film Firmament

Beautiful Photographs of the Leading Actors and Actresses Playing in Licensed Films

FINISHED IN SOFT GRAY Size 22" x 28"

Price 40 cents each, postage prepaid

Crane Wilbur, Maurice Costello, Francis X. Bushman, Gilbert M. Anderson, Marc MacDermott, Arthur Johnson, Mary Fuller, Ormi Hawley, Kathlyn Williams, Gwendoline Pates, Octavia Handworth, Lillian Walker, Lottie Briscoe, Alice Joyce, Carlyle Blackwell.

ALL MASTERPIECES OF PHOTOGRAPHY

A smaller size, 11" x 14", in same style and finish as above of Harry Myers, John Bunny, Guy Coombs, Ruth Roland, Beverly Bayne, Edith Storey, Earle Williams Lillian Wiggins, Helen Costello, Dolores Costello, Charles Arling. Alice Joyce, Mary Fuller, Kathlyn Williams, Mary Charleson.

Price 20 cents each
Postage prepaid

---

OAK FRAMES

For the 11"x14" size photographs, silver gray, mission finish. Boxed ready for shipment, $8.50 each

GENERAL FILM COMPANY, Poster Department

(Formerly Photoplay Advertising & Specialty Co.)

71 W. 23rd Street and 440 Fourth Avenue, New York; 121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 1022 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; 7th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio; Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.; 218 Commercial Street, Boston, Mass.; 122 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; 737 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co. Current Releases

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 16th, 1913.

REX—The Blood Brotherhood (Drama)
CRYSTAL—Out of the Grave (Drama)
ECLAIR—Unseen Metamorphoses (Scientific)
ECLAIR—Does Max Snore? (Comedy)

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17th, 1913.

VICTOR—Forgotten Women (Drama)
IMP—Who Killed Olga Carew? (2 parts—Drama)
POWERS—The Doctor's Orders (Drama)
POWERS—Cotton Time in Arkansas (Industrial)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, 1913.

101 BISON—The Raid of the Human Tigers (2 parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—Her Secretaries (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—Percy's New Mamma (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19th, 1913.

NESTOR—The Golden Princess Mine (Drama)
JOKER—Mike and Jake at the Beach (Comedy)
ECLAIR—Partners (2 parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 89 (News)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, 1913.

IMP—The Child Stealers of Paris (Drama)
REX—Fires of Fate (2 parts—Drama)
FRONTIER—Slim Becomes a Detective (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21st, 1913.

NESTOR—An Elephant on his Hands (Comedy)
POWERS—A Stolen Identity (2 parts—Drama)
VICTOR—Where the Hop Vine Twines (Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22nd, 1913.

JOKER—The Stinger Stung (Comedy)
FRONTIER—The Double Cross (Drama)
101 BISON—Wynona's Vengeance (2 parts—Drama)

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 23rd, 1913.

REX—His Old Fashioned (Comedy-Drama)
CRYSTAL—The Cabaret Singer (Drama)
ECLAIR—Oh! You Rubber (Comedy)
ECLAIR—Soldiers Drilling in Turkestan (Military)

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24th, 1913.

VICTOR—Back to Life (2 parts—Drama)
IMP—Jane's Brother the Paranoiac (Drama)
POWERS—Jimmy's Deception (Comedy)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25th, 1913.

101 BISON—The White Vacquere (2 parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—Hubby's New Coat (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—Baldy Belmont Lands a Society Job (Com.)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, 1913.

NESTOR—Hilda of the Mountains (Drama)
JOKER—Mike and Jake Go Fishing (Comedy)
JOKER—Bally Bunion Railway in Ireland (Travel)
ECLAIR—A Son's Devotion (2 part—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly No. 90 (News)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27th, 1913.

IMP—Night Shadows of New York (3 parts—Drama)
REX—The Tale of a Lonely Coast (Drama)
FRONTIER—Slim Proposes—But (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th, 1913.

NESTOR—When He Lost To Win (Comedy)
POWERS—A Seaside Samaritan (Drama)
VICTOR—Unto the Third Generation (2 parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1913.

JOKER—Lazy Louis (Comedy)
FRONTIER—The Secret of Balanced Rock (Drama)
101 BISON—The War of the Cattle Range (2 parts—Dr.)

Mutual Film Corporation Current Releases

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 16th, 1913.

APOLLO—Fred's Waterloo (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Tomboy's Race (Drama)
THANHOUSER—He Couldn't Lose (Comedy)

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17th, 1913.

AMERICAN—The Trail of the Lost Chord (2 parts—Drama) .......... 2000
KEYSTONE—Our Children (Comedy)
RELIANCE—Two Men and a Mule—Series No. 4 (Comedy)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, 1913.

THANHOUSER—Baby's Joy Ride (Com.-Dr.)
MAJESTIC—L'Article 47 (2 parts Drama)
KAY-BEE—The Claim Jumper (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19th, 1913.

BRONCHO—The War Correspondent (2 parts—Drama)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 47 (News)
RELIANCE—A Man and a Woman (Drama)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, 1913.

AMERICAN—A Modern Steel Plant (Topical)
AMERICAN—The Tale of the Ticker (Drama) .......... 1000
DOMINO—The Witch of Salem (2 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—A Muddy Romance (Comedy)
KOMIC—Making Himself a Hero (Comedy)
KOMIC—Murphy's New High Hat (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21st, 1913.

KAY-BEE—Days of '49 (News)
PRINCESS—A Shot Gun Cupid (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—The Clothes Line Quarrel (Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22nd. 1913.

AMERICAN—Calamity Anne's Dream (Drama) .......... 1000
MAJESTIC—(No release this date.)
RELIANCE—Her Father's Daughter (Drama)

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 23rd, 1913.

APOLLO—The Mexican Fleet Producer
MAJESTIC—The House on the Tree (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Their Great Big Beautiful Doll (Dr.)

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24th, 1913.

AMERICAN—The Occult (Drama)
KEYSTONE—Fatty Joins the Force (Comedy)
RELIANCE—The Other Woman (Drama)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25th, 1913.

MAJESTIC—(Title not reported)
THANHOUSER—(Title not reported)
KAY-BEE—The Maelstrom (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, 1913.

BRONCHO—The Reformation (Drama)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 48 (News)
RELIANCE—A Rough Diamond (Drama)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27th, 1913.

AMERICAN—A Spartan Girl of the West (Drama)
DOMINO—Belle of Yorktown (3 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—Cohen Saves the Flag (Comedy)
KOMIC—A Method In His Illness (Comedy)
KOMIC—The Man with a Razor (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th, 1913.

KAY-BEE—The Sign of the Snake (Drama)
PRINCESS—(Title not reported)
THANHOUSER—(Title not reported)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1913.

AMERICAN—A Midnight (Drama)
MAJESTIC—(Title not reported)
THANHOUSER—(Title not reported)

Exclusive Supply Corporation Current Releases

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17th, 1913.

BLACHE-AMERICAN—The Star of India (Feature—4 parts—Drama)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, 1913.

GAUMONT—Leonance and the Milkmaid (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19th, 1913.

GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 89 (News)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, 1913.

GAUMONT—Oscar Finances a Theater (Comedy)
LEWIS PENNANT—Decreed to Die (Feature—3 parts—Drama)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 21st, 1913.

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL—Baptism of Fire (Feature—3 parts—Drama)
F. R. A.—Outlawed (Feature—3 parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22nd, 1913.

GREAT NORTHERN—Hard Luck (Comedy)
GAUMONT—Chained to the Past (Feature—2 parts—Drama)
SOLAX—Ben Bolt (Feature—4 parts—Drama)

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24th, 1913.

AMMEX—The Fatal Reckoning (Feature—2 parts—Dr.)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25th, 1913.

GAUMONT—Mary Saves the Sculptor (Drama)
LACLEDE—The Pale Faced Squaw (Feature—3 parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, 1913.

GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 90 (News)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27th, 1913.

ITALA—The Leap of Despair (Feature—3 parts—Dr.)
GAUMONT—Gymnastics

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th, 1913.

F. R. A.—The Secret of Adrianople (Feature—4 parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1913.

GAUMONT—The Silence of the Dead (Feature—4 parts—Drama)

IS A ROCK STEADY PICTURE WORTH ANYTHING TO YOU?

Has your picture a little quiver, slight up and down or side movement which you have been unable to eliminate?

Users of the Simplex do not have this trouble. Its wonderfully accurate, perfectly balanced and durable intermittent movement prevents such complaints.

This is only one point of superiority in the Simplex The Peerless Projector

Huntsville, Ala., Nov. 3, 1913.

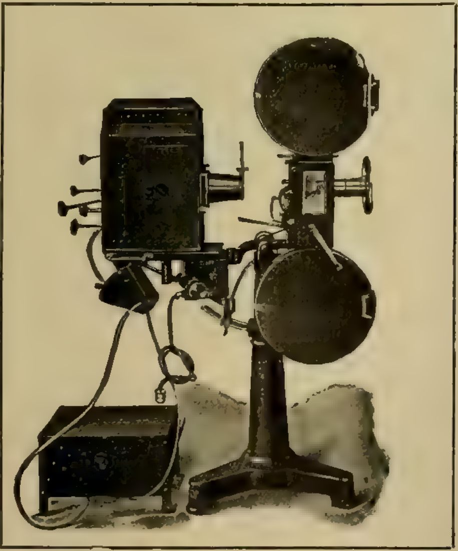
Gentlemen—We recently purchased two new Simplex machines through W. H. Peck of Atlanta, Ga.

These machines were shipped to us from the New York factory. They are all you claim for them and more. We are more than pleased with our purchase, and are only sorry that we did not take the advice of the best show people in the country and install the "SIMPLEX" some time ago. We have nothing but praise for the Simplex.

Yours very truly,

LYRIC AMUSEMENT CO.

(Per) C. A. Crute.



Don't be sorry, be WISE and install your Simplex machines right away

CATALOGUE A TELLS MUCH ABOUT IT

Made and Guaranteed by

PRECISION MACHINE CO.

317 East 34th Street, New York

LICENSED FILM STORIES

ESSANAY.

THE LITTLE SUBSTITUTE (Nov. 25).—Robert Graham's wife dies, leaving him to take care of their three-weeks old son. Graham is called abroad on business and turns the child over to his elderly aunt. During Graham's absence, the child dies, but a woman who is poverty stricken, leaves her son on the doorstep of Aunt Libby, who takes the infant in and gives it a home. Graham returns and uninformed by his aunt, continues to love the child as his own. Three years later the child is taken sick and a nurse is sent for, who happens to be the real mother. Aunt Libby's conscience makes her confess that the boy is not Graham's son, but the son of the nurse in attendance. Graham cannot give up the child—the mother cannot give up her son—so Graham decides to marry the mother to keep the son.

DOLLARS — POUNDS — SENSE (Nov. 26). —"You're worth your weight in gold!" This is what Charles Watson, a young spendthrift, told every girl he met. His father threatened to disown him unless he would marry a girl and settle down, and if he married inside of thirty days, Colonel Watson was to give his son a hundred dollars in gold for every pound the girl weighed. Tall ones, slim ones, fat ones and small ones were proposed to without success, and when Watson called a widow on the telephone who weighed 288 pounds and proposed, he was mighty disappointed when he arrived at the house and discovered that he had proposed to the daughter, who weighed only 86 pounds. Watson makes good and marries the girl and his father gives him a large check, regardless of the girl's weight.

THE NAMING OF THE RAWHIDE QUEEN (Nov. 27).—Prospectors discover gold on the outskirts of Rawhide, a small town in the far West. Reuben Glen, a prospector, living in the next county, becomes discouraged and determines to try his luck elsewhere. When he arrives at Rawhide he is gently but firmly requested to remove himself immediately from the vicinity. He refuses emphatically, but is saved from the infuriated prospectors by his young daughter, whom the men later christen as "The Rawhide Queen." They heap laurels upon her head by naming the new mine after her and her father is made "one of them."

SOPHIE'S HERO (Nov. 29).—Sophie Clutts goes to town to do her shopping. Slippery Slim dolls himself up in an evening dress coat, a pink and white bosom shirt and a pair of plaid trousers, with a four-foot six-shooter hanging from his belt. Mustang Pete wears the best the country affords and Rawhide Bill, for the first time in his life, gives himself a shave. Some sports, these three sons of the "Alkali" dust, which reminds us that "Alkali" Ike digs up his old brown derby from the bottom of his trunk for the memorial occasion. All four men are courteous in the extreme, each trying to outdo their rivals. "Alkali" Ike is so small that he is abused and his feelings are hurt exceedingly. He gets even, though. A big bearskin helps considerably to carry out his plan, and donning same he puts the three men to fight, at the same time making poor little demure Sophie faint. But he wins her when he shows the fair beauty the skin of the bear he had killed? So "Alkali" Ike becomes her hero, and the three rivals sneak into the background to hide their shame. It's a bear—and so it was.

THE END OF THE CIRCLE (Special—2 parts—Nov. 21).—During the early days of the West, when those parts were poorly settled, Will Davis, a prospector, landed in a small town. A Mexican girl, Juanita by name, becomes much interested in Davis, and determines that he be hers and hers only. Dom Wilson, a ranchman, plays his cards two ways, first by making love to Juanita, and second by bestowing his attentions on a beautiful young Miss of the village, Eileen Sheridan. Davis meets Miss Sheridan and the two become infatuated with each other. The young prospector proposes to her and she accepts him. The news of the engagement spreads about the town and Will is congratulated heartily by all, but Wilson and Juanita, who swear revenge. Juanita's love turns to hate, which makes her as bitter towards Davis as Wilson, and when a woman hates, the flames of hell are as heaven in comparison. Wilson calls on Eileen and tells her that Davis is leading a double life, that he is not true to her. Eileen refuses to believe the ranchman, but when he promises that she can see for herself, she realizes that the terrible statement may be true. Juanita "accidentally" calls on Davis at his cabin, where she tries to embrace him. Making sure that Wilson has led the unsuspecting Eileen within sight of the cabin door, she continues to force her attentions on Davis. The climax comes when Eileen sees the Mexican girl leave the cabin of her sweetheart.

Disgusted with the one man she thought the world of, and not taking time to think of the future, Eileen, for spite, marries Don Wilson. Davis sees the two as they leave on a prairie schooner for other parts, and his heart throbs within his breast as though it would break. A few years elapse and we see Wilson, a drunkard of the lowest degree. He has forgotten that he ever loved Eileen and his only thought is of "more whiskey." Eileen's mental strain takes away her physical strength, and she becomes a victim of the white plague. A daughter is brought into the world to curse the unhappy marriage. The family pitch camp by the roadside and Dom becomes very abusive to his wife, when he discovers that they are almost out of provisions. He unhitches one of the horses and rides to the nearest town some miles away, there to sell his horse, the proceeds of which are spent for whiskey and to be gambled away. Eileen becomes worse, and fearing she will die, sends her young daughter in search of her father. Dom, in a drunken stupor, falls over a cliff, which brings about his untimely end. Davis, camping nearby, rushes to the scene to discover that it is his old rival. Davis climbs to the top of the cliff in time to save the life of Wilson's child from a bear. Will Davis carries the child to the prairie schooner, where he recognizes Eileen. Eileen clasps Davis and kisses him fondly, and passes off into another world, leaving the child to be taken care of by her former sweetheart, and he only too willingly promises to take care of her as he would his own.

THE BRAND OF EVIL (Special—2 parts—Nov. 28).—Morton, an adventurer, exploring in the wilds of India, steals from a sacred temple the "Eye" of the God which the natives worship. He makes good his escape and finally reaches America. The Indians, wild at the sacrilege which their God has been subjected to, swear vengeance. Twenty years pass; Morton, now a rather old man, lives alone with his daughter, Judith. The twenty years have made Morton practically a weakling, the fear of the Orient being always uppermost in his mind. At length the blow falls. One evening after having just looked at the wonderful stone, which he practically worships, he returns to his library to find his daughter wildly staring into space. Immediately he knows. They have come! Judith comes to herself and tells her father of the dark man she has seen and how under his powerful gaze, she seemed to float into oblivion. Morton, thinking always of the precious "Eye," hides it again. The final blow falls when his daughter, having just told Howard, her lover, goodnight, suddenly disappears. Morton realizes that after twenty years, vengeance has at last come.

Morton is completely broken under the strain and Howard, sticking to him after the servants all leave, at last convinces him that the only thing to do is to return the "Eye" to the natives. True to Howard's judgment, the natives secure the stone and return Judith to them, but under the influence of a hypnotic spell. She does not recognize them. Both Morton and Howard are frantic. Meanwhile, the leader of the Indians, having returned to the ones who are helping him, sends them back to India with the "Eye" to hastily appease the wrath of their God. He remains to further wreak vengeance on Morton. The penalty is death! The Indian returns just as Howard is told by Morton. They secrete themselves behind a movable painting Howard prepared for defense. The Indian suspicions their hiding-place when he hears the noise made by Howard dropping a sword, and thrusts his dagger into the painting. This narrowly misses Howard, and he in turn makes a thrust through the painting, the cut taking effect on the native's wrist. A terrific hand-to-hand struggle takes place, during which the Indian gets Howard under his spell. Morton, meanwhile, a little of his nerve returning, fires. The Indian falls. At the moment of the Indian's death, Judith's senses return to her. Later, the "Eye" is returned to the God, and the curse, Morton's deadened and blackened hand, is removed, the flesh once again regaining its natural color and life. The story ends with this last scene, Morton looking in awe at his restored hand, and Howard and Judith clasped in each other's arms.

KALEM.

THE LAUNDRESS AND THE LADY (Nov. 21).—Bridget, Mrs. Graves' cook, threatens to leave when ordered to do laundry work. Mrs. Graves calls on Bob, her son, at his office. She requests him to send a note to Mary Flannigan, a laundress, telling her to call at the house at once. Bob is writing a note to Mary Hall, his sweetheart. He incloses a theater ticket for the matinee with the explanation that a business engagement will prevent him from calling for her. The boy gets the notes mixed. He sends his sweetheart's note to the laundress, and the latter's note to his sweetheart. Mrs. Graves tells Bridget to put the laundress to work the moment the woman appears. The mistress then departs. Mary Hall, fearing something has happened, hastens to Bob's home. Bridget compels her to do the washing. The laundress gets the theater ticket and the ardent note. She hastens to the theater. Bob finds her there. The two get into an argument and are thrown out. Bob, the laundress and Mrs. Graves reach the house at the same time. They see Bob's sweetheart washing clothes, and cowering in fear because of the tyrannical Bridget.

Mary breaks her engagement, but the humorous side of the situation dawns upon her when the matter is explained, and all ends well.

THE DUBLIN HORSE SHOW (Nov. 21).—This interesting feature shows the opening of the famous event in the Royal Dublin Society's grounds at Balls Bridge, Ireland. The parade of the contestants shows some of the finest horses in the world..

Other scenes show sports in England and France. A unique picture is that of the water-cycling contest at Nogentsur-Marne, France. These craft somewhat resemble pontoons and are propelled by an arrangement similar to that of a bicycle.

PRIMITIVE MAN (Nov. 22).—Allan .loves Betty, a mountain girl. Not sure that she loves the boy, Betty declines to marry him. Dan, a rough mountaineer, lives a secluded life, with only his dog as companion. The man sees Betty bathing in a mountain stream. He falls madly in love with her. Later, Dan woos her in his rough way. Betty, who is something of a coquette, finds herself seized in his strong arms and pressed to his breast. Despite her struggles, Dan kisses her repeatedly and then rushes away. Betty tries hard to be angry, but the man has awakened the first fire of love in her heart. Shortly afterward, Dan overhears Allan making love to Betty. The mountaineer thrashes Allan, who flees like a whipped cur. Dan orders the girl to choose between Allan and herself. Betty marries Dan. Allan calls on Betty, ostensibly upon a friendly visit. Later he tries to make love to her. Dan sees this and beats the man soundly. Thinking his wife guilty of a love affair, Dan tells Betty that for the rest of her life she is to live in seclusion. The man lives in a shack near the house and keeps visitors away. Dan's dog carries a market basket to the village every day and secures the necessary food. One day, Betty places a note in the basket requesting that a doctor be sent immediately. Dan allows the physician to pass. Several hours later, the doctor emerges from the house, his face beaming. Betty has given birth to a son. Dan is petrified upon hearing the news. Remorse, because of the brutal treatment he has accorded Betty, sits heavily upon him. The man rushes into the house and falls on his knees by the bedside. Betty, with her infant cuddled to her breast, places her hand upon Dan's head and smiles her forgiveness.

AN INDIAN MAID'S STRATEGY (Nov. 24).—Wanda, the daughter of the Hopi chief, is forced to consent to be the wife of White Eagle, a Ute. The maid loves Koti, a Hopi brave. White Eagle orders her to return with him to the village of his people.

Koti follows the pair. He attacks the Ute and after a terrible knife duel seriously wounds White Eagle. Friends find the wounded man after the lovers escape. The affair is reported to the commandant of the army post. Lieut. Breen, in love with the commandant's daughter, is ordered to go in pursuit. The lieutenant bids his sweetheart good bye and goes after the lovers.

Discovering they are pursued, the lovers separate, Wanda is captured and taken back to the fort. Koti learns that his sweetheart has been captured and that effort is being made to have her tell of his whereabouts. The Indian disguises as an old squaw and gains admittance to the fort. He makes his identity known to Wanda. A few minutes later, an opportunity is offered for escape and both get away.

Lieutenant Breen and his sweetheart see the lovers' dash for freedom. The officer goes in pursuit. By a stratagem, Koti gains possession of Breen's pistol. The Indian is about to kill the lieutenant, but Wanda saves the officer's life. The girl bids her sweetheart escape. Koti dashes off.

Wanda turns to the lieutenant and tells him her story. She pleads with Breen to allow her to escape to a different part of the country with her lover. Thinking of his own sweetheart, the officer bows his head and slowly walks away.

On the hill's summit, Koti waits for his sweetheart. Wanda approaches with gladness in her heart. Together, the lovers ride down the hill towards happiness.

THE PLOT OF INDIA'S HILLMEN (Special—2 parts—Nov. 26).—Count Savanoff, a Russian spy, becomes the guest of the commandant of the British army post. The spy gains the friendship of the Indian hillmen. Count Savanoff learns that Lieutenant Maxam has invented a powerful explosive. He plans to steal the formula. Savanoff discovers that Messlah, the commandant's servant, is the hillmen's spy. He secures the man's aid in an effort to steal the secret. The first attempt fails. Zurah, Maxam's servant, accidentally spills coffee on the Russian's coat. Maxam saves his servant from a beating at the hands of Savanoff. Zurah is grateful. The Russian spy and Messlah are searching for the formula in Maxam's room, when the lieutenant discovers them. They overpower the officer. Savanoff succeeds in finding the paper. He and Messlah kidnap Maxam and take him to the retreat of the hillmen. Zurah, suspecting something wrong, follows the men and learns of his master's predicament. The servant hastens back to the post and gives word of the abduction. Savanoff and the chief of the tribesmen plot the death of the British soldiers. The Russian prepares a quantity of the explosive and places it near the path along which the troops are to be lured. The hillmen encounter the soldiers who have been sent to rescue the lieutenant. A terrible battle takes place. The natives are driven back at the point

THE GREAT ORIGINAL PASQUALI PRODUCTION

THE LAST DAYS OF POMPEII

NOW OPEN FOR BOOKINGS
RENT OR SHARE

A FIRST CLASS ATTRACTION FOR FIRST CLASS THEATERS. BULWER LYTTON'S MASTERPIECE IN EIGHT MASTERFUL REELS, DIVIDED INTO A PROLOGUE AND TWO PARTS. A FULL LINE OF ADVERTISING MATTER IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE GENERAL HIGH TONE OF THE PRODUCTION

FOR TERMS AND PARTICULARS ADDRESS BOOKING OFFICE
WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORP., 110 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK
FILM AND ALL PUBLICITY MATTER COPYRIGHTED BY PASQUALI AMERICAN CO.

of bayonet. In the rout that occurs, the hillmen forget the trap prepared for the English, and cross over the spot where the explosive is planted. A terrible upheaval wipes out the natives to the last man. A huge boulder strikes Savanoff, killing him instantly. Faithful Zurah leads the troops to Maxaim's prison and the young lieutenant is released.

THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME (Nov. 28).—Mason, his wife and his mother-in-law, are about to leave for the seashore, when the mother-in-law is taken ill. Mason is ordered to go alone. The others will join him at the beach later

The man is assigned to a room formerly occupied by an actress. The lady has forgotten her kimona, which hangs on the wall. Mason examines it and throws it across the foot of the bed. Later, he leaves the room and indulges in a flirtation with two pretty girls.

Mrs. Mason's mother recovers and the two leave for the beach. They go to Mason's room and discover the kimona. Suspecting something wrong, the ladies go after the husband's scalp.

The man is sitting with his arms about the girls, when he sees his wife and mother-in-law He makes a dash for his room. Mrs. Mason and her mother arrive immediately behind him. After showing him the kimona they make life miserable for the poor man. A knock is heard at the door. A maid enters with a telegram.

The message is from the former occupant of the room and contains a request that the kimono be forwarded. Stricken with remorse for their unjust suspicion, the ladies fall on Mason's neck and beg forgiveness.

ENGLAND'S KING AT LIVERPOOL (Nov. 28).—This feature contains a number of highly interesting scenes among which is the reception accorded to King George upon his arrival at Liverpool. Another picture shows President Poincare, of France, opening an Exhibition

The British army is shown at work and at play. Lord Roberts, popularly known as "Bobs," inspected the famous Gordon Highlanders, at Aberdeen, Scotland, recently and one of the scenes gives a splendid view of this ceremony.

IN PERIL OF HIS LIFE (Nov. 29).—Bud is in love with Mildred, daughter of Barr, his employer. The boy returns to the ranch intoxicated and is discharged. Realizing that drink is ruining his life, Bud vows never to touch liquoragain Sage, the ranch foreman, tries to make love to Mildred, but is repulsed. The foreman, knowing that Bud is the favored suitor, resolves to bring about the boy's downfall. Manuel, a Mexican, receives a note telling him his only child is desperately ill. Unable to borrow a horse, Manuel steals Mildred's animal. Bud sees him and goes in pursuit. Other cowboys learn of the theft and also go after the man. Bud catches the Mexican. He learns of his reason for taking the horse. The cowboys come up and Bud saves the Mexican from death. He gives the man his own horse. Mildred learns of Bud's noble act. It increases her love for him.

In an attempt to make the boy break the pledge, Sage sends a bottle of whiskey to Bud's room by a roustabout. The cowboy wrestles with a terrible temptation. In desperation, he hurls the bottle out of the window. It hits Sage, injuring him seriously. The man accuses Bud of attempting to murder him. The boy is arrested. Cowboys, believing the foreman's accusation, try to lynch Bud. The boy is placed in jail. Mildred and her father learn of the incident and arrive upon the scene The roustabout, frightened to learn the result of his errand, tells Mildred of how the bottle came into Bud's hands. The girl tells the story to the sheriff. The crowd learns of the true circumstances and Bud is released. Barr, realizing that the boy has overcome his desire for drink, makes him foreman of the ranch and consents to his marriage with Mildred.

VITAGRAPH.

THE LEADING LADY (Nov. 24).—Unfortunately, Mr. Marsden detects his wife, Helen, in the act of concealing a letter beneath her napkin at the breakfast table and his jealousy is aroused.. Helen, the leading lady, is stung by his injustice and refuses to show him the letter Marsden jumps up from the table, packs his suit case, and bids farewell to his wife. She is grief-stricken over his heartlessness

The crowds are pouring into the theater, the seats and boxes are filling up. In a prominent box there is a solitary occupant, a handsome, dark-haired young man He is "Jack," an ardent admirer of Helen's. After the curtain falls for the last time, the actress retires amid a rattling applause, and returns home. Jack follows her, forcing his way into her presence. He makes ardent love and begs her to run away with him.

Marsden, suspecting that his wife is in love with Jack, loses no time in reaching the house, where, with revolver in hand, he hides behind the portieres and waits the confirmation of his suspicions. His jealousy is completely overthrown by his wife's denunciation of the man who questions her faithfulness and love for her husband. Rage against the man who would rob him of his wife now takes the place of jealousy. He comes from his place of concealment and would have shot the man had not Helen stayed his hand. Angrily dismissing the intruder, Marsden draws near Helen and begs her forgiveness. Trembling with love she turns toward him and nestles in his arms.

LITTLE KAINTUCK (Nov. 25).—Living in squalor with his mother, "Kaintuck" goes out to earn a few pennies selling newspapers. Mag, his mother, who spends every cent she gets on drink, hastens along the street begging from everyone she meets. A man impatiently pushes her out of his way, causing her to fall back on the pavement and strike her head on the curb. She dies later at the police station. "Kaintuck," a manly little lad of ten, now lonely, not only bitter but sorrowful, starts away through the country as a tramp. A year later he comes to the Cross Roads store and there asks for work to pay for his meal. Hendricks, the kindly, white-haired proprietor, invites the boy to remain. But "Kaintuck" has the wanderer's fever and declines. He starts out again over the mountain roads. He has not gone far, however, when he turns back. He spends the winter with Hedricks, learning from him how to read and write. In the spring, after a long, cold winter, the man and the boy pass happy days together tramping through the woods or angling for fish in nearby waters. They are inseparable companions. But with the warm weather the wanderlust returns and "Kaintuck" has difficulty in restraining himself and in concealing his unrest.

One morning "Kaintuck" sees a rough-looking individual sneaking into the store. Grabbing a rifle he saves the store-keeper from a bad beating. Feeling that he has repaid Hedricks for his kindness, "Kaintuck" writes a farewell message and that night starts away towards the mountains. Hedricks is heart-broken when he finds the boy's message, and despairs of ever seeing him again. But the lad has grown very fond of his friend, and when he reaches the great mountain, which, if he passes, will separate him forever from his late home, he stops and debates. He finally turns back. Hedricks meets the boy with open arms. Words cannot express his joy at seeing him. "I know I'd rather stay with you," is all "Kaintuck" says as he takes his pack from his shoulder and the old man clasps him in his arms.

FELLOW VOYAGERS (Nov. 26).—Miss Marbury comes on deck and looks haughtily at Mrs. Gray, an attractive young widow, half-suspecting that she has her steamer chair. When she finds that she is mistaken, she ties a large red ribbon upon her own chair, which is situated between Mrs. Gray on her left and Mr. Martin, on her right. Miss Marbury is quite annoyed when little Dolores and Helen, Mrs. Gray's two playful children, come to settle a dispute over the ownership of a tennis ball.

Tom Blake stops to greet Mrs. Gray and plays with the children, making them forget their animosity. A very good-looking young woman walks by and attracts Blake's attention. With Blake, the widow and her children start for a walk. The little girls stray away and go back to the chair. Finding Miss Marbury asleep, they playfully pelt her with the tennis ball. Rising in a storm of wrath the indignant young woman throws the ball into the ocean. Dolores and Helen, crying, run to their mother. Tom again comforts them and takes them both for a walk. Passing by Miss Chaloner, sitting reading in her steamer chair, he conceives an idea whereby he may meet her. He writes upon a page torn from a magazine that he would like to know her and he entrusts the communication to Dolores. But the little girl is persuaded by mischievous Helen to place the note in the pocket of Miss Marbury's coat, that lady having left her seat for a moment. When Miss Marbury finds the note she becomes very kittenish and looks with longing eyes towards Mr. Martin, who is asleep on her right. He awakens, and is startled by the lady's demeanor. Blake is puzzled when he meets Miss Chaloner on the deck and she passes without noticing him. He discovers what the children have done and makes them get the note, much to Miss Marbury's disgust.

Miss Cholaner finally gets the note and meets Tom.

THE CURE (Nov. 27).—Alone in his laboratory, Dr. Harry Lindsay holds in one hand a tall glass vial, and in the other a slim test tube, both containing a colorless liquid. He watches keenly as he drops a little of the liquid from the vial into the test tube. A triumphant expression dawns on his face as the liquid in the test tube becomes milky white. At last, after years of experimenting, he has discovered a morphine and opium cure.

But Dr. Lindsay is worried when his cure kills a guinea pig. To prove its efficiency, he goes down to China Town and endeavors to induce some of the dope fiends to try his cure; but they will have none of it. In despair, the doctor decides to test it on himself. His wife goes away on a visit. Taking advantage of her absence, he injects several doses of morphine into his arm and marks off a day on the calendar for beginning the cure. When the day comes, he is under the influence of the treacherous drug and no longer wishes to counteract its power.

John, the butler, is grieved over his master's wild appearance. He notices with dread, the haunted, mad expression in his eyes. He sends for Dr. Phillips, the only man who knows of the former experiments, but the doctor cannot help the stricken man. John telegraphs to young Mrs. Lindsay, who hastens home. She is filled with horror when she comes upon her husband in the act of driving the morphine into a vein in his arm. She wrests the hypodermic needle and the morphine from him and hides them. Going to her room she puts on her wedding gown and returns to her husband.

Draw the Crowd

The experience of managers has shown that nothing fills a house so continuously as a well-illuminated entrance. This may be obtained by the use of

Westinghouse Long-Burning Flame Carbon Arc Lamps

These lamps give the intense illumination of the flaming arc with a high efficiency and a burning life of over 100 hours per trim. For the same brilliancy, they cost less to operate and less for trimming. Either white or yellow light.

Send for Folder 4258.

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

G. W. BRADENBURGH, *Importer

Four Dare Devils (new copy)
2800.......Cosmo. 6-3-1 photos, $280
Fall of Pompeii (Genuine)
2000..Ambrosio 12-6-3-1 photos, 200
By Whose Hand (Exclusive)
3000......Monopol 6-3-1 photos, 300
Three Drops of Poison
3400..........Luna 6-2-1 photos. 300
Spanish Blood (Asta Nielsen)
4000....Monopol 6-4-3-1 photos, 200
Dance to Death (Asta Nielsen)
3000......Monopol 6-3-1 photos, 175
The Black Viper
3200....Pyramid 6-3-2-1 photos, 175
Hero Among Men
2000........Lubin 6-3-1 photos, 100
Treasure of Devil's Valley
2700..........Eclair 6-1 photos, 100
The Minister's Daughter
2600. Messter 6-2 kds of l's pho's, 125
Sappho
2800.........Attas 6-3-1 photos, 125
The Scapegrace (Sensational)
1900........C. & M. 3-1 Banner, 100
Faust (colored)
2000....Pathe Art 8-6-3-1 photos, 100
The White Veil
3000........Vienna 6-3-1 photos, 100
Torch of War
3000....Continental 6-3-1 photos, 100

Over 1000 good films from $5.00 per reel up. All with posters, every film examined and sent in good condition. Prices net cash with order or C. O. D. with privilege of examination on receipt of 25% in advance.

G. W. BRADENBURGH
802 Vine Street :: Philadelphia, Pa.

A WINNER!

The Inimitable THOMAS W. ROSS

with an All Star Company of 100 in

A FIVE PART MOTION PICTURE PRESENTATION OF

Henry M. Blossom's Great Racing Play

"CHECKERS"

A PAYING TICKET FOR TERRITORY BUYERS. A STAKE WINNER FOR EXHIBITORS. A POPULAR PUBLIC FAVORITE

These Men Have Bought! They Are Our Judges! Ask Them!

ALASKA—A. R. Thorne, Fairbanks, Alaska.
ARIZONA—Golden Gate Film Exchange 234 Eddy St., Los Angeles, ,Cal.
CANADA—Feature Film Co., of Canada 205 St. Catherine St., Montreal
CALIFORNIA—Golden Gate Film Exchange 234 Eddy St., Los Angeles, Cal.
COLORADO—Northwestern Feature Film Co. Denver, Colo.
CONNECTICUT—Famous Players Film Co., N. England, 228 Tremont Ave., Boston, Mass.
DELAWARE—Electric Theater Supply Co. Room 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.
DIST. OF COLUMBIA—Electric Theater Supply Co., Room 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.
IOWA—Kansas City Feature Film Co. A. D. Flintom, Pres., Gayety Theater, Kansas City
IDAHO—Northwestern Feature Film Co. 329 Oak St., Portland, Ore.
ILLINOIS—Famous Players Film Service, Inc. Power Bldg., Chicago, Ill.
INDIANA—Famous Players Film Service, Inc. Power Bldg., Chicago, Ill.
KANSAS—Kansas City Feature Film Co. A. D. Flintom, Pres., Gayety Theater, Kansas City, Mo.
KENTUCKY—Famous Players Film Service, Inc. 125 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
MAINE—Famous Players Film Co., of New England, 228 Tremont Ave., Boston, Mass.
MARYLAND—Electric Theater Supply Co. Room 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.
MASSACHUSETTS—Famous Players Film Co., N. E., 228 Tremont Ave., Boston, Mass.
MISSOURI—Dalton & Wolf, Beers Hotel Grand & Olive Sts., St. Louis, Mo.
MONTANA—Northwestern Feature Film Co. 329 Oak St., Portland, Ore.
MICHIGAN—The Casino Co., Detroit
MINNESOTA—Marshall Theater Circuit, Duluth
NEVADA—Golden Gate Film Exchange 234 Eddy St., Los Angeles, Cal.
NEBRASKA—Kansas City Feature Film Co. Gayety Theater, Kansas City, Mo.
NO. DAKOTA—Marshall Theater Circuit Duluth, Minn.
NEW HAMPSHIRE—Famous Players Film Co., N. E., 228 Tremont Ave., Boston, Mass.
NEW MEXICO—Northwestern Feature Film Co. Denver, Colo.
NO. NEW JERSEY—Modern Film Company 137 Roseville Ave., Newark, N. J.
SO. NEW JERSEY—Electric Theater Sup. Co. Room 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.
NEW YORK—Theatre Film Co., 71 W. 23rd St., New York City.
OKLAHOMA—Kansas City Feature Film Co. Gayety Theater, Kansas City, Mo.
OHIO—Famous Players Film Service, Inc. 125 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
OREGON—Northwestern Feature Film Co. 329 Oak St., Portland, Ore.
E. PENNSYLVANIA—Electric Theater Sup. Co. Room 303 Abbott Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.
W. PENNSYLVANIA—Famous Players Film Service, Inc., 125 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
RHODE ISLAND—Famous Players Film Co., N. E., 228 Tremont Ave., Boston, Mass.
TEXAS—All Star Film Service, Dallas.
UTAH—Northwestern Feature Film Co. Denver, Colo.
VERMONT—Famous Players Film Co., of N. Eng., 228 Tremont Ave., Boston, Mass.
WASHINGTON—Northwestern Feature F. Co. 329 Oak St., Portland, Ore.
W. VIRGINIA—Famous Players Film Service, Inc., 125 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
WYOMING—Northwestern Feature Film Co. Denver, Colo.
WISCONSIN—Marshall Theater Circuit Duluth, Minn.

Augustus Thomas'

6 PARTS —"ARIZONA"— 6 PARTS

with CYRIL SCOTT AND COMPANY OF 150. Southern Territory is Open

COMING

DUSTIN FARNUM
IN
"Soldiers of Fortune"
By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

AUGUSTUS THOMAS'
"In Missouri"
with
BURR McINTOSH

EUGENE WALTERS
"Paid In Full"
Everyone Knows It

All Star Feature Corporation

HARRY R. RAVER,
President.

220 West 42d St., NEW YORK

AUGUSTUS THOMAS,
Director General

She places the morphine where he can reach it, but when he tries to do so, and pleads pitifully for it, she implores him to think of her. After a terrible struggle between temptation and love, the weakened man falls back in the arms of his beautiful wife and sleeps, peaceful and happy, dreaming of her, the real cure.

BETTY IN THE LIONS' DEN (Nov. 28).—As a hero-worshipper, especially of the long-haired, silk-tied, eccentric kind, Mrs. Kate Long has no comparison. They congregate at her house and are lionized to their hearts' content. There is the bent, stoop-shouldered, white-haired scientist; the long-haired, saucer-eyed musical genius, the long-haired poet; the Hamlet-like tragedian, the artist with flowing tie and Parisian style, together with the dapper French count and the Lord knows who. To this throng of celebrities, Mrs. Long introduces her pretty country niece, Betty, who loves and is engaged to Tom, her manly country sweetheart.

Mrs. Long insists that Betty shall marry a celebrity. "No country bumpkin," says she. So Betty, dressed in the latest and most expensive gowns, mischievously agrees. All the celebrities fall in love with her, to the great displeasure of Miss Zigger, a skinny old maid.

Betty wires to Tom that her aunt needs a coachman and to come on. Tom gets the place. Betty reads in a newspaper about some Brazilian extract which imparts strange feelings to people. She buys some of it and pours it on her gloves and whoever she touches, goes temporarily foolish, tearing around like all possessed. Betty demoralizes the whole place, and the ambulance, the police patrol, the insane asylum wagon, and a force of policemen are needed to handle the crazy celebrities.

When Betty happens affectionately to place her gloved hands upon Tom's cheeks, that young man makes for the water tub in the stable yard and buries his head in the water. Then Betty happens to put her hands to her own face and she too has to make tracks for the water tub. Tom and Betty duck and raise their heads from the water repeatedly before they are able to lean across the tub and kiss lovingly. They are the happiest couple on earth, when Aunt Long forgivingly assists at their marriage.

THE GOLDEN PATHWAY (Special—2 parts—Nov. 29).—In direct opposition to John Evans' wishes, his nephew, James marries Grace, an artist model, and is disinherited. The old business man had selected Helen Greene, his partner's daughter, for his nephew's wife, and when James marries Grace, the girl of his heart, the irate uncle places him upon an allowance of fifteen dollars a week. At first James and Grace manage to live happily, sustained by their love, but they are both fond of wealth and luxury, and when the uncle dies, leaving a will stating that if they get a divorce the fortune will be given to James and a large allowance to Grace, they decide that they will get more out of life by taking advantage of the will's offer, than by trying to live together on fifteen dollars a week. Grace leaves for Reno to get a divorce. When she parts from James she cannot hold back her tears, and her young husband is heart-broken. With Grace is a young friend of the old studio days, named May. She is artful and deceitful, and plans to get as much of Grace's future allowance as she can. Needing a friend to sustain her in her hour of trouble, Grace gladly confides in May, withholding nothing from her. May goes to Reno with Grace and encourages her to hasten divorce proceedings, fearing all the time that Grace may lose courage and renounce the allowance.

Grace reaches Reno and engages William Marshall, a shrewd lawyer. While the court proceedings are in progress, Jim Evans, in New York, is so disconsolate that he starts a wild flirtation with Helen Greene. But he is unable to stand the separation and writes to Grace's lawyer to stop the divorce proceedings, saying that he will renounce the legacy to get back his wife. But Marshall intends to marry Grace and wires back that the divorce is about to be granted and cannot be recalled. Marshall is aided at all times by May, Grace's deceitful friend, who more than ever longs for a share of Grace's money. Grace sees in a newspaper that Jim is engaged to Helen Greene; it is really a false report, but she does not know this, and she is so heartbroken that when Marshall proposes, she accepts him. But May is in an adjoining room and overhears the proposal. She loves Marshall and is fearfully jealous of Grace. When the lawyer finds that she is there he excuses himself and goes in to see her, anxious to get her out of the way. Then Grace sees Jim's letter asking Marshall to stop the divorce and she grabs the divorce papers and tears them up. As soon as James hears that his wife is coming back he heads off a note he has sent to Helen Greene saying that he will marry her. James and Grace are overjoyed when they learn that the uncle has left a later will stating that his nephew shall inherit the fortune if, after six months, he proves that his love for Grace is greater than his fondness for money. The divorce is knocked sky-high; the unscrupulous lawyer is left in the lurch; deceitful May is scorned; the reunited couple are crowned with love and happiness.

EDISON.

FROM DURBAN TO ZULULAND (Nov. 24).—Durban, the capital of Natal, is one of the most progressive and up-to-date cities in the whole world, let alone Africa. It prides itself on the immaculate character of its streets, and on the beauty of its parks and public buildings. "Double decked" street cars of the most advanced model seem to be the established mode of locomotion. From the city-proper, we go down to the splendid beaches, where the long surges of the Indian Ocean pound and roar continually, and watch the people bathing, the porpoises cruising along the outskirts of the beach, and the surf raging against the rocks on the point.

ALL MAKES POWERS SIMPLEX EDISON
MOTIOGRAPH EDENGRAPH
Cash or Time
Bargains in rebuilt machines
Send for new catalogue
Photo and poster frames
CURTAINS AND SCREENS
Write us today what you are interested in
Amusement Supply Co.
Everything from Screen to Booth
160A North Fifth Avenue, Chicago

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
Moving Picture Machines and Films.
Theatre Brokerage Exchange,
440 S. Dearborn St. Chicago, Ill.

$3.50 CRYSTAL WHITE
$4.00 SILVER FINISH
Curtain Coatings
PREPAID
ALFRED C. STANGE, 15 S. Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

WHAT FILM DO YOU DESIRE?
I am in a position to furnish any film, old or new, at lowest prices. Address,
B. SPITZ, 108 WEST 116th STREET NEW YORK CITY

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
130 Kearny St., San Francisco, Cal.

A G-E Rectifier
will make your pictures more brilliant and at the same time reduce the cost of electric current.
General Electric Company
General Office Schenectady, N. Y.
4488

MOVING PICTURE MEN
Please your audience! Throw "Handwritten Personal Chats" on your screen! "Personal" interest, you know, Wins Patronage. You can write or sketch anything on our "Niagrine" Slides, using common pen. Slides are absolutely heatproof. Don't scratch nor smear. 12 slides, 3¼ x 4 inches, only 25c, prepaid. Try them immediately. Unquestionable satisfaction or positively money back.
Chas. Haeusser, 1256 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.

FOR SALE 50 FEATURES First Class Condition
Elegant Advertising Matter. 1000 COMMERCIALS
VERY CHEAP
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS
WEST 14th STREET, NEW YORK

THE CATALOGUE OF
BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
contains much that is valuable about electric lighting in general, and moving picture work in particular. Send for it.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.
BOX MP-2, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

From the civilization of Durban, we go far inland to the town of Eschowe, in Zuzuland. The pictures were taken at the time that Lord and Lady Gladstone visited this station. Zulu chiefs from all the surrounding territory came to Eschowe to pay their respects to the great English Lord and Lady. According to custom, they brought with them many complaints to set before their white masters. Perhaps the most curious of these was to the effect that a great hardship was being thrust upon them by the increase in the number of cattle. In the old days one could purchase a very satisfactory wife for two cows. Now the price was nearly twenty.

After we have seen the children of the Norwegian Mission going through their calisthenic exercises, we turn to the real feature of the picture—a great tribal dance in honor of Lord Gladstone, in which two thousand natives in full native dress took part.

ENOCH AND EZRA'S FIRST SMOKE (Nov. 24).—Enoch and Ezra were just plain, every-day boys, who lived where all boys ought to live—in the country. One day they decided to go fishing, and since there were certain "chores" which yet remained unattended to, they slipped off quietly without advising their mother of their intentions. On their way to the fishing grounds they happened upon a camp of gypsies, and stood watching the strange men and women. What particularly appealed to them was the manner with which the men puffed at their long pipes. The souls of Enoch and Ezra were filled with wild yearnings. The boys dropped their fishing rods on the spot, raced home, and abstracted their father's pipe from the cupboard in the kitchen. Then, they retired behind the woodshed and blew smoke through their noses like veterans. Meanwhile, the boys' father had been hunting high and low for them. He knew their vagrant habits and was indignant rather than alarmed, until he came upon two gypsies beside the stream, fishing with his sons' fishing rods. The enraged father instantly jumped at the conclusion that the gypsies had either kidnapped or murdered his sons, and an extremely vivid series of events followed in remarkably short order. The dramatic strain had just reached its climax when the situation was cleared by the discovery of two very sick young men behind the woodhouse.

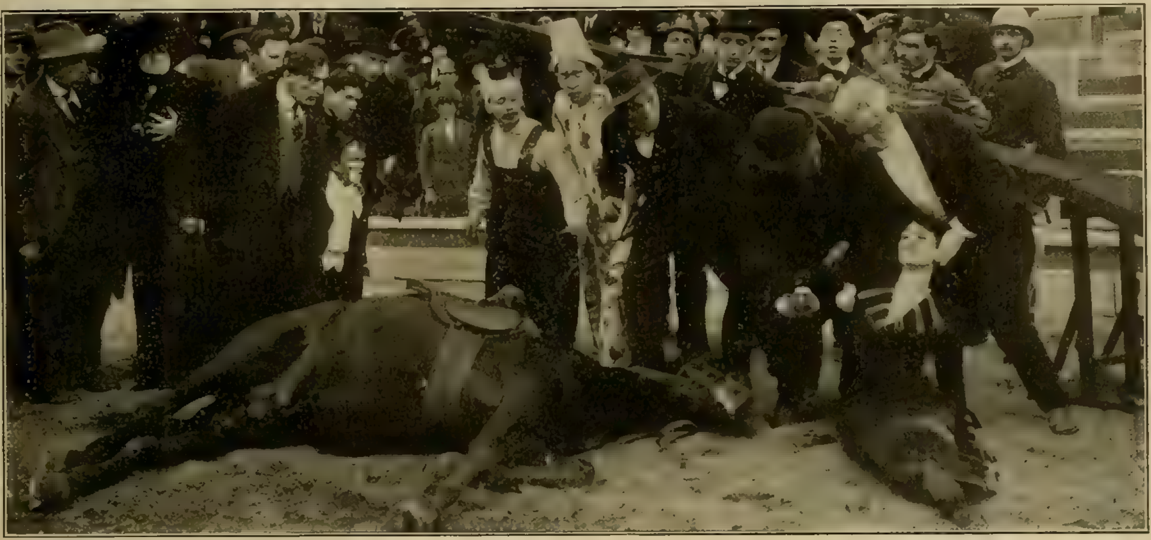
THE VANISHING CRACKSMAN (Nov. 25).—Sir Horace Wyvern's daughter, who was to be married shortly, had received some valuable presents for her wedding, largely from the grateful patients of her father, who was the greatest brain specialist in Europe. Cleek, in disguise, went to the police station and left a letter there, in which he coolly informed the astonished officers that he intended to steal Sir Horace's jewels on the following night.

Police Inspector Narkhom, and a trusty detective named Petrie, went to the Wyvern mansion on the evening in question, and were admitted to the room in which the wedding presents were placed. Telling Sir Horace and his niece, Miss Lorne, that they might retire without fear, Narkom hid himself under the table in the room, leaving Petrie to watch the door outside. Shortly after Sir Horace had retired, Cleek, disguised as the great doctor, appeared in the hallway, and coming into the room, told Narkom that he feared Cleek might get in through the cellar window. Narkom accompanied the false nobleman down to the cellar, where Cleek overpowered and bound him. Then disguised as Narkom, Cleek returned to the jewel room.

Miss Lorne suddenly appeared, and hearing Petrie's story about Sir Horace's reappearance, said that she had locked Sir Horace safely in his room to keep him from all danger. The supposed Narkom ordered Petrie to rush down to the cellar to investigate. While he was gone, Cleek cleared the jewels from the table and went out through the window.

But the beauty of Miss Lorne had made a deep impression on Cleek. He returned half the jewels with a note promising to return the rest if Sir Horace would grant him an interview. Sir Horace readily consented, and Cleek appearing, confessed that he had spent his entire life in the study of criminal methods, and was tired of the hunted, evil existence. Hereafter, if the opportunity were given him, he would atone for his crime against society, by safeguarding it against the attacks of other evil-doers. Narkom gladly offered to take him on his staff of detectives, and the picture closes with the police sergeant and his erstwhile enemy shaking hands.

A SENSE OF HUMOR (Nov. 26).—From his boyhood days Reginald Ashton had vainly longed to be a cowboy on the plains of North America. At the age of twenty-four, his boyhood desire instead of diminishing had increased to such a stage that he at last decided to leave England and enter upon a romantic career in "the States." Accordingly, he gathered together a tremendous assortment of guns, revolvers, sombreros, monocles and other essentials of the rugged Western life, and set sail. On the boat, he met May Brownson returning with her family from a summer in Europe. May liked



Scene from "A Leap of Despair"

"A Leap of Despair"

IN FOUR PARTS

Abounding in thrills and deeds of daring. Great circus scene in which a dashing equestrienne performing on a horse high in the air comes crashing to the ground.

TERRITORY SOLD: Arizona, California, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Idaho, Northern Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachuetts, Nevada, New Hampshire, Northern New Jersey, Southern New Jersey, Greater New York, South Oklahoma, Oregon, Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Texas, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Vermont.

TERRITORY OPEN: Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Carolina, New York State exclusive of Greater New York, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

"The Queen's Jewel"

An absorbing story of plot and intrigue, in which a dashing courtier after a series of thrilling incidents saves the queen from dishonor by recovering a jewel she indiscreetly gave away.

TERRITORY SOLD: Arizona, California, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Idaho, Northern Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachuetts, Nevada, New Hampshire, Northern New Jersey, Southern New Jersey, Greater New York, Ohio, South Oklahoma, Oregon, Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, Washington and West Virginia.

TERRITORY OPEN: Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Carolina, New York State exclusive of Greater New York, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

ITALA FILM COMPANY OF AMERICA

HARRY R. RAVER, Director General

CANDLER BUILDING NEW YORK CITY

the young Englishman immensely, and succeeded in persuading him to accept the cordial invitation of her father to spend a month at the Brownson's summer camp.

The Brownson's camp was in the woods, and Ashton, immediately after his arrival began to cast wistful eyes about for the grizzlies and Indians his heart desired. May Brownson learned of her guest's adventurous cravings and decided to arrange a little Wild West show for his benefit. Her brother was secretly despatched to the city for costumes and on his return, the guests garbed themselves in the habiliments of Indians of the most ferocious order. To Ashton, gaily conversing with a couple of guests, the alarming news was suddenly brought that May had been carried off by a band of Indians, and that she was to be burned at the stake at sunset. Ashton immediately retired to the house, garbed himself in his cowboy outfit and went in pursuit of the savage redskins, accompanied by several of the men guests, who begged him to take the lead in their daring venture.

Arrived at the Indian camp, Ashton gallantly charging forward was treacherously deserted by his perfidious allies, captured by the ferocious savages and condemned to share May's fate. The young Englishman managed to slip out of his bonds, and engaged in a terrific fight with his captors. The fight terminated suddenly when Ashton knocked the feathers and wig off one of the Indians and recognized a fellow guest. Naturally enough, he was quite indignant until May asked him to forgive them. Then he decided that even if American humor was in very bad taste, American girls were pretty enough to make up for it.

THE GUNMAKER OF MOSCOW (Special—2 parts—Nov. 28).—When Count Valdai died, he left his only daughter, Rosalind, in the care of his friend Olga, Duke of Tula. When Rosalind had grown from a beautiful child to a more beautiful young woman, she left the Duke's great estate on the Russian steppes and went with him to Moscow, where on account of her beauty and wealth, she attracted a great deal of attention from the young noblemen of the Court of Peter the Great. Most prominent among these was the young Count, Conrad Damonoff, for whom Rosalind cared not at all. Her affections were entirely centered on another man, Ruric Nevel, "The Gunmaker of Moscow." Duke Olga's debts were numerous and pressing. Of all possible ways of getting the money to meet them, one seemed to him particularly obvious and practical. He was the nearest relative of the rich young Count Damonoff. If Damonoff were only out of the way, Olga would be rich. So Olga decided that Damonoff must die.

Olga knew that Rurie Nevel was the finest swordsman in Russia. By his machinations, he easily succeeded in forcing a duel between the two suitors. But Ruric only wounded Damonoff, and did not kill him as the Count had hoped, so the Duke sent Savotano, a sinister rascal, to finish Ruric's work with a slow poison. At the same time he haled Ruric before the Emperor, and demanded his life for having attempted to kill a nobleman. But Peter the Great was curiously friendly to Ruric, and refused to listen to the Duke's demand. Ruric discovered that Savotano was poisoning the Count, and generously took his enemy into his own house to be cared for. The Duke infuriated at Savotano's failure, decided to put another of his schemes in effect. Rosalind was immensely wealthy in her own right. He would force her to marry him. Rosalind learning of the Duke's danger sent word to Ruric by Valdimir, a mysterious monk whom Ruric had once befriended. Ever since Ruric's kind action, the monk had taken a strange interest in his affairs. Now, when the young gunmaker seemed helpless against the power of the Duke, the monk proved an unexpected ally. A file of Imperial soldiers, with Ruric and the monk at their head invaded the Duke's palace and stopped the forced wedding just about to take place. Then the mysterious monk threw off his robe, and disclosed himself as Peter, Czar of all the Russias. He banished the astounded Duke and bestowed on the happy Ruric the title of Duke of Tula and the hand of Rosalind Valdai.

LUBIN.

HER SICK FATHER (Nov. 25).—Lillian's father lives in the midst of patent medicines, lotions and pills under the constant impression that he is sick and the dread of an early and sudden death. Consequently, when Charley meets Lillian, clandestinely, out in the rose garden their romance progresses with little success for father's pains won't leave him unless Lillian is by his side to give him his medicine and the young couple no sooner forget the world and its trouble when the yell of "I've got a pain" breaks in upon them and Lillian has to leave. Charley decides something strenuous must be done and at once. He knows and Lillian knows that father only thinks he is sick, so between them they plan to have Charley, whom father has never met, visit father as a manipulator of the new school and effect a radical change. Charley arrives and against father's wishes they forcibly relieve him of all his medicines and pills and put him through a course of stunts that speedily make him sure he has no further aches and pains. The young couple leave him and out in the garden the old, old question is asked and coyly answered. Father, sure another pain is coming on, starts to yell, but first decides to see if the "doctor" has left. What he sees enrages him and he stamps up and down the room in anger at the trick they have played upon him. Then he realizes that he really isn't sick after all, and when the young romancers return he is more than ready and anxious to give them his blessing.

For FEATURE FILMS
address
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE
Suite 405 Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6229
SEND FOR OUR NEW LIST

Advance Motion Picture Co.
Commercial, Industrial and Educational Film Mfgrs.
Chicago.
General Offices. 547-549 Peoples Gas Bldg.
Factory and Studio. 950 Edgecomb Place.

MOTION PICTURE FILMS
Get our prices. Quick facilities. We print negatives, develop and print positive. Splendid results assured. Camera men supplied.
Parisian Manufacturing and Film Renovating Co.
940 Wentworth Avenue Chicago, Ill.

Changeable Illuminated
PROGRAM SIGN
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE
ZENITH MFG. CO.
Box 252 Cincinnati, Ohio

We buy and sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
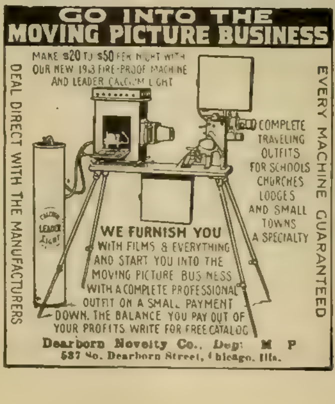
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
538 S. Dearborn Street Chicago, Ill.

FILMS FOR SALE
$3.00 per Reel Up
Send for our new revised list. 50 features for sale, low prices. Second-hand machines, all makes.
ECONOMY FILM CO. 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

VISCO PICTURE MACHINE OIL
If your dealer will not supply you send us $1.50 and we will send you a 128-ounce can of Visco Picture Machine Oil direct. 6-oz. bottles, 25 cents at your dealer's.
THE VISCO MOTOR OIL CO., Cleveland, O.

The M.P. Laboratories
Printing, Developing, Tinting and Toning
CLEAR, STEADY, GUARANTEED
172 Sands Street Brooklyn, N. Y.



GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS
MAKE $20 TO $50 PER NIGHT WITH OUR NEW 1913 FIRE-PROOF MACHINE AND LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT
COMPLETE TRAVELING OUTFITS FOR SCHOOLS CHURCHES LODGES AND SMALL TOWNS A SPECIALTY
WE FURNISH YOU WITH FILMS & EVERYTHING AND START YOU INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS WITH A COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL OUTFIT ON A SMALL PAYMENT DOWN. THE BALANCE YOU PAY OUT OF YOUR PROFITS. WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG
DEAL DIRECT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS
EVERY MACHINE GUARANTEED
Dearborn Novelty Co., Dept. M P
587 So. Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ills.

THE LOST SWITCH (Nov. 25).—Mrs. Grundy places her hair switch in the window to sun. Mr. Grundy has but six minutes to catch the morning suburban train to his city office. He hurries desperately through breakfast and bids wifie a hasty farewell. As he rushes down the front steps, his wife, from the window above, waves him down a farewell kiss and unknowingly knocks out her hair switch with the sleeve of her kimono. The switch falls at the feet of hubby. He recognizes it as his wife's, who has left the window. Having absolutely no time to spare, and greatly embarrassed, he thrusts the switch into his overcoat pocket and sprints for the train. He is greatly embarrassed both on way to, and at the office, when he accidentally exposes the switch. His office boy makes sport with the switch, into which the other employees uproariously enter. The boy is sharply reprimanded to his discomfiture by Grundy and vows to get even. Mrs. Grundy, whose own hair is scanty, discovers her loss, and is made desperate by receiving word that the ladies of the Pink Tea Club will soon call. Mr. Grundy is a pork packer. He receives a letter from his partner concerning the side-tracking, or switching of a number of cars of hogs, asking for advice. At the same time Mr. Grundy receives a message from his wife telling of the loss of the hair switch. Angry, he answers both. The office boy is ordered to see that both are sent. The boy, seeing an opportunity to get even, transposes the names and addresses, which result in consternation by both recipients, and puts Mr. Grundy in wrong until the mistake is discovered and Mrs. Grundy gets back her switch.

JUST CISSY'S LITTLE WAY (Nov. 24).—Cy is bashful and awkward. His sweetheart, Cissy, lives on the adjoining farm; she is eager to acquire an education, so her parents send her to a nearby city school. Things seem to be different when Cissy returns on her first vacation. Accompanying her is the Rev. James Andrews, whose willingness to help his bright little neighbor results in an arrangement to spend his vacation with Cissy's parents. Cissy is changed now. Cy in his clumsy way tries to continue his courtship, but every time he approaches the girl she is with the city chap. Cy gets desperate when the minister and Cissy start for a ride and Cissy hints that "three is a crowd." Cy slips in the back of the buggy, where he remains undiscovered until they ford a creek. The buggy sticks and Cissy discovers Cy clinging to the back. The horse starts suddenly and Cy is left sprawling in the creek. He scrambles ashore and determines that he will give Cissy the supreme test. He attires himself in a new suit and hat of "advanced style." Cissy refrains from laughing outright and adjusts his tie. Cy detects Cissy's ill-concealed merriment and tears off his tie, casting it at her feet and leaving in a blaze of anger. He determines to bring matters to a head and procures a marriage license. But he has delayed too long. Cissy's vacation is over and he sees her disappearing down the road in the buggy headed for the station with the clergyman. This is the last straw. He'll fix the city chap for stealing his girl. Cy sells his pony, packs his telescope, slips his battered revolver into his pocket and boards the train for the city. His comic rage has not diminished when the Rev. Andrew's butler leaves him in the study while he goes to find the clergyman. Cy conceals himself behind a screen and with drawn revolver awaits the clergyman's coming. But when the athletic young divine enters, Cy loses his nerve. He cannot bring himself to fire: the clergyman tears away the screen to stand face to face with the shivering country man. The servant enters to announce Cissy's visit and James asks him to detain Cissy while he engineers a plan. He forces Cy into his own room and with a show of severity commands him to put on a decent suit. When the change is made Cissy is ushered in. The young minister asks her if she is willing to marry the unhappy Cy and the girl nods a shy "yes." When the clergyman returns with the servants for witness he finds Cy and Cissy, embarrassed, but reconciled, ready for the ceremony. Cy produces the license and the clergyman begins the words that make them one.

A WAIF OF THE DESERT (Special—2 parts—Nov. 27).—In the early fifties, an emigrant party headed by John Munro is lost on the desert between Salt Lake and the Sierras. All of its members died except Munro, his wife and child, and Zeke Stevens, a young man of about twenty-four. Even these are unable to proceed any further, on account of lack of water. John Munro dies in a fever, the shock kills his wife and Zeke Stevens and little Chispa find themselves the only two left out of a party of twenty-four. Their death too seems inevitable, when the little one suggests prayer, and the rough plainsman and child kneel together. While they await an answer from Heaven, an emigrant train, headed by James Osborne, rescues them and takes them into California.

Ten years elapse and Zeke Stevens is part owner of a lumber camp in the forests of California. The only woman in the camp is Chispa, now a beautiful girl of seventeen, who has been brought up in utter ignorance of the fact that there are other people in the world. Her one companion is Injun Jack who, from childhood, has guarded and pro-

THE CHAMPION

THE CHAMP SEEKS A BOUT WITH CUPID

THE Champion, being in fine condition and at peace with the world, is taking a stroll. Ah! Yonder approacheth a pretty damsel. The Champ is a little flustered. Says he to himself, "By George, that is the Jane of my dreams and I am going to flirt with her. Gee! I wish I knew how." Miss Exhibitor, the dame who was doing the approaching, kept up the good work till she was in close proximity to our hero. Being a coy dame and knowing a thing, she just gave him the "once-over." Says she to herself, "Pretty nifty chap that, but where have I seen that map (Keystone) before. It looks awfully familiar, and what splendid shoulders and chest (Domino) he has!" The Champ, seeing that he has her number, steps up and engages her in a conversation, in the course of which he tells her what a great guy he is. Now, Miss Exhibitor has had quite a few chaps tell her this before, but when she called them and told them she was from Missouri as a unit they fell down and, well, to make a long story short, the Champion was informed he would have to show her, and right on the road our hero demonstrated that he "was there." He shadow boxed, showing her how he delivered a right cross, upper cut and swing (Kay-Bee) and jabbed, hooked and jolted with his left (Broncho), and between you and me, Gentle Reader, I think the Champion has made a killing, and as we go to press very shortly this little story will be continued in our next.

FUTURE RELEASES

KEYSTONE
COMEDIES

November 17—OUR CHILDREN
November 20—A MUDDY ROMANCE
November 24—FATTY JOINS THE FORCE
November 27—COHEN SAVES THE FLAG
December 1—THE WOMAN HATERS
December 4 — ROGUES' GALLERY — SAN FRANCISCO CELEBRATION (Split Reel)
December 8—A RIDE FOR A BRIDE

KAY-BEE
FEATURES

November 18—THE CLAIM JUMPER
November 21—DAYS OF '49
November 25—THE MAELSTROM
November 28—THE SIGN OF THE SNAKE
December 2—THE REVELATION

DOMINO
WINNERS

November 20—WITCH OF SALEM
November 27—BELLE OF YORKTOWN (3 Reels)
December 4—DEVOTION
December 11—THE FILLY
December 18—THE CURSE

BRONCHO
HEADLINERS

November 19—WAR CORRESPONDENT
November 26—THE REFORMATION
December 3—THE BURIED PAST
December 10—THE WOMAN
December 17—THE OPEN DOOR
December 24—HER FATHER'S STORY

MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP., Longacre Bldg., 42d Street and Broadway
NEW YORK CITY

tected her. With her advancement into womanhood, a fierce love has grown up in Zeke's heart, the disparity in their ages never having seemed to him to be an obstacle. Finally others arrive in the persons of Mrs. Osborne, and her daughter, Grace, who have come as the guests of Harry Sinclair, a lumber merchant, who has brought his fiancee and her mother to visit him. They are immediately recognized as being those who assisted in rescuing Chispa and Zeke from death on the desert, and warmly welcomed. A holiday is declared and every man puts on his best to pay respect to the city ladies. The great contrast between Harry Sinclair and the other men she has known causes Chispa to become infatuated, which plunges Zeke into a state of depression. At a dance given in honor of the ladies, Zeke plunges into drink, interrupts the party and challenges Sinclair to fight. This he refuses to do, but suggests an interview alone. They withdrew from the hall to the outside, when a shot from the bushes nearly wounds Sinclair. Zeke is accused of the shooting and is arrested. Zeke is tried and acquitted, when a desire arises in the minds of his friends to drive the strangers from the neighborhood.

Accordingly, they set out at once for Sinclair's cottage, where he has been nursed back to health by the three women, and where Chispa's love has increased. When the mob arrives to make its demand, Sinclair asks Zeke for an interview and they withdraw. Chispa, following them, overhears Sinclair say that while he is deeply attracted to Chispa he intends to marry Grace, and in her despair Chispa suddenly disappears. Search for her proves fruitless, but the faithful Injun Jack, believing that Sinclair has spirited her away, makes him a captive, and carries him to a gorge in the mountain, intending to torture him into revealing where he has hidden her. Suddenly the news comes to the camp that Chispa is still wandering in the mountains. Zeke finds her, and at the same time encounters the party which has been in search of Sinclair. Here the play ends with the two pairs of lovers where they should be.

THE SCAPEGRACE (Nov. 26).—John Andover and Phil are brothers. Phil is the outcast of the family and a scapegrace. John leads a lonely life until he meets Agnes Donald, a society belle. Phil has had an affair with a woman and when she begs him to make good and marry her he refuses because he is broke. He goes to John and tells him of the woman and that he must have money. John gives it to him, but instead of marrying the girl he deserts her. Later the baby comes and the girl, Amy Williams, is evicted. She reads of John's betrothal party and goes to him. She arrives at the party and sees John in the hall. Agnes watches. Amy tells John that he must do more than help her financially, that the baby is his brother's child and he must take care of it, and she holds it out to him pleadingly. Agnes mistakes the action and misjudges John. John decides to harbor the unfortunate woman and child and sends them home in his own auto. Agnes sees this and her suspicion is confirmed. When John returns to the house she taxes him with the matter, but to save exposing the disgrace he refuses an explanation. Agnes takes her own explanation and returns him his ring. John is not allowed to explain and gives up his time to the woman and child. He commences a search for his brother, which is unavailing. Agnes has turned her attention to becoming a nurse, hoping that in such work she could forget her heartache. Phil returns and looks into his brother's window. He sees the sacrifice his brother has made and resolves to make good. A typhoid epidemic breaks out and Phil contracts it. John learns that Agnes is going out on typhoid cases and all his great love for her sweeps back. In desperation he decides to stop her. She is called to attend Phil down in a poor quarter of the city, and when John learns of the address he hastens there, not knowing that it is his brother she is to attend. Meanwhile, Phil has sent a letter to Amy begging her forgiveness and asking that she come to him at once with a minister so that he could marry her and give their child a name. Agnes arrives first and is preparing to enter Phil's room when John enters and blocks her way. Agnes tries in every possible way to make John let her pass, but he finally takes her in his arms by force; all his pent up love comes to the surface. He begs her not to risk her life and tells her of his love. At this moment Amy and the minister with the neighbor enter and John learns that it is his brother he is allowing to suffer in the next room. He lets Amy and the others enter and then Agnes learns the truth. Amy and Phil are married before the ambulance arrives and guaranteed every possible help and attention by his brother, Phil is taken to the hospital. Later John and Agnes are married and Phil and Amy are at the wedding.

TURNING THE TABLE (Nov. 29).—Ramon, a notorious Mexican bandit, camps his outlaws in a ravine in the hills near John Sawyer's Texas ranch. He rustles some horses from the ranch, leaving a note of thanks on the gate post. The morning following the theft, Bob Tenny and his squad of rangers visit the ranch. Bob is in love with May Sawyer. When Sawyer finds Ramon's note he turns it over to Bob. The latter vows to capture the bandit. Salita, the unscrupulous daughter of Ramon, who roams the roads as a spy, hears Bob's vow and determines to checkmate him. She attracts Bob's attention and infatuates him. She agrees to meet him the next morning at the forks of the ravine trails. Leaving Bob, Salita goes to the bandit camp and plots with Ramon to capture the ranger. Next morning Salita meets Bob and lures him down the trail into the ravine. May finding Bob gone, rides off on the upper trail. On the edge of a high bluff May hears voices and peering over sees the bandits in their camp below. She also sees Bob and Salita talking loverlike. Although downcast by the discovery of Bob's faithlessness, May realizes his danger and rides off to warn the ranger. May arrives in the ravine too late and is forced to watch Bob's capture by Ramon and Salita. The bandit and his daughter disarm the ranger and handcuff him around a slender tree with his own handcuffs. Ramon and Salita then leave the ranger, declaring they will go to the camp, get the remainder of the outlaws and lynch Bob. After the captors leave, May, who has heard the threat, appears and tries in vain to break the handcuffs. Then, using an axe left by Ramon, she chops down the tree. Bob is released just in time to escape. He and May ride off on May's horse, followed by a shower of bullets. The rangers at the ranch hear the firing and meet Bob and May at the forks. May leads them to the point on the upper trail above the bandit camp. Here the rangers descend the bluff and form an ambush for the bandits, who return to the camp with the intention of moving on at once. All are captured. As for Bob's fate in the hands of May, there is a question. She tells the shamed ranger that she "may marry him some time, but not now."

---

PATHEPLAY.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 66 (Nov. 10).—Jersey City, N. J.—Children from all the schools of this city unite in the athletic and musical carnival at West Side Park.

New York, N. Y.—Henry Elionski, the nineteen-year-old giant, swims from Brooklyn Bridge to Bay Ridge, with his hands and feet shackled, towing seven men in a boat. He covers the distance in 3 hours and 5 minutes.

San Francisco, Cal.—Maj. Gen. Arthur Murray, delivers an address at the dedication of the Kansas State Building site on the Exposition grounds.

Coffeville, Kan.—Walter Johnson, crack pitcher for the Washington Americans, receives a loving cup from his appreciative neighbors when they celebrate "Johnson Day." At the same time Larry Cheney, pitcher with the Chicago Nationals, is given a gold watch.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Senator Bankhead delivers an address at the ceremony attending the opening of navigation on the all water route to New Orleans, which will be of great value to ships using the Panama Canal.

Madrid, Spain.—The torreadors give a remarkable exhibition of agility at a bloodless bull fight.

Editorial Section.—In the effort to find an effective device to lessen the number of train wrecks, in line with the "safety first" policy of the railroads, the Gray-Thurber Automatic Train Control is successfully tested at Pittsburg, Pa., before the Congressional Committee.

Denver, Colo.—At the Colorado Kennel Club's annual show, the Russian wolf hounds attract considerable attention.

Princeton, N. J.—President Wilson is surrounded by an escort of admirers when he visits the polls in this city on Election Day.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 67, 1913 (Nov. 13). Jersey City, N. J.—The dedication of the new million-dollar postoffice is preceded, in which the police and letter carriers take part.

New York, N. Y.—Dr. John H. Finley, persident of the College of the City of New York, delivers the opening address at the ceremonies attending the breaking of ground for a $200,000 stadium.

Paris, France.—While in this city King Constantine, of Greece, poses for the correspondent of Pathe's Weekly.

Schenectady, N. Y.—At a great saving of time, a hydraulic truck is used instead of mules, to tow canal barges. The truck tows three barges at a speed of six miles an hour.

Breslau, Germany.—The municipal authorities receive Kaiser Wilhelm with much ceremony when he arrives to visit the statue of Wilhelm I.

Denver, Colo.—Fifty young women leave the Central Christian Church to start a novel campaign on behalf of "Church Attendance Day," for which Mayor Perkins issued a proclamation.

Panama Canal Zone.—The lower gates to the upper miraflores lock are tested. An idea of the size of the basin may be gained by noting the pigmy figures walking on the bottom of the lock. Accepted as official records by the United States Government.

Camden, N. J.—The United States torpedo boat destroyer "Downs," the first of a series of eight now being built, is launched at the plant of the New York Shipbuilding Company.

Comic Section.—Jeff puts the rock through a softening process for the benefit of Mutt. Drawn by Bud Fisher.

THE SHADOW OF SHAME (Nov. 25).—John Denham is released from jail, where he has been imprisoned for the misdeed of another. Returning to his old home, he finds the house occupied by strangers. Inquiring from an old acquaintance as to the whereabouts of his only son, he is filled with joy to find that young Denham is now an important

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS
Played from Piano Keyboard
WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"
J. C. DEAGAN
DEAGAN BUILDING
1776 Berteau Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

Indirect Lights for Moving Picture Theatres

No. 51

No. 51.—15" diam., 36" long
$6.00

No. 52.—20" diam., 36" long
$8.00

No. 53
Brackets
$1.65
Complete with green art shade

Cannot be duplicated for double the money in any local chandelier store. We make a specialty of lighting. Write us.

NOTE. Send for circular showing very latest novelties for first class moving picture theatres.

CENERAL SPECIALTY CO.
409 Morgan Street St, Louis, Mo.

This "GOOD NIGHT" Slide Free

A Scott and Van Altena Reproduction of 10-color original. Very effective. Sent free to bona fide picture houses. Already requested from all parts of the country. If you want it, write today—

THE FISK RUBBER COMPANY
CHICOPEE, FALLS ,MASS.

Exclusive Service

The genius conjured by the General Film Company to open the golden gates of MOVIELAND to the managers of first-class theatres, and exhibitors who feel the sting of competition.

MOVIELAND is vast and roomy. Its boundaries are as rangy and distant as those of the United States. It is the richest country in the world. It receives a daily tribute of half a million dollars! Half a million dollars a day!—and it has but 18,000 houses to divide this flow of gold. There is room for many, many more, and now the gates are open.

Exclusive Service

Enables the showman to increase the tribute by putting on an entertainment that no one else in the territory of his house can possibly secure inside of 90 days. It enables him to advertise his house and his show without the slightest danger of his competitor reaping a nickel's worth of the benefit.

Exclusive Service

Offers three weekly programs, perfectly balanced—new—and of the same quality that has made the "G. F." regular service pre-eminent. It includes 2-, 3- and 4-reel features—"G. F." features, which have long been known as the Best. Come into MOVIELAND and eat of its golden fruits.

General Film Company
(INCORPORATED)
Exclusive Service Department
71 West 23d Street, New York

man in the neighboring county, to which he has moved. The father, filled with a happy expectancy, goes to his son, expecting a warm welcome, but is terribly wounded to find that his son wants nothing to do with him. "If it is known that my father is a jail bird," he is told, "my career will be ruined." Sorrowfully he leaves his son's office to make his living by odd jobs. As it happens a desperate convict escapes from prison and Young Denham, as sheriff, is notified to be on the watch to capture him. While in the pursuit of the criminal, he comes across his father chopping wood and orders him to leave the district, as his reputation demands it. A little later the son is attacked by the convict and escapes death only by the help of his father. When the rest of the posse come up and are about to arrest the father as an accomplice the son publicly acknowledges his father and says that he owes his life to him.

THE ELUSIVE TURKEY (Nov. 26).—An ardent young suitor thinks that he has much to be thankful for when he wins "the only girl in the world." To celebrate, he invites the girl and her parents to Thanksgiving dinner, which is to be an engagement party as well. In anticipation of the great event, the lover takes a hand in the fattening of the turkey to be killed for the feast. While feeding the turkey, he drops the engagement ring which he has bought for his prospective bride, and the bird gobbles it up. From that point, the valuable turkey becomes a most elusive creature and the unfortunate lover experiences one misfortune after another in his effort to regain the ring. How he finally succeeds is not the least surprising part of a consistently surprising story.

THE FAITHLESS FRIEND (Special—2 parts—Nov. 27).—After nursing his friend, ill with small pox, back to health Harold Sutton falls sick of the same disease. The faithless friend, finding a letter from Sutton's sweetheart saying she has been left a fortune, determines to use it to his own advantage. He leaves the sick man to die, goes to the girl, tells her that her lover is dead, and after the first grief is over woos her and marries her. In the meantime, Sutton is picked up by a wandering tribe of Indians and recovers. Later, learning of his friend's treachery, and disgusted with humanity, he adopts an Indian life. The tribe attacks a wagon train and in one of the dying white men Sutton recognizes the wrecker of his life. A woman is captured whom he finds is his former sweetheart. When she finds out her late husband's character her old love returns and Sutton and she are united at last.

OLD NUREMBURG (Nov. 27).—Interesting views of the quaintest Middle Ages city of Europe, of houses and city walls built in the days of chivalry.

MAKING EIGHT-TON ROPES (Nov. 28).—Another industrial, showing cordage in the making from the raw material up to the finished product, packed, ready for shipment.

THE CAPITAL OF THE MALAY STATES (Nov. 28).—Interesting views showing Kuala Lumpur, the little known and little visited Malay metropolis. Glimpses are obtained of the city's remarkable botanical garden.

FASHIONS LAW IN THE SWISS CANTONS (Nov. 28).—The native Swiss costumes, it is said, are becoming a thing of the past. The ugly billycock hat and ungraceful trousers for men and characterless skirt and shirtwaist for the woman are supplanting the quaint and beautiful costumes shown in these pictures, which have, therefore, an added interest.

THE BLIGHT (Nov. 29).—Porter, an outlaw and murderer, is captured after a hot chase, and pays the penalty of his crimes. His orphan son, Joe, an infant, is brought up by a charitable negro, and though he shows many good traits, the sins of his father are visited upon him. Warren Fisher, a well to do man, wishing to aid him, gives him a letter to a distant friend, thinking that a change in environment will do the young man good. The friend, Mr Evans, gives Joe a position. Five years later, his native talents have made him a factor in Mr. Evans' business, and he is made a partner. Joe falls in love with Mr Evans' daughter and her father casts his influence on his side. Yielding to parental wishes the girl, against her inclinations, accepts her suitor, and the wedding date is set. Warren Fisher arrives just as the ceremony is about to start and by revealing Joe's parentage, stops the wedding. Crushed by his misfortunes, he kills himself.

GEORGE KLEINE.

VENOMOUS TONGUES (Celio—2 parts—Special—Dec. 2).—Charles Raleigh is a cousin of Miss Clara Burton and is secretly in love with her. She returns his affection in secret also. Time passes and George Conway makes love to Clara. She considers his proposal of marriage long and seriously and makes entry of it in her diary. About this time Charles is called to America to look after his mining interests. He arrives in time to find himself a pauper as the result of a terrific conflagration that has swept his property. He decides to make a new start, but finds the battle difficult.

Meanwhile, believing Charles indifferent towards her, Clara marries George and is very happy. George receives a letter from Charles, saying that he has about given up the battle in America, and is willing to accept any position that George might offer. Despite the remonstrances of Clara, George invites Charles to come and live with him. His arrival, two weeks later, is fraught with much embarrassment by him and Clara. Living in the same house, they are naturally thrown much together, and soon gossiping tongues spread scandal of the young couple.

For the sake of her own peace of mind, as well as to stop the scandal, Clara beseeches Charles to leave. This he promises to do and takes up lodging in another part of the town. One day a gossiping neighbor calls and deeply wounds Clara by referring to the old love affair. Clara is found in tears by her husband, George, and confesses to him all that she has heard of the despicable gossip. George flies into a towering rage, hurries to his club, where he finds the husband of the woman who offended Clara and challenges him to a duel. In the meantime Clara is panic stricken, and believing that George is about to fight a duel with Charles, rushes to his rooms to notify him.

From the club George goes straight to his old friend Charles to ask him to be second and to borrow his duelling pistols. He reaches Charles' rooms just as the latter secrets Clara behind a curtain. In the conversation that follows, George suddenly spies his wife's pocketbook on a chair. In an instant he seizes one of the dueling pistols, throws the curtain back and fatally shoots his wife. He then rushes from the house in the hope of obtaining evidence to justify himself in the murder. At home he finds Clara's diary, and as the innocence of her relations with Charles is made plain to him through the sacred confidences of the diary, his mind gives way and he falls across the table senseless.

BIOGRAPH.

ALL FOR SCIENCE (Nov. 24).—After all, the young chemist proved himself quite human. He would have ended his life because he had not the money to spend on his desired research for a cancer cure, had not his uncle prevented. The old man became a thief "for science, not personal gain." The young man, however, fell in love with the very girl who was sent to trick him, and thus forgot his original intention.

THE BLUE OR THE GRAY (Nov. 29).—It was Christmas eve in the South, but the spirit of peace and love did not pervade the Northern girl's heart. The gallantry of the young Southern swains, however, was more than manifest, when a drunken band of Unionists entered the house, among them her sweetheart. From him was protection needed most. His rival, a Confederate soldier, showed

"HALLBERG" TALK No. 2

I DESPISE AN IMITATOR,

Don't YOU?

You remember the time when you have been in a Vaudeville Theatre and you have seen some guy come out on the stage imitating some well-known, experienced and prominent actor—you know it made you sick to look at the imitation. Of course, if you have never seen the original, you may think the imitation is all right, but you cannot fool the well informed person.

Just as much as you despise the imitator on the Vaudeville stage, will you despise the imitators of the "HALLBERG" line of ECONOMIZERS, because while they are making something which is intended to do the same work, they haven't been able to produce the same results, and when the order comes from headquarters to the salesman to say it is just as good, etc., this fellow may be able to pull the wool over the eyes of some of you, but everybody won't bite. I just want to tell you right here, as Hoffman said—"HALLBERG is the daddy of them all," referring to current savers.

Why shouldn't you have the real thing instead of the imitation? You know you will pay a few cents more to see the real actor, so you will have to pay a few dollars more to get the real

"HALLBERG" ECONOMIZER

Beware of imitators. There is nothing original in copying what the leader has done. DEAL WITH THE LEADER in the electric current controlling business—I AM THE LEADER—WHO AM I?—"HALLBERG," THE ECONOMIZER MAN.

I sell all makes of machinery, apparatus and supplies, and I can make liberal allowance for your old moving picture machines and current savers in trade for the new modern machines and for the celebrated line of "HALLBERG" ECONOMIZERS, and I particularly call your attention to the "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZERS.

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY.

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 Pages, costs you 25c. by mail

J. H. HALLBERG

"The House of Quality"

36 EAST TWENTY-THIRD STREET NEW YORK

GOLDEN CROSS

NOW READY FOR BOOKING

REPENTANCE AND SORROW ARE THE COST OF INFIDELITY.

PROTEA

A MILE OF FILM WITH A THRILL IN EVERY FOOT

The BLIND SCULPTOR

IN 2 PARTS
BY ECLAIR CO.
PARIS

A STORY OF LOVE AND DEVOTION

WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION

EXECUTIVE OFFICES 110 W. 40TH ST. NEW YORK CITY

—BRANCH OFFICES—

NEW YORK, 110 WEST 40TH STREET
CLEVELAND, 420 COLUMBIA BLDG.
MINNEAPOLIS, 410 TEMPLE COURT
INDIANAPOLIS, WILLOUGHBY BLDG.
KANSAS CITY, 821 GLOYD BLDG.
PITTSBURG, 210—4TH AVENUE.
BUFFALO, WHITE BLDG.

DALLAS, ANDREWS BLDG.

PHILADELPHIA, 1316 VINE STREET
DETROIT, 68 GRISWOLD STREET
BOSTON, 1074 BOYLSTON STREET
CHICAGO, 37 SO. WABASH AVENUE
CINCINNATI, 224½ E. 4TH STREET
ATLANTA, 519 FORSYTH BLDG.
ST. LOUIS, 804 PINE STREET

her that character is far above political principle, and true love came into its own.

A CIRCUMSTANTIAL HERO (Nov. 27).—A champion swimmer? Oh yes, and the ring slipped easily on the diving Venus' finger. He took a rowboat out to the float, however, and refused to do the rescue act. That settled it. The ring came off the finger and went into the sea—a test of courage. As a fisherman, he had magnificent luck, and well, the ring went back on her finger.

THE SOMNAMBULISTS (Nov. 27).—It was bedtime at the flat. Hennessy and Schwartz went out for a nightcap. That was all right, but Mrs. Hennessy was a sleep-walker. So was Von Meyer. There was a fine mix up in sleeping arrangements, believe me, when Hennessy and Schwartz tumbled in for the night. Von Meyer's wife to the rescue prevented disaster.

MELIES.

SHOOTING THE FAMOUS HOZU RAPIDS OF JAPAN (Nov. 20).—A thrilling sport for the tourist in Japan. You are taken to the little town of Hozu where you enter boats of special construction and are shot down rapids swift and treacherous. Only by the most expert handling of the boats by trained natives is disaster avoided. The camera is on one of these boats and the sensation is thrilling.

A LEMON PLANTATION (Nov. 20th).—The cultivation, harvesting and shipping of this common but important article. A picture of extraordinary interest.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S EXCLUSIVE PROGRAM

LUBIN.

THE RETURN OF PETER BLIMM (Wk. Oct. 27).—Captain Blimm and Mate Jim Seep, old sea dogs, are in love with Betsy Barnacle, landlady of the sailors' boarding house. Blimm goes bathing, leaving his clothes on the beach. He meets a chum and they go on a boat. The tide washes his clothes into the sea and Jim finds them and thinks it easy to win the landlady as Blimm is drowned. The lodgers assemble and tell ghost stories, when Blimm returns. The crowd are frightened, but as they exit they peep through the window and see Betsy in the arms of the ghost.

PATHEPLAY.

CONQUERED HATE (Released Week of Dec. 15).—Gina Gioverni, a beautiful and popular opera star, has but two passions, her old blind mother and her art. Scandal has passed her by and heart-free she is happy. Her beauty and talents, however, win for her suitors and admirers whom she does not desire. One of them, an English nobleman, writes and implores her for a hearing, saying that he has left wife and children for her. She answers with a note, telling him to return to the wife to whom he has sworn fidelity. Broken-hearted with his hopeless passion, he kills himself and innocently Gina is involved in the tragedy. Rene Alexandre, a rising young artist, hearing of the suicide and the cause, idly dashes off a cartoon depicting Gina sitting on a tombstone in a cemetery, and with the caption, "Another monument to Gina's beauty." His friends, against his wishes, send the cartoon to a newspaper, which gives it a prominent position in the next issue. The cartoon brings down upon Gina's head a storm of unjust condemnation, and it breaks upon her at the next performance in which she appears. She is hissed and berated, and is carried fainting from the stage. She learns the cause of her sudden unpopularity and determines upon revenge. With her old music teacher, she seeks out Alexandre in a dance hall and is introduced to him as Mlle. Verdant, an artist's model. Struck by her beauty and not recognizing her, he hires her to pose for him. His admiration grows as he comes to know her. As the picture is finished an operatic contract is tendered her which she accepts. She sends tickets for Alexandre for himself and friends for the opening performance, and on her card writes that she regrets she has not previously complimented him for his clever cartoon. The young men go to the performance, prepared to hiss the singer off the stage. Alexandre recognizes her and dumbfounded, prevents the hostile demonstration. Gina's performance wins the frantic applause of the audience, and flushed with success and happiness, she greets later, in her dressing room, Alexandre, now repentant and a tender lover.

KALEM.

THE PADRONE'S PLOT (Released Week of Dec. 1—2 parts).—Tony Vallenci, just over from Italy, is offered a job by Pietro Valli, an unscrupulous padrone. Ignorant of American money, Tony signs a contract calling for a wage of sixty cents a day. He goes to work in a quarry owned by Dodge. The following day Tony is knocked down by an auto containing Mrs. Dodge. He is uninjured, but the kind lady takes him to his home. Tony finds that all of his pay goes for food and rent. He appeals to the padrone, who laughs at him. Tony discovers Dodge attempting to make love to Maria, his wife. He beats the man off. Members of a bomb organization urge Tony to join their society for revenge. During his absence Maria is taken to the hospital. When he returns, Rosa, his little daughter, tells him a "bad mans" took her mother away. Believing it to have been Dodge, Tony joins the bomb throwers.

Rosa wanders away and meets Helen, Dodge's daughter. The two are "losted." They are found by Mrs. Dodge, who takes them to her home. Her husband repents of his conduct towards Maria and takes Rosa to see her mother. Valli overhears the bomb-throwers plot to blow up the Dodge home. He 'phones the police. Tony is about to plant the bomb when he sees Mrs. Dodge in the house. He cannot injure his kind friend, and declines to carry out the plan. The gang sets upon him. The bomb throwers see Dodge approaching with Helen. They attempt to kidnap the girl. Tony goes to his employer's rescue. Pietro finds Tony's coat and the bomb. To get the laborer into trouble the padrone is about to place them in the Dodge home when arrested by the police. The latter then go to the aid of Tony, who is battling with the gang. And in the gratitude of his employer, Tony sees a brighter future dawning.

VITAGRAPH.

THE BLUE ROSE (2 parts).—After toiling for a lifetime to perfect a species of Blue Rose, Matthew Keith, a poor, aged florist, at last achieves his species and looks forward with joyous anticipation to displaying it at the big annual Spring Flower Show. Herman Von Veldt, a rich rival florist, hears of the wonderful flower and exclaimed that he would give a thousand dollars to get possession of it. His son, Carl, overhears the exclamation and offers to secure the Blue Rose. Carl is fond of high life and needs money to pay debts. Disguised as an old photographer, Carl goes to Keith's green-house. He meets Agnes, the florist's attractive daughter, who, with pride, shows him the beautiful flower. She is called away for an instant, and Carl cuts off a shoot of the rose-bush and sprays the rose with a blighting acid. Von Veldt is delighted. The shrewd florist takes the cutting into one of his green-houses, where he plants it and gives stern instructions regarding its cultivation. Old Keith is horror-stricken. His health becomes shattered from grieving over his loss and months later, when the sweet spring days are at hand, he lies ill in bed looking forlornly at his flowerless rosebud. The stolen cutting develops into a sturdy plant and a small bud comes out upon one of its branches. Von Veldt, now sure of his success, telephones to the newspapers about the Blue Rose, which he is going to show at the Spring exhibit. Agnes, the old florist's daughter, sees the article and decides to investigate. She obtains employment in Von Veldt's flower shop. She and Carl do not recognize each other.

Carl and Agnes fall in love. Through him she gets to see the Blue Rose, a great privilege, contrary to Von Veldt's strict orders. While Agnes looks with wondering eyes at the rose, now full-grown, Carl jokingly tells her how he secured it. White with indignation, she turns and says passionately, "I am the girl you tricked, you thief!" Carl is grief-stricken. Agnes rushes off to Von Veldt and begs for the return of the Blue Rose to her stricken father. Carl backs her up by threatening to reveal the theft. The wealthy florist is determined to keep the plant. On the day of the exhibition, Keith at last discovers a new bud on his rosebush. Agnes shares his joy. At the last minute the old florist plans to exhibit the new blossom. When Keith arrives at the great flower exhibit where over five hundred thousand blossoming plants of all kinds adorn a luxurious Eden of beauty, he recognizes the Blue Rose and claims it as his own. Von Veldt calls him an impostor. Several frock-coated officials push their way through the crowd and see Keith tear the wrapping from the parent plant, revealing the new bud, proving that it has blossomed twice. Keith receives the reward of a life's ambition when he accepts a check for five thousand dollars, a well-merited prize. The second award is realized when, as the old florist looks proudly at his Blue Rose, Agnes and Carl steal a loving kiss.

BIG BOB WAITS.—Desiring to seek a fortune, young Joe Woods leaves his mother and father and goes West. Twenty years later he comes across his mother's picture. It stirs up fond memories and he writes home for the first time. The old folks are overjoyed at hearing from him and reply, begging him to come home. When Joe, better known as "Yellow Joe," gets the letter, he decides to comply with its entreaty, for he is eager to see his parents. On his way home he sits in a faro game at the saloon, and he lays the letter from his old folks on the table with his money.

A quarrel arises and Joe is shot and killed by Faro Frank, the gambler. Frank makes a "get-away," taking with him the money on the table and Joe's letter. "Big Bob," the sheriff, with a posse chase Frank, but he eludes them and escapes into the hills. When safe in the mountains, Frank counts the money he has taken and reads Joe's letter. He is so touched by the contents of the letter hat when he thinks of the poor old father and mother home waiting for their son, that he decides to go East and impersonate Joe. He goes to a nearby town and has a costumer make him up as "Yellow Joe."

He wires the old folks that he is coming home. When he arrives at the little New England cottage, the two old people receive him as their son and show him every mark of their affection. Frank resolves to be a good son to them and to make them as happy as he can. Some time later, the costumer finds an old newspaper with the account of the killing of "Yellow Joe" by Faro Frank and writes to "Big Bob," the sheriff, that he believes he has found the criminal. "Big Bob" goes East to get Frank. He is warmly greeted by the old people when he arrives, Frank being away at the time, and is given a hearty greeting as a "friend of the boy's." They tell him of the boy's goodness to them and of their love for him. Realizing that a revelation of the truth might kill the white-haired couple, Bob decides not to wait for Faro's return. He goes back West. When he arrives at his little Western sheriff's office, he writes a letter to the Sheriff in the East, enclosing a warrant for the arrest of Faro Frank on the death of the old people. Then "Big Bob" sits back in his chair puffing contentedly at his pipe, and waits.

ESSANAY.

GID-AP, NAPOLEON.—Napoleon is an old raw-boned horse. Mr. Hayden, his owner, wants to get rid of him. An insurmountable obstacle presents itself in the form of Ruth, Mr. Hayden's only child. Ruth has grown to young ladyhood, but since she was a baby she and Napoleon have been inseparable chums.

Mr. Hayden decides to get ahead of his daughter. He sends her and her mother away on a visit, planning to sell Napoleon during her absence. All works fine and the old horse changes hands many times before Ruth returns home. Her first thought is to go to the stable. When she arrives there and he can't be found, she is heart-sick and disappointed to such a degree that she faints and becomes very ill. The doctor says she will not get well unless the old horse is returned to her. The father employs detectives and spends loads of money trying to locate old Napoleon, but everybody who has bought the plug has found him useless and has passed him on to somebody else.

The search has proven fruitless for Mr. Hayden. One afternoon he and his wife are invited by some friends to take an automobile ride into the country. Ruth flatly refuses to accompany them. All goes well with the automobile ride until they are way out of town; the machine is stranded. A farmer drives up with old Napoleon hitched to a wagon—he stops and asks if he can be of any assistance. The automobile party gave him the laugh, but the farmer says his horse is better than any machine that was ever put on wheels. They gave him permission to try to get them back to town. He hitches Napoleon to the automobile and the old plug, faithful as in his younger days, does his best and in due time the automobile is pulled to town.

Ruth is on the porch grieving when she spies the strange procession coming up the street. She instantly recognizes Napoleon and running down the steps, she throws her arms about his neck. When her parents realize the situation, old Napoleon changes hands again and is bought and replaced in the stable, to the delight and happiness of Ruth, who speedily regains her health.

FROM OUT THE DIARY.—Mr. and Mrs. Vernon are apparently a happy married couple. The wife is most affectionate and demonstrative; her husband tires of her simple and unquestionable manner of letting him know that she worships him and he leaves the house in disgust. Mr. Vernon encounters some various types of women who appeal to him strongly, each in her own particular way. He is in the habit of taking his diary with him and jotting down the impressions that the events of the day make on him. This day he makes mentions of the way the women of the world, the stenographer, the athletic girl and the suffragette affect him, and upon returning home, he accidentally leaves his diary where the wife will find it. When Mrs. Vernon reads of the different women she becomes jealous—then a plan formulates itself in her mind. She decides to give him a trial—intending to impersonate each of the types until he is heartily sick of them all.

So successfully does she accomplish each character mentioned in his diary that hubby becomes more and more disgusted, and when at last she shows him how a suffragette can act, he collapses and begs her to be her own sweet self again.

THE BARTER OF LOUISA.—Louisa, daughter of the Italian tenement, loves Tony, a fascinating young bootblack. This love inspires the jealousy of Giovani, an Italian landlord. Repulsed in his suit, Giovani makes Louisa's father an offer of a sum of money for the hand of his daughter. In spite of the fact that her father has already promised her to Tony, in a drunken stupor accepts Giovani's offer. Learning of this, Louisa, in a fit of hysteria at the idea of being sold like a sheep, turns furiously upon her father and the landlord. After an intensely dramatic scene, she leaves the house, running to the arms of her lover, Tony. She is pursued by Giovani and her drunken father. In front of Tony's bootblack stand they overtake her. At this point, officer O'Hara, one of Giovani's tenants, and a friend of Tony's, enters upon the scene. Giovani, having made himself obnoxious to O'Hara by putting on airs of superiority, offers

HUGH HOFFMAN

THE MINISTER'S TALK

THE WONDERFUL POSSIBILITIES OF THE CINEMATOGRAPH, NOT ONLY AS A SOURCE OF INTEREST AND AMUSEMENT, BUT EVEN MORE FOR ITS EDUCATIONAL VALUE, CAN NOT BE OVERESTIMATED. WE WHO HAVE THE MORAL WELFARE OF YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES IN OUR KEEPING ARE BEGINNING TO LOOK UPON IT WITH FAVOR, BUT WE MUST FIRST BE PROVIDED WITH THE PROPER PICTURES FOR THE WORK WE ARE IN.

PAUL RAINEY'S AFRICAN HUNT

THE BUSINESS TALK

ANY PICTURE WHOSE APPEAL IS UNIVERSAL IS ONE THAT WILL EARN MONEY IN THE SAME RATIO—WE CAN NOT BEGIN TO TELL YOU ALL THE UNBUYABLE PRAISE THIS PICTURE HAS HAD FROM THE PRESS, CLERGY AND SCHOOLS. BUT WE CAN TELL YOU OF THE ENORMOUS SUMS IT HAS EARNED, AND 95% OF THE PUBLIC HAS NOT YET SEEN IT. AS A STATE RIGHT PROPOSITION IT WILL BE IMMENSE. STATES GOING FAST—BID QUICKLY.

JUNGLE FILM CO.
1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

him a bribe of rent free for a year if he will not interfere between him and his efforts to obtain the girl. In spite of this fact, O'Hara sends Tony and Louisa off to be married, while he holds the two furious Italians. Tony and Louisa go to the priest and are married forthwith. During the ceremony, O'Hara has his hands full sitting on the two Italians and preventing their interference with the marriage. The marriage over, Tony and a number of his friends, his sweetheart much bedecked with a lace curtain for a wedding veil and some cheap flowers purchased from the priest, are having a grand procession. They come upon the perspiring O'Hara, who is now assisted by two other policemen, all off duty. Indignant at the implied bribe, O'Hara asks Tony what he had better do with the two culprits. In a fit of genius, Tony, who knows the humiliation of shining shoes day in and day out, suggests that the policeman make the Italians shine their shoes. This they do, to the amusement of the entire wedding party, who parade joyously off to Tony's home, where they leave him with his happy little bride.

TOLDS BY THE CARDS—A girl with four sweethearts, all desirous of marrying her, is in doubt of their natures. Dreading to step blindly into matrimony and recalling the name of a fortune teller of whom she has heard many wonderful things, she makes a visit to the clairvoyant. She is given, after the seance, a pack of cards in which her fortune has been told, and requested to place them beneath her pillow that night, with the explanation that the cards will tell her in a dream, what her married life with each of them would be. She complies willingly, and result that the dream cards bring is as follows.

The Jack of Clubs appears to her. Through the face of the card she sees herself married to the man whom the card represents, called "The Jack of Clubs." The dream tells her that he at heart is a brute, the dream changes.

Life with the Jack of Diamonds appears to her. He, she finds, has an extraordinary passion for liquor. So much for the Jack of Diamonds.

Next—The Jack of Spades. He is a beast—untrue—cruel—truly "A Jack of Spades."

Lastly comes the fourth—"The Jack of Hearts." She sees herself the simple little housewife, living happily with the man of her heart, kind, generous, and a true lover.

She awakens and determines to test her dream. Calling the four men together that afternoon, she points to the four Jacks of the deck, which she has placed face downward upon the table and orders that each choose a card. To her surprise and awe, each man picks the card that fitted him in the dream, showing that the message must have had some psychological reason. She explains her dream to them and much to the mortification of the other three Jacks, accepts the Jack of Hearts.

SELIG.

THE LOVE OF PENELOPE (Released Week of Oct. 13).—Penelope Blair suffers an accident which, to all appearances, leaves her lame for life. In addition to this trial her sweetheart, Rollin Abbott, comes to break off his engagement with her, considering the unfortunate predicament of Penelope. In the neighboring place, beyond the garden wall of the quiet country place where Penelope in her invalid chair lounges away the lazy afternoons in solitude, comes one day Henry Brent, a bachelor of middle age who imagines that life holds nothing for him. He sits himself down in the shade and wraps himself in the selfish smoke of his own fragrant cigar. Happily he has a singularly intelligent dog that enterprisingly invades Penelope's garden. As a caprice to amuse herself, and break loneliness, she tucks a quaint little note in the dog's collar. When the animal eventually returns to its master, he picks up the note he sees in the collar and curiously reads it. Then he becomes interested and looks over the wall and finally introduces himself. From that time forward his interest grows apace and finally ripens into love.

The clear air and the open life of the country restores Penelope's beauty, while exercise brings back her health. One day a horse and strange rider dash by her up a country lane when the saddle turns and the rider is dragged by the stirrup—Penelope, forgetting her own weakness, runs to see if she can be of assistance and is astonished to recognize her former sweetheart. He is now an invalid and convalescent some weeks later having remained at the farm as the guest of Penelope's aunt. He once again picks up the sentimental thread, sounds the music of the old refrain, and proposes once again. While deeply resenting the injury already done her she reluctantly half consents. At this very moment she hears a low moan and turning, discovers Brent, the faithful bachelor who has come pleasantly into her life, has overheard all and is heartbroken by the shattering of his own hopes as he attempts to steal away unobserved. This brings her to a realizing better sense that she is herself mistaken and she proceeds to correct herself before the astonished and discomfitted Rollin can push his suit, or seal it with a kiss. She tells the man who once repudiated her, that she can never be his. She rushes after Brent and finds him bowed with grief. She touches him; he unbends, the understanding between them needs no mere words for its definition.

BIG JIM OF THE SIERRAS (Released Week of Oct. 24).—Big Jim scrawls on a piece of birch-bark: "There aint no law in those mountings but Big Jim, that's me. Git! Last call. Big Jim." He tacks this to a blasted pine with a big thorn and it attracts, the following morning, the attention of the curious mountaineers that pass down the winding road, and they read it with significant grins. Among others who come that way, is Travers, a Secret Service Man, who has been sent to that locality for the purpose of discovering and arresting the individual who is avoiding revenue tax. Unfortunately, the sympathy of the inhabitants is largely with the whiskey runners.

Jean is a mountain girl beloved by Big Jim, who has attracted the attention and admiration of Travers. However, his stern sense of duty does not allow him to falter for sentiment. "The Mountain Telegraph" is a quick working institution, so that expressions pass around about as quickly as if they were put through "via wireless." Jean visits Jim in his secluded cabin, and tells him relative to his ukase: "He didn't scare worth a cent, Jim," which means that Travers is not going to "git" out of the mountains and will remain relentlessly on the job.

The scene flashes again to the open, showing Big Jim a human sandwich between two demijohns, and Travers, like a panther, on his track. Jim, however, can shoot some, and he "lays" for the revenuer, and after drawing his fire, knocks him insensible. He binds his victim to a tree, overhanging a canon, and then begins severing the rope bonds with the bullets from his deadly gun. Jean is attracted to the place by the noise, intervenes, and saves Travers as he is about to be dashed in the depths below. So obligations and honors are even and all is well.

IN THE MIDST OF THE JUNGLE (Released Week of Oct. 20).—Col. Jackson, a sportive old Englishman, has cleared a large farm in the region of Fort Congo. He has two daughters, Alice, who inherits the hardihood of her father, the other, one of more gentle mein, Ethel; and his stalwart son, Jack. The colonel receives a letter from his old friend Jodgson in Zanzibar, who asks him to come to Mombasa and equip for a big hunt. He starts at once. The succeeding scene shows Jackson, his daughters and his followers, in the saddle, preceded by the beaters. In the morning one of their camels is missing; a search party is organized and they find that the animal has been killed by lions. The colonel indicates that he would be mightily pleased to capture the animal in a net. They set a net and bait the trap with the remains of the camel. The girls start out for the neighborhood of the trap; in their meanderings miss their father and the hunting party, but find a big lion roaring and rampant in the net. This so terrifies their horses that they run away. Alice is swept from her horse's back by an overhanging limb and is so severely injured that she cannot walk.

When Alice regains consciousness she crawls away from the enraged lion to hide herself in the jungle, so that when the rescuing party come upon the scene, they find neither the girl nor the lion. From the signs of the struggle they conclude that the lion has killed and eaten the unfortunate young woman, and begin to scour the country, following the track of the lion. The injured young woman is given up for lost and the hunting party, after many searches, sadly return to their home. Her hold on life is strong, but her injuries have resulted in a brain clot. She regains her strength, but has lost all memory. She dominates the wild fierce kingdom of the forest like a queen, with leopards as her guardians. And so, while her friends and relatives go back to their domicile, mourning her as dead, she lives on, a strange recluse in the savage depths of the jungle.

Two years have presumably intervened since the death or disappearance of Lady Alice when one night her father has a dream in which he sees the daughter he had given up for dead, as the habitant of a rude hut in the jungle. It is so vivid and strong that he impetuously orders his entourage to [illegible] for a work of rescue. In the lone thatched hut in the wilds of the forest, is discovered Lady Alice with her pet leopards. Her strange wild [illegible] and she seems immune to the manifold terrors all about her. Now comes a new and more desperate danger. She is trailed by hungry lions. She rushes into her hut, throws her weight against the door, reaches for the heavy wooden bar, but it is too far away. The lions are jumping against the frail door, roaring in rage and clawing at the wood and thatch. She leans heavily against the thin woodwork, bending under the terrible leaps and clawing of the maddened beasts. She is faint, well nigh exhausted and is sinking on the floor so that the door bends above her, when there is a sound of a shot. The body of a great beast falls crashing through the frail door and others run away from the fusillade of bullets that come from the rescuing party led by the colonel, for they have discovered the hut in the wilderness and its heroic tenant just in time. The shock of it all restores to reason this woman of the wilderness. She recognizes the father, who sees again his fondest hope and realizes in truth that his dream has indeed come true.

BETWEEN THE RIFLE SIGHTS (Released Week of Nov. 3).—Bob, an honest country lad, falls in love with Annie, the daughter of the richest man in that little village. All goes well until Ralph Gunter comes to town. He poses as a gentleman, but has the unenviable handicap of a criminal record. He wins the unsophisticated Annie without much effort, and she turns down Bob without a struggle, dazzled by the grand air of the new man from the big town. The latter has hardly set his matrimonial line before he receives a letter from a former pal in crime threatening him with exposure unless he "comes through" for $500.00. In desperation to hold what he already has and the effort to get more, he contemplates the plan of robbing old Sharp, Annie's father, on the night of the day he collects his rents.

Sharp is a miserly old man and secretes his money about his house, instead of trusting it to a bank. Bob discovers Ralph trying to break into the house and in the encounter that follows Bob is downed and Ralph escapes. The former is taken for the would-be robber and is next sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. On his release, he vows to kill Ralph, who married Annie the day he was sentenced. Ralph, a sick and broken man, goes to the mountains to try and recover his health, accompanied by his daughter, who strongly resembles her dead mother. Ralph, now prematurely old, has been out of confinement long enough to wear off the prison pallor, and is a dead shot now, well healed for vengeance. As the pair come driving up the mountain trail, Bob keeps Ralph covered with a rifle from his ambush. Just as he is about to press the trigger and send the bullet home, he sees reflected in the face of the girl, the memory of her mother, whom he loved in the lonely years that have gone. A flood of remembrances overcome him, his gun, the instrument of vengeance, drops from his nerveless fingers and he allows his long, bitterly cherished plan to pass.

THE TIDE OF DESTINY (Released Week of Nov. 3).—Frank Stafford, gifted but poor, has been the friend of Hazel White since childhood, and this esteem of years has ripened into love. The young woman has everything that wealth can furnish and her parents, newly rich, have great social aspirations. Stafford expects to make authorship his vocation and is relying hopefully on the acceptance of the manuscript of a novel he has submitted to a publisher. Hazel White's mother, who is a snob by nature, has selected a wealthy club man, Ferguson, as a likely match for her daughter. Thereupon the parents connive to make Hazel break with the poor but beloved Stafford. On the same evening which the importunate Ferguson calls, urging an answer from Hazel, Stafford has his manuscript returned. Hazel's mother is furious over her rejection of Ferguson, and makes the girl's life miserable. In her despair over the intolerable situation, she writes to Stafford that he must take her away and marry her at once, or she must yield to the parental pressure. Stafford has a terrible struggle between love and duty; he has no income for her support, and would have to deny her all the things to which she was accustomed, and her consequent unhappiness would make both their lives miserable. He steels himself and denies her call—so they part reluctantly.

The triumph of Hazel's mother is complete, when the daughter marries Ferguson, whom she loathes. While their wedding-bells are ringing, Stafford receives word from a big publishing house that the second manuscript he submitted has made a pronounced hit—his future seems firmly assured. The bitterness of the blow makes a recluse of him and he enters into a hermit-like life on a wild sea coast, devoting his energies exclusively to literary work, making a reputation on a par with its phenomenal promise.

Hazel's married life was far from happy; but now, as a widow, her sole joy in life is a five-year-old daughter. Through some curious stroke of fate, she unwittingly happens to lodge for the summer by the sea, in the vicinity of Frank Stafford's retreat. Her little girl, left in charge of a careless maid, drifts out to sea on a flowing tide in an open boat. When the maid awakens she finds her charge gone; she rushes to the hotel and informs the mother, who rushes out frantic with fear. Frank Stafford, who has been writing on a pinnacle of rock, observes the boat drifting out with the tide, and the child now awake despairingly rocking the frail craft. He throws off his coat and shoes and dives from the cliff. He swims out and rescues the child just as the boat capsizes. He takes the little one to his own lonely home. The child soon recovers and is vastly interested in the strange surroundings.

In the interim the mother discovers the overturned, drifting boat, and is almost distraught. Frank finally starts out to the resort, leading the little girl. The mother has escaped her restraining friends and is about to throw herself over the cliff, when she meets Stafford and the child. All of her incentive to live has been restored to her, and their own joy comes to crown it and make it complete, with that love seemed lost in the dead, long ago.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE

Moving Picture World

PER $3 YEAR

DEPENDABLE FEATURE SERVICE

True Features

ARE the best program builders. Everybody in the industry to-day knows that the good

THREE REEL FEATURE

is the backbone of every successful moving picture house. Producers to-day fail or succeed in proportion to their ability of meeting the demand for a regular and high quality output of three reel features.

We have this kind of features. We insure the success of the exhibitor.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| The Cyclist's Last Lap . . . | 3 | Reels |
| Hole in the Wall . . . . . . | 3 | **“ |
| Death, the Conqueror . . . | 3 | **“ |
| The Twisted Ear . . . . . . | 3 | **“ |
| The Heart of the Hunchback . | 3 | **“ |

TWO GOOD ONES EVERY WEEK
TWO GOOD ONES EVERY WEEK
TWO GOOD ONES EVERY WEEK

We prefer to sell on state right plan but will book directly to exhibitors through local agents if conditions suit.

THE TRUE FEATURE CO.

110-112 West 40th Street World's Tower Building New York City
Telephone Bryant 578

SOLE AMERICAN AGENTS FOR THE CONTINENTAL ART FILM SOCIETY

GET ON OUR MAILING LIST

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

CRYSTAL.

HUBBY'S NEW COAT (Nov. 25).—Mrs. Joyful, dissatisfied with her husband's appearance, buys him a new coat. Hubby wanders forth proud. A tramp visits the house and asks for work. Mrs. Joyful gives him her husband's old coat for sweeping off the sidewalk, unaware that it contains her husband's pocket book. When the goods that hubby buys arrives C. O. D., he is unable to pay for them. There is gloom in the household. Later, Mrs. Joyful receives a letter enclosing the amount of money contained in the coat she gave away, stating that it was sufficient to give the tramp a new start in life.

BALDY BELMONT LANDS A SOCIETY JOB (Nov. 25).—Baldy is a hod carrier. Dick is in love with Vivian. Mother objects to him strenuously. Dick needs Baldy and plans a joke on the old lady. He writes to the girl that a rich uncle visiting in the city, wishes to meet her. With Baldy dressed in swell clothes accompanying him, Dick calls later. Baldy, posing as a millionaire, makes a deep impression on the old lady, and Dick is restored to favor. Of course Baldy makes all sorts of foolish mistakes, but they are forgiven and he is asked to call again. The next day the old lady discovers Baldy working at his job. She is furious and goes to confront Dick. He sees her coming and beats a hasty retreat. Baldy rests content that he has been in high society for at least one day.

THE CONVICT'S DAUGHTER (Nov. 30).—Roger Phillips holds David Bentley's notes and he refuses Bentley's request to extend payment on them. An argument ensues, overheard by Phillips' family. Bentley makes threats. A burglar enters, and in the struggle fires a shot that kills Phillips. He escapes. Bentley is accused, placed upon trial and sentenced to life imprisonment. His daughter, Pearl, is sent to a convent. Years later, Bentley makes his escape and seeks shelter in the convent where Pearl is, and induces a nun to protect him. When the guards question her she denies having seen the escaping man. Later, Bentley secures work and lives straight.

Roger Phillips' son, now grown, by chance meets Pearl and their friendship soon ripens into love. He writes his mother to visit him and meet the girl. In the meantime, Bentley never suspects that his daughter's fiancé is the son of the man he was accused of killing. Mrs. Phillips arrives, faces Bentley, accuses him, and insists upon his arrest. Things look black for the man when the nun enters with a signed confession from the burglar. Dying, he had made it previously in her presence. Mrs. Phillips, regretting the wrong done an innocent man, consents to the marriage of their children.

IMP.

JANE'S BROTHER, THE PARANOIAC (Nov. 24).—Through continual reading of historical novels, John Marsden loses his reason, and is obsessed by the idea that he should execute Oliver Cromwell. He is taken to the State Asylum. His sister, Jane, and mother move to a house in the immediate vicinity. Jane is soon courted by a rough mountaineer, who, when she refuses him, grows jealous. Professor Thorne, searching in the neighborhood for butterflys, rescues Jane from being attacked by Welsh. He swears vengeance. Later, Jane prevents Welsh from stabbing Thorne, and their friendship grows.

Jane's brother escapes from the asylum, secures an axe and goes in search of Oliver Cromwell. He is met by the mountaineer, who, knowing his weakness, hits upon a diabolical scheme to get even. He tells the father that Thorne is the man he is after. The professor is captured and bound to a tree, the old man telling him the while that he is to be executed. Welsh, fearful at the extent of his crime, tries to dissuade him. Jane, scouring the woods from the top of a tree, sees the terrible position her lover is in. She shoots the axe out of her father's hand. Guards arrive in time to prevent further trouble. Jane tells Thorne that her father is insane and Welsh escapes through the woods. Later, the professor takes Jane to his arms, caring little for her father's trouble.

NIGHT SHADOWS OF NEW YORK (3 parts—Nov. 27).—We are introduced to Nell as the sweetheart of Dago Mike, the leader of a gang of New York Apaches. She secures employment as a maid, reconnoitres the premises, and then notifies her lover and his men. In trying to cover their tracks after the robbery, she is apprehended and sent to prison. Months pass. She comes out from behind the bars to find Mike's interest centered upon another woman. Joe Gilbert, an East Side thug, who has always been attracted to the girl, attempts to protect her against the injustices of Dago Mike.

A series of bold robberies annoy the commissioner of police. Gilbert learns that the Dago's gang is responsible for them, and he informs Nell of such, urging her to squeal on Mike as a means of revenge. He is successful in this. The police raid the house and Dago Mike makes his getaway. Nell goes to the other woman and tells her that she is through with the life of the underworld. Nell is accused of treachery. Dago Mike comes on the scene, takes in the situation and separates the two women as they fight. His sweetheart tells him that Nell was the one who squealed. Mike draws his revolver and shoots Nell down. He is arrested and sentenced to twenty years. Nell comes out of the hospital, sick of her former associations and mode of life. The last we see of her she is a salvation army lass preaching the gospel of clean life among the lower classes of New York.

BISON.

THE WHITE VACQUERO (2 parts—Nov. 25).—Dolores first comes in contact with the bandit, when, accompanied by her father and other coach passengers, she is held up and robbed. The consideration which she receives at the hands of the man captivates her romantic spirit. The captain of the attachment of soldiers which are sent after the vacquero is in love with the girl and makes the boast that he will return his man.

The following day, in a spirit of mischief, the vacquero kidnaps Dolores and takes her to his mountain rendezvous. She repulses him and he taunts her. In a moment of carelessness, however, he leaves an opening and she snatches his revolver. Her supremacy is short-lived, for one of his men throws a rifle to him. Later the bandit, fearing that harm will come to the beautiful girl through his own men, allows her to escape. She rides the vacquero's horse to safety and thus refuses to reveal his hiding place. The soldiers discover his whereabouts through following his horse, which they turn loose. The unsuccessful efforts they make to capture the outlaw and his men are both realistic and thrilling.

The vacquero makes his escape and rides to the home of the girl, which is being attacked by Indians. He finds his way through their lines and dies beside the girl, fighting for her safety. The romance of Dolore's life fades away as the vacquero is carried to an honorable burial by the men who realized that their victory was largely due to him.

THE WAR OF THE CATTLE RANGE (2 parts—Nov. 29).—The opening of the drama establishes the hatred of Bainbridge, the range boss, for Clifford, a cowboy. Clifford has defeated the boss in all contests of wits and strength. Ruth Ann Baldwin is the author of the script and Henry McRae is the director. With the capable Bison cast and the wealth of natural scenery that is at hand out in California, where this picture was made, and the virile story which is told, assures this Bison feature a great success.

When the new school teacher arrives from the East, a contest for her favor begins between Clifford and the boss. Then begins the delightfully amusing incidents which initiates the school teacher to Western ideas and conditions. In this Clifford is also a victor. Paul, the teacher's brother, arrives from the East and falls in love with Mercia, the ranch owner's daughter. Bainbridge encourages Paul in gambling, loans him large sums of money, and then forces him to join his gang of cattle rustlers. Paul repents, however, and exposes the operations of the gang.

The cowboys, lead by Clifford, attack Bainbridge and his men in a saloon. They escape while Paul and Clifford are wounded. Bainbridge sends the members of his gang across the border, while he remains behind, with the intention of being avenged upon Clifford. He goes to the ranch house and takes a hot shot at the wounded man. He misses and Clifford shoots him dead. Clifford wins the school teacher.

VICTOR.

BACK TO LIFE (2 parts—Nov. 24).—The gambler brings his sick wife to the mountains. The doctor has informed him that she will need special care, and he, with rich, red blood in his veins, is disgusted with life and her in particular. At the local saloon he finds comfort in the smile of one of the female habituals. Jim is jostled and insulted by the cowboys until, maddened, he draws his gun and fires. The posse pursue him, but he escapes to the mountains. In the meantime, the wife has discovered her husband's infidelity, and leaving a note she goes into the hills with the avowed purpose of dying. At the stream she finds Jim, weak from the loss of blood. She nurses him and he, in turn, takes her to an old couple in the hills, where she rapidly regains her health. Jim commences to realize the meaning of manhood. Time goes on, the wife feels now that she can regain the love of her husband and starts for the mining camp. On the road her husband staggers to her feet and dies, having been shot after a saloon brawl.

She goes on, meets Jim, and together they face the future.

UNTO THE THIRD GENERATION (2 parts—Nov. 28).—The girl loved her home and she meant to abide by what her parents said. Her intentions might have been realized but for that irresistible force, fate, which brought her to the man. He was a young doctor; he had ideals and he worked in the congested East Side. It was a week after the meeting that she went to call on her grandfather and met the young doctor again. A card which he had given her grandfather, she took home. Later, she, with the maid, visited him at his office and she consented that he should call upon her. The girl's father is the owner of a large manufacturing house and he desired his daughter to marry a business man of his own kind, Mr. Goldberg, a large buyer. Though the man is invited to the house and given opportunities to associate with the girl, he fails to make an impression. Of an evening the doctor called, but her father and mother show their dislike for him. Grandfather, the rabbi, calls and openly shows his feelings, so the doctor leaves. Later, with the consent of the rabbi, the wedding agreement is drawn up with the Jewish salesman without regard of the girl. She has her heart set on the doctor, and she meets him in the street and the park. When the wedding is about to be celebrated, an elopement is arranged, at the urgings of the girl. The rabbi interferes, and after reading the law to the girl, is successful in returning her to her home. However, the wedding with the salesman is called off after he is discovered flirting with one of the girls, and the doctor continues his labors among the poor. This is carefully watched by the rabbi, and after many nights spent in prayer and thought, he goes to the doctor's office, takes him to the girl's home and gives his blessings.

NESTOR.

HILDA OF THE MOUNTAINS (Nov. 26).—Ben Darwin had been a widower since Hilda's birth. Ribbons or anything that suggested finery to the old man was most sternly forbidden his daughter. Darwin was troubled over Hilda's friendship for Frank Boardman, a stranger in the place. It is in her nook in the mountains that Hilda finds Frank's note asking her to meet him the next day. Before the old man can be pursuaded to give his consent, the elder Boardman arrives, and learning that his son is on the verge of marrying the mountaineer's daughter, he showed Darwin a letter in which Frank declared he didn't love, and had no intention of marrying "the girl in question." "The girl in question' is Miss Grace Elkins, and although Mr. Boardman knew this, he silenced his conscience with the "all's fair in love" adage. White with rage, old Darwin insisted that his daughter at once make preparations to visit her aunt. Frank learns of their departure and hastens to head them off. Sending the astonished father up the road at the point of his gun, Frank jumped into the buggy beside Hilda and dashed off to the minister's. The deception is later acknowledged by Frank's father and all ends happily.

WHEN HE LOST TO WIN (Nov. 28).—Ramona and mamma arrive at the seashore hotel. So does Eddie, who proceeds to fall in love with the girl. Eddie makes a wager with his friends that he will win her friendship without an introduction. Eddie ogles, ut is snubbed, and then snubbed again. Friends have considerable fun at Eddie's expense. Eddie secures from one of his girl friends a dress, and donning this and a wig he has little troule in making the acquaintance of Ramona, who is glad to have a girl companion. Later, in the hotel, the girl discovers the deception and decides that two can play at the same game. She dresses as a boy. Eddie, thinking it a good joke to be mistaken for a girl, consents to go for a walk with the nice looking fellow. Ramona pulls the wig from Eddie's head and chases him into the lobby of the hotel. After a shower of ridicule the boy pays up his bet. Eddie tries to apologize to Ramona, but she ignores him. Eventually, however, they make it up and everything points to a pretty romance.

POWERS.

JIMMY'S DECEPTION (Nov. 24).—Jimmy is a fine whistler. Mother says to father, "Isn't it just a shame for that boy to waste his wonderful musical talent? We must have him take music lessons." The fond parents arrange for violin lessons with a professor, and send Jimmy off with the instrument and a note of introduction.

Unfortunately, Jimmy's mother does not seem to understand the boy's responsibility and social position. Jimmy is the star pitcher for his team, and the great game with the White Sox, his deadliest rivals, is coming off the day of his first lesson. In honor to his team, he cannot desert it in this crisis, so he sends Vincent, a playmate, to the professor with the violin and letter of introduction. Vincent takes lessons for Jimmy by proxy.

Jimmy's father is the first to discover the imposition. On one condition only he promises that he will not give Jimmy away, and that is, that he be allowed to play himself, for the fact is, he would rather see his son making a home run than playing a high-brow sonata on the violin.

However, the unfortunate time arrives when the friends of Jimmy's mother are invited to hear the prodigal play. Life is a sad matter anyway—taking it all around.

ALWAYS A HEADLINER

RAMO

KING OF ALL FEATURES

Leaders in American PHOTO PLAY Productions

Fascinating Pictorial Publicity; One, Three and Six Sheets

The WORKER
THREE REELS

CARDS
THREE REELS

The CURRENT
THREE REELS

CUTS -:- SLIDES -:- HERALDS -:- PHOTOS, 8" x 10"

"Two More GREATER Than Ever"

WIVES

IN THREE PARTS

The FANGS of HATE

IN THREE REELS

RAMO FILMS, Inc., Sales Offices, Columbia Theatre Bldg., New York

A SEASIDE SAMARITAN (Nov. 28).—Edward Brady and Iva Seward, society crooks, steal $10,000 worth of jewelry. Realizing the detectives [illegible] they decide to [illegible] New York [illegible] Edwin [illegible] Iva. He [illegible] Brady [illegible] Iva [illegible] After [illegible] Iva [illegible]. He then goes to Brady and receives a promise from him that [illegible] Iva and lead a better life. Iva and Brady leave the little fishing village together. Edwin remains, heart-broken at losing Iva's love, but content in the knowledge that he has saved two lives [illegible].

JOKER.

JAKE AND MIKE GO FISHING (Nov. 26).—Dr. [illegible] starts out to deliver some artificial limbs. He distributes them all with the exception of two. Coming to the stream he decides to fish for awhile, and buying tackle, he seats himself on the bridge with the legs beside him. Jake and Mike are boating in a rowboat. They [illegible] all manner of queer things and quarrel violently. A girl comes and takes a seat by the doctor. She picks up one of the artificial legs and allows it to dangle as her own. Jake and Mike, rowing under the bridge, observe it; Mike reaches for it and girl and all come flying down into the water. Jake rows away disgusted as Mike comes up to rescue her. The doctor leaves with the remaining limb and is pursued by Jake and three policemen, who imagine he was carrying a real leg. Following some more excitement, the parties come together and explanations are made.

LAZY LOUIS (Nov. 29).—Louis has the sleeping sickness. Mrs. Schultz sees all her fond dreams of prosperity going to wreck. Louis's boss is just about to can him when he gets an idea, conveys it to Mrs. Schultz and all set about to put it into execution. Louis comes home from work at 10 A.M. and tells his wife that he is sick and thinks he had better go to bed. She agrees with him, and calls the boss and the doctor, and all set about convincing the lazy man that he is very ill. The doctor administers an opiate and when Louis is asleep he is removed to the operating table of a hospital and left alone.

He awakens and takes in the skeletons and common butcher knives and other instruments of death and torture. After a full terror of his situation dawns on him, the doctor enters and remarks to one of his assistants, "I'll remove his liver while you cut out his appendix." This is too much for Louis. Clad as he is, he brushes all in his way aside and races home. Before the wife and doctor reach there, however, Louis is dressed and ready for work. They urge him to lie down and rest, as he does not look well, but not he. He rushes to work and the last seen of him he is racing through it like an express speeding down a forty degree grade.

FRONTIER.

SLIM PROPOSES—BUT (Nov. 27).—Whatever might be said of Slim, he was at least steadfast in his admiration of Mrs. O'Riley's daughter, Molly. But Molly had her doubts of Slim. When he proposed she demurred and Mrs. O'Riley fanned him out of her domicile at the end of her boot. When Slim told Molly and her strenuous mother that he would have Molly or kill himself, the buxom widow laughed at the idea. Molly took the threat to heart. She interested the cowhands and all rushed to the river. Slim had no intention of destroying himself, however. He bethought him of another fair damsel, and arranged a meeting at the bridge. Circumstances again operated to disappoint him. He takes a swim.

When the boys find the [illegible] disporting himself in the water like a two-year-old instead of accommodatingly drowning himself, their purpose reverses itself. Just what happened to Slim, and the unlooked-for manner in which he finally extricated himself, and wins the fair Molly is told in "Slim Proposes—But."

THE SECRET OF BALANCED ROCK (Nov. 29).—Little attention is given to the many mysterious visits of Chigungu to Balanced Rock. His age and infirmities are blamed for his many eccentricities. Mary's return from school causes a rivalry to spring up between Yale and Elliott. The latter proposes, but is quickly rejected. Yale does not propose [illegible] Elliot, who is the foreman of the [illegible], strikes the old Indian Chigungu during his passion and is soundly thrashed by Yale. That night Elliot, going to Yale's cabin for revenge, overhears the Indian telling him of the location of a [illegible] mine. Elliot finds the mine and [illegible] to return the next day with powder [illegible].

Yale and Mary plan to investigate the Indian's story. On the road the girl is struck by a bullet. It came from Elliot's gun, but was meant for Yale. Thought of the mine is, for the moment, forgotten. A note sent by the girl's horse, brings a relief party. Elliot has set his powder and fuse. Coming out of the cave he pauses to examine a [illegible] with a small magnifying glass. When he returns to the cave a close view shows the fuse being ignited by the glass. An explosion takes place and the villain is crushed to death. A month later, when the girl has recovered, Yale and she return to the mine, find the body of Elliot and [illegible] the [illegible].

REX.

THE TALE OF A LONELY COAST (Nov. 27).—The man is a crude fisherman, a gentleman beneath the tan and rude clothes, who has spent his life before the wind and waves. While returning to his hut on a lonely stretch of coast, after a [illegible] he finds a girl, just blooming into womanhood, unconscious upon the rocks. He takes her to his cabin. She regains consciousness. The man has returned to the beach to make his boat fast. He finds that the receding tide has carried it away, and when he carries the news to her that she is marooned, all the fear that a girl can entertain for a crude man rises in her. He assures her, takes his blankets and leaves the hut.

Gradually the girl comes to see the man beneath the clothes and he comes to love the woman for herself alone. His only thought is for her convenience and safety. When he returns to the beach the incoming tide has returned his boat. He goes to her and tells her that she may now return. She tells him that she would rather remain there until her injuries have entirely healed. He is pleased at this, but almost immediately learns that her [illegible] is [illegible] in affection, and he sadly takes the [illegible] from her and is hurt at the idea that she does not trust him. Then she tells him her story.

She was a stenographer, and her employer made improper advances toward her, which she resented and aroused his anger. He concocted a plot against her. Frightened, she escaped through the window. On the beach she found a fisherman't boat, and in this she escaped from the indignity and injustice which was awaiting her. And then the fisherman found her upon the rocks.

The man is touched by her story and as the picture fades out he places a ring on her finger.

THE BOOB'S DREAM GIRL (Nov. 30).—The Boob has ambitions. He imagines that if he can become a detective he can win the admiration of his Margarita. Among the guests at Van Zant's party is Count Alberti and his sister. Van Zant is Margarita's father. Van Zant places the count and his daughter together as much as possible with the hope of making an alliance with nobility. Mr. Count proceeds to steal the girl's necklace. Carrying it to his room he places it in a vase in which he has poured glue. Guests discover the loss, the party is convulsed and Margarita telephones for the famous detective, Long, who arrives the following day.

The Boob, who has repeatedly tried to get a glimpse of his dream girl, meets Detective Long on the street. Long has broken down. The Boob is asked to take care of his grip. Learning who Long is, the Boob gets him to a barn, locks him in and dons the detective's clothes and goes to the house, where he sets to work, posing as the real detective. While he is nosing around he observes the count in some shady work, and failing to get a satisfactory explanation, he searches the count's room. By accident he knocks over the vase and finds the necklace. The count escapes, but the girl is satisfied and after Long has returned to the city in a dudgeon, the Boob has tea with Margarita and receives her approbation.

ECLAIR.

A SON'S DEVOTION (2 parts—Nov. 26).—Eugene Hope, working in the same office with his son Robert, is an inveterate gambler, both in stocks and on the ponies. Crowded by his brokers for more margin, he in desperation, steals $1,000 from the firm and plunges on "Peggy Ann," a tip given him by a gambler who is running a crooked poolroom. The faithful son has tried to dissuade him from entering the poolroom, but to no use. The father discovers he has been robbed and attacks the gambler. The son breaks into the place just in time to prevent his father from being beaten by the gambler's friends.

The loss at the bank is soon discovered and the Hopes are called on the carpet. The son shoulders the blame and is rushed off to prison. The father keeps the news from his wife, mortgages his house and secretly returns the lost money. The son is released, there is a joyous reunion and both return to work. Days pass and the old temptation returns to Hope. He dabbles in stocks, loses again. Worried and pressed on all sides and prevented from entering the poolroom by his son, the father attempts to commit suicide. His little girl attempts to wrest the pistol from him and he is shot in the struggle. An officer is called and the son, believing that his father has fired the shot again, shoulders the blame. While on the road to the station he tries to escape and is shot. He is recaptured in his own home and is again about to be taken away when the father, recovering consciousness, explains the situation. The shock is sufficient to bring a complete reformation to the father.

ROARING BILL (Nov. 30).—Roaring Bill, fresh from the West, pays a friendly visit to his cousin and wife. Bill has a playful habit of shooting up the flat at short intervals. During dinner, the wild one is asked to describe his experience in a hold-up. His attentive listeners follow him through the various stages until at the climax, in order to better illustrate his point, he pulls his "gats". Mounted on steeds such as we were wont to ride in our childhood days, Bill turns the family into a "nut" factory and they gallop madly from room to room.

The two young children of the house, disgusted with their wild uncle's peculiar antics, hold him up with a cap pistol and flatten him out in the literal sense of the word; roll him up in a neat bundle labeled, "To the West," and dump him into the auto in which he arrived. The last seen of Bill he is disappearing in a cloud of smoke, making a zig zag course through autos, trolleys and wagons.

ONE ON TOOTY (Nov. 30).—Tooty would rather read detective stories than eat, and neglects everything in order to see whether "Old Sleuth" kills the villain at the end of the story or is thrown over the cliff. Reading of a bag mystery which is puzzling the entire police force, she goes forth to solve the case. Her father and brother decide to take this opportunity to cure her of her dime novel habit. In a complete Shamlock Bones outfit, Tooty enters a saloon after two suspicious-looking men. The two men get in an argument with her and start a fight between themselves. She escapes, only to find she has lost track of the two suspicious characters. After a long search she comes upon the trail again and follows the two men to a room. She hurries to the police station and two brave, handsome officers are assigned by the captain to assist her in capturing the suspects. The policemen are pushed tremblingly into the criminals' den by the fearless Tooty. Urged on by the lady detective, the two officers spring on the suspects and are flung all over the room for their pains. After the supposed criminals have tossed the policemen to and fro to their hearts' content, they whisk off their beards and mustaches and stand before the astonished Tooty as her father and brother. The mysterious bag is opened and an up-to-date cook book is withdrawn therefrom. Presenting it to the now crestfallen "sleuthess," they advise her to study cooking and solve the mystery of making eatable ham and eggs.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 88 (Nov. 12).—Ground Breaking Ceremonies.—Ground is broken for the new two hundred thousand dollar stadium of the College of the City of New York.

Preparing for Mexico.—The United States troops hereabouts, which will be the first to enter Mexico if it is decided to intervene, are being drilled in mimic warfare.

International Balloon Race.—Nineteen balloons, representing all nations, in race for the Gordon-Bennett Cup start from the Tuilleries Gardens, Paris, France.

A Spectacular Conflagration.—A disastrous fire all but destroys the Seattle daily "Times," causing a loss of seventy-five thousand dollars.

Britain's Largest Warship.—The "Queen Elizabeth," the oil burning Super-Dreadnought, is successfully launched at Portsmouth, England.

Weekly Fashion Hint.—Smart styles in Fall suits and gowns (by courtesy of The Ladies' Home Journal).

Zeppelin Airship Disaster.—The German navy dirigible explodes in mid-air, killing the whole of a crew of twenty-eight. The start of the fateful trip.—Scenes of the disaster.

Harvard vs. Princeton.—The Crimson and Tiger warriors battle for supremacy in the biggest game of the year, Princeton, New Jersey.

Unique Exhibition.—England's government employes give an interesting and unique drill at Southampton, England.

Topical Cartoons by the World-Famous Cartoonist, Hy. Mayer.

Ambrosio Feature

COMING!

The BELLS OF DEATH

3 Reels (Copyrighted 1913)

A beautiful and pathetic war drama of a brave fight against overwhelming odds. Having no artillery with which to defend themselves, the poor villagers are obliged to melt the great bells which have rung for so many years, into cannons. Their unexpected victory is due to the heroic deed of Carmela, the bell-ringer's daughter, who dies bravely as a result of her sacrifice.

State Rights Now Open

Exchangemen! Exhibitors! Get Busy

Copies Ready for Delivery NOV. 26th

Publicity—1, 3, 8 sheet posters, heralds, cuts, photos, slides.

Ambrosio Two Reel Weekly Releases

Nov. 15th

The Sculptor's Masterpiece

(Copyrighted 1913)

The death of a deserted wife leaves her little son alone in the world. Through a statue for which his mother had posed he finds another home and a mother.

Nov. 22nd

Griffard's Claw

(Copyrighted 1913)

A thrilling detective drama in which the famous Sherlock Holmes frustrates the plans of a much-feared blackmailer and restores a kidnapped child to his father.

Nov. 29th

The Goose a la "Colbert"

(Copyrighted 1913)

In this comedy-drama a former cook grown rich desires a great nobleman for his daughter. She, however, succeeds in destroying his high aspirations through the dressing of a goose, and marries her simple lover.

Exchangemen take note

We sell but one exchange in each territory. Be the purchaser and you will have the exclusive for your territory.

Publicity—1, 3, 8 sheet posters, heralds, cuts, photos, slides.

The above films have all been passed by the National Board of Censorship

Società Anonima Ambrosio TORINO

Ambrosio American Co.

15 East 26th Street NEW YORK

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

AMERICAN.

THE OCCULT (Nov. 24).—Harold saw a newspaper article, denouncing the Hindoo. He brought it to Edna, his sweetheart who was a believer in the teachings of the Hindoo. Then Edna and Harold quarreled and parted. Believing that the Hindoo should know of the attack on him, Edna showed the newspaper article to him.

When evening came, Edna had begun to regret the quarrel with Harold and she resolved to bring him back to her by the occult means taught by the Hindoo. Harold who was at the same time in his room reading, was led to think of her by a line of poetry that he read.

He then slept and had certain dreams that may have been suggested to his mind by the happenings of the day, dreams that finally drove him back to his sweetheart. His return to her took place just in time to enable him to be of service to her and to unmask the real character of the Hindoo.

A SPARTAN GIRL OF THE WEST (Nov. 27).—Molly is the owner of the M. B. Ranch. Her foreman, Ed Coxem, is solicitous of her interests from perhaps selfish motives, but his efforts do not meet with more than passing notice by Molly. The advent of a stranger on the adjoining ranch has a marked bearing on the amount of rustling perpetrated in the vicinity. The stranger has worked himself into the good graces of Molly, but incurs the animosity of Coxem. The latter explains his suspicions of the stranger to Molly and she laughs away his fears, but secretly resolves to make a test. The stranger is caught redhanded by Molly alone, taken in charge and secreted until the sheriff's posse is out scouring the hills for him, when he is released and told to go and forget.

AT MIDNIGHT (Nov. 29).—Visiting her father's office in company with her mother, Mrs. Marshall, the little girl is permitted to stay while her mother does some shopping. She soon finds her way into the vault, where the many files and other papers gain her attention. When later Mr. Marshall receives an urgent call to attend to some important business, he hurriedly locks the vault, forgetting entirely the child's presence, and rushes away entirely absorbed by his struggle for the almighty dollar.

When late in the evening he reaches home, happy and joyful, over the success of a well handled business transaction, he finds his entire household almost distracted over the absence of the child. Like a flash it comes over him that his child must be in the vault and that unless rescued at once she will suffocate if she has not already succumbed. Their auto is put into service and all speed limit laws disregarded, barriers are ruthlessly put aside at a great risk to themselves and any other unsuspecting chauffeur that might pass over the same route.

When finally they arrive at the office building they find this in flames and the volume of smoke so dense that it is impossible to enter. Almost bereft of reason they return home, where they find the little one tucked away in her crib by her nurse. How the child was rescued and returned to the home, and what started the fire is given in a vision effect, that lends much interest to the film.

MAJESTIC.

THE TOMBOY'S RACE (Nov. 16).—Jack Simmons, a racing driver, owns a fast car which he enters in the Corona races. Shortly before the meet is to take place, the bank in which the savings of his parents as well as his own are deposited, suspends payment and they are left penniless. Confident in the speed of the car and his ability as a driver, Jack raises all the money he can and bets it on the race. Joe Siler, a plunger, has wagered a large sum of money on the contestant, whom he thinks will win the race, but the form shown by Jack's car in the practice races worries him. He knows that he cannot bribe him, so he pretends friendship for Simmons and wins his confidence. Shortly before the race is to start Simmons is found drugged and unable to pilot his car. Siler, who is responsible for this condition of affairs, goes to the track, secure in the belief that nothing can prevent his favorite winning. To his surprise Simmons' car, with a new driver, enters the race and wins. Almost ruined by the loss of the money he recklessly wagered on the race, Siler is confronted by the new driver, the racing cap is pulled off, and a mass of hair falls over the leathern clad shoulders. It is a girl, Simmons' sister, familiar with automobiles since childhood and rated to be almost as good a driver as her brother. Amid the laughter of the spectators Siler slinks off, while "the tomboy" returns joyfully home to tell her parents and her brother how the race was won.

L ARTICLE 47 (2 parts—Nov. 18).—George Duhamel, a young Frenchman, visits New Orleans and there meets Cora, a Creole, with whom he falls in love. He takes her with him when he returns to Paris, and in spite of the efforts of his mother and friends, refuses to give her up. Cora becomes interested in Mazilier, a wealthy young man and Duhamel becomes jealous. Cora fans the flame by threatening to leave him, and in a jealous quarrel a pistol is discharged and Cora is wounded in the shoulder. She prefers a charge of attempted murder against Duhamel. He is tried, convicted and sentenced to the galley for five years. At the end of five years, Duhamel has served his sentence and been released, but, in defiance of Article 47 of the Code, which forbids ex-convicts to reside in Paris, resides in that city with his mother under the name of Gerard. He falls in love with and marries Marcelle, a young girl, and they are ideally happy, until he accidentally meets with Cora, who is conducting a gambling house in Paris. Cora threatens to denounce him to the police and compels him to frequent her establishment, which results in Marcelle suspecting her husband of being unfaithful. Marcelle finally follows George to Cora's home, and learns from her husband's own lips the story of his life. Realizing what he has suffered at Cora's hands, Marcelle forgives him and declines to give him up, whereupon Cora writes a letter to the police, denouncing Duhamel as an ex-convict, who has violated the provisions of Article 47 by residing in Paris. The police receive the letter. Duhamel is arrested at his home, and brought to Cora to be identified. She triumphantly declares him to be the man, and Duhamel is about to be taken off to prison when an official arrives with a full pardon and Duhamel is released. Cora, frantic at being baffled of her revenge, goes mad, while Duhamel and Marcelle, forever free from the menace of Article 47, face a happy future.

PRINCESS.

A SHOT GUN CUPID (Nov. 21).—Jack loves Mabel but pa tells him he has no money to support a wife and that when he can show him $500 he can marry Mabel. Chicken thieves bother the old man and he resolves to lay for them, buys a new shot gun and draws $500 from the bank to buy some property. He hides the money in the old shot gun and hangs it up. Mabel sees him, has an idea, tells Jack to pad his clothes and get shot and show the old man his own money. He agrees. A tramp is shot by mistake. Jack recovers the money and gets the girl with papa's blessing.

THANHOUSER.

HE COULDN'T LOSE (Nov. 16).—He was a young clerk with very little ambition and even less money. In the directory he figured as a resident of the great and glorious metropolis, but his home was in a back hall room in a dingy boarding house. One morning fortune smiled upon him, for he received word from a firm of lawyers that his uncle had died, leaving a most peculiar will. Under its provisions the young man was to receive $50,000 outright, and if he succeeded in losing this money in foolish investments within six months, he would inherit $1,000,000 more. Why the old uncle made such a will is not explained, but as the lawyers said, he had a perfect right to dispose of his money in any way he saw fit. The young man believed it to be easy to get rid of $50,000 within the time limit, but the fates seemed to be against him. He made any number of foolish investments, but each time he scored success. Even when he received a straight tip that a plot was afoot to cripple one of the boats in an exciting yacht race, he was unable to lose money by following the information. Finally an excellent chance came his way, for in one of the city parks he met a tramp who had a borax mine to sell. The young man purchased a half interest in the borax mine, giving up all the money he had and was thoroughly confident that he would never hear from the tramp again. On the day that six months were up, he called up his lawyer and claimed to have fulfilled all conditions, but just as he was about to receive the legacy a telegram arrived from the faithful tramp, saying that while the borax had petered out, they two were the owners of a wonderful gold mine, which was worth millions, yet as the young man said himself, "He Couldn't Lose."

BABY'S JOY RIDE (Nov. 18).—Baby's parents lived in a suburban town and the father was accustomed to driving to his place of business each day in his own auto. Baby had an idea that she, too, would like to go to business, but her statements to that effect were laughed at. Failing to get directly what she wanted, she determined to try another course, for her little heart was set upon making a name for herself in the city. One morning when father was not looking, baby hid away in the tonneau of his car. Father drove the auto himself and did not notice the precious freight he carried. They arrived in the city all right, but before baby could prepare to embark upon a business career her father hurried out, jumped into the car, and started off again. The reason her father did not remain in the city that day was that his wife had telephoned him that their darling child had been kidnapped—probably by some gypsies who had been in camp near the baby's summer home, and father drove his auto at frightful speed. He arrived at his residence in time to take command of the village constables and lead them to attack upon the gypsy camp. He went afoot so that he could more easily confer with his associates. They found the gypsy camp, but the gypsies had gone. It did not take long to track them down, however, but no trace of a missing child was found, and finally the hunt was given up in despair. Then father and mother returned to their home and found their darling sound asleep in her own little bed. Mother said: "Angels brought her back," and father, thinking of John Hay's poem, partly agreed.

THE CLOTHES LINE QUARREL (Nov. 21).—The two commuters lived side by side in a suburban district, each happy in the love of his wife and child. The wives were also good friends and the little boy thought the little girl next door was the cutest child he had ever seen. One day, however, the boy was kept in after school, and when he came home he was angry and at war with the whole world. The little girl "made shame of him," which aroused the youngster's ire and he slapped her and ill treated her doll. Following this, all sorts of unpleasant things happened. The mothers quarreled; the fathers ceased to be chums and avoided one another on the streets and in the suburban trains, and the elder people having started the feud determined to keep it up. They completely overlooked, however, the fact that the children were again good friends. In fact, they did not know it until one day when the two youngsters were lost, and neighbors told of having seen them wander away together after a hand organ grinder. The men promptly dropped their feud to organize a searching party. They found the children in the woods.

RELIANCE.

HER FATHER'S DAUGHTER (Nov. 22).—John Deacon is sentenced to fifteen years in prison for a crime committed by his employer, Graham. From his cell he tells his wife to go to Graham and get a written confession from him. She calls upon Graham, but he laughs at her and gives her a large sum of money, telling her to leave the town. She foolishly consents and goes. Later, when her daughter asks for her father, the mother tells her that he is dead. When Deacon's term is ended he is released, and sets out to find his wife and daughter. About this time Graham dies, leaving his son, Dick, with the knowledge of his crime. The boy vows to right the wrong done the other man. Deacon searches everywhere, but his wife and daughter cannot be found. His daughter, now a young lady of seventeen, receives an invitation to a ball. She attends and there meets Dick. They are mutually attracted. Mrs. Deacon recognizes Dick as the son of Graham, but decides to say nothing, in the hope that a match may be made between Dick and Grace. One day Deacon, who has become an ordinary tramp, meets his wife. He wants to see Grace, but she tells him to go away. He refuses. She tells him to hide in the next room, as Dick and Grace are coming, and if Dick were to know that he was Grace's father, he would never marry her. When Dick and Grace enter the room he realizes that he might be in the way of his daughter's happiness. He leaves, taking with him only a photograph of Grace. That night he is walking along the road, and is run over by Dick in his motor. Dick takes him to his home. Grace's picture drops from his pocket and Dick recognizes it. When Deacon recovers consciousness he sees a picture of Graham, and recognizing him, accuses the dead man. Dick, knowing the truth, shows shame and sorrow. He shows Deacon Grace's picture and asks who it is. Deacon says: "It is my daughter." Dick brings Deacon to Grace's home (next day). She ignores her mother and goes straight to her father's outstretched arms. Later she effects a reconciliation between her father and mother, and she and Dick are married.

THE OTHER WOMAN (Nov. 24).—Mary Clarke comes home from a convent school. She meets Tom Morton, a friend of her father, who immediately plans a match between Mary and his son, Harry. Harry is infatuated with an actress, Lasca Duran, to whom he is engaged. He is told of the arrangement, and is not at all pleased, but as the only alternative is to be disinherited, he consents. Mary has fallen in love with Harry and they are married. After the honeymoon she discovers a letter written by Harry to Lasca, in which he tells of his love and ridicules his wife as a nun and a quiet little mouse.

Mary calls on Lasca and pleads for her husband. Lasca carelessly toys with a pistol which she has been using for a paper weight, and says that she would rather kill him than give him up. Mary attempts to take the revolver from Lasca. In the struggle it is discharged and Lasca is killed. The maid, who decides to befriend Mary, takes her out and puts her on a train for her parents' home. Harry comes to call on Lasca and is bending over her dead body when the police enter. He is accused of the crime and arrested. On the last day of the trial, Mary learns of Harry's predicament, goes to the court house, and tells the whole story, thus freeing him. He realizes his love for Mary and wants to take her in his arms, but she will not let him. She returns home with her parents, telling Harry not to come until she sends for him. A couple of months later, Harry receives his summons and learns, for the first time, that he is a father. He gathers his wife and child in his arms and there receives her forgiveness.

4

Logical "Reasons Why"

WARNER'S FEATURES
INCORPORATED

Should Supply You With

THREE FEATURES WEEKLY

1. Exclusive Service

By which we mean ONE SHOW TO A TOWN; in the larger cities we guarantee exclusive territory. Your competitor across the street can't show Warner's DeLuxe, Three Reel Features if you book them regularly.

2. Variety and Quality

Western melodramas, society dramas, thrilling detective stories, adaptations of famous books and plays, and gorgeously costumed plays, made by experienced producers—men who know how to get results.

3. Famous Stars

Our stars have "arrived." They are finished artists. Marion Leonard, Helen Gardner, Gene Gauntier, Elsie Albert, Arline Pretty, Edith Tyler, Jack J. Clark, W. V. Ranous, Edwin Carewe, Baby Matty, Baby Early—these are names that bring the dimes.

4. Advertising Helps

We meet you more than half way with a complete service of publicity helps—the most complete that has ever been devised. For each release we provide newspaper cuts, 22 x 28 and 11 x 14 photogelatins, one, three and six sheets and heralds.

Let us hear from you before an exclusive franchise is placed in your locality.

ADDRESS any of these offices:—Chicago, Cleveland, Minneapolis, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, D. C., San Francisco, Seattle, Spokane, Los Angeles, Denver, Dallas, Kansas City, Atlanta, St. Louis, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Cincinnati,

OR—126 West 46th Street, NEW YORK CITY

KEYSTONE.

OUR CHILDREN (Nov. 17).—This is the first comedy of the Keystone "Kid" Stock Company depicting the tough kid in his downfall, the four year old comedian and the fickleness of femininity even in its youth.

MUDDY ROMANCE (Nov. 20).—Mabel has two sweethearts, and is undecided which one she will marry. One accidentally slaps Mabel in the eye with a huckleberry pie, so she runs off with the other fellow, and is pursued by the defeated swain. Dragging a minister with them into a boat, the couple decide to get married on the lake, where they cannot be disturbed. The defeated rival, arriving at the lakeside, gets even by turning off the water and draining the lake. To rescue the minister and the married couple, a life-saving crew has to drag them through the mud that is over their shoulders.

FATTY JOINS THE FORCE (Nov. 24).—Fatty accidentally saves a police chief's daughter from drowning and as a reward is made a cop. While on duty one warm day, he goes in for a swim. Some boys that he had chased earlier in the day cut his trousers into strips and steal the rest of his clothes. Donning his trousers he starts to cover his beat, and excruciatingly funny scenes are enacted when he is pursued as a lunatic.

COHEN SAVES THE FLAG (Nov. 27).—Rebecca's two sweethearts, Cohen, a sergeant; and Levy, a captain, in the Union army, are bitter rivals. At Gettysburg, Cohen saves the flag and gives it to one of the soldiers. Becoming frightened he runs away. Levy, the captain, finds him hiding in a pig stye and sentences him to be shot for cowardice. Rebecca hears of this and writes to headquarters for a pardon. Cohen is saved by the general, who identifies him as the man who saved the flag. He is made captain and Levy is reduced to a sergeant.

KAY-BEE.

THE CLAIM JUMPER (Nov. 18).—Jim Rankin, a miner, builds a rough cabin for himself and his wife and goes prospecting in the neighborhood. One day just before he starts out on his day's work, he has a visitor named Doyle. Doyle goes away and comes back when Jim leaves and questions his wife about the claim. He leaves and visits the claim and finds it valuable. He shoots Jim and starts to town to file the claim. In the meantime, the prospecor's wife, suspecting Doyle, visits the claim and finds Jim wounded. She jumps a horse and in a most exciting chase beats the claim jumper to the essay office. The claim jumper is later shot by the sheriff's posse.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 46 (Nov. 10).—Harvard Versus Princeton.—An exciting football game at New Jersey University between two great teams.

Torpedo Boat Destroyer Launched.—The "Downs," newest addition to U. S. Navy, is christened at Camden, N. J.

Football at Harrow.—Old and new students contest in a spirited game in England.

Home from Mexico.—U. S. transport brings several hundred refugees from West Coast into San Francisco.

Children's Day in Sweden.—All Stockholm turns out to amuse their little ones.

The Katy Flyer Wrecked.—M. K. & T. passenger train is derailed at Lancaster, Tex.

The Panama Canal Pioneer.—"Fram" sails from Buenos Aires to make initial journey through Itshmian waterway.

'Errings Are Ripe.—Great catch reaches Yarmouth, England, and is handled by Scotch fisherwomen.

Freight Handling in Kingston.—The women perform most of the manual labor in Jamaica.

One Toreador Retires.—Bombita, most celebrated of French bull-fighters, quits with a fortune of several millions.

Manicuring Lil.—Oldest elephant in the world has her nails filed in Cincinnati Zoo.

The Lord Mayor Arrives.—Chief executive of London opens exhibition in Edinburgh.

Chilly, But the Venuses Are Brave.—Diving girls in some plain and fancy jumps at Cincinnati.

Paris Fashions.—Advance styles from the leading designers of the French capital.

EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORPORATION

GAUMONT.

LEONCE AND THE MILKMAID (Nov. 18).—Leonce's cousin, Mary, tries to induce him to marry Annie Lane, but he refuses. He goes to stay at a farmhouse, declaring that as long as Annie remained under his cousin's roof he would stay in the farmhouse. Leonce, however, had not reckoned on the move that his cousin was now to make. She suggested to Annie that she should take service with the same farmer as a milkmaid. The girl entered into the plot with enthusiasm, and the farmer readily consented to the plan. The following morning Leonce met the milkmaid and straightway fell in love with her. His good resolves were swept away by her winsomeness and he realized that she was the only girl for him. Their love-making proceeded rapidly, and Annie was not surprised to receive a note asking her to meet Leonce at the old well at nine o'clock. Cousin Mary was invited to be close at hand. After the avowal and acceptance, Leonce espied his cousin and brought her to the well to be introduced to his fiancee. Then—well, he saw that he had been defeated.

OSCAR FINANCES A THEATER (Nov. 20).—Irma Chafolay lays a trap for Oscar, the susceptible. She writes to him saying she will only marry the man who knows how to improve the gifts with which nature has endowed her. Oscar obtains a part for Irma in the new play produced by Cantalophe, the great tragedian. It cost him 100 pounds for premium, but he thought if it would open Irma's heart, the conquest was a cheap one. He afterwards paid a further 100 pounds and various other sums, but money was no object if he gained Irma. Upon that point he soon began to have his doubts. He surprises Irma and Cantaloube love-making. He rushes in, but is calmly informed that the embracing was not love-making but the rehearsal of a scene. He believed it. Three months later Oscar received an invitation to their wedding.

CHAINED TO THE PAST (Feature—2 parts).—Colonel Vernon meets an old sweetheart whom he had not seen for twenty years, Madame Rosa Alba. Memories of old are revived and they are married. While they are on their honeymoon the Colonel's mother dies, having cursed in silence she who held her son away from her deathbed. When they returned the old lady had been buried and Rosa felt she was in some measure to blame for the blow that had fallen on Colonel Vernon. Sergt. Michael, of the Colonel's regiment, wishes to marry Mignon, a singer at a cafe. The Colonel forbids the marriage, and the lovers are terribly upset. Mignon interviews the Colonel, but cannot change his decision. Madame Vernon came into the room as the interview concluded. Mignon appeals to her, but she can do nothing. Following the death of her husband's mother and the undeserved censure showered upon her, the interview had a serious effect upon Rosa, who left her husband and shortly afterward dies in Venice.

LUX.

TOMMY'S CAMERA (Nov. 14).—Tommy has been a good boy at school and his delighted parents present him with a camera. Then Tommy sets out in search of something to snapshot. Going into the kitchen he soon finds a subject worthy of his attention. The cook and the butler are caught in the act of consuming their master's whiskey. Unbeknown to them, Tommy steals quietly out and goes into auntie's room. He manages to snapshot that dear old lody in the act of removing her wig. The old lady does not notice his presence, and neither does his fond mamma and papa when they have a slight tiff and papa gets his face slapped. Tommy's sister and the nice young man that calls to talk finance with papa are also caught in a compromising attitude. The consternation of the guilty ones can well be imagined when they enthusiastically inspect the negatives. The cream of the joke is when they get hold of the negative which reveals to them the misdeeds of the others. They all start laughing at each other, but the laughter dies away when they exchange the negatives. Their consternation will afford much laughter to the beholders of this cute idea.

THE AUVERGNE MOUNTAINS, CENTRAL FRANCE (Nov. 14).—Forming a central knot in the heart of France, the Auvergne Mountains are a range of the highest importance. This film affords us a splendid view of Basaltic rocks which play an important part in the structure of these mountains. Many of the interesting industries of the inhabitants of the quaint little towns and villages which lie snugly hidden in the valleys, are reviewed, we are introduced to some of the picturesque characters of the district and pay a visit to the cattle fair held at Murat, a town celebrated for the manifold small trades it is engaged in.

GREAT NORTHERN.

A DILEMMA (Nov. 1).—Mr. and Mrs. Clark, both corpulent and easy going, little thought that they would be plunged into a medley of misunderstanding within an hour or two of enjoying their hearty breakfast. It all came about firstly because both their daughter and their maid-of-all-work were blessed with the Christian name of Anna; secondly, because by a hapless chance they both were secretly coveted by two men, whose parents had bestowed the name of Jack on each, and thirdly, through the finding of a letter. This letter was intended for Anna, the servant, but Mr. and Mrs. Clark imagined it was for their own offspring. They prepared for the visit of Jack unknown to the girl—and Jack came. The Jack was an A. B., and when he came he asked simply to see Anna. The daughter was out, but Pa and Ma entertained Jack regally, but, to his discomfiture, his rough and ready ways frequently brought forth a frown from the good lady. Then came another knock at the door. A second Jack asked to see Anna. He was a dapper young lieutenant. He was shown into the kitchen, much to his surprise, to be confronted after a time by Anna, the servant. Mrs. Clark, after reflecting that the servant had shown better taste in her selection of a young man than her daughter, mentioned to her hubby that the fresh arrival was the maid's sweetheart. Up jumped Jack, A. B., and rolling up his sleeves, jealously made a rush for the kitchen, followed by the surprised Mr. and Mrs. Clark, and Anna, the daughter, who had meantime returned. Explanations follow and the two Jacks shake hands in friendly fashion.

FEATURES

APEX.

HUMANITY (Feature Subject—3 parts).—As the hour of three o'clock approaches, Jacob Cuthbert has staked his remaining all on the favorite of the principal race that day. If the horse wins all will be well, if not——. Now we see a thrilling horse race "over the sticks." As the favorite falls at the last hurdle, a man rushes away from the course to telephone Cuthbert the result! The distraught man hears the telephone bell ring and nervously picks up the receiver. In a moment he has heard enough. Flinging the instrument from him he rises from his seat and paces the room, his mind a blank, his heart full of despair. Creeping to a table he stealthily opens a drawer, bent on self-destruction, and seizes a revolver! At that moment a man enters the room unobserved. It is Silvani, a kindly Jew. Taking in the situation at a glance, he frustrates Cuthbert's horrible resolve. Silvani in the goodness of his heart, invites Cuthbert to come and live with him until the clouds of misfortune have passed away. Cuthbert accepts this generous offer, and soon is welcomed by graceful Mrs. Silvani. Entering the house, Silvani leads his friend to a saloon at the side of the great hall and there introduces him to some guests, who are busily engeged playing roulette. Silvani stops to glance at a letter from a Mrs. Grey, asking Silvani to prevent her husband, who has had sunstroke in South Africa, from gambling, as it excites the almost invalid captain, and further, Mrs. Grey writes, he cannot afford it. Silvani, glancing round the room, espies the Captain and gently, but firmly, escorts him from the saloon and forbids him to gamble again. A month later at their pretty home Mrs. Grey and her husband are at loggerheads. The Captain's love for gambling is a ruling passion, and, despite the entreaties of his wife, he leaves her for Silvani's house with a large roll of new bank notes in his possession. Cuthbert is amusing himself at the roulette table when Silvani hurries from the saloon to telephone his broker respecting some shares that have risen realizing a big profit. While thus engaged Captain Grey is admitted into the hall by Gabriel. Silvani, seeing him, prevents the Captain from joining the players. Silvani, anxious to retire and tell his wife the good news about his shares, hands the Captain over to Cuthbert, and impresses his friend with the necessity of keeping Grey from the saloon and on no account to allow him to gamble.

Cuthbert leads Grey into an anteroom which looks on to the grounds of the house. Grey, alone with Cuthbert, now produces his well-filled pocket-book and implores the man to play a friendly game with him unknown to Silvani. The sight of the crisp notes proves too much for Cuthbert. Calling the butler Gabriel, with whom he has struck up a sort of friendship, the three men confer, and it is arranged to get rid of Silvani for an hour or so by means of a false telephone message, purporting to come from Mr. Moses Silvani, Silvani's father. This scheme is at once put into operation and Silvani leaves the house in his motor car for his father's home. Cuthbert's true colors are now disclosed. With the assistance of the rascally butler, who aids Cuthbert with a small hand-mirror, Grey is soon fleeced of his money. The now penniless Captain tries to borrow a small sum to enable him to get a taxi and fetch more money. Cuthbert insults the young soldier, who becomes suddenly aware that he has been cheated. He runs into the hall, and, taking a revolver from his overcoat pocket, rushes madly back to the anteroom, when a terrific struggle ensues. Suddenly there is a report and Grey falls mortally wounded. For a moment Cuthbert and Gabriel stand as though petrified. Then, hurriedly, they pick up the body of Grey and carry it through the French windows to some bushes nearby and hide it. Returning to the anteroom the sound of knocking is heard on the hall door. Cuthbert tidies the anteroom, while Gabriel opens the hall door and is horrified to see Mrs. Grey. She enters the hall and asks for her husband. Cuthbert has now recovered his sang-froid, and, seeing Mrs. Grey, informs her that her husband is not in the house, thereupon she hands Cuthbert a note for her husband.

Cuthbert, now alone, opens the note, reads it, suddenly a distardly plan enters his evil brain. He goes upstairs and enters the private drawing-room where Mrs. Silvani is seated. The murderer is determined to win the love of his friend's wife and induce her to elope with him. He is about to declare his passion when the telephone bell rings. Mrs. Silvani take up the receiver and listens to her husband speaking from his father's house. He tells her he has been tricked; the message from his father was false, and she is to expect him home at once. Mrs. Silvani is mystified. She turns to Cuthbert and asks him about the message. The man at once produces the letters Mrs. Grey instructed him to give the Captain, signed "Ruth," and persuades Mrs. Silvani to believe that her husband is false and the letter is none other than one from another woman—a rival. With such evidence before her, Mrs. Silvani, unfortunately, falls into the trap. Cuthbert declares his love and shortly afterward the misled wife is persuaded to prepare at once to elope and leave her supposed false husband forever. Whilst Cuthbert and Mrs. Silvani are making hasty preparations for flight Silvani returns and enters the private door of his grounds. In the moonlight he discovers first a revolver, then a pocketbook, and last of all the dead body of Captain Grey. Horrified, he hastily enters the house and, coming into the hall by way of the anteroom, is astonished to find Cuthbert dressed, bag in hand, ready for traveling. In a moment his suspicions are aroused. He questions the murderer. "Where is Grey?" he asks, and produces the empty pocketbook and revolver. Cuthbert, unnerved for a moment, stands self-accused. At that moment Mrs. Silvani descends the staircase and overhears the accusation. She at once confronts her husband with the letter given her by Cuthbert. Silvani instantly realizes his friend is false. Taking out of his pocketbook the previous letter from Mrs. Grey he shows his wife the two letters side by side. Husband and wife now realize the depth of Cuthbert's villainy. Silvani covers the man with Grey's revolver and orders him to stay where he is, at the same time giving Mrs. Silvani instructions to call for the police. Mrs. Grey and his father. Picking up the lamp, Cuthbert flings it at Silvani. In an instant the place is in flames. Then ensues a terrible combat to the death. The beautiful hall is wrecked by the fighting, struggling men. Up the staircase they go, followed by the flames. Half-choked with heavy smoke, they fight on the balcony; from there they struggle into a bedroom. Then the flames drive them out again, and down the burning staircase they come smashing themselves into everything and breaking everything. At last the flames gain the day, and the massive staircase falls with a terrific crash, burying the blood-stained and desperate men beneath the smoking ruins. By this time Mrs. Silvani has called the police, and, with Mrs. Grey and the old father, the party enter the smoking hall. Horrified, they drag out the body of Silvani, and of the murderer Cuthbert, who is dead. The gallows are robbed of their lawful prey. Silvani recovers, however, and is soon clasped in the arms of his forgiving, and at the same time repentant wife. Cuthbert's deceit is now known to all, and the false friend, although he has met a terrible fate, had fully merited it.

THE ENGINE OF DEATH (Feature—4 parts).—Professor Dellera and his assistant, Villiers, bring to a successful conclusion their experiments directed to the discovery of a new and powerful explosive. The professor is invited to explain his discovery to the War Office, and as the result of his demonstrations, the Government decide to take up the explosive. Dellera sends the news of his success to Villiers, on holiday. The assistant meets Dr. Katsura, a Japanese, and an old college friend, and shows him Dellera's letter, unaware that Katsura is a member of the Japanese Secret Service.

Dr. Katsura receives secret instruction from his Government to find out, if possible, the formula of the explosive, which is, of course, likely to give an enormous advantage, in the event of war, to the Power able to employ it. By means of a letter of introduction from his Government, the Japanese is able to secure a laboratory over that in which Dellera works, and, drilling a hole in the floor, watches the inventor at work and observes his comings and goings, in the hope of being able to enter the laboratory unobserved.

At last an opportunity offers, when Dellera has been called away to meet some officials from the War Office. Katsura, gliding downstairs, slips into the laboratory unobserved, and begins to hurriedly examine the liquids with which Dellera has been working. Unacquainted with the exact composition of the chemicals, he accidentally discharges the compound. A tremendous explosion follows, and when Dellera and the officers enter, Katsura is found lying insensible amid the wreckage of the laboratory.

The force of the explosion has brought down the floor of Katsura's room, and it is believed that the Japanese has fallen with it. No suspicion is entertained that he is the cause of the explosion. The injuries he has received are so serious that his left arm has to be amputated, but on his discharge from the hospital he is allowed to continue his work in the room above Dellera.

The first suspicion of the Japanese arises when Lieut. Barry, while talking with Dellera in his office, observes in a mirror the door of the room open and the Japanese look in, withdrawing immediately when he observes that the room is occupied. Keeping his suspicions to himself, until they are confirmed, the officer orders a soldier to watch Katsura, and the latter soon reports that the Japanese has left the building with a box under his arm. The officer realizes at once that Katsura has been able to take some of the explosives, and probably copy some of the formula in the laboratory while Dellera has been engaged in the office.

He at once proceeds to the Japenese's lodgings, only to learn that his quarry has gone to the railway station. Following, he is just in time to see him enter a carriage, and manages to leap into another himself. While the train is at full speed the plucky officer climbs out to the footboard and begins to work his way along to Katsura's carriage. The Japanese sees him, and pulls the communication cord. The officer leaps from the train to capture Katsura, whom he expects to see also jump to the ground as the train slows up, but the wily Japanese, creeping out the other side, makes his way to the engine, and, while all are searching for him, succeeds in uncoupling the locomotive, and before he is seen has leapt to the footplate and put on full steam.

The officer instructs one of his men to tap the telephone wires and try to have the train stopped. Soon the reply comes back that the locomotive disregards all signals, but that another train will reach the stranded party in a few minutes. When it arrives the officer and his assistants mount the engine, which is uncoupled and sent at full speed after the flying Japanese.

A series of extraordinary scenes show the flying locomotives ever increasing in speed, and with the second slowly but steadily overhauling the first.

Seeing this, the Japanese throws the box of explosives from the engine, hoping to secure his own safety. But in his anxiety he breaks a lever, the locomotive gets out of control, and shortly the engine from behind, from which the soldiers have leaped on seeing the explosive thrown, crashes into it.

The spy perishes in the collision, while Lieut. Barry, carrying back the box and the formula to Dellera's laboratory, is able to report that the priceless secret is still safe.

UNION FEATURES.

LOST AT SEA (Feature Subject—2 parts—Nov. 20).—The owner of the good ship "Julia" was informed by the ship examiner that, although the boat was weak, he thought it could withstand another voyage. The conversation was heard by an old seaman, who told his friend, Paul, of the condition of the ship. But Paul, having sailed many times before on the "Julia," would neither listen to the old man's warnings nor to the pleadings of his sweetheart, Yvonne. A few days after the "Julia" had sailed, Yvonne dreamed that the boat was shipwrecked. This dream was true, for the "Julia" was shipwrecked and all were drowned, with the exception of Paul and a few sailors, who managed to get themselves and some provisions on the shore of a lonely island. Soon their provisions gave out and one by one they died, until Paul was the only one left. He made frantic efforts to attract the attention of passing ships, but each one failed to observe his wavings. Parts of the wrecked vessel were brought into the little village and these confirmed the dream of Yvonne, now heartoroken. Mariet, the shipowner, did all in his power to make amends, and a friendship sprung up between the shipowner's son, Luke, and Yvonne. A few months later the wedding announcement of the young couple was made, and everything was being prepared for the wedding festivity, when there was a knock on the door. It was Paul, who at last was picked up by a passing vessel. The joy of Yvonne now knew no bounds, and the heartbroken Luke left with his father on a voyage to England to forget his loss.

PASQUALI-AMERICAN CO.

THE BRIGAND'S DAUGHTER (Feature — 4 parts).—While attending the Embassy Ball, the chief of the conspirators receives a letter, telling him the new government has decided to break up their organization, and that they must fly for their liberty and sacred cause. The secretary has put a special agent to watch the conspirators, and try and get possession of their documents. He starts on their trail disguised as a mountaineer and is engaged by them to act as their guide. After traveling some distance they find a cave and making it their headquarters, they plan to free their country. The agent gets possession of the papers and in making his escape, is shot, and the papers are recovered. Then the secretary, having lost his first move, offers 200,000 francs reward for the capture of the conspirators.

The conspirators, hearing of the reward, decide to blow up the road leading to their hiding place. In the explosion a gold mine is discovered and they plan to exploit it for the benefit of their cause. They ask their treasurer, Banker Grunt, for advice. Aly Belfadel, one of the conspirators, calls on the banker to tell of the discovery and to find an engineer they can depend on, to work the mine. The banker gives them the address of Velizetos, an engineer, who he knows is in need of money. They call on him, and after examining the specimens of rock, and knowing it is a good mine, he decides to go with them, for the sake of the money. His daughter, Artemisia, does not like the idea, but realizing that her father will make a fortune, she consents to his departure. They depart in an automobile, and while speeding towards the mountains they blindfold him. He becomes suspicious and his fears are confirmed when he finds himself in a cave with strange men. The chief of the conspirators, revealing his identity, tells him he is in their power, and they will make him rich if he follows their instructions. Realizing it is useless to resist, he pleads for protection for his daughter, while he is with them. They promise to send one of their men to enter the service of his daughter. The mine produces wonderful results, and as a reward they take the engineer to visit his daughter.

During his absence Artemisia falls in love with a young lieutenant. Her father meets him and says he can have his daughter when he has improved his financial condition. Lieutenant Comatis goes to his uncle, the Secretary of State, and is advised to try and capture the conspirators and win the reward. He writes to Artemisia of his plans to capture the brigands and starts. Artemisia is much distressed and her servant, a brigand in disguise, also reads the letter, and realizing the danger of his associates' capture, tells her that her father is one of them, and to save him she must follow him. The conspirators suspect treachery on the part of the engineer when they see the lieutenant, but Artemisia arrives and her father has a chance to explain the situation to Comatis. He feels he must do his duty, but the brigands have taken advantage of the delay and escaped. They leave the mine to their country. The lieutenant then goes to his uncle, introduces his fiancée, and tells him of the gold mine he has won for his country.

VERNON FILM CO.

THE SECRET OF THE MINE (Feature—3 parts).—Harry Duval is confidential clerk to Robert Moore, the manager of the Dornan Coal Mine, and he is in love with Winnie, the manager's daughter. Winnie reciprocated his affection, but he is hated by two of the miners, named Jennings and Hand, who decide to play him an ill trick at the first opportunity that presents itself.

When Mr. Moore is called away on business one day, he leaves the management of the mine in the hands of his confidential clerk, who is told to use his private office. Duval manages the mine very capably, and at the end of the day prepares to take his departure, as he has an appointment with Winnie. It is the first time that he has ever been in the darkness in the manager's office, and he is attracted by a faint light which appears to penetrate a crack in the wall. When Harry examines the crack, he discovers that it is really a joint in a very small door, which is cunningly contrived to hide a small receptacle in the wall. This receptacle contains some radium, and also plans and details which tell of its discovery down in the mine by a man who was manager before Mr. Moore and who mysteriously disappeared in its depths. Realizing that he has made a discovery which means a fortune to his employers, the owners of the Doran Coal Pits, Harry goes off to keep his appointment with Winnie. He is not aware that his discovery has been observed by the miners Jennings and Hand, who have taken another miner named Kean Butler, into confidence. Directly when he has left the office, these three villains break into it and take possession of the papers which they have seen discovered.

When Harry discovers his loss, he is unable to trace the culprits, as the three miners are wise enough to go to work as usual, and thus avoid suspicion. That day, when the mine is full of workers, an explosion of fire damp takes place, and a section of the mine takes fire. Most of the miners working in this section manage to reach the pithead with the rest of their comrades, but Kean Butler, who is working there, is unable to effect his escape, and is overcome by the deadly fumes. No man will venture into the burning depth to save him, with the exception of the confidential clerk, whom he has plotted to ruin. Harry braves the danger of the burning pit, and succeeds in bringing the unconscious miner to the surface in safety.

Later in the day Kean Butler confesses to Harry the part he played in the work of the previous night, and also betrays his comrades, who are fortunate enough to escape in time. Acting upon the information received from the betrayer, Harry hastens to secure the arrest of the two villains, who are at large. He sends Butler to the police but Butler is waylaid by Jennings and Hand, and, to escape their vengeance, the craven-hearted wretch betrays his heroic benefactor. Realizing that time is short, the miners hasten to the mine, thinking to locate the radium before Harry can get upon their track; but, he too, is hastening to the mine on horseback. The miners see him urging on his horse in the distance, start in pursuit. After a desperate chase, they catch up with him by the railroad track. A diabolical scheme then enters into their heads by which to dispose of him. By an ingenious device, they hold up a passing freight train, and make the engine driver and stoker dismount. They tie Harry to the front of the engine, and then start the train rushing down the track at a high rate of speed, without driver or any person to control it. The next action is to switch the freight train on to the track of a down-coming express. Fortunately Winnie is scanning the country at that moment with her father's powerful field glasses, and she is horrified as she sees this diabolical action perpetrated right under her eyes. She recognizes her lover in his perilous position, and hastens to the stable, where she saddles her horse, and dashes out, determined to do her best to save the man she loves. Reaching the junction ahead of the freight train, which is now rocking wildly as it dashes along the rails, she dismounts, and placing her whole strength into one leap, manages to reach the cabin of the engine and stops the train before it exactly meets the down-coming express, which is arrested in time. The distance between the two trains only amounts to a few feet,

A BARGAIN

THE FINEST FEATURE WE HAVE EVER PUT OUT. A BEAUTIFUL FIVE-REEL PRODUCTION MADE BY ONE OF EUROPE'S MOST TALENTED DIRECTORS. IT IS A SPLENDID MODERN ALLEGORY, CROWDED WITH MEANING AND MYSTICISM. IT CONTAINS EVERY REQUIREMENT OF A WINNING FEATURE. STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING—DON'T GET LEFT.

THIS PRODUCTION WILL BE ACCOMPANIED BY EVERY ADVERTISING EXPEDIENT KNOWN TO THE AMUSEMENT PROFESSION—A FINE ASSORTMENT OF OTIS LITHOGRAPHS, 1-3-6 AND 9 SHEETS—SNAPPY HERALDS—BANNERS—PHOTOS, ETC.

HUGH HOFFMAN

WITH SATAN

DON'T MISS THIS LIST OF FEATURES

| | |
|---|---|
| THE ENGINE OF DEATH—A Tale of Secret Service and Diplomatic Work | 4 PARTS |
| HUMANITY—A Forceful Story of Friendship and Gratitude | 3 PARTS |
| PETER MAKAROFF—A Drama of Life at the Russian Royal Court | 4 PARTS |
| THROUGH THE CLOUDS—A Thrilling Episode in Aeronautics | 3 PARTS |
| THE FALL OF FRANCE—An Incident of the Franco-Prussian War | 3 PARTS |
| LONDON BY NIGHT—A Barker Melodrama in Barker's Best Style | 4 PARTS |
| THE GREAT BULLION ROBBERY—A Strenuous Feature | 3 PARTS |
| THE BLACK 13—Sequel to "On the Trail of the Spider Gang" | 3 PARTS |

APEX FILM COMPANY,

145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK—P. P. CRAFT, MANAGER

and thus Harry has a most fortunate escape, thanks to the courage of his sweetheart

The three miners have entered the mine expecting to find the radium Whilst they are below another explosion of fire damp occurs, but the miners are confident that they can make their escape through an opening which leads to the river. Seeing that the mine is again on fire, Winnie suggests that as the mine is empty, they should flood it, as the damage done by the flood can more easily be repaired than that caused by fire She and Harry, therefore, open the flood gates of the lock, and the river pours into the mine through the very opening through which the miners are attempting to escape and thus they meet an end which they thoroughly deserve.

TRUE FEATURES.

THE WRESTLER'S TRAGEDY (Feature Subject—2 parts).—Alex Sandow, wrestler and strong man of the circus, holds in his hand a photograph of his wife and himself The wife, unable to contend with the vicissitudes of circus life, has left him, taking their baby boy, and sacrificing her happiness in the knowledge that her husband had possibilities of a great future as a wrestler. Unknown to his wife and son, Hans, now twenty-one years of age, fate has directed the circus to the village where they are residing. The customary challenge is issued on behalf of the wrestler, and Hans is persuaded by his friends to accept it. Hans is in ignorance of his relationship to his opponent The bout commences and Hans is severely thrown With a thud he alights on his neck, and to the horror of the onlookers, he remains motionless. A hasty examination results in the discovery that he is dead. While the unfortunate mother is being summoned, Sandow sees a locket hanging around his victim's neck, and he instantly recognizes it as being a present which he gave his wife. Husband and wife meet, and overcome by the awfulness of the tragedy, Alex Sandow dies of heart failure. The last scene of this touching drama shows the unfortunate widow tending the grave of her dear departed.

BLIND LOVE (Feature Subject—2 parts).—Joseph Taber loves his beautiful but heartless wife, Mary. Whatever her whim, he hastens to gratify it To provide more money for his wife, he plunges first into debt, and then into speculation on the stock exchange. Everything he undertakes fails and he gets into the toils of a usurer, who makes him sign illegal papers. He is finally impoverished and arrested and imprisoned for a short period. During his imprisonment the thought of his wife alone sustains him in his despair and after his liberation he hastens to his former home and finds it empty. He wanders about, inquiring everywhere, but is unable to find a trace of his wife. Under circumstances which can be shown far better on the screen, than described in words, the unfortunate man meets his wife, to find that all his love has been wasted and that he has ruined himself for a heartless creature, and he is plunged into the night of everlasting forgetfulness.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

THE GREAT LURE OF PARIS (Feature Subject—3 parts).—Elsa goes to the most fashionable restaurant in Paris, offering the guests flowers for a few sous. She comes to a table at which sits a company of high livers. One of them offers Elsa a glass of wine, but she refuses to drink. The unusual attention paid to Elsa by the men, arouses the jealousy of one of the ladies, and she slaps the girl in the face. Heartbroken, the poor girl runs out into the street. Her investment of a few francs is all gone. What is she to do, parentless, homeless, friendless? Overcome by grief, she falls prostrate on the ground.

Two artists come along and stumble across the form of the weeping girl. After some persuasion, they learn the situation and take her to their studio

Elsa becomes the housekeeper for Charles, one of the artists, and love springs up between them. Both are happy over their coming marriage. Fate, however, enters in the person of the great Russian scientist, Leonid Protasoff. The hobby of Protasoff is hypnotism The moment he sets his eyes upon Elsa he knows that the medium for which he has been searching is found

When Charles is absent from the studio Protasoff enters. He exerts his hypnotic powers and from now on Elsa is his slave To avoid suspicion on the part of Charles, he makes Elsa write a letter to Charles, in which she informs him that her present mode of life is too monotonous and she is going away to seek a brighter sphere of action. After two years' time, Elsa, who has until then been entirely voiceless, becomes a famous concert star. Charles and his friend decide to go to the concert of the famous singer. Charles and his friend, occupying a box, do not recognize Elsa, she having changed so greatly in appearance. But during the intermission they accidentally stroll into a parlor where they become witnesses to a remarkable scene. Protasoff, by magnetic strokes, is bringing Elsa out of the spell. Gradually it dawns upon Charles that the woman in whom they recognize the singing "Diva" is Elsa, and the strange man is Protasoff An encounter between Charles and Protasoff ensues, and the latter, from excitement, suffers an apoplectic stroke. Elsa is freed from the spell, but her voice is gone, as her master is dead She recognizes Charles and goes with him to his studio, the latter being firmer than ever in his intention to marry Elsa

Charles' father is informed about the intended marriage, and arrives at the studio. He meets Elsa and persuades her to leave his son, because she is hindering him from ever becoming a great artist. Elsa, who sincerely loves Charles, is again willing to make the sacrifice and leaves. Her life from now on is one misfortune after another, and she soon becomes the victim of a brute. Charles, through love for Elsa, falls under the strain and becomes a nervous wreck. The most eminent physicians assert that the only remedy is the return of his fiancée. An advertisement is instretd in the newspaper. It comes to the attention of Elsa's master—the brute—who, thinking that he sees a large amount of money in the union, urges the girl to go. At the home of Charles she kills herself, and the shock kills the young artist.

FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA.

THE GALLOWS OF THE GODS (State Rights—3 parts).—Jameson, a young civil engineer, is sent out to supervise the making of a railroad through the wilderness, his company being suspicious of Hooper, engineer in charge. Hooper, a whiskey incompetent, does not relish having the work being taken from his direction. Jameson finding favor with Kitty Wilson, daughter of the foreman, does not add to his pleasure. Kitty receives a message from her brother who has escaped from prison, where he has been confined for a youthful act of folly, in which he asks that she meet him at midnight and bring money to aid in his getting away. Hooper finds the letter and decides upon a scheme of revenge. With an accomplice he waylays Kitty and Jameson while they are driving together. The accomplice whips the horses into a frenzy of fear and they run amuck with the terrified Kitty holding impotently to the reins. Jameson subdues Hooper with one stiff punch, and jumping upon Hooper's horse, overtakes the flying team.

Hooper, with added vindictiveness, induces his accomplice to steal the pay-roll, arranging matters so that suspicion falls upon Kitty. Jameson, convinced of her ignorance and suspecting Hooper, follows him and sees his meeting with the accomplice, who turns over the stolen money. For his share the accomplice receives a blow in the face. Infuriated, the accomplice reveals the plot to Jameson, who pursues Hooper. Hooper seeks refuge on a windmill. Thinking to accomplish the death of Jameson, he starts the windmill in action. Instead of its mighty arms striking Jameson, one of its prongs catches in the nape of Hooper's coat and he is whirled high aloft. The cloth gives away under his weight and he falls many feet below to mutilation and death.

GAUMONT.

THE DUKE'S HEIRESS (Feature Subject—2 parts—Nov. 8).—Eighteen years ago the wife of the Duke of Craon left her home and husband and fled to America with her baby girl. As the years grew, the old man's remorse increased. The weight of his sorrow was crushing him. He wanted both his wife and child to return. Through all the long years no word had come of them, and he wondered if all was well.

Engaging the assistance of an eminent firm of inquiry agents, he instructed them to ascertain all that was possible. Their search resulted in the discovery of the daughter. The story they learned and reported to the duke was that his wife died during the voyage to New York. The daughter was adopted by a workman, and with his family was reared and educated. She later became a dancer, and at the time the inquiry was made, was achieving great success in her profession under the name of Yvette Ricordi. M. Otto Blank, a rising young diplomant, was passionately fond of her, but she appeared to treat his advances coldly.

The duke confides these particulars to his confidential secretary, Wilson, and instructs him to proceed to New York, in the hope of inducing the girl to return. At the theater, Wilson sees the duke's heiress dance, and afterwards interviews her. He hands her a letter from her father, in which he writes: "I wish to see my daughter, and hope that you will return with him.—Your brokenhearted father." Yvette resolves to return to her father. Almost immediately Otto is announced, and he presses the girl to give him an answer to his repeated offers of marriage. Again she declines to satisfy him, and the following morning he receives a letter saying that she has gone away. Distraught by the news, he finds, from the manager of the theater, that it is true, and then offers her maid a bribe of $500 if she will tell him where Yvette has gone. In a short time the father and daughter loved each other as if they had never been separated. When Yvette made her debut in society she was received with open arms, and shortly after it was not surprising to find that she was not indifferent to John de Vins, the son of one of her father's oldest friends.

In the midst of their happiness and preparations for the wedding the old duke dies This causes a delay, and three days before the wedding, some months later, Otto, who has discovered her whereabouts, vows that he will recover her. Yvette declines to throw over her lover, John, and Otto threatens to disclose her past life. Viewing the threatened disclosure with alarm, Yvette sinks into a morbid condition, and one morning, after a night troubled by dreams, she wanders to the lake. Otto sees her, and realizing that his threats have brought about her distracted state of mind, he prevents her walking into the water and calls for help. Mentally afflicted, Yvette is taken to the home of her fiancé, where, tortured by regret, and impatient to hear of her welfare, Otto goes.

Here he is met by John de Vins, who demands that their differences shall be settled by a duel. They go into the park, and are taking up their positions, when the mother of John rushes up and prevents the fight The doctor in attendance on Yvette is hopeful that her memory will return, and pursuing a plan, brings a number of dancers to the castle. Their dancing and the music revive Yvette's memory, and all is made right when her future mother-in-law tells her that the duke has hidden nothing of her past, and she gladly consented to the marriage.

FANTOMAS NO. 2—THE MAN IN BLACK (Feature Subject—4 parts).—Naturally, after his last experience, Inspector Juve winces under such rebuff as the substitution of Valgrand and the escape of Fantomas. Eventually a mysterious crime puzzles him and his assistant, Fandor. To the chief of the Criminal Investigation Department, he reports that the body of a woman, found in the house of Dr. Charles, cannot be identified. Papers bearing the name of Lady Beltham had been discovered in her clothing. Was the body that of Lady Beltham, the accomplice of Gurn, or was it the intention that people should believe that she was dead? Juve wondered why the body was found in the house of Dr. Charles. He concerns himself to watch the house, and the patience of Fandor and himself is unexpectedly rewarded. One day Dr. Charles leaves the house, and the car in which he rides is followed.

Charles makes a false move. The man who leaves the closed car is not the Dr. Charles who got in. He is now a young man, with a black moustache, whereas Charles is a middle-aged man with a black beard. That is decidedly suspicious, and the detectives are in time to see him accept a note from a woman who is waiting for him. Instructing Fandor to follow the girl, Juve goes after the other man, known to the police as Lawrence, the leader of bandits.

Following Lawrence (alias Charles), in a taxi, he is fated to lose his quarry, as an accomplice of the bandit punctures the tire of one of the wheels, and Juve is stranded in a street while Lawrence gets clear away. So far there is nothing to connect Charles, alias Lawrence, with Fantmas, alias Gurn. Fandor fares much better. The girl does not succeed in throwing the younger detective off the track and is, apparently, unconscious of the fact that she is being followed until she notices Fandor in the same compartment of the railway carriage in which she is traveling. Fandor tracks her to a house. Having seen her safely indoors, he sends a note to Juve, saying that he is keeping a good watch. Meanwhile, Lawrence has read the note Josephine handed him, and he learns that an elderly man, confidential clerk in the employment of Messrs. Brown & Co., has fallen in love with her. That afternoon he is taking $30,000 to clients of the firm, and thinking that she is attached to him, wishes to take her with him on the journey. They were leaving the Gare de Lyon Station for Bercy, by the Northern Express at three o'clock that afternoon. Would Lawrence be at the station with others of the gang?

In consequence of the breakdown of the car, the note which Fandor had written did not reach Juve. Fandor, however, had waited near the house of the girl, and when she left, dressed as a lady, followed her to the Gare de Lyon, where she met the confidential messenger. No doubt there was a hidden meaning in this meeting, and Fandor decided to join the train: so did Lawrence and others of the gang whom he had gathered round him. The whole party traveled in the last coach of the train, and when the time had arrived, one of the men climbed along the footboard and uncoupled the coach.

Lawrence recognized Fandor, but his presence on the train made no difference to the plans of the bandits. As the coach began to fall away from the rest of the train, Josephine left the compartment in which a peremptory demand for the money he carried, whilst Fandor was also attacked. By this time the speed of the coach has very sensibly slackened and the gang easily escaped, fleeing in a motorcar waiting for them. In the car they examined the haul, and to their intense mortification discovered that the notes the man carried were all half notes, the remainder of which were to be handed to the clients of Brown & Co. when the contract was completed. When Fandor recovered from the shock of the attack he pulled the communication cord. To his consternation he found that not only had it been severed, but that the coach was running down the decline. He knew that the Northern Express was following the train in which he had traveled, and nothing but a miracle would avert a serious disaster. The coach ran back, and as the express began to cross the bridge the engine collided with the coach and the whole train was terribly wrecked.

Lawrence determines to obtain the remaining halves of the notes, but decides that before doing so Juve must be killed. With that purpose in view, he, in the name of Fandor, wires to Juve to come to the Bercy cellars of Brown & Co., the following night. Juve, taking the wire as authentic, goes to Bercy, and, seeing someone moving behind the

MÉLIÈS FILMS

Released in "Exclusive Service" Program

Week of December 8th

The YELLOW SLAVE

IN THREE PARTS

The story of a Japanese girl's self-sacrifice. Grandest of all Japanese productions. A story of human interest to all. Book it now

COPYRIGHTED, 1913, BY G. MELIES

Nov. 20th

Shooting the Famous Hozu Rapids of Japan

Thrilling sport

AND

A LEMON PLANTATION

Full of interest

PRODUCED IN JAPAN.

$$$$ WISE ONES LOOK $$$$

JAMES BOYS IN MISSOURI

The Biggest Money Maker for State Right Men Ever Produced

JAMES BOYS IN MISSOURI 3 Reels

The Greatest Picture Ever Produced — The Best Money Getter

SAPHO 3 Reels 15 Styles Printing

A Great Story Well Told

WAGES OF SIN OR DRIVEN FROM HOME 3 Reels

1-3-6 Sheet Posters

DEADWOOD DICK

A 3 Reel Western Picture

TRACKED BY BLOOD HOUNDS

3 Reels

THE HIDDEN HAND

3 Reels. A Great Melodramic Picture

10 Styles Printing

The Great Taxicab Mystery—3 Reels

LOOK We have a number of good 3 Reel Cold Copies with Open Territory with Plenty of Printing as follows:

SECRET SERVICE STEVE DALTON BOYS
AMERICAN DETECTIVE
SING SING TO LIBERTY
COWBOY'S REVENGE
TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR ROOM
LABOR vs. CAPITAL
PAUL REVERE
MIDNIGHT EXPRESS

JAMES BOYS IN MISSOURI

The Picture That Made Features Famous. Great Printing, Six Different Styles.

$$$$ THE ATLAS MFG. CO., Gayety Theatre Bldg., ST. LOUIS, MO. $$$$

WRITE, WIRE OR COME IN

casks, fires, and then creeps forward to run against Fandor. Lawrence and his accomplice began firing at the detectives, the barrels of spirit were set on fire, and through a tornado of flames the detectives escape. Fantomas again himself escapes, and they lose entire trace of him until one night when at a hotel, Juve and Fandor meet Josephine, and after Juve is introduced by Fandor, he insists that Josephine divulge the whereabouts of Fantomas. She reluctantly, under the threat of arrest, takes Juve to a place where Fantomas is dining with two wealthy young ladies in the disguise of the supposed Dr. Charles. A card is sent to Fantomas saying that someone is waiting for him outside. Fantomas, believing this to be one of his gang, departs from the hotel and is immediately arrested by Juve and Fandor. After they walk down the street, Dr. Charles suddenly makes a struggle and to the amazement of Juve and Fandor, he leaves in their hands nothing but two plaster casts of his arms with his coat sleeves attached. They decide to track Lady Belthem. After much trouble they discover her to be making midnight visits to her old haunted villa. Here they make a visit in the day-time, and being satisfied that there must be still some connection between Fantomas and Lady Beltham, hide and overhear a conversation where Fantomas decides he must get rid of Juve and will send a silent executioner to destroy him. Juve does not exactly know what this silent executioner means, but he prepares to receive a serpent. He is almost crushed to death in spite of his precaution, but survives and surrounds the haunted villa of Lady Beltham. Fantomas is almost caught unprepared, but being ever ready, he quickly sets a trap in which to get together the whole of the police, including Juve and Fandor, so that he may destroy them all by dynamite. These easily fall into the trap, so quickly but well laid, Fantomas realizes that his opportunity has come, and leaping from a cistern in which he had been hiding, he touches the roll of wire and explodes the dynamite cartridge, blowing the haunted villa to a heap of ruins, together with the occupants. The question still remains unsolved. Are Juve and Fandor still alive?

AMBROSIO.

THE SCULPTOR'S MASTERPIECE (Feature Subject—2 parts).—Countess Eleanor de Meroulle gives Furio Clerici the commission to make a statue of the Piety, to be placed on the grave of her little child. On a visit to the studio she meets Clerici and her little son, Peter. As Lolotte is not a suitable model, Furio asks his wife, Claudia, to sit for him. At first she refuses because he has sadly neglected her for Lolotte, but when he promises to be faithful to her she agrees.

The statue is finally completed and it is a masterpiece, but the exertion has destroyed Claudia's health. Greatly pleased with the work the countess gives Furio $5,000 in payment of it. He, madly infatuated with his model, forgets the sacrifice made by his wife, and leaving a note for her, elopes with Lolotte. Unable to stand the shock, Claudia dies, leaving her little son, Peter, alone in the world. The next morning Countess Eleanor reads an account of the elopement and of the death of the sculptor's wife and is greatly grieved over it.

Desiring to see the statue of his mother, little Peter goes to his father's studio, but learns that it has already been placed in a cemetery some distance away. Escaping the servants, he runs away in search of his mother's statue. The countess visits the grave of her little daughter. She reads the tragedy in the heart of the little child and her mother instinct awakened, she decides to take him with her, entreating Claudia to guard over her daughter in Heaven as she would watch over Peter on earth.

GRIFFARD'S CLAW (2 parts—Nov. 22).—Mr. Delmion, a wealthy manufacturer, receives a note from the much-feared Griffard that unless a considerable sum of money be deposited at the Cat's bridge his little son, Mario, would be kidnapped. Much disturbed he appeals to Sherlock Holmes, a well known detective, for assistance, whereupon four guards are immediately stationed to protect his home.

His two servants, with a view to derive some benefit for themselves, decide to become accomplices of Griffard and with the aid of drink and opium they succeed in stupefying the two guards watching the child's room, and also Mr. Delmion. Now that all is safe little Mario is put into a valise and thrown from the window to Griffard's men, who have overcome the other two detectives outside the house.

The next morning Sherlock Holmes gets a disconcerting note from Griffard and immediately goes to his client's house, where he finds all of the inmates under the influence of the drug. The treacherous servants, wishing to avert suspicion, have also inhaled the opium. Although an immediate alarm is made no trace can be found of the child or his kidnappers.

Some time later the suspicions of the guards are aroused by a beggar slinking around the house. Upon searching him at the detective's office a note intended for the servants is found concealed in his clothes. Sherlock Holmes, assuming the beggar's disguise, meets the unsuspecting servants and takes them by surprise.

In the meantime little Mario has been transferred to a new hiding-place. Seeking a means of deliverance he writes a note, which he puts into the roll given him for his dinner, and throws it out of the window. Joseph, a young and hungry shepherd lad passing along, gratefully picks up the bread and discovers the message. Giving it to his father they immediately inform Mr. Delmion, who starts out in an automobile with a search party to the designated den.

Little Mario's jailer, seeing them advancing, grabs the child and escapes with him. They follow his footprints, but are soon without any guidance. The nimble-witted detective, however, seeing an aeroplane leisurely flying around beckons to it. Entering the machine and with a powerful telescope he explores the ground and soon discovers the jailer. Descending, he enters the deserted hut in which he has taken refuge, and the kidnapper is soon rendered powerless, while little Mario finds shelter in his father's protecting arms.

THE GOOSE A LA COLBERT (2 parts—Nov. 29).—Mr. Chandron, a former cook grown rich, would like to have his daughter, Susan, marry a Marquis at least. She, however, loves her simple cousin, Paul, and when he requests her hand in marriage, he is driven from the house. The Marchioness of Pontlevis, on the contrary, desires a simple and modest young girl for her son Gondron, although he is infatuated with the beautiful actress, Lulu, much against her wishes. While out touring in their motor, the Marchioness and her son are obliged to stop very near the home of Mr. Chandron on account of a breakdown. There being a heavy rainstorm they seek shelter in his home and are received with great ceremony. A month later the Marchioness and the former cook have become great friends, and they plan together for the marriage of their children. When they see Susan and Gondron together in an animated conversation they think they are lovers, much to their delight, little suspecting that the two young people have just pledged that they would not marry each other.

Susan soon concocts a plan which will fatally frustrate her father's hopes. Mr. Chandron invites the Marchioness and the Marquis to a great dinner in their honor, and he himself prepares a new dish, "Goose a la Colbert." The eventful evening finally arrives and they all enjoy the meal. At last with great pride Mr. Chandron serves his famous dish, but what is his surprise and consternation to hear Gondron say that he does not like it, and that goose should not be dressed in that manner. The cook's wrath is at its highest and in great anger the guests take their immediate departure. Susan endeavors to calm her father's ruffled spirits, and beckons to Paul, whom she has concealed in an adjoining room. She asks his opinion regarding the "Goose a la Colbert," and he apparently likes it so well that he requests a second portion. Extremely flattered and appeased, the inventor of the wonderful dish gladly gives his consent to the marriage of his daughter Susan to him.

WORLD'S SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION.

PROTEA (Feature—4 parts).—The Commissioner of Police at Gottenberg, Messenia, is informed that a treaty is about to be completed between the two neighboring states, Keltia and Slavonia, which is in opposition to the interests of Gottenberg. Protea, a notorious adventuress, is commissioned to secure a copy of the document. Before accepting the commission, Protea asks for the assistance of a prisoner known as "The Eel." The prisoner is released and he and Protea set out on their mission. The Slavonic ambassador at Gottenberg, learning that Messenia is endeavoring to get a copy of the treaty, sends his secretary, Viscount Osthansen, to apprise the government of Keltia of the intended robbery. At the railway station Protea recognizes the Viscount and succeeds in ingratiating herself into his good graces while her accomplice appropriates his keys. The two spies later go to the Viscount's apartments, take his credentials and place in his valise articles subject to tariff. Unable to prove his identity to the custom officers he is arrested as a smuggler. In Keltia the two spies make their way to the Foreign Office, and as they are about to enter the minister's room the night watchman frustrates their plan. On the report of the watchman the treaty is placed in the safe for greater keeping. Later that day Protea, in the guise of an aged person, calls upon the minister. A large box is received from the Viceroy of Numidie. The minister is quickly chloroformed by Protea and with the aid of her confederate he is placed in the box. At the point of a pistol a young officer is compelled to relinquish his clothes, which are quickly donned by the adventuress. As she is about to take a mandate to the secretary, ostensibly from the minister, the chloroformed official recovers from the effects of the drug and again the plan of the spies is frustrated. It is only by the display of stratagem that the spies make their escape.

The next diabolical plot worked out by the two spies finds Protea as the leader of the ladies' orchestra at a ball given by the minister of Keltia at the Foreign Office and her confederate as a man servant. The Viscount arrives and recognizes the leader of the orchestra as the astute spy. He hurriedly acquaints the minister of her presence. Protea realizes that she has been recognized and as she is conferring with her accomplice the new ambassador for Albania and his wife arrive. The wife bears a striking resemblance to Protea. As the ambassador and his wife are passing through the ante rooms they are pounced upon, bound and gagged by the spies, who proceed to array themselves in the clothes of their captives. They then proceed to the ballroom, where they are welcomingly received as the new ambassador and his wife, nobody penetrating their disguise. Shortly thereafter Protea feigns illness and as she had presaged she and her confederate ambassador are led into the minister's room where they find the document. In order to effect their escape they set the room on fire. The firemen arrive and a moment later the two spies appear as firemen, recognized by none. After the pandemonium has subsided the loss of the treaty is discovered by the minister and Ambassador Osthansen. The official institutes a search and a few days later the spies are captured in their home; but being ready for such an emergency they soon escape through the floor, which carries a secret passage.

In order to cross the frontier unrecognized, Protea acquires some stock of a traveling menagerie and with her accomplice effectually disguised as a man-monkey, stop at an inn near the border of the frontier. Perceiving that her disguise has been penetrated by the proprietor she places the treaty in the care of the lioness Sadie, who keeps the police at bay. By the careful manipulation of a lever Protea sends the authorities and the innkeeper in a heap into the cellar. Securing the treaty Protea escapes into the forest while "The Eel" conceals himself in a tree. Her pursuers, who have been following her in an automobile being unable to navigate in the woods with the car, decide upon another plan to circumvent the daring spy from reaching her destination. They set the bridge on fire, which is the only means of reaching the desired location. Undaunted Protea leaps over a precipitous incline and lands safely on the other side of the water, where she rejoins her accomplice. There they array themselves in the dress of peasants and are later entrusted with the baggage of two officials who had come to inspect the guard on the frontier. Taking possession of the official's uniforms they pass the frontier unchallenged. The next day Protea hands the Commissioner of Police the much desired treaty.

THE NIHILIST'S DAUGHTER (Feature—2 parts).—The story is woven about Michael Rosminia, a dangerous revolutionist. The police are hot on his trail. He realizes that his only hope of safety lies in a hasty flight. Just as he is embracing his wife and daughter, ready to depart, the door is suddenly burst open and the police arrive to take Rosminia away. He languishes in his cell while his wife implores the superintendent of police for mercy. "Tell me the name of the accomplices," he says, "and, perhaps, your husband will be pardoned." But this Rosminia, who is at present on a cross examination, forbids. He is taken back to his cell and one night, while pacing up and down unable to sleep, he discovers that through some carelessness of the guard the door of the prison is unlocked. With feverish hands he opens it and finds himself in the vast courtyard of the prison, which had formerly been a convent. Concealing himself in a cache of the wall until the watchman passes, he gets out of the prison walls undetected. The love for his family pulls his footsteps once more to his little home to say a last farewell. While there, his escape is discovered. The booming of the guns announces it to Rosminia. He tears himself away and makes the boundary line in safety. The police are hot on his trail and catching sight of an old mill, throws himself on the mercy of the old miller, who hides him in an acqueduct which is free from water. The police arrive and, not finding him, turn to leave, when a diabolical idea seizes their leader and he pulls the lever, which allows the water to rush into the acqueduct, which holds the unfortunate Nihilist. He miraculously escapes and goes into exile. The news of the supposed disaster reaches his wife and the shock kills her. Several years have elapsed and the child, who was adopted by the head of the police, marries and becomes Countess Lombard. She alone knows of her father's existence, until one day the chauffeur, who is infatuated with his mistress and has been threatened with instant dismissal for his presumption, finds the evidence of what he supposes is an intrigue, which he immediately takes to the Count. That night the Count goes to the garden and, as a figure muffled in a coat makes his appearance, the Count fires, only to find that he has shot his wife's father. They hide him in the house until after he recovers. The law, knowing no mercy, the poor man again departs into exile.

FOR THE FAMILY HONOR (Feature—2 parts).—The scenes of the play are laid in Switzerland, and is written around Professor Suger, the father of three children, whom he adores—two daughters who are constantly with him and a son, whom he sends to Paris in order to complete his musical studies. The latter, wishing to increase his financial resources, as his father can only make him a small allowance, seeks an engagement as a piano-player in a cabaret performance. One day Blanche, the youngest daughter, meets with an accident while out coasting and is helped by a young man named Jean de Mangis, who happened

MUSIC — THE VERY LATEST — MUSIC

ORGAN ORCHESTRIONS

PLAYS TWO WAYS

AUTOMATICALLY
AND
BY HAND

MEETS EVERY REQUIREMENT

An instrument of this kind will meet the requirements of any first-class picture theatre. You can play popular, classic, sacred or dance pieces, as the instrument is only limited to the kind of music desired.

BUILT FOR ANY GIVEN SPACE.

THEY REPRODUCE THE PLAYING OF THE GREATEST ORGANISTS

ELIMINATE EXPERIMENTS

When you purchase a WELTE instrument you eliminate experiments. Your value is represented in every detail, as is attested by being in the homes of the wealthiest and most representative people in the world.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

M. WELTE & SONS, Inc., 273 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. City
ESTABLISHED 1832

---

The Lure of New York

IN FOUR ACTS

Every foot full of sensation and action. A strong, pathetic story, featuring life in BOWERY, CHINATOWN and CONEY ISLAND.

Two kinds of one and three sheets, six sheets, 8x10 and 16x20 photographs, heralds and slides.

Write or Wire for State Rights to

NEW YORK FILM CO., 145 W. 45th St., New York City

to be visiting in the country. Their friendship rapidly ripens into love and Blanche is induced to follow Jean to Paris. The son Pierre, while playing at the cabaret, repulses the advances of a beautiful woman, who seeks revenge by having him waylaid on his way home. As he is being attacked, Jean rushes to the rescue and routs the attackers. Having reached home, Pierre relates the event to his sister, who has come to Paris in search of Blanche. They are greatly surprised to find that he is no other than the sweetheart of Blanche with whom he is living in perfect happiness and bliss. An explanation takes place between the two men and Jean promises to marry Blanche, advising her, in the meantime, to return home with her sister and await the time of their marriage. He immediately seeks the consent of his mother the Countess of Mingis, who absolutely refuses, saying that she does not want a misalliance in her family. Overcome with disappointment Jean is taken sick and is threatened with brain fever. He writes to Blanche to come and visit him and, against the wishes of her family, leaves to nurse Jean. The love which the two young people have for one another reunites the families and everything ends as it should.

WHAT THE GODS DECREE (Feature Subject—5 parts).—Henriette D'Arsac, the wife of an adventurer, Charles D'Arsac, who has made his fortune in the African trade and now retired, one day reads of the excavation of the famous statue of the Goddess Kali, around whose neck is hung a necklace of precious stones and gold beads of inestimable value. This his wife ardently desires to possess and begs her husband to secure it. Unable to resist her pleadings, he sails for India and on reaching Bombay enlists the services of a guide to take him to the Sanctuary. They reach the sacred spot late in the night, but the guide, seized by a sudden fright, runs away. D'Arsac, revolver in hand, advances toward the statue, unclasps the necklace with trembling hands and starts to make his escape when, turning around, he fancies he sees the Goddess raising her hands as if in the act of cursing him. The sacrilege is discovered the next day and D'Arsac is easily traced to a tavern, where he is trying to dissipate the hideous nightmare with drink. Kali, the priestess, disguised as a man and Doura, a fakir of the secret cult, succeed in shipping as stokers on board D'Arsac's yacht, which at once starts on a return journey. They endeavor to secure the necklace while on board the yacht, but only succeed in arousing suspicion. Cutting a large hole above the waterline they jump overboard and swim to shore before their absence is discovered. D'Arsac arrives and presents the necklace to his wife. But a constant shadow seems to hang over them. Kali and Doura, though unseen, cast their spell on the desecrator and his wife. The Hindoos succeed in gaining an entrance to the villa, but not until they have been forced to climb a tree, from whence they see wild beasts roaming the park.

They enter the drawing-room, overpower the guard, seize the necklace and disappear. An electric appliance warns D'Arsac of their presence. He pulls a lever. A trap opens and the two Hindoos drop into a cage which slowly upsets in a cistern. By an act of Providence they are saved and escape by a subterranean passage leading to the sea. They engage a boat, but are followed by D'Arsac, who overtakes them, seizes the Hindoos and places them on board his yacht. When nearing Marseilles, Kali succeeds in breaking her bonds and jumps into the sea before D'Arsac and his men can prevent her. She manages to get to shore, exhausted, only to again fall into the hands of D'Arsac, who recovers possession of the necklace and leaves her on the shore half dead, where she is found several hours later by the gypsies. Misfortune after misfortune follows the household of D'Arsac, culminating in the supposed death of their daughter, who has been put into a hypnotic sleep under the powerful magnetic influence of Kali. Henrietta is taken violently ill at sight of her daughter in this condition and is threatened with a loss of reason. D'Arsac now has but one desire: to return the cursed necklace. He rushes toward the glass case, seizes the necklace and brandishes it madly. A hand touches his shoulder. Kali, silent, immovable, is behind him. The adventurer pulls out a revolver, which he soon drops under the steady, imperious gaze of the Priestess. He crawls at Kali's feet and pleads forgiveness. She takes the necklace and slowly retreats backward, D'Arsac dropping to the floor in a faint. Kali, overcome with pity, relents, and wakens the child. When D'Arsac regains consciousness, his wife and daughter are bending over him. The Priestess and the necklace have disappeared. Peace and quiet once more reign in the villa. The Priestess returns to India and the necklace once more graces the neck of the venerated idol.

---

Picture Theatres Projected

Buffalo, N. Y.—S. Jacobson, 978 Broadway, and others, are planning alterations to their theater building, to cost several thousand dollars.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Samuel Katz, Kinney Building, Newark, N. J., contemplates building a theater, 120 by 100 feet, to cost $100,000.

Chicago, Ill.—M. Flicht and S. Weinberger are to build a one-story theater, 25 by 125 feet, to cost $7,000.

Trenton, Mo.—John Rose, 1030 McPherson street, will build a two-story moving picture theater, 100 by 42 feet, to cost $20,000.

St. Paul, Minn.—J. Christian, South Roberts and Concord streets, will build a one-story moving picture theater, 38 by 106 feet, to cost $6,000.

Hamtramck, Mich.—Frederick Fisher will remodel his theater and increase the seating capacity to 400. The improvements will cost $3,500.

Evansville, Ind.—Philip Skora, 615 Upper Sixth street, will remodel his moving picture theater and install 150 additional seats.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Rauh Realty Company, S. E. Raub, president, are to build a one-story moving picture theater, to seat 500 persons.

Paducah, Ky.—R. C. Davis, 419 Broadway, contemplates building a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 105 feet, to cost $2,500.

Indianapolis, Ind.—John Victor and John B. Hubert, 786 Indiana avenue, have about completed plans for a one-story theater, with a seating capacity of 600.

Bloomsburg, Pa.—L. J. Chamberlin, Shamokin, Pa., is planning to build a one-story theater, 39 by 160 feet, to cost $10,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Anton Charvat, 1801 South Ashland avenue, has prepared plans for a one-story theater, 44 by 125 feet, seating capacity of 800 and to cost $25,000.

Cincinnati, O. — Alhambra Theater Company, Charles Wiegel, secretary, 144 West Fifth street, have awarded the contract to C. A. Rawlings, Merchants' Building, for the remodeling of their theater. The improvements will cost $3,000.

Dayton, O.—A. H. Williams is to build a twoing, 32 by 135 feet, to cost $10,000.

Perth Amboy, N. J.—Ditmas Theater Corporation, State street, contemplate erecting a moving picture and vaudeville theater in this town.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Jacob Kruszewski, Cane and Second streets, has started work on the erection of a new one-story moving picture theater, 32 by 105 feet, to cost $3,000.

East St. Louis, Mo.—B. A. Mueller, Arcade Building, is preparing plans for a one-story theater, to cost $15,000.

Kansas City, Mo.—E. E. Auchmoody, 639 Reserve Bank Building, is planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 122 feet, to cost $15,000.

New York, N. Y.—Solomon Bloom, 1451 Broadway, is planning to build a three-story theater, to cost $100,000. The seating capacity will be for 1,000 persons.

New York, N. Y.—Sonn brothers, 149 Church St., are to build a two-story theater and store building, 66 by 100 feet, to cost $25,000. Haring & Blumenthal are the lessees.

New York, N. Y.—Koppe & Moore, 830 Westchester avenue, have completed plans for alterations and additions to a local theater building. The seating capacity will be increased to 3,500. New Hunts Point Theater Company, southwest corner of Westchester avenue and Fox street are the lessees.

Fremont, O.—Richardson & Yost, 354 Rockefeller Building, Cleveland, O., are preparing plans for the remodeling of the first floor of a commercial building into a moving picture theater, to cost $10,000. There will be seating capacity for 300.

Lakewood, O.—William L. Wilson, druggist, 1160 Detroit avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, will build a two-story moving picture theater and store building, 44 by 140 feet, to cost $15,000. The theater will seat 500 persons. The owner will occupy the store for drug business.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Lawrence V. Boyd, Harrison Building, has completed plans for a fire-proof and sanitary moving picture theater to be erected at Midvale avenue and Frederick street. The building will be constructed of brick and rough casted, and will have seating capacity of 500.

Catasauqua, Pa.—J. G. Sacks has postponed for several months the building of a one-story moving picture theater in this town.

Allentown, Pa.—Channock and Sanderowitz are to build a five-story theater and office building, 30 by 230 feet, to cost $50,000.

Chicago, Ill.—J. B. Watson is planning to build a one and two-story theater, store and office building, 150 by 100 feet. The theater will have capacity for 550 persons. The building will also include ten stores and eight offices.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Peuckert & Wunder are preparing plans for a moving picture theater to be Maspeth, L. I., N. Y.—Albert Rocker, 90 Woodbine street, has had plans completed for a two-story moving picture theater, 41 by 125 feet, to cost $6,500.

MAKE MOVING PICTURES
WITH
Our Ideal Moving Picture Camera
Excellently constructed, beautifully finished, simple to operate, fitted up with a B. & L. Zeiss Tessar Lens, I. C., F 3-5, one of the best and fastest lenses in the market; holds 200 feet stock.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue
PRICE COMPLETE $75.00
Motion Picture Camera Co., Inc.
Dept. A 5 West 14th Street, New York

Kansas City, Mo.—M. Johnson, 39th street and Brooklyn avenue, has postponed indefinitely the building of a one-story moving picture theater, 60 by 120 feet, to cost $10,000.

St. Louis, Mo.—Knickerbocker Amusement Company, 3145 Park avenue, are to build an addition to their theater building.

Pawnee, Okla.—The Model Theater has just opened for business. Mr. Hughes, manager.

Chicago, Ill.—F. W. McKinney, 38 South Dearborn street, will build a theater and store building, two-story, 150 by 120 feet. The theater will have a seating capacity of 1,000.

Richmond, Va.—William C. West is preparing plans for a moving picture theater, to cost $15,000.

Omaha, Neb.—Clarence W. Wigington, 220 South 13th street, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 106 feet, to cost $5,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A permit has been issued to P. Savar to erect for Leviezk and Waldow a motion picture theater at 2219 North Twenty-ninth street. The theater will measure 59 by 151 feet, have seating capacity for 1,500 persons and cost $20,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John Sherman is preparing to build a one-story fire-proof moving picture theater at Armingo avenue and Belgrade street. The building will be 65 by 125 feet.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans have been completed by Hoffman & Company for a one-story moving picture theater, 105 by 140 feet, to be erected at the northeast corner of Market and Salford streets, for the Croskey Amusement Company.

Webster Grove, Me.—R. K. Kauffman, 119 North Eighth street, and associates, have had sketches prepared for a two-story theater, hall and natatorium, to cost $50,000.

Syracuse, N. Y.—A. F. Metzger, 123 Pond street, has let the contract to William M. Steele, Jr., 251 Gertrude street, for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 36 by 98 feet, to cost $7,000.

Auburn, N. Y.—George Morgan, 31 Grove street, has let the contract to C. J. Defendorf, 94 East Genessee street, for the erection of a two-story moving picture theater, 50 by 185 feet, to cost $20,0000.

Parsons, Kans.—Harry Strausberger is to erect a two-story theater and business building, 62 by 100 feet, to cost $40,000.

Des Moines, Ia.—A. H. Tuttle, 459 Twenty-seventh street, is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 70 by 70 feet, and to seat 500 persons.

St. Louis, Mo.—J. D. Paulus, Laclede Building, is preparing plans for a one-story theater, 60 by 127 feet.

Washington, D. C.—Staxon Amusement Company, Theo. Sloat, president, 332 Maryland avenue, N. C., are having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 75 feet, to cost $7,500.

Washington, D. C.—Feature Film Manufacturing Company, Harry Crandall, manager, Eleventh and Pennsylvania avenue, N. W., have had plans prepared for the remodeling of their moving picture theater, so as to increase the seating capacity. The improvements are estimated to cost $25,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—R. H. Bogg, Sewickley, Pa., is having plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater, 44 by 100 feet, to cost about $50,000, to be erected in this city. The theater will have a seating capacity of 800 to 1,000.

Woodsville, N. H.—Richard Henderson, Wells River, Vt., has plans about completed for a three-story moving picture theater, hotel and store building, 57 by 137 feet, to cost $35,000.

New Bedford, Mass.—V. E. Collettee, 105 Bowditch street, has had plans prepared for a one-story theater, 60 x 125 feet.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Timothy Carl, 179 Murray street, is to build a one-story theater, 41 by 73 feet, to cost $8,000.

Easton, Pa.—Calvin J. Young, 520 Washington street, Reading, Pa., is preparing plans and specifications for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 140 feet, to be erected for the modern Amusement Company, of Easton, Pa.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Schwartz & Company, 87 Richardson street, are having plans and specifications prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $5,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—John McKeen and William Cocoran, 413 Smith street, are having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 100 feet, to cost $5,500.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Von Beren & La Velle, 507 Fifth avenue, New York City, are preparing plans and specifications for a two-story moving picture theater and roof garden, to cost $35,000. The theater will have seating capacity for 1,200 persons.

New York City, N. Y.—Henry Ives Cobb, 527 Fifth avenue, has prepared sketches for the Edwin Booth Memorial Theater.

Ladd, Ill.—L. Grivetti has received bids for the building of a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 100 feet. It will have seating capacity for 350 persons.

Hazard, Ky.—A. Zoeller, Jeffersonville, Ind., is planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, 31 by 100 feet.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—S. Jacobson, 978 Broadway, and M. Slotkin, 537 William street, and others, are having plans prepared for alterations to the Lafayette Theater.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—Victor Charas is planning to build a four-story theater and office building, 100 by 146 feet, to cost between $75,000 and $80,000.

THE CHILD DETECTIVE

(Three Parts—75 Scenes)

THE Box Office Record Breaker
THE State Right Buyer's Live Wire
THE Fastest Seller Ever Made

SO

GET BUSY AND WIRE NOW FOR YOUR TERRITORY

ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEET POSTERS. HERALDS AND HAND COLORED PHOTOS

BELMONT FILM CO.

145 WEST 45th ST. Suite 710 NEW YORK CITY

---

ELECTRA

CARBONS

Brilliant white light with steady, noiseless burning, has been the distinguishing quality that has made

"ELECTRA" Pink Label Carbons

the choice of well-informed operators. Their use insures a perfect arc, requiring least adjustment.

PINK ELECTRA LABEL

TRADE MARK

Hugo Reisinger, 11 Broadway, New York

Ridgewood, L. I., N. Y.—Ridgewood Amusement Company, Miss T. Bigall, president, 189 Eldert street, are having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 48 by 105 feet, to cost $10,000. The theater will have a seating capacity for 600 persons.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Arthur Gold, 302 Congress street, is to build a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 110 feet, to cost $7,000.

Lowell, Mass.—Harry P. Graves, Glidden Building, has prepared plans for a one story theater, to cost $25,000.

Frankfort, Ky.—James Taylor, 215 South Clair street, contemplates building a one and two-story moving picture theater, to cost $10,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Federal Sign System Company have taken out a permit to erect an electric sign on the new Fairmount Theater, northwest corner of Twenty-sixth street and Girard avenue, for J. Fred Zimmerman. The sign will cost $600.

Philadelphia, Pa.—George W. Stewart has secured the contract to remodel the stable property on the east side of Mascher street, south of Cambria, for the Victor Amusement Company. The theater will cost about $5,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Stuckert & Sloan are preparing plans for a moving picture theater, 40 by 15 feet, to be erected at the southeast corner of Fifty-second street and Wyalusing avenue, for Fred Felt & Bros. The building will cost approximately $12,000.

Bax Axe, Mich.—Knights of Columbus, J. S. Fremont, chairman of building committee, are having plans prepared for a three story F. of C. hall, store and theater building, 60 by 100 feet, to cost $30,000.

Rochester, Minn.—Commercial Club, care Fred Schuster, 205 West College avenue, are considering building a two-story club house and theater, 40 by 135 feet, to cost $30,000.

Duluth, Minn.—Ribeneek Brothers, care Lenox Hotel, have awarded the contract for the remodeling of a store property into a modern moving picture theater, located at 315 West Superior street. The theater will have seating capacity for 400 persons. The improvements will cost $25,000.

Fitchburg, Mass.—S. J. Ledger has been awarded the contract to build a one-story theater, 54 by 128 feet, for P. F. Shea.

Superior, Wis.—Alexander McKenzie, 1708 Winter street, has obtained the contract to erect a theater, 25 by 140 feet, to cost $25,000, for the Interstate Theater Company, care S. C. Buckley. The theater will have seating capacity for 500 persons.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Gottfried Strausser, 885 Humboldt Parkway, has let the contract for the erection of a one-story theater, 80 by 110 feet, to cost $40,000.

Duquoin, Ill.—Harry Eaton has been awarded the contract for the erection of a two-story moving picture theater, 40 by 100 feet, to cost about $15,000, for Reed & Yemm. The theater will seat 800.

Los Angeles, Cal.—H. L. McAllister and J. M. Dobbins, are to build a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 169 by 183 by 36 by 121 feet, to cost about $35,000. Carl Ray is the lessee.

Richmond, Va.—W. C. West, Merchants' Bank Building, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 28 by 130 feet, to cost $12,000.

Aikin, Minn.—B. H. Hungerford is planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, 27 by 112 feet, and to have a seating capacity of 400.

Philadelphia, Pa.—It is reported that the properties at 1610 to 1614 South street have been acquired by John A. Barry, and will be demolished shortly to provide a site for a moving picture theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Henry L. Brown is estimating on plans and specifications for a theater building to be erected at Manayunk, Pa.

Minneapolis, Minn.—S. L. Tothapfel manager of the Lyric Theater on Hennepin avenue, contemplates building a theater and store building to cost $15,000. The theater will have seating capacity for 2,250 persons.

Reidsville, N. C.—Lee & Diehl, Seaboard Bank Building, Norfolk, Va., is preparing plans for a two-story theater, 45 by 72 feet, to cost $30,000. It will be a brick structure.

Akron, O.—A. D. Wilhelm, 748 Grant street, will build a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 120 feet, to cost $5,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—S. L. Rothapfel and Saxe Brothers, care Rogers Hotel, contemplate building a moving picture and vaudeville theater, two stories, and to have seating capacity for 2,500 persons.

Indianapolis, Ind.—V. H. Winterrowd, Lombard Building, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 40 by 100 feet. Beside the theater, which will have a seating capacity of 500, there will be two stores on the ground floor.

Baltimore, Md.—Walbrook Amusement Company, care R. S. Williams, 801 Gaither Estate Building, are considering plans for a one-story moving picture theater.

Baltimore, Md.—Poplar Amusement Company, Poplar Grove street, near Harlem avenue, have completed plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 86 by 26 feet, to cost $5,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Herman Miller is preparing plans and specifications for a moving picture theater, 79 by 127 feet, to be erected at Hunting Park and Germantown avenues.

New York, N. Y.—Cramp & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., have closed a contract and will shortly begin work on the construction of a new $700,000 theater, store and office building at the northwest corner of Forty-seventh street and Broadway, New York, for the Mitchell H. Marks Realty Co. The building will occupy 40,000 square feet of floor space, and the auditorium will seat 3,500 persons. The site which the new building will occupy was formerly used by the Brewster Carriage Works.

Franklin, Pa.—F. J. Dron contemplates building in the late fall a modern moving picture theater

Peru, Ill.—A local stock company has been formed, and preliminary plans are being prepared for a three-story moving picture theater and club house which it proposes to build. C. Nadler has been selected as chairman of the building committee.

Chicago, Ill.—George S. Kingsby, 186 North La Salle street, is preparing plans and specifications for a one-story moving picture theater.

Chicago, Ill.—McCarty Brothers, 10 South La Salle street, have obtained the contract to build a two-story moving picture theater, 160 by 55 feet, to cost $35,000, for L. F. Schmal.

Chicago, Ill.—William Arthur Bennett, 35 South Dearborn street, is preparing plans for a one-story theater 66 by 125 feet, to cost $75,000. The theater will have a balcony and seating capacity for 1,200 persons.

Freeland, Pa.—S. T. Fredericks, Hazleton, Pa., has been awarded the contract to build a two story theater, 50 by 130 feet, to cost $7,000, for Ravowich Brothers, Pottsville, Pa.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—John H. Timble & Bro., 2202 Chateau street, has been awarded the contract, and will soon start work on the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 24 by 120 feet, to cost $15,000, for J. B. and Charles Walker, 1326 Junita street, north side.

Bangor, Me.—Otto Nelson Company, 194 Exchange street, has obtained the contract to build a two-story theater 75 by 112 feet, to cost $40,000, for the Graham Realty Company, Graham Building.

Rochester, N. Y.—Charles Parker, 23 Boardman street, has let the contract for the erection of a moving picture theater, 66 by 72 feet, to cost $13,000.

Yankton, So. Dak.—Students of the University of South Dakota are preparing plans and will build an open air theater, 30 by 140 feet.

St. Paul, Minn.—H. E. Erickson, 68 Union Building, who has prepared plans for a moving picture theater, 48 by 100 feet, and to cost $15,000, is being held in abeyance.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Louis C. Hickman has completed plans for the Gibson Moving Picture Theater, to be erected at the corner of Sixteenth and South streets.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Samuel Devonshire has been awarded a contract to build a $40,000 moving picture theater for William Sachsenmaier, on the south side of Haverford avenue, east of Sixty-third street. It will be a one-story brick structure, 58 by 177 feet, on a 75-foot wide lot. The seating capacity will be 1,400.

Philadelphia, Pa.—John McKenna & Son are estimating on plans and specifications for a theater and hall to be erected on Chelten avenue, Germantown, for the West End Realty Company.

Kenosha, Wis.—Walter M. Burke and M. J. Isermann have invited bids for the purpose of building a theater, store and office building on Market square.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Peter Fischer has had plans completed for a one-story theater, 30 by 100 feet.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Frederick Brothers, 310 Leonard street, northwest, are planning to build a one-story theater and store building, 40 by 70 feet, to cost $5,000. There will be two stores on the ground floor. The theater will have seating capacity of 342.

Detroit, Mich.—J. Goose, 174 Farnsworth avenue, will remodel a store property into a modern two-story moving picture theater. It will have seating capacity for 400 persons.

Detroit, Mich.—F. Swirsky, 222 Broadway Market Building, has prepared plans for a two-story theater and store building. There will be four stores on the ground floor. The theater will seat about 450 persons.

Sturgis, Ky.—E. H. Long is preparing to build a two-story moving picture theater, 25 by 125 feet.

Cincinnati, O.—Corcoran Brothers, Colerain and Sassafras streets, are planning to erect a two-story moving picture theater, 75 by 150 feet, to cost $75,000.

Washington, D. C.—J. R. Sherwood, 905 Louisiana avenue, northwest, have had plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater, 26 by 90 feet, to cost $18,000. There will be seating capacity for 1,600 persons.

Philadelphia, Pa.—James G. Doak & Co., were granted a permit for the erection of a $100,000 theater for the Stanley Realty Company, at 1614 to 1622 Market street. The theater will be of fireproof construction, with an 1800 seating capacity, and occupy a lot 70 by 176 feet.

Akron, O.—Ozier & McCready, 79 South Main street, have plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 120 feet, to cost $12,000.

Akron, O.—Metropolitan Amusement Company are to build a two-story moving picture theater and store building, 68 by 180 feet, to cost $60,000.

Greenwich, Conn.—F. Kreamer, Greenwich avenue, contemplates building a two-story theater, store and office building.

Baltimore, Md.—C. W. Demme, 1713 Harford avenue, is to build a one-story moving picture theater, 20 by 60 feet, to cost $4,000.

Allentown, Pa.—[illegible] & [illegible] are to build a five-story theater and office building, 30 by 230 feet, to cost $50,000.

Tamaqua, Pa.—Local stock company formed in this city, are planning to build a three-story theater and hotel building, 68 by 150 feet, to cost $100,000.

Paterson, N. J.—Jacob Fabian, 200 Main street, has had plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, restaurant and roof garden, 120 by 120 feet. The theater will have seating capacity for 1,800 persons.

Augusta, Me.—Acme Amusement Company, Inc., have purchased a site and later on will erect a modern moving picture theater thereon.

Pittsfield, Me.—L. St. Ledger will build a two-story moving picture theater, hall and store building, 43 by 100 feet, in the near future.

Portland, Me.—Nickel Amusement Company, 526 Congress street, will shortly start work to make alterations to their moving picture theater.

Lowville, N. Y.—E. J. Wolfe, care the Bijou Theater, is planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 90 feet, to cost $5,000. It will seat 450 persons.

St. Paul, Minn.—Hammond Amusement Company are to remodel a store property into a moving picture theater. The alterations will cost $2,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—W. L. Harris, care New England House Furnishing Company, is having plans prepared for a new playhouse, to be known as the Garden Theater.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Oscar Wolbrock, 2516 Hoagland avenue, is planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, 35 by 100 feet. Seating capacity, 350.

Cleveland, O.—Oliver M. Chamberlain, 1105 Schofield Building, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 32 by 78 feet, to cost $7,500. Seating capacity, 285.

Washington, D. C.—B. F. Myers, Bond Building, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $5,000.

Newark, N. J.—Atlantic Amusement Company are having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater and roof garden, 50 by 109 feet, to cost $10,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Kathrine C. Haas has sold to John F. McMahon, the moving picture theater on the north side of Morris street, 70 feet east of ninth street, lot 32 by 112 feet, for a consideration of $10,000, subject to an annual ground rent of $510.

Philadelphia, Pa.—B. F. Miller, 225 South Third street, is taking bids on alterations to a moving picture theater at 1706 South Seventh street.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Central Amusement Company will have plans prepared in the near future for a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 60 feet, to be erected by it on North Nineteenth street. Building to have a seating capacity of about 500 persons.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Joseph W. Kline, 2530 North Broad street, has been awarded the contract for a one-story moving picture theater, 44 by 88 feet, to be erected at 1528-30 York street, for George Schinn, to cost about $12,000.

Overbrook, Pa.—H. Werner, of Philadelphia, Pa., is preparing revised plans for a moving picture theater, to be erected for Charles Weinberg., Building to be one-story brick, 48 by 120 feet.

Bloomsburg, Pa.—Benjamin Rush Stevens, 1701 Filbert street, Philadelphia, Pa., has completed plans and specifications for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 100 feet, for William Fegley. The cost will be about $15,000.

Scranton, Pa.—Blackwood & Nelson, 424 Lackawanna Building, are preparing plans and specifications for a three-story brick, stone and terra cotta theater building, to be erected on Wyoming avenue, for Myer Davidson. It will cost about $60,000.

Center Point, Ia.—R. R. Mayberry, 420 Grandby Building, Cedar Rapids, Ia., has prepared plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 42 by 92 feet, to cost $10,000. The building will have a gallery and seating capacity of 600.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A. Lawrence Volk, 933 Union Oil Building, has prepared plans for a two-story theater, 80 x 130 feet, to cost $40,000. It is to be known as the Theater De Luxe.

Columbus, O.—Fred Raymond has obtained the contract, and will soon start work on the one-story brick moving picture theater, for S. M. Virden, 578 East Fifth avenue, to cost $2,500.

Longbeach, Cal.—Kohn Amusement Company, Samuel Berkowitz, secretary, are to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 112 feet. Building will have seating capacity of 1,000.

Bergholz, O.—Herman J. Wagner, 24 Eagle block, Canton, O., has prepared plans for a two-story vaudeville and moving picture theater, 40 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000. There will be seating capacity for 500 persons.

Frankfort, Ky.—James C. Taylor will remodel his moving picture theater, to cost $3,000.

Detroit, Mich.—Preston & Walker, 1932 Dime Bank Building, has prepared plans for a two-story theater, store and flat building, 41 x 95. There will be one store on ground floor, and two flats on the second floor. Theater will have seating capacity for 400 persons.

St. Louis, Mo.—Albert Seitvich, 3705 Minnesota avenue, has had plans completed for a one-story theater building 60 by 127 feet.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Joseph L. Murphy, Storey Building, intends to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 150 feet, to cost about $20,000.

St. Paul, Minn.—David Comb & Son, Lumber Exchange Building, have been awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story moving picture the-

GOING! GOING!

AND WILL SOON BE GONE

A MESSAGE from MARS

A FANTASTICAL PHOTO-DRAMA IN FOUR PARTS, FEATURING

CHARLES HAWTREY

The famous English actor, supported by an all-star cast

SOME STATES STILL OPEN——————WIRE AND YOU MAY GET YOURS

"A MESSAGE FROM MARS" is the first release of the UNITED KINGDOM FILMS on this side. The next will be an ENGLISH HISTORICAL ROMANCE, surrounding "KING CHARLES," featuring the Battle of Worcester, altogether a glorious production. Get your name on our books.

JAMES McENNERY, American Representative, Care "The Billboard" Heidelberg Bldg., New York

THE UNITED KINGDOM FILMS, Ltd., LONDON, ENGLAND

ater, 61 by 78 feet, for W. L. Mansfield, Temple Court.

Rock Island, Ill.—H. Paulson, 21 Safety Building, has obtained the contract to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 36 by 76 feet, to cost $10,000, for D. Brady, 700 Twelfth street. The theater will have seating capacity of 400. The lessee is J. P. Quinn, care Majestic Theater.

Pensacola, Fla.—Bids were due, on October 15, for the erection of a two-story moving picture theater, invited by Nathaniel Karser and M. J. Elkau, owners. The lessee is Herman Fichtenberg.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Acme Metal Ceiling Company, 2295 Second avenue, New York City, have been awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 100 feet, to cost $5,000, for John Tedesco and J. A. De Elice.

Tamaqua, Pa.—W. H. Lee, Shamokin, Pa., is preparing plans and specifications for a $10,000 moving picture theater for F. L. Chamberlain, Shamokin, Pa.

Beechview, Pa.—E. H. Johnson is having plans prepared by a Pittsburgh architect, for a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 85 feet, to cost $8,000.

North Bend, Pa.—Renovo and North Bend Transfer Company, are planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, 33 by 108 feet, to cost $4,500.

McKeesport, Pa.—D. L. Clark, 503 Martindale street, Pittsburgh, is to build a moving picture theater, 26 by 110 feet, to cost $10,000, at 528 East Ohio street.

Washington, D. C.—Avalon Amusement Company are to build a one-story moving picture theater, 63 by 122 feet, to cost $10,000.

Washington, D. C.—Anton Heitmuller, 1307 Fourteenth street, representing the owner, contemplates building a one-story moving picture theater, 94 by 44 feet, to cost $8,000.

Lakewood, O.—Oliver N. Chamberlin, 1105 Schofield Building, Cleveland, is preparing plans and specifications for a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 112 feet, to cost $12,000. Building will seat 600 persons.

Philadelphia, Pa.—M. Haller will have plans prepared for a one-story brick and terra cotta moving picture theater, to be erected in the southern section of the city.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Record has been made of the transfer of the Standard Theater, located at 1126 to 1134 South street, to Frances Adler for a nominal consideration. The theater, which was remodeled from an old church, about fifteen years ago, occupies a lot 75 by 120 feet to Kater. It is assessed for $50,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—George W. Stewart & Company, have in contemplation the erection of a moving picture theater, 50 x 140 feet, at 2119 to 2123 Germantown avenue, for the Cohocksink Amusement Company.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Hoffman Company are preparing plans for a moving picture theater, to be erected on Market street.

Chicago, Ill.—Joseph H. O'Neil, 226 South La Salle street, is having plans prepared for a three-story theater and store building, comprising lodge, dance hall and cafe, 88 by 120 feet, to cost $60,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Robert Levine, 814 West 64th street, is to build a one-story theater, 48 by 123 feet, seating capacity of 600, to cost $15,000.

Chicago, Ill.—It has been announced that the Drexel Square Theater Company are to have plans and specifications prepared for a modern fireproof theater. The structure is to be a three-story one.

New York, N. Y.—Murphy Construction Company, 50 Church street, are planning to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 100 by 165 feet, to cost $35,000.

New York, N. Y.—Joseph Kern has completed plans for a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $15,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Pitkin, Cleveland Co., 24 Court street, are to build a one-story moving picture theater, 38 by 100 feet, to cost $15,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Marcy Amusement Co., 862 Manhattan avenue, have had plans and specifications prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 72 by 43 by 105 feet, to cost $8,000.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Jacob Weber and Peter Kern are planning to build a large, modern moving picture theater, 49 by 108 feet, with seating capacity of 1,300, to cost $30,000.

East Boston, Mass.—Nathan Douglas, 307 Harvard street, Cambridge, Mass., is preparing plans theater, 50 by 130 feet.

Schenectady, N. Y.—S. P. Clute, 1481 State street, is to build a one-story moving picture theater, 24 by 80 feet, to cost $5,000.

Gloversville, N. Y.—Cady & Dartch have had plans prepared for a three-story theater, store and office building, 67 by 156 feet, to cost $50,000. There will be two stores on the ground floor and four offices on the upper floors.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—John McKeon & Son, 413 Smith street, are to build a one-story moving picture theater, 20 by 100 feet, to cost $5,500.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Charles N. Ohlan, 788 New Lots road, is planning to build a one-story moving picture theater, 47 by 100 feet, to cost $8,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—P. Piscia, 277 Driggs street, will build a one-story moving picture theater, 26 by 100 feet, to cost $9,000. The theater will have seating capacity for 370 persons.

Chicago, Ill.—J. Ettleson, 170 West Kinzie street, is to build a two-story theater, store and office and flat building. Plans and specifications are in preparation.

Peoria, Ill.—B. L. Hulsebus, 51 German Fire Insurance Building, is preparing preliminary plans for a one-story moving picture theater, to seat about 400 persons.

Roxbury, Mass.—James H. Griffin, 570 Columbia road, Dorchester, Mass., is having plans prepared for a one-story theater, to cost $35,000.

Seneca Falls, N. Y.—W. W. Mooney, proprietor of Mooney's Hotel, Westfield, N. J., is planning to build, in the late fall, a theater, store and office building, to cost $35,000. There will be two stores on the ground floor.

Binghamton, N. Y.—A. L. Willey, 20 McNamara Building, has awarded the contract for the erection of a five-story business building, 106 by 50 feet, to cost $30,000. There will be a large theater on the ground floor, while the upper stories will be occupied by a lighting manufacturer.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Philip Rosenson, 257 Driggs avenue, is to build a one-story moving picture theater, 48 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Concord Photoplay Company, 414 Sackett street, are to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 51 by 112 feet, to cost $26,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—St. Thomas Amusement Company, Inc., 292 Flatbush avenue, are planning an open air moving picture theater, 95 by 100 feet, to cost $2,500.

Washington, D. C.—Capital Amusement Company are to build a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 120 feet, to cost $10,000.

Carlisle, Ky.—J. A. Duncan has had plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 72 feet, to cost $5,000.

Clinton, Ind.—A local stock company is having preliminary plans prepared for a one-story balcony theater, with seating capacity of 800, to cost $17,000.

Terre Haute, Ind.—American Theater Company, Maurice Less, manager, 817 Wabash avenue, are to remodel their moving picture theater, at a cost of $12,000. The seating capacity will be increased to 1,000.

Tell City, Ind.—T. Berger has purchased a site upon which he intends to erect a two-story moving picture theater, to have a seating capacity of 300 or 400.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A. Laurence Volk, 933 Union Oil Building, is planning to build a one-story theater, 51 by 131 feet, to cost $20,000.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A. W. and C. S. Lord are to build a one-story moving picture theater, 52 by 100 feet, to cost $15,000.

Chicago, Ill.—O. Sollitt Construction Company, 3880 Dearborn street, have been awarded the contract to erect a one-story $25,000 theater for W. A. Giles.

Chicago, Ill.—L. G. Brenner is to build a one-story theater, 50 by 100 feet, with seating capacity for 1,000 persons.

Wilmette, Ill.—Henry J. Schlacks, 10 South La Salle street, is preparing plans for a two-story theater, store and office building, 56 by 130 feet.

New York, N. Y.—Manhattan Avenue Theater Corporation, Leon Sobel, president, 200 Manhattan avenue, are planning to build a two-story moving picture theater, 65 by 94 feet, to cost $20,000.

New York, N. Y.—S. B. Eskeson, 149 Broadway, is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 89 by 100 feet.

Washington, D. C.—Mrs. Taylor, 918 M street, N. W., is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 38 by 29 feet, to cost $5,000.

Akron, O.—W. J. Dowl, 806 Bowery street, will build a one-story moving picture theater, 28 by 98 feet, to cost $6,000. The seating capacity will be about 350.

Akron, O.—O. E. Jarrett, 373 South Maple street, is planning to build, in the near future, a one-story moving picture theater, 40 by 100 feet, to cost $8,000. Seating capacity, 350.

Conneaut, O.—Conneaut Theater Company are having plans prepared for a two-story theater, 61 by 113 feet, to cost $27,000.

Painesville, O.—Knox & Elliot, 1248 Rockerfeller Building, Cleveland, O., are preparing plans for the remodeling of an old building into a modern moving picture theater, to cost $10,000. The seating capacity will be 300.

Ashland, Ky.—Moore Bros., 318 Greenup street, are having plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater, store and apartment building, 50 by 120 feet, to cost $15,000. There will be three apartments on the upper floor. The theater will have seating capacity of 250.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Wile Bros., 324 East Columbia street, contemplate erecting a seven-story theater and office building.

Highland Park, Mich.—C. G. Finster, 2984 Woodward avenue, Detroit, is preparing plans for a one-story moving picture theater.

Long Beach, Cal.—Kuhn Amusement Company, care George W. McLester, president of the Pacific States Investment Company, 125 South Broadway, Los Angeles, are planning to erect a theater 50 by 100 feet.

Denver, Colo.—John Thompson is to build a two-story moving picture theater, 50 by 100 feet, to cost $20,000.

Troy, N. Y.—Charles P. Boland, 30 Fourth street, has been awarded the contract for a five-story theater and apartment building, 150 by 130 feet, to cost $150,000, to be erected for Frederick F. Proctor, 1493 Broadway, New York City.

Binghamton, N. Y.—N. I. Ford, Phelps Building, has been awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story theater, 41 by 73 feet, to cost $8,000, for Timothy Carl, 179 Murray street.

Syracuse, N. Y.—William Cahill, Franklin and East Washington streets, will build a theater with a seating capacity of 1,600, to cost $75,000.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Garden Theater Company, care Charles L. Sherrill, Morgan Building, are planning to make alterations to their theater building, to cost $12,000.

Long Island City, L. I., N. Y.—John Holley, 3 John street, has completed plans for a one-story moving picture theater, 25 by 148 feet, to cost $12,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—R. Mendelson, Fort Hamilton avenue and 38th street, will make alterations to his moving picture theater to cost $5,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sarah Miller, 716 Nostrand avenue, will alter dwelling houses into a modern two-story moving picture theater, to cost $10,000. The seating capacity will be 600.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Harvey O. Wilkins is preparing plans and specifications for a one-story moving picture theater, to seat about 800 persons. Building to be of brick, terra cotta and reinforced concrete. Cost estimated at $12,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—F. J. Boas is estimating on plans and specifications for alterations and additions to the Gayety Theater, at Eighth and Vine streets, for John J. Jermon.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Mrs. S. H. VanMays has awarded the contract to the Alta Plaining Mill Company, 830 McGarry street, for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 100 by 125 feet. Cost at about $20,600.

Rochester, N. Y.—Flower City Amusement Company, 236 Powers Building, have awarded the contract to A. Frederick & Sons Co., 106 Mill street, for the erection of a two-story moving picture theater and office building, 41 by 100 feet, to cost $12,000.

East Orange, N. J.—Progressive Investment Company, 800 Broad street, Newark, N. J., are planning to build a moving picture theater here with a seating capacity for 400 persons.

East Orange, N. J.—Mrs. Mariannia H. Pickey, 164 Main street, has completed plans for a new moving picture theater to be built probably in the late fall.

Austin, Minn.—L. D. Baird is having plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater, store and flat building, 75 by 96 feet, to cost $20,000. The theater will seat 551 persons.

FILMS MADE TO ORDER

DEVELOPING, PRINTING, PERFORATING, TINTING
BY MY NEW FILM FINISHING PROCESS.
Film Titles, Plastic and Regular Lantern Slides.
30 PATENTS. 30 YEARS EXPERIENCE.
Don't Entrust Your Film Work to Amateurs Using Junk Cameras
I EXCLUSIVELY USE AND SELL THE Junior Professional Camera
GREATEST CAMERA ON EARTH
NEGATIVES REALLY BEAUTIFUL
Exclusively used by the U. S. GOVERNMENT, Museums, Institutions, WAR DEPT., PATHE FRERES,-Travellers and small Mfgrs. Developing Outfits, Printers, Polishers, Counters.
RAW FILM, ALL SUPPLY. Original CARL ZEISS TESSAR LENSES. All Repairs.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUES
Kinema Laboratories
ENTIRE BUILDING 4 FLOORS
Eberhard Schneider
210 SECOND AVE.
New York

Now is the Time of Year to Commence

SYSTEM

If you are not putting system in your business now, you never will. Five years ago I discovered that 60% of Exhibitors had no auditing system, much less bookkeeping records. That prompted me to publish now that 60% are using a SYSTEM whereby they KNOW at the end of each week every cent received—what became of each ticket—where the money went in expenses—separating every single item (9 in all). Even recording the weather, besides films and vaudeville.

The Theatre Record Ledger System—

I WILL DO THE SAME FOR YOU

Send me $2.50 (plus 20 cents postage), and I will mail you a THEATER RECORD LEDGER SYSTEM, with the understanding that if my SYSTEM is not far superior to the one you are now using your money will be refunded.

THE THEATRE RECORD LEDGER SYSTEM
J. V. Bryson, Pres.
252 Hennepin Minneapolis

BE A MANAGER

and not an ordinary EXHIBITOR. A manager of a house, no matter the size, is the man who is always SCHEMING to increase his receipts. The EXHIBITOR is the man who shows films and lets it go at that. BE A MANAGER and look into our BUSINESS BOOSTING POST CARDS. Nothing will stop the public from collecting their favorites. Nothing can draw them better than a gift with every admission on dull nights, of a SEMI-PHOTO—PHOTOPLAYER.

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand: formerly sold for $4.00. Over 300 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 30 of the most popular Association players, $10.00 per thousand.

Photo Post Cards

for hand coloring. NOTE: The public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—30 Association Players $5.00 per thousand

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 300 different names, 20 cents each

LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz., 43 prominent players

LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.

Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of Kalem, Lubin and Edison, and also all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Set of 12, $2.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release

Lobby frames to hold 12 pictures with necessary cards $6.00 each

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 300 players and samples free. We will send full descriptive matter of all our products. GET ON OUR MAIL LIST.

It's pictures you are selling

and as your pictures are good or bad, your business is good or bad. You can't have good pictures unless your lens equipment is the best, and you can't have the best lens equipment unless you have

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

They insure pictures that are absolutely true to life, and bring out every detail of a film story with brilliant clearness and distinctness.

Equip your machine with Bausch & Lomb objectives and condensers, the choice of discriminating operators everywhere.

Regularly supplied with the Edison and Nicholas Power Machines, and procurable from any film exchange.

Our free booklet contains much of interest to owners and operators. It is well worth writing for.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

566 ST. PAUL STREET ROCHESTER, N. Y.

MR. EXHIBITOR: Don't miss this chance. You can book

THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG 5 REELS

at the most reasonable terms from any office of the MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION

A Foreign Trade Note from the Moving Picture World of November 8th

I referred some weeks ago to the success of the American production, "THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG." The appreciation of the British public for this class of film cannot be disputed, in view of the fact this subject has appeared in nearly 350 different towns, and at as many as eight to a dozen theatres in some.

New York Motion Picture Corporation, Longacre Bldg. New York City

EYE COMFORT LIGHTING System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium..............................
Ceiling Height..............................
Width of House..............................
Name..............................

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.

Chicago
229 W. Jackson Blvd.

New York
505 Fifth Ave.

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY

(Incorporated)

1301 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines Repaired by Expert Mechanics. Genuine Parts Only Used

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens
Chairs
Tickets
Pianos
Bio & Electra Carbons
Special Gundlach Lenses
Condensers
Edison Transformers
Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Asbestos State Booths
Asbestos Wire
Switches
Plugs
Spotlights
Gas Making Outfits
Limes
Film-Cement
Branch General Disinfectant Co.
Scenery, Stage Effects
Theaters Bought, Sold Rented

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

ANNOUNCEMENT

TO STATE RIGHT BUYERS AND EXCHANGES IN PARTICULAR; TO CIRCUIT MANAGERS IN GENERAL

WE have made all the arrangements for a regular semi-monthly release of not less than a three-reel exclusive FEATURE, by procuring some of the best creations of leading European film producers. We have on hand, at present, enough productions to assure our customers the regularity of our releases for a few months to come.

We have purposely released three productions simultaneously, so as to give you LEEWAY in this particular instance.

The Photography, the Acting, the Plot, and last but not least, the Artistic Touch—the Atmosphere is ALL THERE.

"THE GREAT LURE OF PARIS"

A Mystery of Parisian Cosmopolitan Life in 3 Parts

"JUSTICE OR LOVE?"

A Psychological Drama in 3 Parts

"SALVATION"

A Domestic Drama in 4 Parts

A most attractive line of multicolored paper in regular sizes, artistic photos, and literary heralds.

Hitch your Wagon on to a RISING STAR. There are THINGS to come Yet . . . . .

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

Candler Building
220 West 42d St., New York City
'Phone, Bryant 8486

---

EXCHANGE MEN!

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING!

"80 Million Women Want--?"

An absorbing story of love, intrigue and clever detective work.

The "Fair Suffragette" defeats the political boss after a struggle in which her lover is involved.

A PICTURE WITH A PUNCH

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch are featured in this film.

UNIQUE FILM CO.

110 W. 40th St., New York

We Knew We Had to Convince You That

LACLEDE WESTERN FEATURES

are to become

"YOUR" FEATURES

---

In Producing

"The Pale Face Squaw"

We Spared Neither Expense Nor Time

We put our best foot forward and
We'll Keep it Forward

---

Fourteen buyers have contracted for the services of

"The Pale Face Squaw"

Will you give her a chance next?

---

FILMS LLOYDS, Inc.
220 West 42nd St., New York City

---

A BIO BOOSTER

is what every user of the famous

BIO CARBONS

invariably becomes. This is but natural since the admirable results obtained therewith of

MOVING PICTURE PROJECTIONS

are so vastly superior to the use of the common carbons—no matter under what brand.

JUST BECAUSE

They
BURN STEADIER
BURN CLEARER
BURN BRIGHTER
BURN LONGER
AND WITH LESS CURRENT

BIO CARBONS

THEY ARE WHAT YOU WANT.

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St.
MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St.
SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

MANAGER—And Weekly Program Writer with [illegible] at liberty after Nov. 1. Address A. D., 27 Mason St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

LIVE WIRE MANAGER—Open for engagement after Jan. 1st. 15 years experience. An expert mechanical operator, gas or electricity. First class electrician, capable of installing complete electric light plant, also do some sign writing. Can build or remodel entire theater. Want to connect with reliable party. If you do not believe in advertising don't write. I get results and biggest quality of pictures, and the money. Prefer Middle West. Best references. Address L. W. MANAGER, Waukegan, Ill.

PICTURE PIANIST—At liberty, orchestra experience. Sober and reliable. Best references. Address PIANIST, Lock Box 123, Marshall, Mo.

MANAGER—Seven years experience, thorough knowledge of the business. References. Address S. J. B., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—Experienced house manager, vaudeville director, producer and business getter. Address RALPH A. MARCHAND, 63 Wendell St., N., Cambridge, Mass.

COMBINATION—Singer and drummer at liberty. Voice tenor. Carry all sound effects. State all, and highest salary in first letter. A1 references. Ten years experience. Go anywhere you say. Address ROBERT FOURNIER, Gardner Theater, Gardner, Mass.

CAMERAMAN—And commercial photographer open for engagement. Special pictures made for exhibitors anywhere. Address J. F., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

FIRST CLASS—Operator wishes position. State salary. Address GEO. ANDERSON, 222 Sixth St., Niagara Falls, N. Y.

HELP WANTED.

AGENTS—Wanted everywhere for the [illegible]. Attractive [illegible] and [illegible]. See display advertisement. Address HYGIENIC SPECIALTY CO., Greensburg, Pa.

WANTED—First class operator. Not [illegible] operator. Address H. B. FRANKS, Grand Theater, Macomb, Ill.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

WURLITZER ORCHESTRIAN FOR SALE—Electric Style C, with all attachments, good condition. Used in Moving Picture Theater. Last price, $1,400. Will sell for $400. Address M. R. STERN, Chattanooga, Tenn.

PIPE AND REED ORGANS—New and used for moving picture theaters. Large stock, immediate delivery. Write your requirements. Address HUME, 51-608 South Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—$1,250 Wurlitzer Electric Orchestra. Used a little over a year. $500 takes it. Address K. A. R., care of Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Picture and vaudeville houses from $500 to $30,000 in Los Angeles and southern California. JACK E. CLOYD Company, 512 South Hill St., Los Angeles, Cal.

PICTURE SHOW—For sale, in good, live Nebraska town. Excellent reasons for selling. Address A. R. K., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE—At public auction on premises on Nov. 15, 1913, at 2:30 P. M., a partially completed moving picture theater, a fifteen-year leasehold, and all material on ground. Building ready for roof, frame for roof on ground. Seat 550. Plans approved by the State. Appraised at $5,500. Terms cash. Contractor will agree to complete building. JOSH O. HARBAUGH, Assignee, Piqua, Ohio.

FOR SALE—Largest picture house in state. Seat 700. Large stage. Five dressing rooms. Running all of the 'big' stuff. Owner must leave before Jan. 1st. Will sacrifice for quick sale. 5 & 10c., get advance price easy. If you mean biz., come on. Address PALACE THEATER, Salina, Kansas.

BEAUTIFUL MOVING PICTURE THEATER—For sale, capacity 250. New Power's 6A machine and everything complete. In centre of town. Thirty-five thousand population. Address H. V. SNITGER, Prop., 882 Canal St., Beaver, Pa.

FOR SALE—On account of an accident to myself which will keep me out of the game for some time I will sell the Gem Theater and Gem Airdome, which are connected. Airdome seats 600 and is fully equipped. Theater seats 234. 2 pianos, 1 electric, 2 [illegible] fans, compensarc, etc. Everything in first-class shape. Open every night. Seven night town, 5 and 10c admission. 3,500 to 4,000 population. County seat, center of the city, on main street. I established the Gem 5 years ago. Cheap rent and rights lease if wanted. Cheap for quick buyer. Must sell. $1,500 will handle. Address A. M. BEARE, Chester, Ill.

FILMS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—1,000 feet reels film, $5. Such as "Daniel Boone," "Kit Carson," "Days of '61," "Peck's Bad Boy," "Runaway Horse," "Trip to the Moon," "Spirit of '76," "Hiawatha," "Colonial Days," "Washington at Valley Forge," "Cleopatra," "Bugle Call." Address H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—One A. & W. Cleveland Theatre Sign with Star Top. Star contains thirty lights, word theatre contains forty-seven. Total height 18 ft., width two and one half feet. If interested make us an offer. STAR THEATRE CO., Ithaca, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Power's No. 6, used six months, good condition, $100.00 cash. Sent for inspection if charges paid both ways. P. O. Box 851, Bellows Falls, Vermont.

FOR SALE—Used Simplex Projector, first class condition, complete with lenses, rheostat, etc. Only $200. Big bargain. Have bargains also in other makes. Write today. Address AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO., 160a No. Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

TWO POWERS MACHINES—300 Andrews chairs, full equipment in excellent order, for sale cheap. Address P. A. C., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE—110 or 220 volt Economizer, 60 Cycles, a few films and features; give full particulars. MARTIN L. FREDERICKS, 2017 North Twelfth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED—Motor generator set, or G. E. Mercury rectifier. Must be in good condition. Lowest price. Address A. C. C., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED—Bell & Howell perforator. Give full particulars in first letter. Address G. J. BADGLEY & CO., 10 Pratt St., New Rochelle, N. Y.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY.

WANTED—A young man with factory experience to fill position as assistant manager. An investment of $2,000.00 required. Address THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio.

MOVING PICTURE—Expert going abroad about Dec., would represent company. Address B. VINCENT MAGUIRE, 235 West 139th St., New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FOR CAMERAMEN—Developing, 1c; printing, 5c (slow printer). Intensifying and reducing extra; titles, 8c. GEO. KINGSBURY, Star Special, 337 W. 46th St., New York City. 'Phone, 3255 Bryant.

MOVING PICTURE FILMS—Made to order for anyone anywhere. Only 20c per foot. Work guaranteed. CHICAGO MOTION PICTURES CO., McVicker's Theater Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Richardson's Handbook

For Managers and Operators of Moving Picture Theatres

The Best Book of the Kind $2.50 per Copy Postage Paid

Moving Picture World

17 Madison Avenue New York City

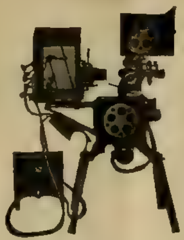
POWERS



SIMPLEX

NO—Film or Posters

BUT—EVERYTHING ELSE FOR THE PROPER EQUIPMENT OF THE MOTION PICTURE THEATRE

Send us a trial order, don't hesitate because it may be small, it's the little things in business that lead to the big ones and we know if you try us out once that you will be entirely satisfied with our service. We aim to please.

Call on us and see if this isn't so.

MACHINES, CARBONS, TICKETS, LOBBY DISPLAYS

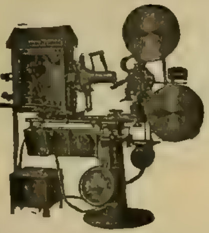
MOTIOGRAPH



EDISON

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 East 14th Street
New York City

---

FEATURES IDEAL

PRESENTS

A Three-Reel Sensation

"THE GUERRILLAS OF ALGIERS"

OR

"THE MOSQUE IN THE DESERT"

A mysterious tale of thrilling deeds, packed with fascinating and interest-compelling scenes

LITHOGRAPHS OF PATRON-PULLING POWER

Write—Wire—Phone

FEATURES IDEAL, 227 West 42nd Street
NEW YORK CITY

"ACROSS THE

A HIGHLY SPECTACULAR, INTEN

AMERICA'S GREATEST MELODRAMA as played

A feature that will make both hemispheres sit up and take notice. The interest is intense. The dramatic situations will hold the patrons of every theater where shown, while its realism and truth to conditions teach a vivid, gripping, moral lesson.

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

Writing of their success with our feature "THE STREETS OF remarkable. We have now shown it at ten of our largest theaters,

See New York's celebrated "Five Points" on fire—
Bridge"—Thrilling escape from prison

Two kinds of one-sheets, threenants, heralds, slides,
Lithos from Metro Lithograph
Slides from Novelty Slide Co.,
Lobby Display Photos from New Yo

Act Quickly

PILOT FILMS

220 West 42d Street

250
SCENES
250

CONTINENT"

SELY DRAMATIC PHOTOPLAY OF

over 3,500 times by OLIVER DOUD BYRON

Depicted in photography of unsurpassed excellence, and portrayed by Pilot's Famous All-Star Cast. Undoubtedly the best money getter for State Rights Buyers on the market. Don't let your chance slip. Take advantage of this opportunity and make a fortune.

—GOING LIKE WILDFIRE

NEW YORK," Loew's Theatrical Enterprises said: "It has been and it has been a wonderful drawing card and a big money-maker."

Sensational fall from New York's famous "High
—Marvelous jump from a high window sheets, six-sheets, streamer pen-photos, cuts, etc.

Co , 416 W. 33d St., New York City.
20 East 14th St., New York City.
Kraus Mfg. Co., 14 East 17th St.,
rk City.

Wire Now

CORPORATION
NEW YORK CITY

4
PARTS
4

THE LURE OF NEW YORK

IN FOUR PARTS

PICTURING LIFE IN CHINATOWN, BOWERY AND CONEY ISLAND

AMERICA'S EXTRAORDINARY PRODUCTION
THE MOST TALKED OF PLAY OF THE DAY
GREATEST MORAL DRAMA OF THE AGE

LARGE ARRAY OF POSTERS, LARGE PHOTOGRAPHS, HERALDS AND SLIDES

WAKE UP

NOW READY FOR BOOKING

NEW YORK CITY AND STATE RIGHTS OWNED AND CONTROLLED BY

STANDARD FEATURE FILM COMPANY, INC.

Masonic Building 71 West 23rd Street, New York

Phone 2658 Gramercy B. L. FEINBLATT, General Manager

---

NEW YORK STATE EXHIBITORS

Do you realize how necessary it is for your theatre to use features?
Do you remember asking your exchange booker for features?
Good features.
Money making features.
Features worth while using.
Do you realize how much money a five-reel B. & C. feature like with thousands of men, horses and cannons will make at your theatre?

THE BATTLE OF WATERLOO

We have secured the rights for New York State and Greater New York for this big feature.
If you do not want to miss something good, wire, write or call.

High Grade Feature Film Co., Inc.

Room 612-613 Candler Building 220 West 42nd Street New York City

1-3-6-9-16 and 20 sheets, streamers, photos and heralds. Phone 6278 Bryant

This picture was taken on the actual scene of the battle.

KINEMACOLOR MACHINES

(Which also Project Perfect Black and White Pictures)

ARE NOW SOLD

English-Kinemacolor, - - $200.00
Kinemacolor-Simplex, - - $300.00

SERVICE, TWENTY DOLLARS UPWARDS

INQUIRE NEAREST OFFICE

CHICAGO
538 So. Dearborn St.

NEW YORK
1600 Broadway

LOUISVILLE, KY.
Majestic Theatre Bldg.

"Worth many times the price."

"Would not attempt to run our house without it."

"Cannot afford to miss a single number."

"Read it from cover to cover each week, advertisements and all."

Above are a few extracts from recent letters of subscribers to the

Moving Picture World

It gives the biggest value to its readers. Send your yearly subscriptions direct and have it mailed to your address every week for less than six cents per copy. Domestic, $3.00. Canada, $3.50. Foreign, $4.00.

Moving Picture World
17 Madison Avenue, New York City

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Bound Volume No. 17

July to September, 1913
(THREE MONTHS)

NOW READY

$1.50 EACH—NET $1.50

Postage 70c. extra, or Express Charges collect

PUBLICATION OFFICE

Moving Picture World, 17 Madison Ave., N. Y. City

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ACTION 845
ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS 850
AFTER DEATH (Eclair) 875
AMONG THE PICTURE THEATERS 873
BRAND OF EVIL, THE (Selig) 846
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES 888
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES 892
CHICAGO LETTER 850
"CHILD DETECTIVE, THE" (Reliance) 848
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed) 857
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) 868
CORRESPONDENCE 884
DAVID W. GRIFFITH 847
DAVID HORSLEY OPENS LUMIERA AGENCY 878
FACTS AND COMMENTS 843
FLICKERS 871
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES 872
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES 910
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES 940
INQUIRIES 862
LICENSED FILM STORIES 894
LICENSED RELEASE DATES 942
"LOST AT SEA" (Lubin Features) 848
LOUISVILLE 886
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES 879
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS LEAGUE 852
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR 856
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN 854
PAUL W. PANZER ON TOUR 874
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 863
PICTURE THEATERS PROJECTED 924
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 863
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed) 894
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent) 910
"TRAFFIC IN SOULS" (Imp) 849
WELTE AUTOGRAPH ORGAN, THE 855
WHAT'S NEW 844

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS
KIEWERT, C. L. & CO 951
REISINGER, HUGO 925

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO 898
BELL & HOWELL 956
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO 929
DETROIT MOTOR CARS CO 957
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO 957
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO 898
HALLBERG, J. H. 904
HOKE, GEO. M. SUPPLY CO 950
KLEINE OPTICAL CO 836
MOORE, HUBBELL CO 952
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO 953
SMITH, L. C. & CO 952
STRELINGER, CHAS. A. & CO 898
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC MFG. CO 896

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.
ALL STAR FILM CORP. 897
AMBROSIO 913
APEX FILM CO 918-19
ATLAS MFG. CO 921
BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG 929
BELMONT FILM CO 925
BLINKHORN, ALBERT 852
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO 956
EUROPEAN FEATURE FILM CO 951
FAMOUS PLAYERS 890-1
FEATURES IDEAL 933
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO. 930
FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA 939
FILMS LLOYD, INC 941
GENERAL FILM CO 834-5-906
GENERAL SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO 955
GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO 957
HELGAR CORP 946-918-19
ITALA FILM CO 899
JUNGLE FILM CO. 907
MARION FILM CORPORATION 947
NEW YORK FILM CO 922
PILOT FILM CO 934-5
RAMO FILMS 911
RANOUS MOTION PICTURE CO 947
RUBY FEATURE 956
TRUE FEATURES 900
UNIQUE FEATURES 910
U. K. FILM CO 927
WARNER'S FEATURES 915
WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION 895-905

FILM BROKERS
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 954-890
WESTERN FILM BROKERS 900

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
JOHNS-MANVILLE, H. W. CO 950
TRAINER, C. W. MFG. CO 955

FILM EXCHANGES.
BRADENBURG, G. W. 896
ECONOMY FILM CO. 900
GREATER N. Y. FILM RENTAL CO 942
HETZ, L. 955
HIGH GRADE FEATURE FILM CO 936
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE 955
MUTUAL FILM CORP 950
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE 900
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO 950
SAVOY FILM EXCHANGE 956
STANDARD FEATURE FILM CO 936

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN 941
BRONCHO M. P. CO. 901
GAUMONT CO. 887-8-9
KAY BEE 901
KEYSTONE 901
NEW MAJESTIC 958
THANHOUSER 822
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURERS 824-5-6-7-833

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON 839
ESSANAY 823
KALEM 842
KINEMACOLOR 937
KLEINE, GEO 837
LUBIN 840
MELIES 921
PATHE FRERES 838
SELIG 959
VITAGRAPH 841

LENS MANUFACTURERS
BAUSCH & LOMB 929

MISCELLANEOUS
ADVANCE M. P. CO 900
BRONX MOVIE CIRCLE 951
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 932
DEARBORN NOVELTY CO 900
EASTMAN KODAK CO 954
FISK RUBBER CO 902

GENERAL SPECIALTY CO 902
GUNBY BROS 950
HAFFNER, CHAS 898
HORSLEY, DAVID 953
HYGIENIC SPECIALTY CO 952
KRAUS MFG. CO. 929
MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES 900

NATIONAL TICKET CO. 940
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO. 929
NESTRUM, H 952
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO 900
PHOTOPLAY CO., INC 956

PREDDY, W. G. 954
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO. 956
SARGENT, E. W. 950
SPITZ, B 898
STANGE, A. C. 898
STERN MFG. CO. 951
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE 898
THEATER RECORD LEDGER 928
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO. 962
TRANSFER & FLUID CO 951
VISCO MOTOR OIL CO 900
VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO 951
WHITE SPECIALTY CO 952
WILLIAMS, BROWN & EARLE 955
WOODRUFF, ELEANOR 863
ZENITH MFG. CO 900

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.
AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO 950
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO. 924
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD 928

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER SALES CO. 898
DEAGAN, J. C. 902
KINEMATOPHONE CO 944-45
SEEBURG, J. P. PIANO CO 954
SINN, C. B. 957
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 950
WELTE, M. & SON 923

PROJECTION MACHINES.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. 953
POWERS 900
PRECISION MACHINE CO 893

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
ANDREWS, A. H. CO 957
BENNETT SEATING CO 957
HARDESTY MFG. CO 957
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 957
WISCONSIN SEATING CO 957

POSTERS & FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO 890
A. B. C. CO 938
GENERAL FILM CO 891-943
NEWMAN MFG. CO 950
THEATER SPECIALTY MFG. CO 952

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO 953
GENTER, J. H. 954
MIRROR SCREEN CO. 950

SONG & ADVERTISING SLIDES.
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE CO 951
ERKER BROS 950
NIAGARA SLIDE CO. 952
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO 952

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATOR'S SUPPLY CO 955

ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEETS NOW READY!

KALEM'S "PLOT OF INDIA'S HILLMEN"
RELEASED NOVEMBER 26th

LUBIN'S "A WAIF OF THE DESERT"
RELEASED NOVEMBER 27th

WRITE FOR A CATALOGUE OF BACK STOCK

A. B. C. COMPANY :: :: Cleveland, Ohio

"The Secret of Adrianople"

RECALL how with a rah! rah! rah! we launched the Film Releases of America with that cracker-jack four-reeler, "Dr. Nicholson and the Blue Diamond." "The Secret of Adrianople" doesn't have to take second place. It's a winner!

Goodness knows, the Balkan War received enough publicity, and everybody is interested in Adrianople, that stern Turkish fortress which for so long stubbornly held out against the Allies. The story's centered about a spy's desperate attempt to steal the plans of the fortifications. What happens to him is a plenty.

It's a bet that you never saw so many hardships piled on one "leading man." His troubles and those of his merciless enemies and whether or not he bests them will "hold" you.

Wire your inquiry now and have the satisfaction of knowing that you made a wise move at the right time.

FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA
220 West 42d Street
NEW YORK CITY

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

Nov. 15—[illegible] (Com.) 1000
Nov. 17—The [illegible] of the Lost [illegible] (2 parts—Drama) 2000
Nov. 20—[illegible] (Drama)
Nov. 2[illegible]—A [illegible]
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] 1000
Nov. [illegible]
Nov. [illegible]
Nov. 2[illegible]—A [illegible]

AMBROSIO.

Oct. 4—The Wild Guardian (2 parts—Drama) 2000
Oct. 11—Chopin's Nocturne (2 parts—Drama) 2000
Oct. 18—The Two Mothers (2 parts—Drama) 2000
Nov. 1—[illegible] (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible]
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] (2 parts—Drama)

APOLLO.

Oct. 19—One Round O'Brien Comes East (Com.)
Oct. 26—The [illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 2—His Nole the Plumber (Comedy)
Nov. [illegible]
Nov. [illegible]
Nov. [illegible]

BISON.

Nov. 11—Madonna of the Slums (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 15—[illegible] (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 18—The End of the Human Tigers (3 parts—Drama)
Nov. 22—[illegible] Vengeance (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] (Drama)
Nov. 29—[illegible] (2 parts—Drama)

BRONCHO.

Nov. 5—The Veteran (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 12—The Impostor (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 19—The War Correspondent (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 26—The Reformation (Drama)
Dec. 3—[illegible] (Drama)
Dec. 10—The W[illegible] (Drama)

CRYSTAL.

Nov. 11—Oh! You Pearl (Comedy)
Nov. 11—[illegible] Wins a Prize (Comedy)
Nov. 16—Out of the Grave (Drama)
Nov. 18—Her Secretaries (Comedy)
Nov. 18—[illegible] New Mamma (Comedy)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] (Drama)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. [illegible] (Drama)
Nov. [illegible] (Drama)

DOMINO.

Nov. 6—The Judgment (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 13—The Ghost (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 20—The [illegible] (Drama)
Nov. 27—[illegible] (2 parts—Drama)

ECLAIR.

Nov. 16—Unseen Metamorphoses (Scientific)
Nov. 16—[illegible] Max [illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 19—[illegible] (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 23—[illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 23—[illegible] in Turkestan (Misc.)
Nov. 26—A [illegible] (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. [illegible]
Nov. [illegible]

FRONTIER.

Nov. 1—His Conscience (Drama)
Nov. 6—Slim Gets the Reward (Comedy)
Nov. 8—The Girl and the Bandit (Drama)
Nov. 10—Caught At His Own Game (Comedy)
Nov. 1[illegible]—The [illegible] That Fails (Drama)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] Becomes a Detective (Com.)
Nov. 22—The [illegible] Cross (Drama)
Nov. [illegible]
Nov. [illegible]

GAUMONT.

Nov. 11—The Bank Messenger (Drama)
Nov. 12—Gaumont's Weekly No. 88
Nov. 13—The Heart of a Doll (Drama)
Nov. 18—[illegible] and the Milkmaid (Com.)
Nov. 19—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 89 (News)
Nov. 20—[illegible] a Jester
Nov. 25—Mary Saves the Sculptor (Drama)
Nov. 2[illegible]—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 90 (News)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] (Drama)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible]

GEM.

Oct. 13—The Surf Maidens (Comedy)
Oct. 30—His Double Surprise (Comedy)
Oct. 20—A Trip Through Tunis and Algiers (Sc.)

GREAT NORTHERN.

Nov. 1—A Dilemma (Comedy)
Nov. 1—An Isle in the Baltic Sea (Scenic)
Nov. 8—A Bogus Hero (Comedy)

IMP.

Nov. 6—The Old Parlor (Drama)
Nov. 10—On Pine Mountain (Drama)
Nov. 13—Levi and McGinnis Running for Office (2 parts—Comedy)
Nov. 17—Who Killed Olga Carew? (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 20—The Gold Stealers of Paris (Drama)
Nov. 24—[illegible] (Dr.)
Nov. 2[illegible]—Night Shadows of New York (2 parts—Drama)

JOKER.

Nov. 15—Almost an Actress (Comedy)
Nov. 19—Mike and Jake at the Beach (Com.)
Nov. 22—The Stinger Stung (Comedy)
Nov. 26—Mike and Jake Go Fishing (Comedy)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] in [illegible] Farce
Nov. 29—[illegible] (Comedy)

KAY BEE.

Oct. 31—Borrowed Gold (Drama)
Nov. 7—An Indian's Honor (Drama)
Nov. 11—For Mother's Sake (Drama)
Nov. 14—Efficacy of Prayer (Drama)
Nov. 18—The [illegible] (Drama)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible]
Nov. 25—The [illegible] (Drama)
Nov. 28—The Sign of the Snake (Drama)

KEYSTONE.

Nov. 6—Louis' Sickness at Sea (Comedy)
Nov. 10—Small Time Act (Comedy)
Nov. 10—The Milk We Drink (Educational)
Nov. 13—[illegible]
Nov. 17—[illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 2[illegible]—A [illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 24—[illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] Saves the Flag (Comedy)

KOMIC.

Nov. 6—Poor John (Comedy)
Nov. 8—Caused By a Clock (Comedy)
Nov. 1[illegible]—An Affair of Honor (Comedy)
Nov. 1[illegible]—[illegible] on Her Mettle (Comedy)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible]
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible] Razor (Comedy)

LUX.

Nov. 7—The Amateur Detective (Comedy) 500
Nov. 7—[illegible] Rivers (Scenic) 312

MAJESTIC.

Nov. 9—The Bravest Man (Drama)
Nov. 11—The Rivals (Comedy)
Nov. 15—The [illegible] That Defies (Drama)
Nov. 16—[illegible]
Nov. 18—L'Article 47 (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 2[illegible]—[illegible]

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

Nov. 3—Mutual Weekly, No. 45 (News)
Nov. 10—Mutual Weekly, No. 46 (News)
Nov. 17—Mutual Weekly, No. 47 (News)

NESTOR.

Nov. 12—In the End (Drama)
Nov. 14—Love, Luck and a Paint Brush (Com.)
Nov. 19—The Golden Princess Mine (Drama)
Nov. 21—An Elephant On His Hands (Comedy)
Nov. 26—[illegible] of the Mountains (Drama)
Nov. 28—[illegible] (Comedy)

POWERS.

Nov. 14—The Cracksman's Reformation (Dr.)
Nov. 17—The Doctor's Orders (Drama)
Nov. 17—Cotton Time in Arkansas (Ind.)
Nov. 21—A Stolen Identity (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 24—[illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 28—A [illegible] (Drama)

PRINCESS.

Oct. 24—Lobster Salad and Milk (Comedy)
Oct. 31—Algy's Awful Auto (Comedy)
Nov. 7—[illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 14—[illegible] Upon the Waters (Drama)
Nov. 21—A [illegible] (Comedy-Drama)

RAMO.

Sept. 8—The Black Opal (Drama) 10[illegible]
Oct. 1—Cards (Feature—[illegible] parts—Drama)
Oct. 15—The Current (Feature—[illegible] parts—Dr.)

RELIANCE.

Nov. 10—The Power of the Sea (Drama)
Nov. 12—The Bracelet (Drama)
Nov. 15—For Love of a Man (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 17—Two Men and a Mule—Series No. 4 (Comedy)
Nov. 19—A Man and a Woman (Drama)
Nov. 22—Her [illegible] (Drama)

[redacted]

Nov. 13—The Missionary Box (Drama)
Nov. 16—The Blood Brotherhood (Drama)
Nov. 20—Fires of Fate (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 23—His Old-Fashioned Dad (Com.-Dr.)
Nov. 27—The [illegible] (Dr.)
Nov. 30—[illegible]

THANHOUSER.

Nov. 2—The Water Cure (Comedy)
Nov. 4—The Junior Partner (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 7—Little Brother (Drama)
Nov. 9—Looking For Trouble (Com.-Dr.)
Nov. 11—The Campaign Managers (Com.-Dr.)
Nov. 14—The Children's Hour (Drama)
Nov. 16—[illegible] (Comedy)
Nov. 18—Baby's Joy Ride (Comedy-Drama)
Nov. 21—The [illegible] (Drama)

VICTOR.

Nov. 10—The Passerby (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 14—His Wife's Child (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 17—Forgotten Women (Drama)
Nov. 21—Where the Hop Vine Twines (Drama)
Nov. 24—Back to Life (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 28—[illegible] (2 parts—Drama)

FEATURES.

(A. Blinkhorn)

Nov. 10—Kissing Cup (Hepworth 4 parts—Dr.)

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Five Thousand | - - | $1.25 |
| Ten Thousand | - - | $2.50 |
| Twenty Thousand | - - | $4.50 |
| Twenty-five Thousand | - | $5.50 |
| Fifty Thousand | - - | $6.50 |
| One Hundred Thousand | - | $8.00 |

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered, every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

SEE AMERICANS FIRST

FLYING "A" FEATURE FILMS

THE OCCULT

Featuring Sydney Ayers

America's most popular photo star

An intense drama replete with mystery —novel effects

Striking one and three sheet lithographs

Release Monday, Nov. 24th, 1913

---

The Spartan Girl of the West

A bully Western tale you cannot miss

One and three sheet lithographs

Release Thursday, Nov. 27th, 1913

---

At Midnight

Society Drama with Jack Richardson in the lead

One and three sheet lithographs

Release Saturday, Nov. 29th, 1913

---

COMING! COMING! COMING!

An allegorical gem—

Where the Road Forks

Release Monday, Dec. 15th, 1913

---

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO. CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph (Special).

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Patheplay, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Vitagraph, (Special).

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Lubin, Vitagraph (Special).

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Vitagraph, (Special).

BIOGRAPH.

Nov. 1—The Clock Stopped (Drama)..........
Nov. 3—Diversion (Drama)..................
Nov. 6—On the Hands of the Black Hands (Comedy)..........................
Nov. 6—Where's the Baby (Comedy).........
Nov. 8—Old Coupons (Drama)................
Nov. 10—No Place for Father (Drama).......
Nov. 13—Mrs. Casey's Gorilla (Comedy).....
Nov. 13—Mixed Nuts (Comedy)...............
Nov. 15—His Inspiration (Drama) ..........
Nov. 17—A Cure for Suffragettes (Comedy)...
Nov. 17—He's a Lawyer (Comedy).... .......
Nov. 20—The Detective's Stratagem (Drama)..
Nov. 22—By Man's Law (2 parts—Drama)....
Nov. 24—All for Science (Drama). . . .
Nov. 27—A Circumstantial Hero (Comedy) .
Nov. 27—The Somnambulists (Comedy). . .
Nov. 29—The Blue or the Gray (Drama) . ..

EDISON.

Nov. 1—A Woodland Paradise (Comedy).......1000
Nov. 3—Wild Wales (Scenic)................ 350
Nov. 3—Porgy's Bouquet (Comedy)........... 650
Nov. 4—Tommy's Stratagem (Comedy)........1000
Nov. 5—Archie and the Bell Boy (Comedy)..1000
Nov. 7—A Face From the Past (Special—2 parts—Drama).....................2000
Nov. 8—Elise the Forester's Daughter (Dr.)..1000
Nov. 10—Camping With the Blackfeet (Manners and Customs) ..................... 500
Nov. 10—Seth's Woodpile (Comedy)............ 500
Nov. 11—The Doctor's Duty (Drama).........1000
Nov. 12—His Nephew's Scheme (Comedy)....1000
Nov. 14—The Phantom Signal (Special—2 parts—Drama) ..........................2000
Nov. 15—Getting a Patient (Comedy).........1000
Nov. 17—Nora's Boarders (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 18—A Cause for Thankfulness (Drama)..1000
Nov. 19—The Girl in the House-Boat (Com.)..1000
Nov. 21—A Good Sport (Special—2 parts—Comedy)... ..................... 2000
Nov. 22—A Proposal Deferred "Who Will Marry Mary"—No. 5 (Drama)... 1000
Nov. 24—From Durban to Zululand (Scenic).. 500
Nov. 24—Enoch and Eyra's First Smoke (Com.) 500
Nov. 25—The Vanishing Cracksman (Drama)..1000
Nov. 26—A Sense of Humor (Comedy)..... 1000
Nov. 28—The Gunmaker of Moscow (Special—2 parts Drama) . ........2000
Nov. 29—A Royal Romance (Drama) .......1000

ESSANAY.

Nov. 1—The Doctor's Duty (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 4—Quicksands of Sin (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 5—Their Wives' Indiscretion (Comedy)..1000
Nov. 6—The Rustler's Step-daughter (Drama).1000
Nov. 7—The Death Weight (Special—2 parts—Drama)...........................2000
Nov. 8—Broncho Billy's Secret (Drama)......1000
Nov. 11—The Man Outside (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 12—The Last Laugh (Comedy)..... .. .1000
Nov. 13—The New Schoolmarm of Green River (Drama) ..........................1000
Nov. 14—The Boomerang (Special—2 parts—Drama) ..........................2000
Nov. 15—Alkali Ike's Auto (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 18—The Lost Chord (Drama) ..........1000
Nov. 19—The Usual Way (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 20—The Cowboy Samaritan (Drama)....1000
Nov. 21—The End of the Circle (Special—2 parts—Drama) ..... ...............2000
Nov. 22—Broncho Billy's First Arrest (Drama).1000
Nov. 25—The Little Substitute (Drama) ... 1000
Nov. 26—Dollars—Pounds—Sense (Comedy) 1000
Nov. 27—The Naming of the Rawhide Queen (Drama)...........................1000
Nov. 28—The Brand of Evil (Special 2 parts Drama) ............. .... . 2000

KALEM.

Nov. 1—The President's Special (Drama)......1000
Nov. 3—The Fatal Shot (Special—2 parts—Drama.).............................2000
Nov. 5—The Man Who Vanished (Special—2 parts—Drama)...................,....2000
Nov. 7—Tightwad's Present (Comedy).......
Nov. 7—The Marble Industry (Industrial)....
Nov. 8—The Silent Warning (Drama)........1000
Nov. 10—The Runaway Freight (Special—2 parts—Drama) ..........................2000
Nov. 12—Our New Minister (Special—3 parts—Drama) ...........................3000
Nov. 14—The Fickle Freak (Comedy).........
Nov. 14—Hypnotizing Mamie (Comedy)........
Nov. 15—Against Desperate Odds (Drama)....1000
Nov. 17—The Stolen Tapestries (Drama).......1000
Nov. 19—The Express Car Mystery (Special—2 parts—Drama) .... ...........2000
Nov. 21—The Laundress and the Lady (Com.)
Nov. 21—The Dublin Horse Show (Topical) ..
Nov. 22—Primitive Man (Drama).............1000
Nov. 24—An Indian Maid's Strategy (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 26—The Plot of India's Hillmen (Special 2 parts Drama) . ... . . 2000
Nov. 28—The Good Old Summer Time (Comedy)
Nov. 28—England's King at Liverpool (Topical)
Nov. 29—On Peril of His Life (Drama) .. 1000

GEORGE KLEINE.

Oct. 14—The Last Minute (Eclipse—Special—2 parts—Drama)........................
Oct. 21—The Wheels of Justice (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) ................
Oct. 28—The Rajah's Diamond Rose (Eclipse—2 parts—Drama—Special) ..........
Nov. 4—Zuma, the Gypsy (Cines—2 parts—Drama—Special) ....................
Nov. 11—The Penalty (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama)..........................
Nov. 18—For the Love of a Toreador (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) ..........
Nov. 25—The Subterranean City; or Trailing the Jewel Thieves (Eclipse—2 parts—Special—Drama) ..................
Dec. 2—Venomous Tongues (Celio Special—2 parts Drama)................ . ..

LUBIN.

Oct. 31—The Momentous Decision (Drama)....1000
Nov. 1—When the Prison Doors Opened (Dr.).1000
Nov. 3—The Double Chase (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 4—Magic Melody (Drama)...............1000
Nov. 6—The Price of Victory (Special—2 parts—Drama).........................2000
Nov. 7—Cocoanut Industry (Industrial)....... 400
Nov. 7—Getting the Best of Dad (Comedy).. 600
Nov. 8—Hiawanda's Cross (Drama)...........1000
Nov. 10—The Locked Room (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 11—A Miracle of Love (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 13—The Sea Eternal (Special—2 parts—Drama) ...........................2000
Nov. 14—When the Clock Stopped (Drama)....1000
Nov. 15—Whose Is It? (Comedy).............. 400
Nov. 15—Badly Wanted (Comedy)............. 600
Nov. 17—The Two Fathers (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 18—Shadows (Drama)....................1000
Nov. 20—Partners In Crime (Special—3 parts—Dr.)...............................3000
Nov. 21—His Chorus Girl Wife (Drama).......1000
Nov. 22—The Harmless One (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 24—Just Cissy's Little Way (Comedy)..1000
Nov. 25—Her Sick Father (Comedy) ......... 400
Nov. 25—The Lost Switch (Comedy) ........ 600
Nov. 27—A Waif of the Desert (Special—2 parts Drama) ... .... ........ 2000
Nov. 28—The Scapegrace (Drama).............1000
Nov. 29—Turning the Table (Drama) .... . 1000

MELIES.

Oct. 2—Things Japanese (Typical)............1000
Oct. 9—Cast Amid Boomerang Throwers (Dr.).1000
Oct. 16—Scenes of Saigon, Cochin China (Sc.)..1000
Oct. 23—Old and New Tahiti (Drama)........ 850
Oct. 23—Grand Opening of the Schichijio Bridge, Kyoto, Japan (Scenic)............. 150
Oct. 30—A Japanese Wedding (Manners and Customs)...........................
Oct. 30—A Japanese Shoemaker at Work (Typical)..............................
Nov. 6—Sidney and Its Harbor (Travel).....1000
Nov. 20—Shooting the Famous Hozu Rapids of Japan (Sports)....................
Nov. 20—A Lemon Plantation (Industrial) . ..

PATHEPLAY.

Nov. 1—Too Many Tenants (Comedy)..........
Nov. 3—Pathe's Weekly, No. 64 (News)......
Nov. 4—The Vaudeville Star's Vacation (Com.)
Nov. 5—A Yellow Streak (Drama)...........
Nov. 6—Pathe's Weekly, No. 65 (News)......
Nov. 6—Race Memories (Special—2 parts—Drama)...........................
Nov. 7—A Phony Alarm (Comedy)............
Nov. 8—Tortoises At Close Range (Nat. Hist.)
Nov. 8—Egyptian Temples (Architecture)....
Nov. 8—Ice Cutting in Sweden (Ind.).......
Nov. 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 66 (News)......
Nov. 11—Winter Sports in Switzerland (Sports)
Nov. 11—Siberia's Holy Lake (Travel)........
Nov. 12—Lizard Lore (Zoology) ..............
Nov. 12—The Coast of California Near Carmel-By-the-Sea (Scenic). ..............
Nov. 13—Pathe's Weekly, No 67 (News)......
Nov. 13—A Slave of Satan (Special—2 parts—Drama).... ........................
Nov. 14—Butterfly Preservation (Entomology).
Nov. 14—The Slate Industry (Industrial)
Nov. 15—In the Same Boat (Comedy).... . .
Nov. 17—Pathe's Weekly, No. 68 (News)
Nov. 18—Mr. Gaston from Paris (Comedy) ...
Nov. 18—Flowers of Japan (Horticulture) .
Nov. 19—By Impulse (Com Dr.)...............
Nov. 20—Pathe's Weekly, No 69 (News).... .
Nov. 20—The Green-Eyed Monster of Jealousy (Special—3 parts—Drama) ... . .
Nov. 21—Natives of Australia (Manners and customs) ..........................
Nov. 21—The Pond Snail (Zoology)............
Nov. 21—In the Spanish Pyrenees (Travel)....
Nov. 22—Kenton's Heir (Drama).... .........
Nov. 24—Pathe's Weekly, No 70 (News)
Nov. 25—The Shadow of Shame (Drama) . .
Nov. 26—The Elusive Turkey (Comedy) ..
Nov. 27—Pathe's Weekly, No 71 (News)
Nov. 27—The Faithless Friend (Special—2 parts—Drama) . ..............
Nov. 27—Old Nuremburg (Scenic) .. ........
Nov. 28—Making Eight Ton Ropes (Industrial)
Nov. 28—The Capital of the Malay States (Scenic) . . ............... .
Nov. 28—Fashion's Law In the Swiss Cantons (Sociological) . ............ . .
Nov. 29—The Blight (Drama) . .. . ..

SELIG.

Oct. 30—Old Doc Yak and the Artist's Dream (Comedy) ...........................1000
Oct. 31—The Dangling Noose (Drama).........1000
Nov. 3—Hope (Special—2 parts—Drama)......2000
Nov. 4—Slipping Fingers (Drama)............1000
Nov. 5—The Probationer (Drama).............1000
Nov. 6—The Conversion of Mr. Anti (Drama)..1000
Nov. 7—The Schoolmarm's Shooting Match (Comedy)..........................
Nov. 7—Views Along the Rhine (Travel).....
Nov. 10—Phantoms (Special—2 parts—Drama).2000
Nov. 11—Movin' Pitchers (Comedy)...........1000
Nov. 12—Trying Out No. 707 (Drama)........1000
Nov. 13—The Child of the Prairie (Drama)....1000
Nov. 14—A Cure for Carelessness (Comedy)..
Nov. 14—The Matterhorn, Switzerland (Travel)
Nov. 17—The Escape of Jim Dolan (Special—2 parts—Drama).......................2000
Nov. 18—The Port of Missing Women (Drama)..1000
Nov. 19—The Touch of a Child (Drama)......1000
Nov. 20—An Actor's Romance (Drama)........1000
Nov. 21—Outwitted by Billy (Drama).........1000
Nov. 24—The Quality of Mercy (Special—2 parts—Dr.) . . ... .... ...2000
Nov. 25—Mounted Officer Flynn (Comedy) . 1000
Nov. 26—Cupid In the Cow Camp (Comedy) 1000
Nov. 27—A Message From Home (Drama).. 1000
Nov. 28—The Supreme Moment (Drama)... .1000

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 1—The Warmakers (Special—2 parts—Drama) ..............................2000
Nov. 3—The King's Man (Drama)............1000
Nov. 4—The Silver Bachelorhood (Drama)....1000
Nov. 5—The Hoodoo Umbrella (Comedy)......
Nov. 5—Ancient Temples of Karnak (Travel)
Nov. 6—A Broken Melody (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 7—Flaming Hearts (Comedy)...........1000
Nov. 8—The Diver (Special—2 parts—(Dr.)..2000
Nov. 10—Thieves (Drama) ..................1000
Nov. 11—The Price of Thoughtlessness (Drama)
Nov. 11—The Canals of Venice (Travel).......
Nov. 12—An Elopement at Home (Comedy)...1000
Nov. 13—The Right Man (Drama)...........1000
Nov. 14—Fanny's Conspiracy (Comedy).......1000
Nov. 15—Jerry's Mother-in-Law (Special—2 parts—Drama) .....................2000
Nov. 17—Tangled Threads (Drama)...........1000
Nov. 18—His Last Fight (Drama)............1000
Nov. 19—Why I Am Here (Comedy)..........
Nov. 19—Farming In Ancient Thebes (Agricul.)
Nov. 20—The Sale of a Heart (Drama)..... 1000
Nov. 21—The Schemers (Comedy).............1000
Nov. 22—The Whimsical Threads of Destiny (Special—2 parts—Drama) ....... 2000
Nov. 24—The Leading Lady (Drama).. . . 1000
Nov. 25—Little Kaintuck (Drama). . . . . . 1000
Nov. 26—Fellow Voyagers (Comedy)..........
Nov. 26—Temples and Statues of Rome (Architecture) .. ...... .. ...... .
Nov. 27—The Cure (Drama) . ....... . 1000
Nov. 28—Betty In the Lion's Den (Comedy) 1000
Nov. 29—The Golden Pathway (Special—2 parts—Drama) .........................2000

Greater New York Film Rental Company
116-118 East Fourteenth Street, New York
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

MR. EXHIBITOR

We want to impress on you that GOOD ADVERTISING is the LIFE of any business, and is just as essential towards the success of your house as good films.

Let Us Assume Your Advertising Worries

Don't fret about Posters, Banners, Slides, Date Strips, Display Photographs, Frames, Photos of Actors and Actresses appearing in Licensed Films and other advertising helps that every exhibitor needs to conduct a successful show. That's our business. We can fit you out completely with dispatch and at prices you couldn't beat if you shopped the world over.

SEND US YOUR STANDING ORDER FOR POSTERS, DISPLAY PHOTOGRAPHS AND "COMING FEATURE" ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Everything for Advertising a Picture Show

GENERAL FILM COMPANY, Poster Department

(Formerly Photoplay Advertising & Specialty Co.)

71 W. 23rd Street and 440 Fourth Avenue, New York; 121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 1022 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; 7th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio; Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.; 218 Commercial Street, Boston, Mass.; 122 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; 737 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.; 921 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

The Most Wonderful Invention

The KINEM

Gaston Anchini's Marvelous Sound Producer for Moving Pictures Adds 100 Per Cent. Value to Every Picture Shown—No Picture House Complete Without One—No Expert is Needed—Gives a Life-Like Effect—A Child Can Operate It

The Biggest Money Making Proposition Ever Offered State Right Buyers

Exhibitors Know the value of this invention and realize that perfect sound effects are more important than music and have a far greater drawing power. The wonderful success of Lyman Howe's Pictures is due to the realistic sound effects used by the Howe operators.

For feature films, special keyboards can be arranged to depict every effect.

By the combination of keys—a number of most wonderful effects can be produced—for instance the fire department answering an alarm—the starting of a railroad train—the escape of steam—ringing of the engine bell—rumble of the cars—soldiers in battle—boom of the cannons—rattle of musketry—which faithfully add realism to every scene.

Every wide-awake state right buyer can realize the wonderful possibilities of the Kinematophone—it will sell on sight—it's absolutely alive—every moving picture house will use one.

Get busy before it's too late—secure a state—part of a state—or several counties. Liberal inducements to state right operators.

Now being demonstrated daily to moving picture exhibitors at the office of

THE KINEMATOPHONE CO.

WM. J. COUNIHAN, General Manager

Suite 601-602 Geo. M. Cohan Theatre Bldg.
1482 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, U. S. A.

WIRE NOW AND RESERVE YOUR TERRITORY

in the Moving Picture World

ATOPHONE

A Few of the Sounds Produced by the Pressure of the Keys

- Engine Whistle
- Station Master's Trumpet
- Whistle
- Siren
- Steamboat
- Steamer
- Auto Horn
- Lion
- Tiger
- Pig
- Dog
- Rooster
- Bird
- A Kiss
- Village Bells
- Ambulance Gong
- Sheep
- Sleigh Bells
- Doorbell
- Knock at the Door
- Rapid Firing Gun
- Tambourine and Cymbals
- Clock
- Cymbals
- Engine Exhaust
- Anvil
- Ox
- Thunder Storm and Rain
- Chains
- Applause
- Motor—Auto or Motor Boat
- Rumble of Trains
- Breaking of Dishes
- Aeroplane Motor
- Snare Drum
- Trotting Horse
- Galloping Horse
- Rifle Shot
- Bicycle Bell
- Ocean Waves
- Car Bell and Rumble
- Telephone
- Sawing Wood
- Cannon Shot
- Chimes
- Baby Crying
- And Numerous Combinations

Dimensions of instrument—43 inches high, 47 inches long, 25 inches wide

Keyboard of the Kinematophone with sounds produced illustrated above each key. This illustration gives some idea of how the keyboard would appear above the fallboard of a piano

HELEN GARDNER

IN

A DAUGHTER OF PAN

A STORY OF ANCIENT GREECE

Written and Directed by Charles L. Gaskill

Projecting Length
45 minutes in 3 chapters

Copyrighted 1913
by Helen Gardner

This picture was produced in Miss Gardner's Studio at Tappan-on-the-Hudson for the Helgar Corporation. The world rights have been sold by the Helgar Corporation to the Warner's Features, Inc., 126 W. 46th Street, New York City, to whom Exhibitors should address their inquiries.

The Mar-Leon Corporation present

The Distinguished Photo-Play Dramatic Actress

Miss Marion Leonard

in

A Leap in the Storm

An Impressive Story of Womanhood Elemental in Three Acts

Written and Directed by Stanner E. V. Taylor

At Miss Leonard's Studio, 423 Classon Ave., Brooklyn

All Exhibiting Rights Sold To
Warner's Features, Inc., 126 W. 46th St., New York City
To Whom or Their Branch Offices Inquiries Should Be Addressed

---

RANOUS MOTION PICTURE COR.

TREASURE ISLAND

BY

ROBT. LOUIS STEVENSON

IN THREE REELS

THE WORLD'S RIGHTS HAVE BEEN SOLD TO THE WARNER'S FEATURES, INC., 126 WEST 46th STREET, NEW YORK CITY, OR ANY OF THEIR TWENTY EXCHANGES, TO WHOM EXHIBITORS SHOULD ADDRESS THEIR INQUIRIES

COPYRIGHTED, 1913

HELEN GA
A PRINCESS

PRODUCED IN MISS GARDNER'S STUDIO

FULLY conscious of the exact meaning of the words employed here, we state as a fact that "A Princess of Bagdad" is the most beautiful and absorbingly interesting picture ever made in America, the equal of any picture ever made anywhere, and the most beautiful original picture ever made in the world. Its charm is irresistible. It scintillates with brightness and beauty. The story is as interesting as any ever written. Its technical perfection is a model. It is a grotesque tragedy, a light comedy, a fantastic play, a diabolique. It is fascinating always. It holds one's attention as by bands of iron—you are in the midst of tears and laughter every second of time. It has all of the mystery and glamour of a real Arabian Nights' Tale—all of the complications, all of those wonderful complications, of those old stories, all

Sole Selling Agents THE HELGAR CO

WE SHALL BE PLEASED TO GIVE ANY PARTIES INTERESTED

BY HELEN GARDNER

RDNER IN # OF BAGDAD

WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY CHARLES L. GASKILL

told so clearly and finely that a child understands as well as the most highly cultured man or woman. The picture is played by real artists—from the most important to the least important character. The wonderful grace and transcendent beauty of Miss Helen Gardner, her tremendous dramatic ability and genius in picture art, have never been seen to a better advantage than in this very unusual work. The picture lasts about two hours, being seven full reels long, each reel comprising one full chapter. Its photography is absolutely flawless. It is the legitimate successor to "Cleopatra." Everybody made money on "Cleopatra"---everybody will make money on "A Princess of Bagdad." Wire for prices now---or you may be too late.

Edwards-Zetler Feature Film Co. of Dayton, Ohio, owners of Helen Gardner's features for Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

RPORATION 472 FULTON STREET
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

SCREEN EXAMINATION IN THE ABOVE SUITE OF OFFICES.

ATTENTION, EXHIBITORS!

Now is the season to get money, and you cannot get it unless you put on big feature productions. We have imported a large stock of features, and are now in a position to rent a weekly service, consisting of six reels daily, including a feature every day, for $30.00 weekly. A trial will convince you that we have the goods.

ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO. - - No. 21 East 14th Street, N. Y. City

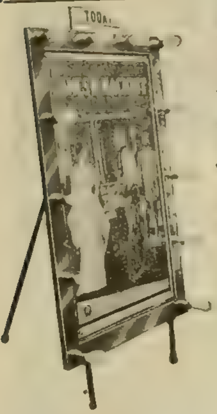
OUT OF-TOWN TRADE A SPECIALTY



MAKE YOUR LOBBY DISPLAY ATTRACTIVE

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters. We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

Don't fail to visit our complete New York showroom, 101-103 4th Ave.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St.
Cincinnati, O.
Established 1882

In Answering Advertisers
Kindly Mention
MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE NEEDS REPAIRING

WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US!

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176. N State St. (bet.Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

J·M ASBESTOS BOOTHS AND CURTAINS

Made in styles to meet all requirements. They meet the approval of fire underwriters of every city. Write for Booklet.

H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO.
New York and Every Large City.

LET US DO YOUR

Developing and Printing

WE WILL DEVELOP YOUR NEGATIVE, MAKE YOU A POSITIVE PRINT AND SHIP WITHIN 24 HOURS FOR 5c PER FOOT COMPLETE.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED BY OUR FIFTEEN YEARS' EXPERIENCE. EASTMAN STOCK USED ON ALL OUR WORK.

FILM TITLES and ANNOUNCEMENTS

3 Feet for 25 Cents In Any Length

GUNBY BROS. Inc.
145 West 45th Street, New York City

AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS

are acknowledged by the leading expert film producers to be the finest and most accurate Cameras in the world.

We also manufacture a complete line of Studio and Dark Room Equipment.

Distributers for Eastman Raw Film

Send for Catalogues

American Cinematograph Co.
617-631 W. Jackson Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

THE EXHIBITOR'S DEPARTMENT STORE

A name that is rightfully applied to our store. Our stock of machines and theatre supplies is the most complete in the West. We have absolutely everything but the film. We make SLIDES TO ORDER. Our stock slides covering all necessary announcement and advertising slides, are carefully designed and attractively colored. See those illustrated, 40 cents each. Send today for our slide and supply Catalogues.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO., - - 608 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, MO.

FOR SAFETY'S SAKE STOP!
WITH THAT PRESCRIPTION
AT THE DRUG STORE
that gives the Promptest & most accurate service and the freshest drugs
212

JUST PLAIN COMMON SENSE tells you—When you want to SEE yourself you use a Mirror. Because you SEE yourself better with a Mirror than any other means in the world.

Now the same thing applies. When you want to SEE motion pictures, use a MIRROR SCREEN. Because you SEE the pictures so much plainer, better and clearer on a Mirror Screen than on any other surface under the sun. Besides it tickles your patrons and makes picture fans. It's a fact. The difference between a motion picture on a MIRROR SCREEN and any other screen of any other kind is the same comparison between seeing your own reflection in a fine French plate glass mirror and in a mud puddle. The "MIRROR SCREEN" is a Mirror. A magnificent mirror made from the finest polished plate glass that the world can produce. Get Right and Write to us to-day for our new Snow White Prismized Finished Surface.

F. J. REMBUSCH
President

MIRROR SCREEN COMPANY SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA

Sargent's Photoplay Service

To aid those who wish to guard against the formation of bad writing habits, or who wish to estimate their progress, I offer the following service:

Script Criticism For a fee of two dollars for each reel, I will read your manuscript and write a personal letter, pointing out the faults of plotting, technical development, manuscript preparation, etc. Sometimes I can help you to make the script salable, but I do not guarantee a sale. I do not revise manuscript; I do not typewrite it, nor do I offer it for sale. I simply write you a letter that tells you what the trouble is.

Plot Estimates If your stories do not sell and you want to know why, send me five synopses and one full script. I will criticise the script and tell you whether it is your plot or your development that is wrong. The fee for this service is $5 for the five synopses and additional plot. Synopses must not run more than 300 words each. Send a synopsis of your undeveloped plot and fee of one dollar and you will be advised as to whether it will pay you to develop the same.

Please Note My fees do not include envelopes or return postage. Send prepaid and self addressed return envelope and remit in New York exchange; not local checks. I reserve the right to return unread (with fee) any story or plot that does not warrant treatment. All scripts must be typewritten.

EPES WINTHROP SARGENT
Box 70, Madison Square Station, NEW YORK CITY

NOTICE TO

SCENARIO WRITERS

Scenarios intended especially for submission to the RELIANCE MAJESTIC
APOLLO KOMIC
Companies should be addressed to the
SCENARIO BUREAU

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION
71 W. 23RD STREET NEW YORK CITY

During September

37 Motion Picture Theatres

in twenty-two cities installed Wurlitzer Music. Why don't you? It pays

20 BRANCHES WURLITZER 20 BRANCHES
CINCINNATI

Poster Mounting Cloth

Headquarters.

Our 42-inch poster cloth is recognized as the standard fabric for poster mounting. It is used by the LEADERS.

TURNER-HALSEY COMPANY, 62 LEONARD STREET, NEW YORK

---

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES

One Powers No. 6-A Mechanism, new with loop setter, shop worn, never used ........................$117.50

One complete No. 6-A with loop setter, slightly shop worn, never used, including lenses to suit......$208.00

Two Simplex, complete with lenses to suit, slightly used, good as new, guaranteed perfect..........$190.00 each

One Powers No. 6, used two months only, guaranteed perfect with lenses, complete..................$127.50

Two Edison type B. Model, good as new, one inside shutter, $115.00; one outside shutter, $125.00. Complete ready to operate.

One No. 5 S. H. guaranteed perfect. Complete....$75.00

One 110 compensarc, slightly shop worn, never used, $42.50

We will take in trade for a new No. 6-A machine or for a new Simplex, your old machine and will make you a liberal allowance in trade. Ticket choppers, asbestos booths, all supplies and repair parts. Catalog on request.

THE STERN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

109 N. 10th Street Philadelphia, Pa.

The oldest established supply house of its kind in the country

---

Von Duprin SELF-RELEASING FIRE EXIT DEVICES

Simple in construction; unexcelled in workmanship; strong to withstand the severest handling; failure to operate is impossible. Thousands of these devices in use on schools, churches, theatres, auditoriums, factories, department stores, etc. Any hardware dealer can furnish them.

VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO.
General Distributors
Indianapolis, Ind.

Ask for catalogue No. 10D.

See Sweet's catalogue, pages 794 and 795.

SAFE EXIT IS A UNIVERSAL DEMAND

---

Express Charges Greatly Reduced

by our new method of shipping. Write for our 1914 list and rates on our one exhibitor to a city exclusive illustrated song slide service.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE - 6th floor, Powers Bldg., 37 S. Wabash Ave. - CHICAGO, ILL.

---

The Bronx Movie Circle are giving a cabaret and ball at the Burland Casino, near Westchester and Prospect Avenues Subway Station, on Sunday night, November 23d. Doors open at 8 o'clock.

Miss Florence Lawrence of the Victor Company, and Mr. Maurice Costello of the Vitagraph Company will lead the Grand March. General admission 50 cents. Music by Louis Fisher's union orchestra.

---

OOKING NOW FOR GREATER NEW YORK AND NORTHERN NEW JERSEY!

TWO PASQUALIS:

"A RACE WITH DEATH," 2 Reels
"THE POWER OF INNOCENCE," 3 Reels

TWO ITALAS:

"THE GREATER LOVE," 2 Reels
"UNMASKED," 3 Reels

TWO RAMOS:

"THE CURRENT," 3 Reels
"CARDS," 3 Reels

Our paper will draw the crowds, and the films will electrify your audience.

European Feature Film Co.

'Phone, 5307 Bryant 220 West 42d St. Room 1608 Candler Bldg.

---

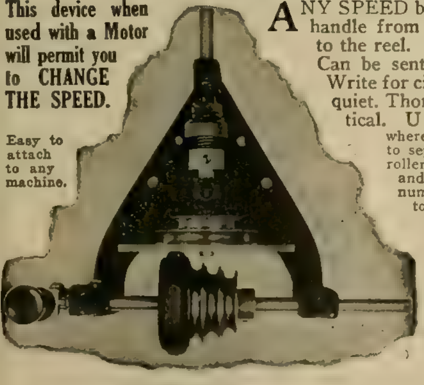
This device when used with a Motor will permit you to CHANGE THE SPEED.

Easy to attach to any machine.



ANY SPEED by moving the handle from 5 to 30 min. to the reel. Price $12.50. Can be sent parcel-post. Write for circular. Runs quiet. Thoroughly practical. Used Everywhere. Has a Clutch to separate disc and roller for starting and stopping, also numbered indicator and Oilcups. Very rugged, simple, and well finished.

W. G. Preddey
669 Haight St.
San Francisco
California

---

"MAKE YOUR OWN COLORED SLIDES"

WITH Transpero COLORED SLIDE INK

RED, BLUE AND GREEN

Write—letter—draw on glass, attractive slides in colors, with any pen, the same as writing on paper. Transpero Ink projects on the screen in natural colors. Dries in one minute, and will not rub off, but can be easily removed with a damp cloth.

Anybody can make attractive slides, for advertising feature programs, announcing Vaudeville acts, chorus slides when chorus slides are missing, and you also can make different colored spot lights.

"SATISFACTION GUARANTEED"

One Ounce bottle, either color, prepaid............$ .50
Complete set of three bottles, prepaid.................1.00

Transpero Fluid Company (NOT INC.) 2453 SO. HOMAN AVENUE
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

For $6.50 You can get a One-Sheet Easel Poster Frame

Solid oak body covered with 2¼-in. wide angle Brass—turned edge, glass front, detachable compoboard back solid brass tilting easel and legs.

Prices on all of our other styles and sizes of Frames in proportion
All prices F. O. B. our only factory, Cleveland, Ohio

(We are originators of this type of frame.)

ASK us to quote you on anything you may need in Lobby Displays, especially Brass Railings, Grills, Easels, Kick Plates, Push Plates, etc. Our Goods Best. Prices Right. We are producers of Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of any description.

New York Agents, Yerkes Sound Effect Co., 42nd St. & Broadway.
Virginia and W. Va. Agents, Theatre Supply Co., Roanoke, Va.

THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO., Inc.
1232 EAST THIRD STREET CLEVELAND, OHIO

---

JUST RELEASED

The latest, most up-to-date method of deodorizing your theatre with attractive disinfectants.

Why buy a machine to purify the air? Use your own electric fans, attach a "Vim Vapor Screen" and obtain the same results.

A simple screen with double tanks and wick. Economical and efficient.

Highly finished nickel-plated screen complete with one quart of "Vim Vapor," sufficient for six months' average use.

Your choice of disinfectants, Cedar, Pine, $4.00 each, or the sweet scented redolents, Oriental Sandal, Violet, $5.00 each.

Orchid Blossom Special, $6.00 each.

Delivered by Parcel Post, C. O. D., any part of the United States

HYGIENIC SPECIALTY CO.
Greensburg, Pa.

---

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 670 | Film Exchanges, U. S. | $3.50 |
| 70 | Manufacturers and Studios, U. S. | 1.00 |
| 34 | Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers | 1.00 |
| 231 | Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries | 3.00 |
| 520 | Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries | 3.00 |

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880.

---

---

THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.

---

SLIDES

This sample for 15c. 40 different Players of the General Film Co., at $2.75 per doz.; 2 doz., $5.00. Mutual and Universal at the same price. Send for our catalog of stock slides. Return this ad and $2.00, and we will ship 1 doz. Announcement slides.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY
Lockport, New York

---

IMPORTED CONDENSERS

OUR SPECIALTY

Try a pair of our CONCAVED $3.00 condensers.
Regular condensers $1.50 and $2.00 per pair.

Everything in the Moving Picture line

WHITE SPECIALTY COMPANY
120 E. 14th Street NEW YORK CITY 71 W. 23rd Street

---

STEREOPTICONS

Moving Picture Machines and Supplies
REBUILT MACHINES, REPAIRS, Electric and Calcium Burners

HENRY MESTRUM, Successor to C. B. KLEINE
385 Sixth Ave. between 23d and 24th Sts. New York
Send for Catalogue

---

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

GREAT NORTHERN

STERLING FEATURES HAVE MADE US FAMOUS FROM THE BEGINNING

WE ANNOUNCE FOR EARLY RELEASE

IN THE BONDS OF PASSION

COPYRIGHTED 1913 (IN THREE PARTS) INFRINGERS BEWARE

ARTISTIC PHOTOS AND POSTERS GALORE

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO., 42 East 14th St., New York City

TURN ON THE LIGHT

Darkness is no longer necessary to obtain a clear picture.

A RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN is the answer

Daily demonstrations in our projection room

7th floor, Heidelberg Building
Broadway and 42d Street, N. Y. C

---

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Company

105 N. Main Street, Sole Manufacturers, ST. LOUIS, MO.

G. H. CALLAGHAN, 1405 Broadway, New York
DISTRIBUTORS

This is Great Weather for Static

My experience has demonstrated that 90 per cent. of all static occurs before the film is placed in the camera. I have solved the problem of how to avoid it.

I can guarantee that 90 per cent. of your troubles will be eliminated by using our perforated stock, which is handled under ideal atmospheric conditions, artificially created. This specially prepared film costs no more than what you are now using. Can you afford to continue losing money when it can be avoided?

Write for interesting prices.

DAVID HORSLEY

Fourth Floor 1600 Broadway
New York City

American Agent Lumiere Film

GENUINE PARTS or "DUPES"

Do you know what is being used to repair your MOTIOGRAPH—Genuine parts or "Dupes."

A genuine part is made by the manufacturer of your Machine with care as regards quality and fit, and every genuine MOTIOGRAPH part is interchangeable with the part on your particular Model.

A "duped" part is of the cheap, "thrown together" variety, made of cheap material, by cheap workmen and made to sell cheap, without regard to fit or service.

It is up to you Mr. Exhibitor, to see that only genuine, long-wearing quality parts are used in your repair work.

We warn you but cannot force you to protect yourself—but if your dealer cannot supply genuine MOTIOGRAPH parts, send direct to us.

CATALOGUE AND PRICE PARTS LIST FREE.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.

Eastern Office: 21 E. 14th St., New York — 564-572 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. — Western Office: 833 Market St., San Francisco

DID IT EVER, STRIKE YOU?

BELIEVE THE EVIDENCE OF YOUR OWN EYES

Let Us Send You Our Large Free Samples. Make us show You.

That After You Have Bought, The Price is a Thing of the Past: Quality a Thing of the Future?

When You Buy, Buy Quality.

MIRROROIDE SCREENS AND CURTAINS

(PATENTS PENDING)

Are Sold at a Price None of our Competitors Dare Make, Because We Have the Factory Facilities To Make in Quantities and Know How. We Would Rather Make Small Profits and Large Sales Than Large Profits and Few Sales.

REGARDING QUALITY

Our Screens are made of Canvas. Coating is Metalized Glass. Sold Under A Positive 5-Year Guarantee. It Won't Crack, Peel or Turn Black. Tints Optional With You—Silver White, Silver Flesh, Silver Amber, or Pale Gold.

SURFACE FINISH

Medium Matte, A; Heavy Matte, B. Filling Your Requirements as to Width of Your House.

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc., Newburgh, N. Y.

---

Only Three Prints Left

IN THE TOILS OF THE DEVIL

Copyrighted 1913 [BRAND NEW 2500 feet each

Made by the famous MILANO COMPANY of Italy.

To close out immediately, will give rights for several States not already sold with each copy. 1-3-6 sheets and photos.

A FEATURE BARGAIN

WRITE OR WIRE AT ONCE

International Film Traders
5 West 14th St. Film Importers and Dealers New York

---

Film Quality

Quality in the film—quality from a technical photographic standpoint is as important to the Exhibitor as is interest in the story that the film tells.

There's one film that's recognized the world over as the standard of quality—that is always used by those whose effort it is to give the Exhibitors the very best goods and the very best service—Eastman film.

And it is identifiable. Look for "Eastman" on the perforated margin.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

---

AUTOMATIC MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

SIMPLICITY • RELIABILITY • ENDURANCE • SEEBURG

PIANOS AND ORCHESTRIONS

FOR THE MOVING PICTURE THEATRE

The "Seeburg Idea" in connection with automatic pianos and orchestrions means "Simplicity," "Reliability" and "Endurance," giving maximum merit at a minimum price. For further particulars write

J. P. Seeburg Piano Co.
MANUFACTURERS

900-902-904 Republic Bldg., Chicago

$200,000 More!

My four offices are doing $200,000 more business per year now than they were doing a year ago. THIS IS SIMPLY PHENOMENAL. An increase of $200,000 in any business is TERRIFIC. And I give all the credit for it to the ASTOUNDING IMROVEMENT IN THE QUALITY OF THAT UNIVERSAL PROGRAM. If Universal quality will improve MY business it will improve YOURS. Why don't you try it? You've nothing to lose and everything to gain.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"

FOUR EVERY WEEK Feature Service Supreme FOUR EVERY WEEK

WAR CORRESPONDENTS
Four Reel Itala

DR. NICHOLSON AND THE BLUE DIAMOND Four Reel F.R.A.

WIVES - Three Reel Ramo

HOUNDS OF THE UNDERWORLD
Three Reel Ruby Features

THE MISSING WOMAN
Two Reel F. R. A.

GENERAL SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO.
112 No. La Salle Street CHICAGO

Headquarters for

ASBESTOS

CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS

Send for Booklet
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
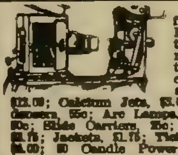
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.



We have a Catalogue of full line of Moving Picture Machine repair parts ready to put in your machine at reduced prices. We make them, and for that reason can sell them very low. We also sell Stereopticons for $12.00; Calcium Jets, $3.00; 100 Carbons, $2.00; Condensers, 55c; Arc Lamps, $2.25; Stereopticon Lenses, 90c; Slide Carriers, 25c; Moving Picture Objectives, $2.75; Jackets, $1.75; Ticket Holders, 75c; Rheostats, $4.00; 50 Candle Power Stereopticon Lamps, 75c.

L. HETZ, 302 E. 23rd Street, New York City

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St. :: CHICAGO, ILL.

Novelties in Moving Picture Apparatus

A list of moving picture apparatus which is new and will interest you. Kinetoscopes, Radiant Vellum for Screens, Condensers, Fire-Proof Film Rewinders, Electric Stereopticons, Edison Home Kinetoscopes and Educational Films.

We are prepared to furnish every kind of moving picture apparatus and supplies and will gladly give you information on any subject concerning moving picture apparatus.

It means a saving of both time and money. The Lantern Slide Outfit enables you to produce clear, clean-cut slides. An inquiry will bring you full details concerning this outfit.

We have for sale or rent forty thousand slides Around the World and all other subjects.

WILLIAMS, BROWN & EARLE, Inc.
MOVING PICTURE APPARATUS AND SUPPLIES
Dept. 61 916-918 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

In Answering Advertisements Please Mention
The Moving Picture World

The RUBY'S Clean Sweep

The whole country is now a-quiver with the 4-reel Sulzer sensation

"The Shame of the Empire State"

We are tickled, our buyers are tickled, the exhibitors are tickled. If it is not in your territory yet, wire in : : : : :

---

Now for our regular three reel Ruby features:

"The Hounds of the Underworld"
—nearly all gone

"On the Trail of the Dock Rats"
—all ready for delivery

---

COMING

"The Thorns of the Gay White Way"

"A SERPENT of the SLUMS"

AND MORE

---

Exclusive Territory now closing for our output

Ruby Feature Film Co.

145 West 45th Street NEW YORK CITY

---

"Agfa"

MOTION PICTURE FILM

Used by Makers of Quality Films

WRITE FOR PRICES

Sole American Agents

Raw Film Supply Company

15 East 26th Street New York, N. Y.

---

Photoplay Company, Inc.

19 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The headquarters for all standard projecting machines. Full line of accessories and supplies

Expert Repairing on All Machines

Write us for terms and catalogues.

---

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service. Nearly 3,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:

110 Volts, 60 Cycles....................$50.00
220 Volts, 60 Cycles.................... 50.00

Prices for special transformers to control other voltages and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
217 West Illinois Street :: :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

---

THE CHICAGO FEATURE FILM COMPANY

make to order Commercial, Industrial and Educational Film.

GET OUR PRICES

Unexcelled Equipment Quick Action

4108-22 LINCOLN AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILL.

---

An Entire Stock of Films

including two and three-reel features, for sale. All subjects of foreign productions, such as Cines, Milano, Ambrosio, Pasquali. The entire stock will go for $5 up for single reels and $100 up for features. Large portion of stock is practically new. Full line of posters and other advertising.

Communicate at once with the

SAVOY FILM EXCHANGE

221 Sixth Ave. : : : New York City

ORCHESTRA MUSIC
FOR MOVING PICTURES

The Orpheum Collection of dramatic and descriptive music for Piano and seven orchestra parts. Piano can be used alone. In two series:

No. 1 and No. 2

Piano, 58 cts. each. Both series, $1.15. Violin, 40 cts. each; both 75 cts. Cello-&-Bass same price as violin. Flute 35 cts. each. Both series, 65 cts. Clarinet, Cornet and Trombone same price as Flute. Drums, 30 cts. each. Both series, 55 cts.

Send for free sample page and further discounts. 3d series ready for piano only; 58 cts.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 SEDGWICK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
The A. H. Andrews Co.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office, 1165 Broadway.
Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 736 Mission St.

THE "STANDARDIZED" THEATRE CHAIRS

Do you want a life-saving chair ?
Do you want a space-saving chair ?
Do you want a sanitary chair ?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair ?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

OPERA CHAIRS

Latest and Best in Seats

SEND FOR OUR PRICES BEFORE BUYING

BENNETT SEATING CO
127 EAST PEARL ST,
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Good Light Means Big Crowds

The Sandow Moving Picture Electric Light Plant gives perfect light any time you want it, at 1-10 the cost of public service. Light enough to ship as baggage. Carry your own electric lights. Catalog 201 tells you how and how much. Want it?

Detroit Motor Car Supply Company, Detroit, Michigan

STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS

AGENCIES:

Fletcher W. Dickerman, 61 North Seventh St., Newark, N. J.
California Seating Co., 1110 Van Nuys Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.
H. A. Johnson Seating Co., 911 Western Ave. Seattle, Wash.
Feldner-Wagner Co. 508 Marshall Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.
L-B Mfg. Co., S. E. Cor. 6th & Vine Sts., Phila., Pa.

The Wisconsin Seating Company
New London, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

Steel standards will not break

As the Operator Looks at it

As the Operator Looks at It

Just notice how easy this operator takes it. He doesn't have to work over a dangerous juice consuming rheostat at furnace heat anymore since the

Fort Wayne Compensarc

was installed.

He can control the machine perfectly now with one hand--gets a clearer, whiter, steadier light and can adjust it to any of the three intensities without even the faintest flicker.

When we sold this machine we guaranteed it would absolutely

Cut 2-3 from the Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounded almost too good to be true, but they put one in on our 30 day free trial plan.

Did the machine "make good?" Well, the first month it reduced the bill from $22.70 to $9.24 and they operated more hours and got better light than ever before.

We can do just as well for you regardless of what voltage you are using and if you will send for our little free booklet, we'll explain how we do it.

Remember you are paying the Lighting Company 66 2-3 per cent more than you need to every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of General Electric Company
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theaters and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use. Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich. New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburg: 316 Bissell Blk. Philadelphia: 1943 Market St. Nashville, Tenn.: 315 No. 4th Ave.

"L Article 47" Is the Strongest Kind of New Majestic Melodrama

When New Majestic puts forth comedy, it's mighty funny comedy, and when we put forth melodrama it's the strongest possible kind of CONSISTENT melodrama. Sunday, Nov. 16th, we release "THE TOMBOY'S RACE," which is just plain DRAMA based on a thrilling automobile race in which the New Majestic's heroine wins. Tuesday, Nov. 18th, we release "L ARTICLE 47," in two reels, which is "strongest melodrama" and nothing else. There are TWO terrific trial scenes. All after the famous play, of course, and intended to bring out all the original realism, action and excitement. It's strong enough to set your patrons talking for a week. Saturday, Nov. 22nd, we make no release, because "L ARTICLE 47" is a two-reeler and we "skip" the next release day.

FLORENCE ROBERTS' "Sapho" Is the Strongest Kind of a Drawing Card

Because it HAS "DRAWN" everywhere. How simple! Merely figure that if Miss Roberts' "SAPHO" draws for big theatres, it'll draw for small ones, too. The picture is now a proven money-getter, and there are a lot of fine box office records still to be made with it. If you know any of the tricks of successful exhibiting at all, you can't go wrong in showing a feature that people are anxious to see. All you want to be sure of is that the story is clean. The story of our FLORENCE ROBERTS' "SAPHO" is clean all through!

"NEW MAJESTIC"

"It Boomed Mutual Business Right in Midsummer!"

Business Offices: New Rochelle, N. Y. All-Year-Round Studios: Brooklyn Heights, Los Angeles, Cal.

Selig

"The Quality of Mercy"

FIVE

MONEY WINNERS

Merit Multiplied In Vast Variety

"THE QUALITY OF MERCY"

In Two Reels Released November 24th

This is a modern play, strong in heart-beats, moving in action, touching in heartlessness. The ancient theme of the bogus marriage is handled in new, striking and original fashion. The heroine attains heart's ease and happiness in fullness of time.

---

November 25th "MOUNTED OFFICER FLYNN"

The centaurs of the police force are accredited with superior perception and naturally have advantage of fleetness over their more bulky brethren of the uniform. Flynn has the true detective faculty with intrepidity to match. A big, breezy play.

November 26th "CUPID IN THE COW CAMP"

A bunch of green but brawny cowboys get the love bee humming in their Stetsons and send money to "small ad" confidence men to get in touch with an alleged wealthy widow. How they give up and then get their money back is decidedly interesting.

November 27th "A MESSAGE FROM HOME"

A little girl writes with a piece of chalk a message on a car door that eventually reaches the eye of her boyhood sweetheart, given to wanderlust; brings him to himself and restores him to his friends and his family.

November 28th "THE SUPREME MOMENT"

Two bad men fall out. One seemingly reforms, and the other pursues the error of his ways. How the bad one dies to save the life of the daughter of his ancient enemy, makes a very vivid and vital chapter in film romance.

---

N. B.—Attention of Exhibitors is particularly called to SELIG'S new line of attractive paper. One sheets for every attraction, three sheets for the two-reel releases, and additional six sheet stands for special releases. Make the lobby of your house attractive with this colorful illumination.

SELIG POYSCOPE CO.

BRANCH OFFICES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
EXECUTIVE OFFICES 20 E. RANDOLPH ST.
CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A.

The Principal Requirement of a Motion Picture Machine

Perfect Projection

A chain is no stronger than its weakest link; and a film, however good it may be, can only demonstrate its worth through proper presentation on the screen.

The Projection of POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6A is absolutely perfect. Every detail on the film is faithfully reproduced, with perfect clearness and without flicker.

Prof. Henry Phelps Gage, of Cornell University, says:

Run at normal speed, "POWER'S" absolutely projects without flicker.

Power's Cameragraph No. 6A

is recognized by the trade as

THE PREMIER PROJECTOR

That is why it handles over 65% of their American Business

Write for catalogue G with full details

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

88-90 Gold Street :: :: New York City

The Leading Makers of Motion Picture Machines

Vol. 18. No. 9 November 29, 1913 Price 10 Cents

H E HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Ben Bolt" (Three Part Solax).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

THANHOUSER 3 A WEEK

Thanhouser "Big" Productions

"ONCE A MONTH— —ON THE FIRST OF THE MONTH"

Always on the FIRST
January
Februry
March
April
May June
1
July
August
September
October
November
December
Always on the FIRST

December 1. MAUDE FEALY in THE LEGEND OF PROVENCE (After the poem by Adelaide Proctor)

The pathetic story of Angela, "The Convent Child," who falls in love with a wounded knight whom she had nursed and was made to face the stern realities of life outside convent walls. How the knight betrayed the trust that Angela reposed in him in her ignorance of the world and man and how, through a wondrous miracle, her place in the convent was kept for Angela until her return and her absence never once noted. The tale of an innocent sinner who was altogether redeemed.

IN FOUR PARTS WITH "PERFECT PUBLICITY" POSTERS, CUTS, HERALDS. Make Your Exchange Give You The "THANHOUSER 'BIG' PRODUCTIONS"

For exclusive first-run use for a full year by iron clad contract. Ask for the contract! Clamor for the contract! INSIST ON the contract! It is all protective.

THE THREE-A-WEEK

Sunday, Nov. 23, "THEIR GREAT BIG BEAUTIFUL DOLL"

The Thanhouser Twins had a great, big beautiful doll that was so great, so big and so beautiful, that someone had to steal it, so the Twins got a more beautiful one that was human besides

Tuesday, Nov. 25, "THE BLIGHT OF WEALTH"

(In 2 reels, with Flo LaBadie and Dave Thompson)

His quarry venture failed, but his wife had money and they lived in luxury still. Then a panic swept away her fortune, made a self-supporting, self-respecting man of him and brought him to realize that his helpmate's wealth had been much of a blight.

Friday, Nov. 28, "CURFEW SHALL NOT RING TONIGHT"

Cromwell's men had sentenced her sweetheart to death—he was to go "at the ringing of the curfew." She tried to dissuade the old sexton from his duty, but ring the curfew he must, so she gained the belfry and hanging to the huge bell as it swung, by the iron clapper, kept it silent. Then Cromwell pardoned her lover for her pluck.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION
NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

Thanhouser Stars!
Thanhouser Features!
Thanhouser Quality

FIVE-A-WEEK

Essanay

RELEASED FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28TH!

"THE BRAND OF EVIL"

(IN TWO PARTS)

AN EXTRAORDINARY DRAMA OF MYSTERY. AN EAST INDIAN SPECTACLE THAT WILL SEND THE CHILLS UP AND DOWN YOUR SPINE. AN ATTRACTION THAT IS BOUND TO HOLD THE INTEREST. THOMAS COMMERFORD, E. H. CALVERT, RUTH STONEHOUSE AND RICHARD C. TRAVERS FEATURED. POSTERS AND HERALDS NOW READY.

A Scene from "The Brand of Evil"

---

Released Tuesday, November 25th.

"THE LITTLE SUBSTITUTE"

A beautiful drama of love, affection and sacrifice featuring FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN.

---

Released Wednesday, November 26th.

"DOLLARS—POUNDS—SENSE"

An excruciatingly funny comedy. A riot of mirth from beginning to end.

---

Released Thursday, November 27th.

"THE NAMING OF THE RAWHIDE QUEEN"

A Novel Western drama featuring Harry Todd, Evelyn Selbie and True Boardman.

---

Released Saturday, November 29th.

"SOPHIE'S HERO"

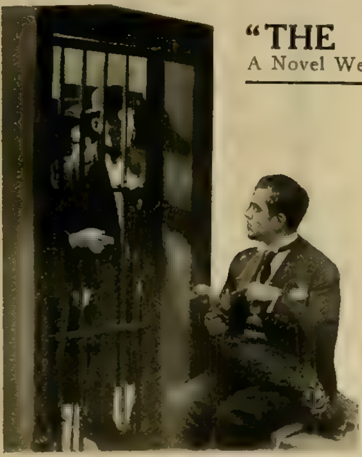
This is positively one of the best comedies ever produced at our Western studio. MARGARET JOSLYN and AUGUSTUS CARNEY featured.

---



A Scene from "The Pay-As-You-Enter" Man

RELEASED FRIDAY, DECEMBER 5TH.

THE "PAY-AS-YOU-ENTER" MAN

(IN TWO PARTS)

THIS IS POSITIVELY A FEATURE. A SPLENDID HOLIDAY SUBJECT WITH SUPERB BACKGROUNDS, EXCELLENT PHOTOGRAPHY AND UNEXCELLED PORTRAYAL OF CHARACTERS. RICHARD C. TRAVERS, IRENE WARFIELD FEATURED. HERALDS AND POSTERS NOW READY.

---

OUR POSTERS ARE DISTINCTIVE. They will boom your business. Lithographs are in full four colors, 35c each. You can order these from your exchange or direct from Essanay Film Mfg. Co., 521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago. Your lobby display will look attractive if you use photographs of ESSANAY players, 8 x 10, $3.00 per dozen. You can secure these from the PLAYERS' PHOTO CO., 177 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.

Essanay Film Manufacturing Co.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory and Studio, 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill.
Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona

ONE TWO THREE FOUR FIVE

10 COMEDY REELS

Always first to meet the new demands and changing conditions in this wonderful business, the Universal has arranged to release

Ten Comedy Reels A Week

WANTED COMEDY DIRECTORS

—We want the BEST comedy and comedy-drama directors in the business!

—We will pay such men the highest salaries in the business!

—We will give them good stories and a strong company!

—We will give them carte blanche IF THEY PROVE THEY ARE WORTHY OF IT.

—We will let them spend money like water. But they must GET RESULTS!

—We want the biggest directors; none of the small fry.

—We will keep all communications confidential.

—Direct your application to "Carl Laemmle, President, Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1600 Broadway, New York," and mark it "PRIVATE."

USE THE BRAINS

SIX SEVEN EIGHT NINE TEN

EVERY WEEK!

They will be the best that brains and money can produce. This means that Universal Exhibitors, as usual, will be able to

Leave Competition Behind

COMEDY SCENARIOS WANTED

—We want the BEST comedy and comedy-drama scenarios money will buy!

—We will pay the highest price for them —AND PAY IT INSTANTLY!

—We promise you QUICK ACTION on anything you submit to us.

—We will read your scenario at once and either reject or pay for it at once!

—We want comedies of ALL SORTS, from slapstick up to highest class.

—We want two-reel, one-reel and half-reel comedies and comedy-dramas for our BIG STARS.

—We want YOUR BEST STUFF—not something somebody else has rejected.

—Direct your manuscript to "Comedy Scenario Dept., Universal Film Mfg. Co." EITHER 1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, N. Y., OR HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA.

GOD GAVE YOU!

Coming! UNIVERSAL

"ABSINTHE"

(Made in Paris)

Positively the strongest work KING BAGGOT ever did. Supported by Miss Leah Baird and a great Paris company, directed by Herbert Brenon. Length approximately 3500 feet. Accompanied by stunning 6-sheets, 3-sheets and two kinds of 1-sheets, all designed by Ben Wells of the Morgan Lithograph Co.

"ABSINTHE"

(Extra Rental)

This 3500-foot feature is going to cost your exchange so much over the regular price that you, too, will have to pay extra for it. DON'T HESITATE TO DO SO. You'll get your money back over and over again. Book it as "the greatest work KING BAGGOT ever did" and the picture will make good your claim!

"ABSINTHE"

(3,500 Feet)

We took over six thousand feet of negative in making this feature, BUT WE BOILED IT DOWN TO 3500 feet, so that not even the severest critic can ever say there is an inch of "padding" in it. "Absinthe" is a natural length picture. Make early arrangements for booking, and DON'T QUIBBLE ABOUT THE EXTRA RENTAL!

UNIVERSAL FILMS TRADE MARK

1600 Broadway

Universal Film

Carl Laemmle

"Largest Film Manufacturin

FEATURES Coming!

Under the BlackFlag (3R)

This is our first "Gold Seal" release. It is the second of our masterly pirate series. The release date is December 2nd. Jot it down.

Over the Cliffs (3R)

Undoubtedly the best feature the American-Eclair ever made. The entire list of Eclair stars is in the cast. Released December 10th.

A Jew's Christmas (3R)

Made by the Smalleys and therefore totally away from the regular run of holiday pictures. The release date is December 18th.

The Bride of Mystery (3R)

Francis Ford and Grace Cunard at their very best in a gripping story of intrigue and mystery. The release date is December 23d.

Rory of the Bogs (3R)

It's a WARREN KERRIGAN feature and it's Irish through and through. The millions who love KERRIGAN will love "Rory of the Bogs."

Manufacturing Co. NEW YORK

President

Concern in the Universe"

UNIVERSAL FILMS
TRADE MARK

This New Kind of 6=She

Five
Colors

NOTE.—Wire immediately to your Universal exchange for SIX SHEETS, THREE SHEETS and ONE SHEETS for "Under the Black Flag." Then BOOM THIS WONDERFUL FEATURE as far ahead of exhibition date as possible. If your exchange cannot supply you with enough posters, order DIRECT FROM THE MORGAN LITHOGRAPH CO., Cleveland, Ohio, NOT FROM US. Price, ten cents PER SHEET.

et Advertises Our First

"GOLD SEAL" Release

"Under the Black Flag"

Tuesday, Dec. 2nd Three Reels

REMEMBER!

No feature will ever be released as a "Gold Seal" unless it is EXTRAORDINARY. "Under the Black Flag" is extraordinary or it would never have the honor of being the FIRST "Gold Seal" film. "Gold Seal" films will take the place of the Tuesday 101 Bison on and after Tuesday, Dec. 2. This does not affect the Saturday 101-Bison of course. We will continue to release tremendous western features under the 101-Bison brand on Saturdays. Now tell your exchange you want the first "Gold Seal" and every other "Gold Seal." And don't forget to get your posters IMMEDIATELY!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

Universal Film Manufacturing Co. Mecca Bldg., Broadway at 48th St., N. Y.

If you are not getting THE UNIVERSAL WEEKLY, fill in this coupon or send us the information on a postal card and we will put you on our FREE mailing list for three months. DON'T NEGLECT THIS. Do it THIS VERY MINUTE!

(Name of Theatre) __________

(Proprietor) __________

(Street Address) __________

(City) __________ (State) __________

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

"Leah Kleschna" will stir the civilized world with its appeal.

Daniel
Pre

The Internationa

"LEAH K

BY THI
DRA
C·M M'CL

WIT
DISTING
AMERICAN

CARLOTTA

Released—

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
TIMES BUILDING
NEW YORK

"30 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

The power of
"Leah Kleschna" steals into the soul.

"30
FAMOUS
FEATURES
A YEAR"

Frohman
ents
lly Famous Play

LESCHNA"

NOTED
ATIST
·S· LLAN

THE UISHED
ACTRESS

NILLSON

December 10th

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR PRES.
DANIEL FROHMAN
MANAGING DIRECTOR

"30
FAMOUS FEATURES
A YEAR"

Getting The Coin

The one real worry of the exhibitor is to fill up his house with cash patrons.

There are other small considerations, of course—but getting the coin is the daily aim and the final purpose; the end of every man's desire.

Getting the coin out of a picture show calls for the same simple process that is followed by those who get the coin out of any other business:-

Offer the public the very best to be had in your line, present it attractively, advertise, and be courteous.

The exhibitors who follow this proven rule are the only ones who are getting the coin in big chunks and getting it continuously.

The best in your line—the finest pictures that are now, or ever have been produced, pictures which have long been the favorites of the fans, are made by the Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Kleine (Cines-Eclipse), Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig and Vitagraph Companies.

The experience of these manufacturers covers the whole history of motion pictures. Upwards of 20,000,000 of dollars have been spent in perfecting the plants in which these brands are made, and hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in advertising to make them the best known brands on earth.

Think of getting the whole Pre-eminent Ten on one program of unvarying excellence, furnished at a rate no higher than you would have to pay for unreliable poor grade, unasked for films!

General Film Company (Inc.)
200 Fifth Avenue New York

Getting The Coin

The Cypher Message

Selig. Two Reels. Released December 1st.

Lionel Verker and his sister Marie, two clever English crooks, make their appearance at an American seaside resort. Lionel rescues Bob Kent from drowning and becomes a guest of the Kents, millionaires, at their house.

Verker, learning of the resignation of a lady's maid, wires his sister to apply for the position which she secures with a forged reference. Muriel Kent discovers the loss of a valuable brooch, which she wears at a lawn fete.

John Kent quietly engages Donald Bryce, a famous detective, who loses no time in being introduced in the family as a friend.

He soon discovers that Lionel and the new maid are in communication. Later, after shadowing Lionel to his apartments, he secures a cipher message which has passed between Verker and the maid.

Cleverly deciphering the message and securing photographs and the criminal records of the Verkers, he catches them with the goods and sends the pair where they belong.

Venomous Tongues

Kleine-Celio. Two Reels. Released December 2nd.

Charles Raleigh, a cousin of Clara Burton, is secretly in love with her. She returns his affection in secret, but, having grown up together, each thinks the other indifferent, and Charles goes to America to look after the mining interests, and Clara, thinking him indifferent, accepts the proposal of George Conway, and is happily married.

Charles, finding himself a pauper, as a result of a conflagration, writes George for a position.

George takes Charles into his own house, and the gossips get busy. George, distracted at the scandal, challenges the husband of one of the gossips to a duel.

Clara, thinking he intends to fight Charles, goes to warn him. George finds her there, and, suddenly blinded by jealous rage, shoots her. His mind gives way, and he falls across the table senseless.

The Cave Men's War

Kalem. Two Reels. Released December 3rd.

In this unusual drama of prehistoric days, Red Axe, of the Cave Dwellers, is exiled from his tribe because he attempts to steal the mate of one of his fellows.

The wounded exile is protected by Strong Arm, of the Shell People, who are at war with the Cave Dwellers, and is nursed back to health by Lightfoot, Strong Arm's mate.

Red Axe shows his ingratitude by trying to steal Lightfoot; failing, he returns to the Cave Dwellers and leads them in a successful assault on the Shell People, and taking Lightfoot by force, is mortally wounded by Strong Arm, who has accidentally formed the first bow and arrow. With the aid of the new weapon, Strong Arm restores peace to his tribe.

Baseball's Peerless Leader

Pathé. Two Reels. Released December 4th.

Featuring Frank Chance, the famous baseball manager, Miss Gwendoline Pates and Ned Burton. A very attractive comedy-drama with a pronounced out-of-door atmosphere. Ethel Norwood's father is a baseball fan of the most rabid type. Incidentally, he wishes to have his daughter marry an Italian count, a plan which does not meet with Ethel's approval. She leaves the count on the boat landing one day and goes cruising in her father's motor boat by herself, but the boat is wrecked on the rocks and Ethel thrown into the water. Shivering with the cold, she finds her way to a bungalow nearby. She finds no one in and makes herself at home, clothing herself in a man's bathrobe which she finds, and kindling a fire in the fireplace. She is found asleep hours later by Frank Chance, the owner of the bungalow, and explains matters to him. Later, her frantic parents, learning her whereabouts, come and get her and, angry at her escapade, send her to her grandparents' house, where she is kept practically a prisoner. Chance is called away from an exciting baseball game by a note from her, begging him to rescue her. She escapes in a baseball suit, and the peerless leader, with his fair recruit, returns to the ball field in time to save the game and appease her father's wrath.

When Mountain and Valley Meet

Lubin. Two Reels. Released December 4th.

Having tasted of the fruits of the Valley, Beth, a mountain maid, like Eve of old desires to return again to the forbidden field.

Pretending to her mother that she is ill, she returns to the Valley, leaving the snow and the big rough ones behind.

The Mountain man who loved her quietly, but none the less fervently, having brought her down, returns to the mountains.

The Valley man, learning of her arrival, dropped his other escapades, and bent upon securing Beth for his own.

The Mountain man's instinct leads him straight and true and saves his God-given mate ere she enters the gate from whence there is no returning. And on the mesa (neither mountain nor valley) the Mountain and Valley meet, and there truth was told and an act was done that prohibited the flowers from overcoming the snow evermore.

The Pay-As-You-Enter Man

Essanay. Two Reels. Released December 5th.

Henry Rosser, clerk behind the silk counter of a big department store at a salary of $20.00 a week, whose children are looking forward to the Day of Thanksgiving with anticipation and pleasure, wonders where the turkey is coming from.

The day before the holiday he meets a friend with a turkey under his arm and learns that he has won it at a raffle; going in, he takes a chance and wins.

Just then the proprietor is arrested for running a lottery, and the inoffensive commuter is held as a witness.

Becoming desperate, he takes a long chance and calls up Straussman, his employer, whom he has never seen, and asks him to bail him out.

Much to his surprise, Straussman does bail him out, and besides, he gives him $50.00, and promises him a substantial raise.

The next day is surely a day of Thanksgiving for Rosser and the little ones.

Alexia's Strategy

Edison. Two Reels. Released December 5th.

Alexia Trexell, daughter of the president of a Trust Co., is wooed by Walter Young and John Osgood, both in her father's office.

Osgood, learning that she prefers Young, succeeds in stealing some bonds from the Trust Company, and arranges so that Young is convicted of the theft.

Usakoff, a Russian, having, accidentally, gotten hold of proof of Osgood's guilt, is living on the blackmail, when Alexia, who is again being wooed by Osgood begins to suspect something wrong.

By a clever bit of strategy, she brings both men together and succeeds in bringing about the arrest of Osgood, and the complete vindication and release of Young.

Beauty Unadorned

Vitagraph. Two Reels. Released December 6th.

Commodore Blunt and Mrs. Preston, who have long cherished the hope of an alliance between their children—Henry Blunt and Helen Preston, are astounded to learn that Henry has suddenly become infatuated with Irene Pearl, while Helen falls a victim to the apparent charms of a foreign adventurer, the Viscount de Cazains.

The Commodore, discovering that they intend to elope, proposes to Mrs. Preston that they all take a cruise on his yacht. In this he hopes to gain time and find some way out of the difficulty.

The Commodore discovers, by accident, that the charms of his guests are false and succeeds in securing the wigs, false teeth and other paraphernalia and throws them overboard.

A revelation comes to Henry and Helen when they see their respective sweethearts without their disguises.

The children beg forgiveness of each other and decide to end all discord in their marriage.

General Film Company (Inc.)

200 Fifth Avenue, New York

GERM

BY EMIL

COMING

IN 6 REELS

WAT

INAL

E ZOLA

SOON

CH!

IN 6 REELS

Exhibitors-Look-Book Now-Rent or Share

George Kleine's Astounding Success
The Ambrosio Photo Drama

The Last Days of Pompeii

(Copyright 1913, by Photo Drama Company)

NOW CROWDING THE BIJOU THEATRE IN NEW YORK CITY
THE ONLY ONE STILL ALIVE ON BROADWAY

BEWARE of being misled into booking imitations.

YOU OWE it to yourselves to get the best — George Kleine's always.

MONEY TALKS

32,000 paid admissions at People's Theatre, Portland, Ore., week November 10th, making $4,224.20 real money, at 10 and 20 cents.

$1,902.60 in three days at the American Theatre, Salt Lake City, November 10th, 11th and 12th.

8,000 paid admissions at Clemmer Theatre, Seattle, Wash., Sunday, November 16th.

Ask these managers and they will tell you that George Kleine's "The Last Days of Pompeii" is

The Greatest Drawing Feature of This Age

LOOK before you BOOK all our agents carry proper credentials, so LOOK before you BOOK

For all territory East and South of the Ohio River, address

GEORGE KLEINE

1476 BROADWAY NEW YORK, N. Y.

For all other territory, address

GEORGE KLEINE

168 N. STATE STREET Dept. W CHICAGO, ILL.

EUROPEAN ADDRESS---55 RUE STE. LAZARRE, PARIS

(IN ANSWERING, FOR QUICK ATTENTION, DO NOT FAIL TO ADDRESS DEPARTMENT W)

(This film, photographs and all printed matter, protected by copyright, Infringers will be prosecuted)

An Intensely Dramatic, Highly Sensational, Prettily Told Story of Adventure!

KLEINE-CINES

In Two Parts

"THE STOLEN LEGACY"

(Copyright, 1913, by George Kleine)

For Release Tuesday, December 9, 1913

Essentially a story of adventure, with a snap and go that carries the spectator with breathless interest from title to tail-piece.

A strike causes Manarez to give his little daughter Carmen in charge of his friend Roberts, along with a chart showing the location of a hidden legacy. Manarez is killed and the same fate befalls Roberts immediately after he has given Carmen into the care of two brothers, woodchoppers in the forest.

Temptation is too strong for Juan and he shoots and injures his brother, making way with the treasure. Carmen is picked up by gipsies, becomes a dancing girl and grows to womanhood. Meanwhile, Juan marries a good woman, is rich, influential and respected. One day Juan's wife takes pity on the gipsy girl, takes her home and is good to her. That night the gipsies plan to rob Juan's home; Carmen hurries to warn her benefactress and the gipsies are captured. Meanwhile, after years of fruitless search, Juan's brother locates him. He arrives in time to corroborate Carmen's story of Juan's robbery many years before.

A story rich in emotional touches, charged with action, and splendidly acted by the famous troupe of Cines Players, at the Seville, Spain, studio.

Book "The Stolen Legacy"—You will want it!

Released through General Film Company

One, three and six sheets with all Kleine subjects

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State Street
Chicago, Ill.

KLEINE

PATHEPLAY

IN TWO PARTS

¶ A film of unusual excellence. It combines splendid acting and fine photography with a story of great interest and abounding in dramatic situations.

A MODERN PORTIA

RELEASED THURSDAY, DECEMBER ELEVENTH

EDISON

* * * Alexia's Strategy

In Two Parts Released Friday, December 5th

Osgood and Young are rivals for the hand of Alexia, the daughter of the president of the bank in which they are employed. Osgood, finding that Young is winning the girl, makes a false entry in Young's ledger, steals the equivalent and conceals some of the notes in Young's room. Circumstantial evidence convicts Young and Osgood renews his attentions to Alexia. She is suspicious when she finds a mysterious Russian blackmailing Osgood and cultivates the acquaintance of the Russian, who falls in love with her. She arouses his jealousy of Osgood until he blurts out the story of Osgood's duplicity, which he has learned by accident. Osgood is arrested and Young is liberated in time to kick the Russian downstairs in order to convince him that Alexia does not love him.

COMING EDISON SINGLE REELS

*The Price of Human Lives

A Red Cross Seal Story.

Produced in co-operation with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Released Tuesday, December 2nd.

The Thrifty Janitor

He sublets the Blythe's apartment. Then the row begins.

Released Wednesday, December 3rd.

*What Shall It Profit a Man?

A gripping story of treachery and final atonement.

Released Saturday, December 6th.

The Manicure Girl

She acted as personal assistant to Cupid.

Released Monday, December 8th.

*The Stolen Plans

Concerning the British Army's biplane plans.

Released Tuesday, December 9th.

Greedy George

(On the same reel)

The Joining of the Oceans

The Panama Canal, October, 1913.

Released Wednesday, December 10th.

* One sheet.  One and three sheets.  One, three and six sheet posters by the Morgan Lithograph Co.

TRADE MARK
Thomas A. Edison
Makers of the Edison Kinetoscope Type "D"

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc.
239 Lakeside Avenue
Orange, N. J.

LUBIN·FILMS

LOOK FOR OUR MULTIPLE PICTURES EVERY THURSDAY

"WHEN MOUNTAIN AND VALLEY MEET" Two Reel Thursday, Dec. 4th

A psychological romance, very intense and very beautiful.

---

"HYDRAULIC WORKS ON THE ADDA"

400 feet

Released Thursday, December 11th

A demonstration of marvelous engineering.

---

"HIS BEST FRIEND"

1600 feet

Released Thursday, December 11th

A beautiful and pathetic tale demonstrating the most loyal friendship of a bank-teller to a rival who has won from him the girl he loved and then proves himself an embezzler. An accidental tragedy occurs in which the unworthy husband is killed and the loyal friend accused and sentenced. Years pass and the dead man's son is about to avenge the supposed crime, but fate tells the true story, which ends in happiness.

"HIS BEST FRIEND"

---

"A SON OF HIS FATHER" Two Reel Thursday, December 18th

A dramatic Western story of the gambling rooms.

---

Five Releases Each Week

"HER SICK FATHER" 400 feet Tuesday, November 25th

Father is a hypochondriac, but eventually cured by the lover.

---

"THE LOST SWITCH" 600 feet Tuesday, November 25th

The terrible consequence of pocketing a lost hank of hair.

---

"A WAIF OF THE DESERT" 2000 feet Thursday, November 27th

A dramatic emigrant story, a tragedy of the plains.

---

"THE SCAPEGRACE" 1000 feet Friday, November 28th

An intense melodramatic story of two brothers.

---

"TURNING THE TABLES" 1000 feet Saturday, November 29th

A Mexican border tale—Texas ranchmen and Mexican bandits in fierce battle.

---

"MELITA'S SACRIFICE" 1000 feet Monday, December 1st

A pretty Senorita falls the victim of a hopeless love—very intense.

Lubin FIVE-Color Posters, One Three and Six Sheets.
From Your Exchange or A. B. C. Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING CO. PHILADELPHIA U.S.A

VITAGRAPH

"THE LEADING LADY" Drama Monday, November 24th

Insanely jealous of his wife he learns his suspicions are unfounded and asks forgiveness for his distrust. EARLE WILLIAMS, EDITH STOREY and NED FINLEY constitute the cast.

"LITTLE KAINTUCK" Drama Tuesday, November 25th

Homeless, he finds a friend in an old storekeeper. The little fellow repays the old man for his kindness and becomes his life-long companion. Karl Formes, Daisy Smith and Paul Willis are the principals.

"FELLOW-VOYAGERS"
"TEMPLES AND STATUES OF ROME" { Comedy and Topical } Wednesday, November 26th

1. The mischievous pranks of two children play havoc with Cupid and their fellow-voyagers on shipboard. MAURICE COSTELLO, Clara Kimball Young, Dolores and Helen Costello sustain this comedy. 2. Familiar scene in Rome is a brief addendum to "Fellow-Voyagers."

"THE CURE" Drama Thursday, November 27th

Accidentally a slave to opiates, he is miraculously cured by love for his wife. Her ingenious plan succeeds when science fails. This beautiful play is sustained by Edith Storey and Ned Finley.

"BETTY IN THE LION'S DEN" Comedy Friday, Nov. 28th

Courted by a lot of erratic cranks, she sets them crazy. Tom and she, after putting their heads under the water, decide to get married. Presenting Clara Kimball Young, Darwin Karr and Josie Sadler.

"THE GOLDEN PATHWAY"

Drama

[ Special Feature in Two Parts

Saturday, Nov. 29th

For money they start divorce proceedings. For love they stop them and now they have money and love. Two designing women and a scheming lawyer are disconsolately baffled. MAURICE COSTELLO in this Drama, is supported by Mary Charleson, Robert Gaillord and Jane Fearnley.

THE GOLDEN PATHWAY.
IN TWO PARTS.

SIX A WEEK

"A GAME OF CARDS"—Drama— MONDAY, DECEMBER 1st.
"THE WRECK"—Special Feature in Three Parts— TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2nd.
"A PAIR OF PRODIGALS" / "THE COLISEUM OF ROME" }—Comedy and Topical— WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3rd.
"THE SWAN GIRL"—Comedy-Drama— THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4th.
"A LESSON IN JEALOUSY"—Comedy— FRIDAY, DECEMBER 5th.
"BEAUTY UNADORNED"—Comedy, Special Feature, 2 Parts—SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6th.

The Vitagraph Company releases a special feature in two parts every Saturday, and a comedy every Wednesday and Friday.

Vitagraph one, three and six sheet posters — 7 x 9 photos of Vitagraph players.

THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA East 15th St. and Locust Ave.
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

YOU make a powerful appeal to every laboring man and employer of labor in your vicinity, in showing this feature. The desperate, hand-to-hand battle fought by the strike-breakers and mine guards, the courage of the heroine in seizing a lighted bomb which menaces her lover, are just two of the many thrilling incidents. Book "The Strike" Now.

Released Monday, December 8th. Get the special 1 and 3-sheet posters for this feature.

THE CHINESE DEATH THORN

IN TWO PARTS

Your patrons want action—here it is. Moi Ling's diabolical attempt to kidnap the banker's daughter; the Crime Syndicate's daring robbery of the bank; their furious battle with the police; the depositors' wild clamor for their money—these are incidents that will hold your patrons spellbound.

Released Wednesday, December 10th. Two special 1-sheet posters and special 3 and 6-sheet posters.

GENERAL BUNKO'S VICTORY

How he beats his rival in a fight for the fair Helen's hand will create the heartiest laughs you've ever heard in your theatre. John E. Brennan as "General Bunko" and Ruth Roland as "Helen."

(On the same reel)

PIANO MANUFACTURING

This highly interesting industrial feature shows your patrons how their pianos are made. As good as a trip through a piano factory.

Released Friday, December 12th.

THE INVISIBLE FOE

Billy fights hard to cure himself of the drug habit. The love of a wholesome girl is the prize which goes with victory. How she helps him win will go straight to the hearts of your patrons.

Released Saturday, December 13th.
Special 1 and 3-sheet posters.

NOTICE TO EXHIBITORS

Kalem wishes to announce that its releases for the regular program will at all times be fully as good as its releases for Exclusive Service.

KALEM COMPANY

235-239 West 23rd Street New York

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr...................................President
E. J. Chalmers..........................Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie..........Vice-President and General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.

Western Office—169 West Washington Street (Post Building), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands..............................$3.00 per year
Canada .......................................... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (postpaid)................... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

Display Advertising Rates made known on application.
Classified Advertising—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The index for this issue will be found on page 1078)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, November 29, 1913

Facts and Comments

WE heartily recommend the action of an East Side exhibitor who, according to reports in the daily papers, made short work of a young annoyer of girls watching the pictures. This exhibitor had observed the antics of the offender for some time and had determined to make an example of him. It was not an easy thing to do nor was it at all pleasant, but this particular exhibitor had too much regard for the reputation of his place to allow the nuisance to go on any longer. He was rewarded for his patient vigils by being able to catch the contemptible fellow in the very act and, although there were some friends of the young scamp who wanted to rescue him, our exhibitor held on to his prisoner until an officer of the law could be called who relieved the exhibitor of his burden. We are glad to add that the magistrate, before whom the offender was arraigned, rose to the occasion and sent the prisoner to the workhouse. Fines are out of place in such cases. If every exhibitor took an equally serious view of his duty to his patrons the noisome creatures who haunt motion picture theaters with evil in their minds would soon become extinct.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD is in favor of strong and representative state organizations of exhibitors. It believes that only upon such a basis will it be possible to build up a strong and powerful and useful national organization. There is much to be done in this line right here in our immediate neighborhood. Let us take one notable example—the state organization of Pennsylvania. We mention this organization and this state not because it is so much weaker than others, but because the condition of affairs in the Keystone state are typical of conditions in other states. When, not long ago, the four aisle law threatened the existence of hundreds of exhibitors in the state there was a sudden awakening and the practical uses of standing together in one common cause were well demonstrated. The danger had no sooner passed away when indifference succeeded zeal and now it is left to a few whole-hearted, energetic exhibitors to keep the pot boiling and to hold the organization together. But for them and their unselfish efforts there might not be any organization at all. We are sure that only this reminder is needed to make the exhibitors in Pennsylvania and everywhere realize their duty and rally to the support of the common cause. In many states the legislatures are about to convene and the months will be only too fruitful in fool legislation affecting the motion picture. The politicians in the neighboring states see great possibilities in the "graft" of censor boards. Our advice to exhibitors everywhere is to watch what is going on in the various legislatures and to appear before the committees in favor of good and in opposition to bad measures. Let the legislatures know that the exhibitors are a powerful intelligent body whom it is not safe to assail or to blackmail. Strengthen your state organizations all through the country.

* * *

HE would be bold indeed who would at this time venture to predict the last triumphs of the motion picture, but we cannot help recording some of the phenomena of the truly fabulous progress of the motion picture. Looking through our foreign exchanges, which represent every civilized country in the world, we find everywhere the same rush of the legitimate actors and actresses to the art of the camera. They have a sort of high class actors trades union in most of the European countries, though they would scorn this name. These unions threatened with expulsion every member acting before the camera, and still the rush continues. This may or may not hurt the legitimate theater, but it surely will immensely help the motion picture. Another sign closer home is the growth of moving picture theaters. A hasty glimpse at the building permits in this city alone will give us an idea of this growth. It is the same story everywhere; there is not a city of any size in these United States without its new and growing big picture houses. Some of this growth is no doubt due to the dying out of older places which have been unable to keep pace with the rapid progress which has been made in the construction of the modern motion picture theater. As recently pointed out in our news columns, even the insurance companies have adjusted their rates on a more liberal basis owing to those improvements. A very large percentage of the growth of motion picture theaters is, however, nothing more and nothing less than new business based upon the ever-increasing popularity of the picture.

---

WILLIAM BARRY WITH N. POWER COMPANY.

William Barry, who has been associated with Arthur Leslie on the syndicate page, is now connected with the Nicholas Power Company, manufacturers of Power's Cameragraph No. 6A, in the capacity of advertising manager. Mr. Barry is well known to the trade, has had considerable advertising experience, and should prove a valuable acquisition to the Power Company.

A Distinct Art

By Louis Reeves Harrison

THE founder of this paper saw plainly enough that the production of moving pictures would develop into a large and profitable business and that its introduction as a commercial proposition was entirely wise and right under the circumstances, but he looked deeper than these surface indications and perceived that all that is best in the arts and crafts of men must depend upon honor and usefulness in order to endure, and insisted that this product should not be deformed in its growth.

The first natural movement in production was that of combination for various purposes, presumably to make money and notably to promote sound methods of doing business instead of destructive ones. In natural reaction, other organizations came into existence, and a conflict ensued that was of undoubted importance in developing production along superior lines. From these essential features of evolution has emerged a competition that tends to give moving pictures their highest and most successful expression and make them an important civilizing factor all over the world.

It is to be expected that a number of those engaged in the work of turning out reels should hold to ideals of their early days, not adapted, and sometimes wholly foreign, to the progressive policy of American people. Their conceptions of what is wanted are often of the narrowest and most egotistical kind, involving no idea of responsibility to others, considering almost with contempt any effort to make the New Art conform to the social fabric on which it rests. But the competition that now exists and is bound to grow keener is beginning to prove that we are dealing with something more than a light and cheap amusement for a limited number of people, nothing less than a distinct art.

It has been said that the stage performance calls nearly all other arts into use. The same may be said with less qualification of grand opera, but musical composition is the prime essential in the latter, and the former is a weakling without words that burn. The screen story may be effective without written or spoken language, and is rarely set to music composed especially for it. Depending as it does almost entirely upon visualized motion and emotion, it may call other arts to its aid, but it can powerfully present an idea without the prime essentials of opera and spoken drama. It can stand alone.

Those of us who have faith in the power of human nature to project itself constantly toward enlightenment realize that no right understanding or use of this new and distinct art can come from low motive. Poetry, painting, drama, an art cannot reach any vital strength that is destitute of honorable and useful purpose. They all fail and fall of themselves when they minister to weakness. Ridiculous or pathetic, there exists a weak side to human nature that needs tonic control rather than indulgence, hence it is almost pitiful to note, thus early in the development of a distinct art, an occasional example of what hurts it and helps none.

Real men, not the spineless and compromising kind, stand together for all that is best in this young art. It is like a splendid young boy, rugged with natural health, strong with new and splendid possibilities, yet capable of being spoiled and diverted from good to evil purposes. The big factors in development are sponsors for that boy —whether he is a failure or a success in the future depends almost entirely upon how he is brought up.

The pistol drama, where one man pokes a revolver in another man's face, is nothing very dreadful—it has long since ceased to thrill—and it is gradually dawning on directorial comprehension that events which place a man's life at stake are not everyday affairs, whereas his soul may be at stake during a large part of that varied and adventurous career prosaically known as "making a living." The new and distinct art we are developing is eminently suited to picturing that hazardous enterprise —a form of story it can tell better than the stage.

What more daring thing could be depicted on the screen than that of breaking out of the routine of drawing pay once a week and setting forth, pocket and heart equally light, to conquer circumstances and make an independent fortune? Would it not be exciting to watch the hero keep up appearances and his health at the same time on ten cents a day? It would certainly strike a chord responsive in more than one of those who frequent the twilight theaters. Now that life on the frontier has ceased to be a novelty, the average audience might be deeply stirred while watching the experiences of a bold character measuring himself against the actual difficulties of everyday existence.

His Castles in Spain can be shown on the screen, his fond aspirations, his bright dreams of what he hopes to accomplish, all in contrast with sordid surroundings and influences. Material tragic and comic abounds in such realism. He believes in his youth that strength of individuality will conquer. He learns in the end, when his castles crumble, that we are interdependent and can only participate in an orderly development that it is beyond the power of unsupported individuals to regulate.

There seems to be no better medium than moving pictures for presenting the interesting forces at work among ourselves. The stage is a boxed-in contrivance of tolerated illusions. Literature involves style and much else that is subject to misinterpretation. The projected picture of what is doing is not subject to the limitations of one nor the complications of significance which seriously affect the other. There is no freedom of scope in what is shown within the proscenium frame and but faint sense of reality in what it offers to the eye. The screen portrayal has few illusions based on convention and is shaking off these as old finery borrowed from theatrical wardrobe rooms. Once rid of these trappings and given liberty of movement, it searches out and reveals the hiding places of truth as does no other art.

Moving pictures constitute a distinct art in that they alone hold up to the vision of partially-informed millions the infinite variety of human life at large.

It is directly up to the finest men engaged in production to lead the way for those who have no innate tendency whatever to make progress. It is quite as true as it is strange that the average of what is done today would be the average of what is done next year in screen portrayals except for the few that seem born to blaze the way through all adventures and enterprises. The new and distinct art's development depends entirely on what is defined by an eminent scientist as "the opportunity of superior men of asserting their superiority and of promulgating it as an inheritance for the generations to come." Without such men, the young and beautiful art might, like true love, make us ever kind in spite of long suffering.

Helpful Suggestions

By W. Stephen Bush

NOT the least encouraging thing about the motion picture art and industry is the intelligent interest taken in its welfare by the exhibitors all over the country. Our correspondence has long ago convinced us that there is a very large number of thinking men among the exhibitors; men of observant minds and of constructive ability. They sleep with their work, as it were, and evolve many thoughts and suggestions which may often be of great use to their brethren and likewise to the producers. It is gratifying to note their clean tastes and their uncompromising hostility to every kind of picture which might offend their audiences. We make no apology, therefore, for culling out from among many characteristic letters a little batch of three or four, all of which are instructive and well worth considering.

In one communication a valued correspondent in a Western state complains of pictures showing the antics of drunken people on the screen. We have never been able to see just why drunkenness should be paraded on the screen. In a normal mind the drunken man or woman excites no other feelings but pity and disgust. Our correspondent points out in his letter that in nearly every audience there may be a sister or wife or mother who had to suffer through the vice of drunkenness, and to see this vice depicted in loathsome detail adds to the anguish and sorrow of these spectators. An exhibition of such sort may spoil and often does spoil the only hour of relaxation which many a poor woman is able to enjoy in a life of hard and nerve-wrecking work. What good purpose can such an exhibition serve? There are directors, we are sorry to say, to whom drunkenness appeals as a fine foundation for "comedy." Their sense of humor stands in need of an operation. There may be something inspiring in the sight of a lot of men lined up against a bar and slowly forfeiting their reason by putting thieves in their brains, but we doubt whether sane people find anything inspiring in such a spectacle. Let us cut these things from the screen forever. The Moving Picture World applauds every exhibitor who, like our correspondent, refuses to run such pictures. That is the surest and shortest way of stopping them. If it is necessary, we will print an Index Expurgatorius, i. e., a list of films exhibiting such disgusting sights, for the guidance of the exhibitor who wants to keep them out of his house. Our friend expresses his surprise at the ill-advised tolerance of the National Board of Censors. They should help to abate this nuisance.

A most helpful suggestion comes from another correspondent, an exhibitor with a large theater on the Pacific Coast.

We embody here a brief outline of his suggestion: "Film producers should realize that the public are vitally interested in the everyday life of their favorite moving picture actors and actresses. They like to see them at home during their leisure hours, to know how they prepare for their different roles." Our friend thinks that "the scenes behind the scenes" always have a special interest and fascination for an audience.

The human interest is always a genuine emotion. I was thinking of this suggestion of our valued correspondent but a few days ago as I had occasion to visit the great Lubin plant in Philadelphia. There is a little Bohemian sort of restaurant right near the factory, and the sight of all the artists in their make-up sitting down to a hurried meal amid animated conversation on all sides, would indeed have made a most attractive scene in motion pictures such as might be shown "between the acts." These "scenes behind the scenes" might be introduced as "intimate glimpses from the studios," and there is little doubt that they would quickly become popular.

There is in another letter a complaint about vulgar comedies. The writer says he was compelled to take a picture "off the screen" because it dealt in an offensive manner with the birth of a child. Our exhibitor says that the humor in this picture was far-fetched besides being indecent, and he justly wonders just how this "comedy" escaped the vigilant eye of censorship. He says the usual legend, "Passed by The National Board of Censorship," was there all right, but he is inclined to doubt whether the picture actually received the approval of the board.

Graveyard pictures come in for just criticism, too. We understand that the showing of a cemetery may at times be necessary, but we also think that, on the whole, a producer will do well in forever barring the strictly lugubrious, of which scenes in cemeteries are the most disagreeable instances. Our correspondent writes that the showing of cemeteries always opens cruel wounds, and that, as a rule, the film will be just as good from a dramatic point of view if the cemetery is omitted.

The Moving Picture World is always glad to give utterance to the wishes, opinions and suggestions of its great constituency. We invite communications from readers at all times. They often prove very useful in practice, and are always a source of inspiration to the paper itself. The intimate and confidential relation between The Moving Picture World and all its readers we prize as one of our most precious assets. There is a splendid comradeship in striving for one common cause, the uplift and the progress of the motion picture.

---

PATENTS COMPANY DEFENSE.

Interesting Testimony Given Before Examiner Hacker by Different Licensed Manufacturers.

The defense continued the presentation of its side at the hearings held by Special Examiner Edward C. Hacker, who is taking testimony at the Hotel Manhattan in the suit of the United States against the Motion Picture Patents Company, the General Film Company and others.

Frank L. Dyer, president of the General Film Company, was succeeded on the stand by A. E. Smith, of the Vitagraph Company, and J. A. Berst, of the Pathe Company. The testimony of both of these witnesses was purely cumulative, as they covered practically the same ground as the witnesses, Marvin and Dyer. Mr. Berst will be recalled for cross-examination.

The defense called Mr. J. A. Koerpell, an exhibitor with a theater located at 157th Street and Amsterdam Avenue. He said that the service of the General Film Company was very satisfactory to him and that since the formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company and the General Film Company there had been a great improvement in film service. In answer to the deputy attorney-general, he said, he had come to testify at the request of Mr. Buxbaum, a branch manager of the General Film Company. The next witness was Mr. Nathan Machat, of 657 Nostrand Avenue, Brooklyn. Mr. Machat testified that he had been in the moving picture business since 1910 and that the film service of to-day is much better than it ever was before. He said that the General Film Company had made it possible to allow the exhibitor to advertise his show weeks ahead. When the witness in the course of his testimony severely criticised the services of a branch from which he had obtained service, Mr. Grosvenor, deputy attorney-general, asked him how it was that "in the motion picture business everybody speaks ill of everybody else." This sally on the part of Mr. Grosvenor brought a general laugh and the hearing was adjourned until the next day.

Promoter's Rainbow

The Prospectus of the Colonial M. P. Corporation a Masterpiece of Fanciful Description—The Truth About the Million-Feet-a-Week Plant at Philadelphia.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD has deemed it a duty to its readers, many of whom sought its advice and information in the matter, to make an investigation into the claims and statements of The Colonial Motion Picture Corporation. The results of such investigation made with fairness and thoroughness are herewith submitted to our readers. The Moving Picture World does not wish to discourage legitimate enterprise. It is a matter of almost general knowledge that the motion picture field presents great opportunities in the way of investments. Perhaps, because of this almost general knowledge, promoters have sought to attract capital for motion picture enterprises trusting to enrich themselves through the popularity of the new art and caring little as to the means. As to the claims of the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation we present the facts and let the readers draw their own conclusions.

"The Colonial Motion Picture Corporation."

The Colonial Motion Picture Corporation, organized, it is claimed, under the laws of the State of New York, has its main office at 286 Fifth Avenue in this city. It has issued and is still issuing "invitations to invest." It has also published a booklet, copyrighted by Proctor W. Hansl, its secretary and treasurer. This booklet sets forth in great detail just how investors will be admitted and what extraordinary chances they have to reap wonderful dividends, forty percent being mentioned as a conservative estimate. Here is what the booklet has to say on the subject:

> * * * it is quite within the scope of the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation, with its capital fully paid in, to achieve a net profit of $1,040,000 yearly, which is a little over 40% of its entire capitalization. Other concerns are doing better than this but we set these figures as our goal and shall strive to reach them for the sake of the 2,500 owners; and doing this we shall be fairly content and so we think will the owners. One other thing you ought to know—one vital, interesting, fascinating thing on the money side—and that is, motion picture profits are not deferred and slow. The transactions are rapid, collections swift, the cash turns over quickly, and profits are made weekly—every seven days. The dividends on the stock represented by your Colonial Ownership will be paid to you quarterly as earned—in January, April, July and October but the dollars involved in your investment will be nimble dollars. They are never idle

How to Become an "Owner."

Now in what manner is it possible for the ordinary American citizen of modest means to become a sharer in the gigantic profits of the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation? Nothing can be plainer and easier. The Colonial Motion Picture Corporation does not want big capital, it wants a class of investors which are eloquently described in the booklet on page 27. We quote verbatim:

> There is in this land of ours a certain salt-of-the-earth class of people who are the bone, sinew, blood, brain, muscle and nerve of this nation. They are neither potentates nor paupers. They are producers not dependents. They sip out of their own bowls and provide with their own hands and energy the gruel which is within the bowls. They are the people who do things and do them so well that this young country of ours is already in the forefront of countries which have become great through the development of their own resources. This worth-while class of citizens includes the business men and bankers of the villages and small cities of our Commonwealth. * * *

These highly flattered classes are invited to come in and this is the way they may enter:

> Our plan of organization is original and sound to the core as you will plainly see before you get through with this book. Two thousand five hundred American business men will own the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation. These business men are admitted as Owners by invitation only. They are now being picked out of the 48 States, just so many owners to each State. Each of these Owners at first puts in $250 (in 10 monthly installments of $25 each). For this $250 he gets 25 shares of Colonial stock, at $10 per share its par value.
>
> When all of these 2,500 selected Owners have put in their $250 apiece, the Colonial will have a paid-in capital of $625,000.
>
> Within a short time after this first quota of capital has been subscribed, all the 2,500 Owners of the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation (who have contributed the first $625,000 of capital) will receive a letter from the Main Office. This letter will contain the story of the Corporation's progress and a statement of the business at that time. Then the 2,500 Owners will each have the privilege of taking 25 additional shares of Colonial stock, at $10 per share, on monthly installments, as before. When these additional subscriptions are collected the Colonial will then have a paid-in capital of $1,250,000. In the meantime the Corporation will go right on increasing its business and making money for its Owners, through the manufacture, lease and exhibition of motion pictures in this country and abroad.
>
> Twice more this same thing will be done; twice more, at convenient intervals, the 2,500 Owners will have the privilege of putting in $250 each, meanwhile have an opportunity to watch the progress of the Corporation and to get personally acquainted with its ability to pay them cash dividends on their investment. When each of the 2,500 Owners has, on the four different occasions, invested $250 in Colonial stock, the total paid-in capital of the Corporation will be $2,500,000. This will make the Colonial one of the largest producing companies in America.
>
> Five producing companies in this class—in the United States—earned during 1912 an average net profit of over 45% on their capital stock. The figures for 1913 are, of course, not yet available, but it is a matter of common knowledge that the first 6 months of this year, 1913, has been infinitely better, from a profit-producing standpoint, than the first 6 months of 1912.
>
> This two-and-a-half million dollar capital will put the Colonial right up in the group of leading producing companies, which earn and pay enormous dividends annually, and whose stock is practically unpurchasable except at prohibitive prices.

The writer of the book makes it very plain that the Colonial M. P. C. could have had all the money it wanted by looking for it in Wall Street. We quote again:

> If we wanted our two and a half million dollars capital from the neighborhood of Wall Street we could get it there. An officer of a Western trust company—controlling many million—said to one of our directors the other day: "If you will take capital in large blocks I want to invest my own money and my friends will put in the rest." But we do not want Wall Street money and we do not want the domineering capital of this Western investor and his friends who are eager to increase their fortunes by profits from the motion picture business.

Beyond an extraordinary philanthropic impulse and a magnifying optimism there would be little in these statements to justify a suspicion of bad faith. It is hard to delve into motives and it is possible though highly improbable that a corporation with a solid prospect of 40 per cent. dividends is trying to sell stock by means of invitations to the public. The writer of the booklet, however, embodied in his prospectus the description of what he fancifully calls the "Factory, Laboratories and Studios." We quote from the book:

Misleading Statements.

> THE FACTORY, laboratories and studios where Colonial Motion Pictures are made, are located at Wissahickon, Pennsylvania, one of the beautiful suburbs of Philadelphia.
>
> The plant has a capacity of 1,000,000 finished feet of motion picture films weekly. It is entirely modern. It makes its own light and power, and every room and department has been specially constructed and furnished with the latest and best fixtures, appliances, instruments and accessories for economical and speedy motion picture production.
>
> The plant is thoroughly equipped with machinery and collarteral facilities for the manufacture of motion picture films. Much of this machinery is the sole invention of founders of the COLONIAL, is protected by patents granted and patents applied for, and is to be the property of the 2,500 Owners of this Corporation, now being selected from the 48 States.
>
> IF CONVENIENT, come to the factory at Wissahickon, Pennsylvania. You are cordially invited. Come with or without notice. Come alone or bring your friends. And we shall be pleased to show you the motion picture plant, and the machinery and methods of which you may, by acting promptly, become a part owner.
>
> You will find it to be a place of activity and interest from the storerooms in the basement to the studios at the building's top—every step of the way you will see something to surprise you and educate you in the business in which you, as an Owner, are to have a part.
>
> We will also take your photograph, singly or in a group with your friends, and will hand you the glass plate, in the true colors of nature, within fifteen minutes after the sitting. Every hue of your features or wearing apparel will show true to fact. If your eyes are blue they will show blue on the plate; if you wear gold-rimmed gasses the shine of the gold will be there, too; the flush on your cheeks, the colors of your tie.

A representative of The Moving Picture World journeyed out to the "factory, laboratories and studios" in Wissahickon. The plot of ground on which the plant is located is perhaps over a hundred feet wide and of about even depth. The building, said to have been a disused schoolhouse, is about 40 x 60. In answer to a bell a young man opened and showed the World man and his companion over the premises. He said that showing visitors over the plant was part of his duties. The drying rooms were two in number, both quite small and wholly inadequate for more than a very limited output say about five thousand feet a week. There were no sources of heat or power in the building other than a small generator in the basement of about fifteen horse power. The "drying rooms" had nothing but a few feet of radiators such as are in common use in dwellings. There were a dozen or more of racks which were worth not more than 50 cents apiece at the most and there were three drums in the other room. It looked as if neither of the drying rooms had been used in a long time. The developing rooms were about fifteen by twenty feet and there was nowhere any evidence of improvements such as are found in every modern plant. Every thing was of the cheapest and commonest sort. The printing room, so called, could not possibly accommodate more than four persons and there was but one printing machine in sight. The "laboratories" consisted of two shelves of bottles labelled with the names of chemicals and measured about six by twenty feet. The "studios" consisted of the attic which, except in one little corner, was very low, certainly not higher than 8 feet. There was a motion picture camera set against the corner with the skylight and this camera had upon the turn table of the tripod the words "Eberhard Schneider." The furniture of the "studios" consisted of a few old chairs and benches and it may be doubted whether a spotcash man would have given a two dollar bill for the entire outfit.

There was but one person employed in the building, a boy who said he had been there since March and always alone except upon one or two occasions, or when Law or his son visited the place. By no stretch of the imagination could the place be described as "a place of activity and interest from the storerooms in the basement to the studios of the building's top," as the prospectus had assured us. There was, however, a very literal fulfilment of this prophesy in the book: "Every step you will find something to surprise you." The statements in the chapter "The Colonial Factory and Studios" are unqualifiedly false. Even if modern inventions and improvements were installed and every available inch were used to the utmost with a full force of employees, it is inconceivable how more than 50,000 feet could be produced. The claim of one million feet per week is simply ridiculous

No offer and no attempt was made to take any pictures in natural colors. It was the opinion of the expert who went there with the World man that the entire outfit in the building, including machinery, was not worth more than two thousand dollars.

Upon this actual showing the prospectus based the following statement:

> With ordinary facilities, a live concern like the COLONIAL may produce ten or more pictures of this length weekly (1,000 feet), and sell or lease 50 copies of each through its Service Bureaus (or Exchanges) to the motion picture theaters. By the most careful estimate this means $20,000 a week of net profit, and for 52 weeks in the year that net profit yields $1,040,000 annually.
>
> These are conservative figures based upon the earnings of other companies. They take no account of the profits to be derived from Feature subjects (two or more reel pictures, such as "Quo Vadis?") which the Colonial will produce regularly, or from the foreign rights to its pictures or from the sale or lease of motion picture machinery and apparatus which the Company controls. These special profits are extra and additional. Here we wish to tell you only of the ordinary profits that may reasonably be expected by those who now become Owners of this great enterprise.

Any comment other than that furnished by the facts themselves seems superfluous here

The representative of the World, in the presence of the accompanying expert, had an interview with Mr. James D. Law, who came to the factory in answer to a telephone call. Mr. Law said that he was a bosom friend of Andrew Carnegie, that he was well acquainted with John D. Rockefeller and on most friendly terms with Sir Gilbert Parker, the British novelist, whose works, by the way, the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation intends to portray on the screen. These men, Mr. Law said, had all been willing to finance his inventions, but he would rather have the plain people of the land, so he declined all offers from Carnegie, Rockefeller and Sir Gilbert. He said he had inventions which were superior to any coloring process now on the market and the patents on these inventions, he said, he intended to control but the use of them he would allow to the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation as long as that corporation treated him right. He said he was not at all after the money but aimed to become the educator of the world.

A World man also saw a majority of the gentlemen whose names appear in the book as connected with the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation. None of the men seen had ever been to the "factory, laboratories and studios" at Wissahickon and not one of them knew anything whatever of the actual conditions at the plant.

---

MRS. FISKE GIVES LYCEUM MATINEE.

Hundreds of Her Professional and Society Friends Attend a Special Showing of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

On the invitation of Daniel Frohman, managing director of the Famous Players, and Harrison Grey Fiske, acting on behalf of Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, hundreds of the friends of the actress attended a special showing of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" at the Lyceum Theater on the afternoon of Friday, November 14. These were representatives of the business and social life of the city, as well as many prominent stage artists. Mr. Frohman personally greeted the guests of Mrs. Fiske, the actress being in the West on tour. It was a most appreciative gathering, there being liberal applause not only on the appearance of Mrs. Fiske as Tess, but also for the many fine settings, landscapes and photographic effects. Among those present were Jane Cowl, John Mason, Ethel Barrymore, Marguerite Clark, Grace George, Mrs. Lewisohn, Mrs. Wormser, Mrs. Untermyer, Mrs. Speyer and Norman Hapgood.

---

AMERICAN ANNOUNCES CHANGE OF TITLE.

The subject announced as "Moth and the Flame," has been changed to "Trapped in a Forest Fire," and will be released on Monday, December 8th.

"A Leap of Despair"

A Four-Reel Itala Feature.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison

ALTHOUGH this is a thriller, exhibiting one of the most startling feats ever seen in screen production, the pictured story is an original and very delightful one. It has a finish and charm that makes even the weary reviewer sit up and take notice. This is partially due to the new and varied settings, but the central figure, Countess Lillian, expert equestrienne, is mainly responsible for the pleasing effect. Besides natural beauty and that grace of movement that comes from athletic training, she is one of the most accomplished actresses yet seen in photodrama.

Scene from "A Leap of Despair" (Itala).

There is no longer any doubt that certain men and women have an exceptional fitness for screen representation, a special aptitude not to be acquired in any other art, that enables them to be veritable stars in this new field. Countess Lillian is one of these. Without motion, with scarcely a change of facial expression, she conveys what is passing in her mind. And when she becomes more intense, when the situation calls for emotional action delicately subdued, there is not a discoverable flaw in her performance.

This is true art. It may have resulted from careful training, but much of it bears the unmistakable imprint of spontaneity. She is womanly in every form of self expression, though a daring rider, and an essence of refinement in her conduct under trying circumstances indicates a training that came from no studio director. There is a whole lifetime of preparation manifest in the elegance of such women, preparation from the fine self-control necessary in achieving high social success.

This interesting woman is out riding with a party of friends when she performs a reckless feat, that of causing her horse to leap upon the parapet of a high bridge and walk there. A blase young gentleman of great wealth witnesses the feat and falls in love with the rider. She notices him at the opera—some striking and unusual scenes here—and becomes infatuated when he is presented. It is a love match pure and simple. After marriage, he receives news from his mining properties indicating that he is ruined.

The husband—his acting is an admirable foil for the resourceful woman—falls into a state of helpless despondency, from which she is unable to rouse him. She is a twentieth century woman and believes that it is up to her to relieve the situation. She contracts to take the place of a circus rider who has met with death in a nerve-racking exploit and succeeds, but the husband can not reconcile himself to being supported by his wife and imagines that he should give her freedom. That she may not be compelled to share his comparative poverty, he pretends to pay attention to another.

While Countess Lillian is mounted on her horse, and the latter is standing amid blazing fireworks on a slender platform high above the heads of the spectators, she looks down and sees her husband deeply engaged with "the other woman." In a moment of despair, the brave wife forces her horse from the platform, and they fall to what seems to be certain death. She survives, and the desperate act brings her husband to his senses. It is then found that his wealth has been preserved, and beautiful scenes of reunion follow. The story will make a hit.

"The Wards of Society."

Two-Reel Pathe Feature.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE powerful interest involved in this photodrama will be felt by every intelligent human creature who sees it, and the effect will sink deep in sympathetic hearts. A tremendous question is involved, of such universal appeal that one or more supreme developments of life portrayals on the screen will be constructed upon this theme. The play is rudely put together, but it steps to the front rank of contemporaneous production by sheer force of its sincerity. Like those who opened up the country we now enjoy, it is a hardy pioneer, an early and robust explorer in this department of human enterprise, one in splendid keeping with progressive American spirit.

Not to seem authoritative in pronouncing upon a picture of this kind, I will quote from Montessori, whose work among both normal and defective children has startled the whole world, so marvelous have been her discoveries in actual contact with the little ones. "When we speak of the redemption of the workingman, it is always understood that beneath the most apparent form of agony there exists another wound from which the soul of any man subjected to slavery must suffer. Moral degredation of the slave is, above all things, the weight that opposes the progress of humanity—humanity striving to rise and held back by this great burden. The cry of redemption should be for their souls and for the souls of their children."

Scene from "Wards of Society" (Pathe).

It may be asked what that has to do with the drama. The great dramatist and critic, Ferdinand Brunetiere, says, "There can be no tragedy without a struggle; nor can there be genuine emotion for the spectator unless something other and greater than life is at stake." It is the soul of man, of woman, of the child, that furnishes the greatest stake ever played for in human drama. That the soul is universal, causes interest to be universal in the forces playing for and against its development. There are some hard facts beneath "The Wards of Society" and some staggering deductions from those premises that will set people thinking on a subject very near their hearts.

The first part of the Pathe feature shows the actual work performed by the Clearing House for Mental Defectives in the New York City Department of Public Charities. The environment deemed conducive to improper mental development, the life of two boys crushed out of semblance to normal existence by the brutalities of their father, a confirmed drunkard, and the physical effect of a father's drug habit upon another little son, open the play and their careers are followed amid a running commentary on our weak and inefficient social body. We are just beginning to take notice that the human mind is a flower, the inherited physique, the soil in which it grows, favorable environment its proper nourishment. We only inherit the seed of a soul.

Montessori accomplishes wonders with that flower in its early formative period, but it is with the stunted plant, the mind deformed, that the charitable men and women of the "Clearing House for Defectives" has to deal in the play. The three boys are arrested in the act of obeying predatory instinct and taken to the Children's Court. A social worker, performing her duties from tender love of humanity, investigates the social and economic conditions at the boy's homes, while physicians and psychologists conduct a physical examination and apply the Binet test for determining their mental age. On general recommendation, the boys are sent to Randall's Island, and we are given many views of actual conditions there.

Much is done there to improve the children, but there is plenty of room for improvement in the methods now in use. The logical consequences of showing just such pictures as those of the Pathe release will be to improve what now exists, probably by the material application of all that science and intelligent teachers have discovered to be operative against degeneration. The pictures present some powerful contrasts in the second reel. Two of the boys have been allowed to go because of rights exercised by their parents and have fallen victims to their unfavorable surroundings. The other, having lost his sole parent, the dope fiend, has remained under gentle restrictions and is doing well, though his mind has not attained normal maturity.

The two waifs at liberty return to Randall's Island the worse for their freedom, hopeless defectives, there to pass their lives, because they have become a menace to society while at large. Possibly the most profound lesson of the picture is that pointing out the necessity of self-development to the point of a measure of self-control, but there are so many deep and fascinating questions called up that they are beyond the limitations of discussion in a review of this kind. The release is an important one and should attract wide-spread attention among parents who hope their children will be something like those Christ meant when he said, "Whosoever shall become as one of these little ones, he shall be the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven."

---

MISS ELEANOR WOODRUFF.

A very pretty and talented young lady with a strong personality is Miss Eleanor Woodruff, now playing leads in Patheplays. Though just out of her 'teens, Miss Woodruff, known as the Ethel Barrymore of Motion Pictures, has enjoyed five years of professional stage work, which experience has stood her well in photoplays. Philadelphia being the nearest large city to her place of birth and residence —Towanda, Pa.—it was there she made her first appearance before the footlights, when she became a member of the Orpheum Stock Company, but after a year and a half of stock, her ambition carried her to the larger and more profitable field of musical comedy and drama. It was in the productions of "The Five Frankforters" and "The Gamblers" that Miss Woodruff acquired a real reputation as leading woman and attracted the attention of the directors of Patheplays. She is now snugly tucked away under the protection of that company and recognized as a popular favorite.

"The Port of Doom"

J. Searle Dawley Writes and Directs a Stirring Three-Part Melodrama for the Famous Players.

By George Blaisdell.

WITH a strong cast of trained screen actors, the Famous Players has gone to sea to stage some of the scenes in an exciting three-part melodrama. "The Port of Doom" is the latest release of the Kate Kirby series, the various numbers of which are written and directed by J. Searle Dawley. In the role of Kate Kirby is Laura Sawyer, who continues the uniformly successful work she has given us in these stories of crime detection. House Peters is again in the chair of the paralytic ex-detective and does commendable work. Portraying the heavy role is Dave Wall, who in a far more difficult part repeats his success as the crook in "In a Bishop's Carriage." In this picture Mr. Wall is a dope fiend who maintains outward respectability so long as his drug is available, but who, when deprived of it, suffers tortures that force him, in the hope of obtaining another supply, to reveal his guilt in sending to sea an unsafe vessel. It is a strong portrayal. Peter Lang, known to screen followers through his excellent work with the Lubin company, is the shipowner and father of the young woman who out of love for the commander of the vessel secretly leaves home, is married to him and sails away on the doomed craft. It is Mr. Lang who, sitting in the glow of the fire with the little daughter of the dope fiend who has succumbed to his illness, furnishes in this story of love, misdeeds and narrow escapes the one bit of pathos as he reads the message that his missing daughter sailed on the unseaworthy ship and is probably lost. It is a finished piece of work. Hattie Forsythe and Hal Clarendon, both known to theatergoers, are the bride and bridegroom.

Scene from "The Port of Doom" (Famous Players).

Some of the strong scenes are of the attempts to capture the shipowner's secretary, whose dual life has been uncovered by Kate Kirby, and his escape; the encounter between the now down-and-out dope-using secretary and the detective when she refuses to give him more of the drug, the father sitting helpless in his chair and watching the struggle until finally impelled to end it by shooting and wounding the crazed man—with the wife and child of the latter and the shipowner separated from them by a locked door and also powerless to interfere; the successful mutiny on shipboard as the exhausted crew refuses longer to work the pumps; the confinement of the captain, the women and one or two others in the cabin as the sailors row away in the small boat; and the cutting of a hole through the side of the half-submerged and careened cabin and the rescue of the imprisoned men and women.

A picturesque scene is the pursuit by the tug of the ship under full sail. The little craft makes an unsteady camera platform in the heavy sea, but this in no wise detracts from the effectiveness of the picture. Mention should not be omitted of the interiors. They are elaborate and in many cases of marked depth. Much care has been bestowed on the arrangement of lights. If the memory serve, tinting has been used in a proportion unusual even with the Famous Players. This gives to the fine photography an added quality and charm. Another factor noted by the reviewer is the attention paid to newspaper extracts thrown on the screen. In this much neglected detail of picture-making the Players in this production make a marked advance. In the two instances referred to the writer recalls nothing approaching it for approximation of the real thing. In a business communication thrown on the screen use is made of a regulation commercial letterhead. It is a pleasure to note this attention to the little things that count so strongly in the making of a picture.

---

"A Bargain With Satan"

Strong Dramatic Feature Subject in Five Parts Released by the Apex Film Company.

LITERATURE contains numerous instances of bargains with Satan in which the bargainer, in dire need of the wherewithal to sustain life and enable him to pursue happiness after his own fashion, barters his soul or his hope for the future life to the Prince of Darkness. These stories possess a weird fascination for the reader and some of them have taken a high place in the world of letters. That they should be visualized by motion pictures is to be expected, though not all of them are suited to such reproduction. A notable example of the successful picturing of this class of story is produced by the Deutches Bioscope Company under the title of "The Student of Prague," and is now offered for exhibition in the United States by the Apex Film Company as "The Bargain With Satan." It is a five-part subject of more than usual excellence.

Scene from "A Bargain with Satan" (Apex).

As the story goes the Student Balduin, a leader among his fellows, is broke—financially at the end of his rope. In his extremity Dr. Scapinelli approaches him and offers substantial assistance. Going to Balduin's quarters he offers to give the young man one hundred thousand pieces of gold if he may be permitted to take from the room anything that strikes his fancy. To Balduin this proposition is very amusing, since he has already pawned everything of value, so he is quite ready to assent to Scapinelli's terms.

Looking about the room Scapinelli sees the reflection of Balduin in a mirror and indicates that it will suit his purpose. A few passes of his magic hand and the reflection is seen to step out of the glass and follow the mysterious doctor out of the room. In amazement Balduin watches the apparition disappear, but the sight of so much gold causes him to forget the incident as he prepares to enjoy himself.

Starting out in search of adventure, Balduin rescues the Countess Margit Schwarzenberg from drowning and falls in love with her. Although the Countess is betrothed to her cousin she does not love him, so when Balduin comes into her life so romantically she gives her heart to him instead. Balduin is happy and pursues his love successfully, but just as happiness seems to be coming his way he is confronted by his other self—the shadow that Dr. Scapinelli took from the mirror. This shadow happens along at each critical time to disturb Balduin driving him mad with fear. He attempts to fly from his other self, but it pursues him relentlessly, confronting him finally in his quarters. In desperation Balduin seizes a pistol and fires it at the apparition, but it is himself he kills.

The remarkable feature of the picture is the double exposure effects by which this otherself of Balduin is enabled to so relentlessly pursue its victim. It is doubtful if such an effect could be obtained except by photography. To this add the strong impersonation of the character of Balduin by Herr Paul Wegener, and numerous beautiful and massive scenes which mark the production throughout, and the result is most satisfactory. It is the interest in the story, however, that holds and the production cannot fail to have considerable success as a feature.

"The Harper Mystery"

Florence Turner Comes Back to Us in a Three-Part Detective Story Produced by Larry Trimble.

By George Blaisdell.

THE friends of Florence Turner—and who would have the hardihood to attempt to estimate the number of them—will heartily welcome back to the screen their long-time favorite. It is much more than a half year ago that Miss Turner sailed for England, there to fill many theater engagements before taking up in the Tight Little Island her work before the camera. Albert Blinkhorn is now showing the first production of the Turner films. It is in three full reels and was produced under the direction of Larry Trimble, who, by the way, also wrote the script. The work of Mr. Trimble is well known to American exhibitors, as up to the time of his departure for England with John Bunny a year or more ago he had directed most of the subjects in which Miss Turner appeared. The picture will interest all the way, from the opening scenes introducing a fine bit of character work by Miss Falco and Miss Sibley, to the conclusion, where Miss Turner, as Miss Kent, a private detective, turns over to the officers of the law a band of scoundrels. It is not often the admirers of Miss Turner have had the opportunity to see her in a character part. Those who have witnessed these rare portrayals know they are worth while. So it is in the present instance, where at times we see her arrayed as a decrepit old woman.

Scene from "The Harper Mystery" (Turner Films).

The picture will have added interest by reason of the fact that it marks the debut on the screen of Mrs. Frances Turner, the mother of the popular American girl. Mrs. Turner's role was that of a well-to-do woman kidnapped by a designing nephew with the aid of notorious criminals for the purpose of getting possession of her fortune. It was intended to subject the prisoner to treatment calculated to bring on insanity. Mrs. Turner's work was well done; it was natural and showed that she has not in vain closely followed for years the acting of others on the screen.

Miss Turner has the role of a woman detective. When two female habitants, or, at least, habitues of Grub's alley fall a-fighting over the possession of a handkerchief containing a valuable ring and are carried to the police station it is Miss Kent, the detective, to whom the younger appeals to fortify her statement that she would not steal. Looking at the handkerchief which the woman had picked up the detective found the word "help" printed on it. This was the beginning. Before the imprisoned woman was released from the house of captivity many things happened—some of them exciting and all of them entertaining. Among the diverting incidents was the employment by the detective and her male partner of a trained monkey. The two minions of the law were posing as organ grinders. To the little animal was given a pencil wrapped in a sheet of paper. Up the waterspout he climbed and in at a window. The cheered prisoner wrote a brief note describing her identity and the reason for her detention, and the wise little fellow promptly returned to the ground. Armed with this information the detective soon effected the release of the prisoner and the capture of the crooked nephew and his notorious accomplices.

The opening colloquy and struggle between the two women of Grub's alley furnishes opportunity for excellent character work. The sequel of this situation, in the police station, is finely acted. The struggle between the detective and the nurse in charge of the prisoner will stir any house. Miss Turner avails herself of a jiu jitsu grip on her opponent's wrist, and in short order has her bound fast. It is quick work and cleverly done. There is not space available for the description of the many interesting scenes. There is good support, the types being well chosen. Frank Tennant has the role of Steve Bright, the crook; others in the cast are Messrs. Sefton, Llewellyn, Goodman, and Wrighton.

It will be of interest to Miss Turner's admirers to know that other releases in which the old-time screen favorite will appear are scheduled to follow regularly.

JOHN HARDIN JOINS AMBROSIO COMPANY.

John Hardin, for the past nine years connected with the sales department of the Edison Company, announces that he will shortly sever his connection with that concern to accept the position of sales manager of the Ambrosio American company for the United States and Canada. While Mr. Hardin's relations with the Edison Company have been most agreeable, he believes that the new position offers greater opportunities.

"AFTER DEATH."

A True Feature Release in Four Reels.

Through an error in the last issue of The Moving Picture World, it was stated that the feature, "After Death," released by the True Feature Company, consists of two reels, when as a matter of fact the feature is four thousand feet long.

SYDNEY AYERS.

Sydney Ayers, popular leading man of the "Flying A" Company, bears his laurels well. His record on the legitimate stage has been most enviable for his years. His first experience dates back to the time when Little Lord Fauntleroy was famous in America. He was one of the original four boys to play this part. He has been associated as leading man with such celebrities as E. H. Sothern and Otis Skinner. He played the part of the original clansman in Thomas Dixon's problem play "The Clansman." For Wilton Lackaye in Hall Caine's "The Bondsman," he played lead and has been identified as a star with almost all principal stock companies in America.

His experience in moving pictures dates back several years. He originated and played the leads in the "101 Bison" features produced by the New York Motion Picture Company. Later he served with the Selig and Edison companies.

"A Princess of Bagdad"

Helen Gardner Plays Heroine in a Love Story from the Arabian Nights.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

A VERY attractive picture has been made by Charles L. Gaskill from the love story of the Princess of Bagdad and the cobbler's son, as told by the inimitable author of the Arabian Nights. There are seven reels of it, called chapters, not acts, for the producer, as he states in a bit of foreword, has aimed to keep clear of the pretentious and to provide light and sprightly entertainment. "Punch" is not what he wanted, nor emotion, nor deep meaning; and he hasn't got any of these things. Interest he has provided and human fun, and, in large part, he has been able to put the liveliness of the original on the screen. It is this alone that makes the offering with its seven full-length chapters (a bit over seven thousand feet) a success as an entertainment. These Arabian Nights tales have been kept alive a long time and solely by their liveliness; it is their chief greatness. That there is more of this quality in the original than in the picture is true; but how could there help being? There is enough of it left to make the picture a pleasing offering for most places. The spectator who would enjoy looking at fine etchings illustrating the Arabian Nights would find a great deal of interest here; but a spectator whose mind is not quite so wakeful might grow weary before the seven reels of it are unrolled.

Scene from "A Princess of Bagdad" (Helgar).

The first chapter, and it is one of the most delightful of them all, is filled with the color and feeling of the story's place, known as Bagdad. One will not think of the stage while looking at these scenes, not after he gets used to the producer's style. They are natural and sincere. Perhaps not much money was spent on any one setting, but a great deal of care and patience must have been used all through the production. There are plenty of admirable little things, as though every scene had been done for itself leisurely. This first chapter doesn't seem to be concerned over much with any important story, but it never permits the spectator to notice this. It is a lively chapter, and it keeps the spectator's attention from doubting; makes one entirely willing to be led on to what is coming.

The second chapter, which begins the love story in earnest, does (only once or twice) make one impatient to be hurrying on, but in the third chapter we find a mighty good story unfolding. Here the sprightliness that was noticeable in the first chapter is found again. All the incidents that go with the cobbler's finding the treasure, including the cave that one will notice is made of canvas, but which will satisfy him none the less, have been done by the producer with a light and airy touch that has left the fairy dew of freshness on them still. The sincerity of the acting also has no small share in this; and we find sincerity all through the picture, except at small places where one feels that the producer's imagination, for the moment, nodded, as in the way the slave girl delivered the message sent by the hypothetical Seyn Annam, of great riches and power, to the calif, as told in the fourth chapter. This fourth chapter seems more like a bridge to the more dramatic incidents that are to end the tale; it would be the second act in a drama. The calif has ordered the cobbler's son arrested, and has sent the vizer to bring him in, but the princess has played a trick on her dad, and has even fooled him into thinking that she herself, in disguise, is the youth. The trick cannot fool the old man long, and the cobbler's son is soon in prison and condemned to die. But, in the meantime, a partly extraneous story of three other characters is made perhaps too much of, and in this lesser story the part played by the corpse of the one-eyed man is not pleasant. The Arabs of the time were fighters and corpses were of little moment to them; but we are different, and a picture always has to show more than mere words. Offsetting this in part, three dervish musicians stalk, comically solemn, through the picture at opportune times and bring a fairy-tale touch, their own peculiar humor, that is very acceptable.

In the last three chapters, the fifth to the seventh, the story holds by its own merit as a narrative of what happened to a hero and a heroine of a love story. The calif, exasperated by the insolent message of the four slaves who took the cobbler's treasure from Seyn Annam to the palace, has told the princess that, if she will go out and bring in the head of Seyn Annam, she can marry the cobbler's son. This incident would hardly have been invented by a writer of to-day, and is acceptable only because it is an illustration of the classics; not for its own sake. Under these circumstances, the mind passes over it, but it doesn't add to the effective entertainment of the picture. As most people know, the story closes with all the evil characters punished (one character commits suicide), and all the good characters rewarded.

The grace and histrionic skill of Miss Gardner are too well known to make it necessary to do more than recognize them again in this picture. The character of the Princess Ojira requires nothing but the ability to be human and charming, and she is both of these in the role. Hinda, the pretty Arab woman, had what might have been made a more spectacular part to play, and perhaps nothing shows the producer's intention of keeping the offering toned down to a fairy-tale atmosphere than his not making her the most interesting character and casting Helen Gardner in it. It would have been a very different picture. As it is, the part is very well played. The cobbler is dignified and interesting; his son and the calif carry their business easily and naturally. The one-eyed man looks very villainous as does his dark friend, and this was what was wanted. The whole cast, a large one, does commendably. And the picture will make, we think, an attractive offering.

SELIG LUCK.

Last week a huge crate came from Hamburg, containing a pair of immense boar-hounds, a recent purchase for the Selig Zoo, in California. These boar-hounds are said to be the only animals who do not fear the lions, and consequently are useful to the trainers in a variety of ways.

The surprise of Superintendent Davison at the Chicago plant was complete, but he had presence of mind enough to ejaculate: "Selig luck" when he opened the big crate and found in addition to the pair of giant dogs, a litter of little puppies. He hurried back to the office and sent a cash remittance for two. It is thought the puppies are entitled to citizenship, but their parents are of distinguished Russian lineage according to the red-letter book of canines.

GLADYS HULETTE

In Edison's "A Royal Romance" which she wrote herself.

"Checkers"

Six-Part All Star Feature.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

"CHECKERS" looks like a winner for many reasons. There is exhibited a desire to get at the actual facts of life as many of us know it, a striving for verity that receives splendid support from the way the play is put on; there is reality in environment that will be widely recognized in this country, and the folks in the story dress and act very much like human beings would under the circumstances. The admirable selection of types and their sympathetic handling contributes so heavily to the success of the piece that two of the minor roles shine out illustrious and steal honors from the leads.

As depicted in the photodrama, "Checkers" is a lovable young man, and he has the weaknesses of that character. His mother's death is the signal for his downfall. He begins to gamble, at the suggestion of a leathery and humorous young tough named "Push," and is helped to freedom by the same resourceful young pug when the joint is raided. "Push" is made of enduring material. He is untroubled by ethics of any known kind, a hard piece of driftwood tossed about on the waves of circumstance, a firm believer that chance rules the world. He persuades "Checkers" to leave town in a freight car when a crime committed during the raid is wrongly attributed to "Checkers," and the two beat their way to Clarksville, Ark., brother adventurers far more forlorn than the knights errant of Dumas and Scott.

Scene from "Checkers" (All Star).

Perhaps it is the feeling that these two unarmed young knights are really traveling in search of adventure that holds interest in the vagrant story, for only the horses of Clarksville's racetrack would have arrested the attention of Kenilworth. They completely fasten the attention of "Checkers" and "Push," to the extent that the former obtains honest work in a humble capacity at the stables and the latter finds an easy mark when he touts the winner of a race. "Push" promptly loses at crap-shooting all he has made. He is such a delightfully human character, and is so delightfully impersonated by Jack Regan, that Thomas W. Ross as "Checkers" is hard put to hold the interest built up around his role. To "Push" will go the honors, so far as the audience is concerned.

The racetrack scenes at this point are among the best I have ever seen. They are taken from the right viewpoints, and at moments when the gathering of spirited thoroughbreds is most attractive. Particularly interesting are views of the horses pounding furiously along the track which must have been taken from an automobile running at high speed a short distance ahead of them. This is an effort to secure the effect of naturalness at any cost, and is probably a glimpse of movement that has never been had by race frequenters themselves. In the handling of ensembles at the track, and in all other scenes, exterior and interior, there is exhibited some masterly craftsmanship by the director.

The "atmosphere" of that part of the story pertaining to the adventures of "Checkers" and "Push' at the racetrack greatly enriches and deepens interest in the action, giving it so much significance that the village scenes grow tame in comparison. It is only when the races are over that "Checkers" and "Push" are drawn into the village social whirlpool, and the author of the story now seems to feel it his painful duty to introduce a love interest. He does it so painfully that his women are about as interesting as those of Conan Doyle were before he married. He did not, apparently, know much about them.

Little theatric glooms would have taken possession of this portion of the story and driven the humanizing joys from it, particularly as the author thought incumbent upon the hero to win five thousand dollars on a hundred-to-one shot and introduced that arbitrary element, but for Gertrude Shipman. Nothing daunted by the small part assigned her, and its humble requirements, she infuses it with so much spirit and individuality that it rivals the characterization of delightful "Push." The scenes between her, as "Cynthia," a servant maid, and the inimitable "Push" prove to be more than oasis in a rather barren stage of the story—they brighten up all of the last reels, and give joyous color to the conventional ending.

"Checkers" looks like a winner for many reasons.

"The Third Degree"

An Adaptaticn of Klein's Play by Lubin in Five Parts.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

TO transfer such a play as "The Third Degree" from the stage to the screen was attended with extraordinary difficulties. The Klein variety of modern melodrama depends not a little on its dialogue. On closer examination, however, it will appear that dialogue is not essential to the success of the play and that, in the hands of a competent director, there is enough purely dramatic material to make a very attractive screen play.

The situations in the play are all strong and logical and action is never neglected for the sake of mere characterization. The difficulties in filming a play of this kind come with the problem of condensing. We cannot expect the touch of a master hand at the very first attempt. Mr. Barry O'Neil has taken great pains in finding the right measure of elimination and I think that he has, on the whole, succeeded. He may have been overanxious in the early part of the feature, but he gains and grows with his task. He passes the rocks of the finale of the second and third act and finishes very strongly. Therein lies a good test of quality always.

Scene from "The Third Degree."

The climax is reached swiftly with the loss of never a minute and no audience will fail to appreciate the splendid work which the director has done in building up the sequence of events in the last three reels. Mr. O'Neil has made a most conscientious and creditable effort and has shown no mean ability. There is no doubt in my mind that he will in his next adaptation give us even greater evidence of talent plus special experience.

"The Third Degree," consisting of five reels, will constitute a full evening's entertainment. It is the legitimate in films. There are fine possibilities ahead, and nowhere seems this fact to be appreciated more thoroughly than in the Lubin studio.

The acting in a feature of this kind is of course the overshadowing factor, and here, too, I think, the experience gained with this first attempt will be of great future benefit. The part taken by the younger Jeffries was on the whole well taken and no serious fault can be found with any of the other characters. Everybody was evidently in hearty accord with the director and always doing his best. The part of the brutal policeman, "Captain Fordham," deserves special mention; his characterization left nothing to be desired. The acting like the play grew better as the story progressed on the screen. Settings and photography were uniformly good. A word of praise is due to the title builder, who discharged his work with rare skill and discrimination.

"Armed Intervention" American

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

THE title "Armed Intervention" fails to prepare us for a really delightful and pleasant surprise that has been sprung by Thomas Ricketts and his capable company of actors and actresses. It is quite a time since I have been so pleasantly entertained by a one-reel subject; and, right here, I want to take advantage of the occasion and say that, in my estimation, a good one-reel subject can hold its own with the longer subjects, with, perhaps, a shade in its favor. The manufacturer who turns out good films of a thousand feet need have no fear of the future, and since we are bound to have the smaller picture theaters—seating several hundred people—always with us, it behooves manufacturers to pay particular attention to the quality of their one-reel product. Such policy will prove to be the true basis of lasting popularity.

Scene from "Armed Intervention" (American).

"Armed Intervention" is a Western comedy, brimful of fun, away from the slapstick brand; and it has the saving grace of being somewhat different. It is a true breeze from the West, and one laughs gleefully at the good-natured, rollicking cowboys, and especially at the hero, who makes it a practice to propose to every girl at the first meeting.

Scene from "Armed Intervention" (American).

Ed. Coxen is in his element, in the part of the hero, Bob Phelps, and he is particularly favored by having Miss Winifred Greenwood as his opposite. These clever artists can be congratulated on having such excellent support.

I have been struck by the happy grouping of characters at certain points in this production. As an example, I would draw attention to the group of cowboys on the highway, after the purchasing of the wedding rings. Just look at those faces! Every one of them, in a natural way, beaming with joyous good humor and suppressed mirth. It is a fit subject for a great painting. Director Ricketts is to be complimented on the art and skill bestowed on this production.

The photography throughout has softness, depth and fine definition.

Bob Phelps, a strapping cowboy, is noted among his companions for his tendency to propose to every girl he meets, just after introduction. When Dora Lawson, daughter of the boss of the ranch, makes known to the boys that her bosom friend, Betty Newton, is about to pay her a visit, the said boys immediately decide that Bob must be prevented from meeting that young lady. Accordingly, on the day of the arrival of Betty, they force Bob into a barn, at the points of pistols, and lock him in.

Betty arrives, and the boys worship her at first sight. Noticing the absence of Bob, Mrs. Lawson makes inquiry, but the boys are mute. Much to their surprise, Bob appears on the scene, having made his escape. He is introduced to Betty, who is impressed by his manly good looks. A moment later she is dumfounded by Bob's query, "Will you marry me?" Seized by the humor of the moment, she, laughingly, consents, and they shake hands on it.

Bob Phelps, immediately afterward, is seized with fright, for the first time in his life, when he reflects that he cannot support a wife. Betty also, feeling that she really loves Bob, resolves to tell that worthy that she promised only in fun. As a result, Bob and Betty meet and agree to be good friends.

But the boys in the camp will have none of it. Bob and Betty must be spliced, willy nilly. Bob, who is now sick with love for Betty, is in despair. He has just finished reading a letter from his father that an uncle has died, leaving him a fortune of $50,000, when two of the boys come into his room, and force him into wedding togs. The wedding takes place, much to Bob's delight, and he announces his good fortune, to the surprise of his happy bride and all present.

The release date is December 13.

UNIVERSAL FILM DIRECTOR MARRIES LEADING WOMAN.

The marriage of Wallace Reid, director and actor of note, and Miss Dorothy Davenport, his leading woman, both of the Pacific Coast Universal studios at Hollywood, Cal., took place at Christ Episcopal Church, Los Angeles, on October 13.

Mr. Reid is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Reid, his father being a noted playwright. Miss Davenport is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davenport, well-known actors, and a niece of the late Fanny Davenport.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Reid.

Monday night Mr. and Mrs. Reid were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Bernstein and Mrs. Rose Janowitz at the Bernstein residence. The young couple are held in the highest esteem by their professional associates, and their reception at the Hollywood studios Tuesday morning attested to their popularity. There was the popping of guns and cheers as the couple were heralded down the street, until the locality presented the aspect of an insurrecto proceeding.

MAN KILLED IN MOVIE RIOT.

Universal Actors in Search of Local Color, Run Into a Hornet's Nest and Are Badly Stung.

PERHAPS one of the most unusual incidents that ever occurred in the taking of moving pictures happened the other day in the Hell's Kitchen" district of New York, when Director Wm. Robert Daly was filming a scene in the forthcoming three-reel Imp feature, "The Militant." Including his leads, Miss Frizzi Brunette and Glen White, he had almost two hundred "supers" on the street to take part in the suffrage meeting and mobbing to follow. Just prior to the giving of the signal after the meeting, by Mr. Daly, which was to start the stampede, a man was run down and killed by an auto across the street. A huge crowd of men immediately gathered. Before explanations could be made by Daly, supers charged the curious onlookers, and the latter, believing they were being seriously attacked, fought back. A general fight ensued. Those who saw it say that it would make the Donnybrook Fair look like a pink tea. Eyes were blackened, noses smashed and several women who were caught in the eddies had their hair pulled down and faces scratched. Anyone who knows the reputation of the Hell's Kitchen district knows that a riot over there is an awfully good thing to keep away from.

When peace was finally restored about thirty-five men, onlookers, discovered they had unwittingly become motion picture actors; the camera, continually clicking, had photographed one of the most beautiful fights that was ever pulled off, and the said men decided they stood in for reimbursement. King Baggot, moving among the crowd, discovered their plot and warned Daly that a hasty retreat for himself would be about the best course to pursue. He did, and failed to return until several hours later, when the men, giving up in disgust at trying to find him, had dispersed. Nearly $1,000 worth of wardrobe was destroyed in the mad fracas.

"It was the most delightful riot I ever witnessed," said Mr. Daly afterwards in speaking of the affair. "No doubt our actors dressed as 'bobbies,' mistaken by the crowd and the policeman who came to the rescue later, helped to create the misunderstanding. When the mistake was discovered the crowd didn't do a thing but batter in the helmets and tear the English uniforms to rags. When the men onlookers learned they had been photographed, they thought, I suppose, that they should be payed as well as the supers and likely they would have used force in obtaining it if I hadn't acted on King's suggestion and 'beat it.'"

In the taking of this photoplay many other unusual things occurred. Mr. Daly secured several prominent local suffragists to enact certain roles in the play. Miss Brunette is a furious anti-suffragette. Mr. Daly nearly turned gray when he found this young lady in a heated argument with some of the ladies, ready to tear their hair. Daly had experienced trouble in persuading these women to appear in his picture and for a time he stood in the way of losing them after about half the film had been photographed. That Bob combined attributes of a peacemaker with his gifts as a director was responsible for the picture being finished.

THEATRICAL MEN HEADING KLEINE'S COMPANIES.

George Kleine has twenty companies of "The Last Days of Pompeii" on the road and twelve of "Quo Vadis?". Among the agents with the "Pompeii" companies are: Tom North, O. R. Henkel, E. R. Gerson, Wm. Miller, Chas. C. Knapp, W. G. Snelling, Harry Greenway, R. E. Riddick, Harvey Day, A. K. Pearson, Chas. E. Bragg, Harry Scott, Robert McDowell, M. C. Coyne, David Young, Z. M. Harris, Ed Abrams, Ed F. Guzman, J. W. Boyd and R. D. Kinmond.

Among the managers of "Pompeii" companies are: M. D. Wilson, R. W. Horn, E. C. Andrews, Wm. Tully, J. H. Norwood, Robert Evans, Ben Bass, O. H. Butler, Al Wiswell, C. A. Shaw, Wm. Graham, Matt Sheeley, Frank L. Bixby, Jules Walters, Harry Rowe, Sim Allen, H. C. Naugle, Julius Sowalsky, C. G. Windsor, Miles Gibbons.

Agents for "Quo Vadis?" companies include John Black, Foster Moore, George Henshall, Charles Wuerz, Ben Simpson, Bert Glickauf, Clarence Burdick, Sam Mott, George Costan, Joseph Frankel, Branch O'Brien. Among the "Quo Vadis?" managers are Arch McGovern, Harry Jackson, John Hope, Ed Manley, Jack Brehany, Henry Pierson, J. C. Sutherland, Ed Lester, E. J. Dolan, Charles Collins, Ernest Warde, Merle Smith, Wm. Hale.

Fully sixty-five well-known theatrical business men are already on Mr. Kleine's payroll, and, according to very reliable authority, there will be many more before the season ends.

John Tippet, the Universal's European Business Agent, as Seen by "Peter," Caricaturist of the "Bioscope"—London.

CALIFORNIA RUGBY CONTEST PICTURED.

The big Stanford University of California rugby contest this year was filmed by the California Motion Picture Corporation, official and exclusive photographers, and it is the resultant reel that rugby enthusiasts contemplate using to boost the English game in the East. On the day following the game these pictures were shown at the San Francisco "Pantages," and, according to the management, were the greatest drawing card on the entire vaudeville bill. The game was a close one and the play was fast and sharp.

Scene from the Stanford University Rugby Contest.

Beside the game itself and its spectacular plays, the cameraman caught the bleechers and rooting sections during some of the more exciting periods of the contest. In addition to their collegiate contest reel, the producers have one of the game played on November 15th between the New Zealand "All Blacks" and the American "All Stars."

"The Life of Richard Wagner"

Made by Messter & Co. in Four Reels and Imported by Klaw and Erlanger.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THE subject, the music, the lecture and the acting of the principal characters hold out great hopes for the success of this feature. There are flashes of superb beauty in it. Here we have an innovation in motion pictures. The life of a great composer is depicted on the screen with impressive selections from his operas. As presented in the New Amsterdam Theater, it is of the highest educational value. Such a feature brings the refining pleasures of impressive music and great dramatic creations within the reach of all. The spell of Wagner was slow in arriving and up to the end of the second reel I was fearful lest the feature turn into a caricature. There was, however, in the last scenes of the second reel the promise of far better things and they came with a rush in the third and fourth part. Never was an audience more responsive to the genius of Wagner; there was the ever sincere tribute of profound silence in the representations from the operas and the applause came in swift electric outbursts, such as high merit alone can evoke. The figure of the King of Bavaria, the youthful idealist and friend of Wagner, was one of the strong points in the biographical depiction. The glimpses of the very lake where king and composer dreamed together were most charming and lent a rare touch of reality to the scene. The man who acted the part of Wagner was very capable, his portraiture was thoroughly convincing and even the most ardent Wagnerite will not withhold his meed of praise. The finales of various operas were on the whole well presented, the "Awakening of Brunehilde" and the "Oath on the Spearhead" and the "Funeral of Siegfried," being among the best. The finale from "Tristan" and "Isolde" was presented with shockingly poor taste. The photography was generally good but there were some bad spots.

Without wishing to detract in the least from the high and extraordinary merits of this feature, it must be pointed out that the Messter type of kinematographic workmanship is not of the highest. This feature shows vast improvement but it is not wholly free from jarring traces of that amateurishness which characterizes so many German film productions. The "early bad manner" is especially evident in the first and in parts of the second reel. There is too much "doubling in brass" of the minor characters, the double exposure work is very faulty at times while the attempts to introduce a comedy element here and there results in flat failure. There is a tendency on the part of the lesser artists to look at the camera at the most inopportune moments and there are two or three noticeable instances of a lack of finish such as is apt to provoke adverse comment from American audiences. None of these defects, however, go to the essence of this filmplay, for which I venture to predict a great success in all motion picture theaters of the better kind where it can be well presented. It is indeed an attraction which will go well in the big legitimate theaters.

The presentation of the pictures at the private exhibition in the New Amsterdam was most acceptable except as to projection. The music was rendered with great skill. An organ is much to be preferred if a man can be found who handles it as well as the performer at the New Amsterdam. Mr. R. S. Piggott, a well-known lecturer, who helped to make "Hiawatha" such a success performed as "narrator" and his work was good in spite of a note of unnecessary mournfulness.

KATIE EMMET WITH SELIG.

Katie Emmet, the popular star actress a decade ago, known as a protean player by reason of her versatility, was not only an accomplished actress in her own right, but exceedingly clever in writing her own plays and strengthening those of others who happened to come her way for suggestions. This gentle and mellow actress is now a valued member of the Selig stock company in Chicago.

NOTICE OF CORRECTION.

Referring to the advertisement of Warner's Features which appeared in the issue of the Moving Picture World for November 15th, in which they mention the Eclair Film Company as being one of the manufacturers supplying them with films, the Eclair Company expressly desire to correct this impression. They are making films solely for the Universal Film Mfg. Co., of New York. While the Eclair Company appreciates that Warner's Features referred to the Eclair-Paris Company, the statement was a trifle misleading, and they desire to set the matter right in the eyes of all concerned.

"The Yellow Slave."

A Three Part Feature of Japanese Life by Melies.

Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

THIS Melies feature is a tragedy of the most compelling kind. It is built on a profound and fascinating mystery. With the dawn of every civilization men have regarded a woman's chastity as one of the precious possessions of the race. Civilization has always advanced as women have honored themselves and as they have been honored by men. The purity and health of a race is always connected with the respect which is paid to a woman's dignity and her right to choose her mate as Nature moves her.

This feature is woven around this theme. A Japanese girl becomes engaged to a young man who must hurry away to war. A false report of the man's death reaches the home of the girl. She is in deep poverty and her mother lacks food. The parents of the soldier offer sympathy but no assistance. Believing her fiance dead, in danger of being thrown on the street with her aged mother, despairing of happiness the girl becomes the victim of a tea-house keeper and carries the white badge of shame and slavery. In due time the soldier returns. He discovers the shameful bondage of his bride. He spurns his parents for failing to save her from her evil fate and then rescues the girl from the clutches of the procurer. Both realize that no happiness is possible for them. They attempt no bargain with fate, but read their doom in the inexorable course of circumstances. Here is the true tragic note and is played with sublime self-denial. In the end, as they wade into the waters to blot out the stain which fate had marked them with, we feel that instead of submitting dumbly they are nobly defying the decrees of fate.

Scene from "A Yellow Slave" (Melies).

The story is invested with deep and strange power, but the story is by no means the only merit of this feature. We learn something of the weird fatalism of the Far East. We see the curious inconsistencies of the Old Japan and the New Japan. We get an insight into the character and the emotions of the Japanese and of their home life. Those in these pictures do not pose but are unconscious of the camera.

Scene from "A Good Sport" (Edison).

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN

AS the fall and winter season progresses results in the amusement world grow more and more gratifying to those who are interested in the photoplay branch of the business and the developments of the past week plainly showed that, so far as the metropolis is concerned, the time is not far distant when a majority of the theaters will abandon their present policies and turn entirely to motion pictures for attractions. The managements are in a dilemma. In their efforts to hold and draw patronage new plays have been crowded into the theaters, but even the most conservative critics declare "it is becoming apparent that the season is none too satisfactory from a business point of view." The same critics say "competition among the theaters has created a condition in which only plays that touch extremes either of merit or unique interest can hope for substantial patronage." The managers frankly concur with the critics in these views and many of them are seriously considering giving up the fight and throwing open the doors to the products of the camera.

* * *

During the past week several of the newspapers declared in their dramatic columns that the feature motion picture is becoming more and more a factor in the amusement world; and simultaneously announcement was made that many of the large theaters will soon produce photoplays on days that are not designated for matinee performances of the regular attractions. The first to fall in line is Klaw & Erlanger's New Amsterdam Theater. Motion pictures will be the attraction at the house every Thursday, Friday and Sunday afternoon, and also on Sunday night, the prices being 25 and 50 cents. The new policy was put in operation last Thursday. Last Sunday the Berkeley Theater, on Forty-fourth Street, opened a photoplay season, the entertainments to continue daily at 2:20, 4, 7:20 and 9 p. m. On the same night the spacious Hippodrome was thrown open to pictures, the prices ranging from twenty-five cents to a dollar. The regular attraction continues during the week. This is the first time that motion pictures have been the exclusive attraction at this big house during the fall and winter season. About two years ago Lyman H. Howe took the house when it was "dark" and made money for several Sunday nights with pictures that were far below the standard of today.

* * *

Then we have the Bijou, on Broadway, giving daily productions of "The Last Days of Pompeii," and the Carnegie Lyceum opening for a season of afternoons and nights with motion pictures depicting wild animal life. We also have Prof. Elmendorf, one of the veterans of motion picture work, holding forth at Carnegie Hall Sunday nights and Monday afternoons with prices ranging from fifty cents to a dollar and a half. That is going some.

* * *

A survey of the field must satisfy one that the demoralized condition of the theatrical business is not, as many critics would have the people believe, due solely to the fact that "regular attractions are not available" and that several important play houses have taken advantage of the motion picture form of entertainment on that account. The photoplays are steadily forging ahead. They are no longer looked upon as simply an "entertainment for the masses" by the amusement public. Their adoption by the large theaters is sufficient proof that the popularity of what many disdainfully referred to until quite recently as "the canned attractions" has extended to the higher priced zones and will stay there so long as the present standard is maintained.

* * *

Among the latest recruits at the motion picture studios is the widow of one of the greatest comedians of his day, Stuart Robson. "I was urged sometime ago to go into this work," said Mrs. Robson the other day, "but I really could not persuade myself to give up the stage work for what appeared to me at the time childish, pantomimic effort. One day a friend invited me to visit a studio and the result was a revelation to me. It was a surprise to find so many of my old-time friends engaged in work which I had for so long a time underestimated, and which proved so intensely interesting that I decided to take part in it. In the old days when members of our profession were criticised for shortcomings we used to say that if the public knew of the vicissitudes attending life behind the scenes they would be far more lenient and charitable towards many of us. And now that I have acquainted myself with life before and about the camera I am led to say that if the people knew the actual conditions of that life the results that come from it would not meet with the indifference I have observed in some quarters. The material employed in the casts, the expenditures to perfect details of production, and the hard, earnest labor expended by players, directors and producers give the photoplay a complexion of merit that can only be seen behind the screen. I have learned the secret of the marvelous growth of the motion picture business."

* * *

On the same day Mrs. Robson made her first visit to the studio a man called at the same place on business of a private character. While waiting, he was invited to see a scene. Although being a man whose business keeps him almost constantly traveling through the States, the visitor had never seen a moving picture. He said his family never patronized the picture houses because they looked upon them as a cheap and inferior form of entertainment. He also added that some of the newspaper reports had conveyed the impression that the shows were of a rather vicious character. The names of several prominent photoplayers were mentioned, but he said he had never heard of them, adding that he never paid attention to the printed matter in front of the picture houses. On reflection, he said, "O! yes, I have heard of one man. He is a fat man, I believe; I think his name is B-u-n-n-y." The drawling manner with which the name was pronounced showed he was in doubt as to whether he recalled it properly. "But I have never seen him, or anyone else," he added. The original intention of the visitor was to spend "only ten minutes in looking around." He remained nearly two hours, and at the conclusion of the visit said: "This has been a treat. Everything is intensely interesting and I assure you the motion pictures have a convert in me."

* * *

How many more people like this visitor are in existence? Is it true, after all, that much of the criticism and abuse that has been heaped upon the motion pictures has been due to such people—those who have not seen the pictures, or have not tried to see what merit is in and behind them?

* * *

The local press is giving space to extended reports of a movement in Montclair, N. J., by reformers in that town, to end "social dissipation" of school boys and girls. The organization behind the work is said to have a membership of 1,500. The chief accusation is that social dissipation, unrestrained precocity and silly indulgence by parents have "broken down and made prematurely old and blaze" the children of the town. Dances and other late affairs, it is claimed, have made the boys and girls neglectful of school work and other wholesome things. It is not known whether the opposition came from the reform organization of 1,500, or the dancing boys and girls, but until a comparatively recent period the opening of picture houses in Montclair was bitterly opposed. Permission was eventually secured, but under almost prohibitive conditions. If the people of Montclair will "loosen up" a little, give encouragement to wholesome motion picture shows and encourage the youthfuls to patronize them, the reformers will find the work they have undertaken more than half accomplished. The pictures will go a good way towards abolishing late hours and reducing the "menace to life in automobiles," as well as inculcating economy in the seeking of pleasure and instructing the offenders on some things the course of study in the schools does not reach so effectively.

* * *

The newspapers give to a man in Japan credit for the discovery that if you think you are cool you will be cool, even in summer. It is said the Japanese has hung the walls of his work shop with arctic prints, which set his imagination into the right temperamental groove. The Japs are given credit for being among the shrewdest and far-seeing of the human race, but this particular Jap is at least ten years behind in his discovery. In the early days of motion picturedom, when a reel closed the vaudeville shows, Mr. Percy G. Williams hit upon the same theory. In the summer time he insisted upon having pictures that depicted winter scenes. The Alps, plenty of snow and ice, sleighing parties, snow-covered farm yards, the ice palace at Montreal and all such scenes were his hobby. Verily, there is nothing new under the sun. The motion pictures have touched upon them all.

Foreign Trade Notes

BRITISH NOTES.

(Special Correspondence to THE WORLD.)

A FIRM of electrical contractors on this side have now, for some time, been advertising an incandescent electric lamp for use in moving picture theaters which gives a candle power of light for a consumption of half-a-watt of energy. They have now created something of a stir in electrical circles by announcing this week that they will shortly market incandescent lamps on this principle—which puts it almost on a level with the arc—at a price that compares with the present tungsten filament lamps. The globes are filled with nitrogen and the first specimens are credited with a candle power of 1800.

* * *

It was recently considered that tape machines and telegraphic apparatus in moving picture theaters represented the limit in luxurious detail. The New Gallery Kinema now keeps a fully qualified doctor in attendance for the benefit of visitors and the staff.

* * *

Raold Amundsen, the celebrated Norwegian discover of the South Pole attaches so much importance to moving picture records of the snowy regions that he has deputed his brother Leon to organize the Kinematograph department of his Arctic expedition next year. I have been given to understand that Messrs. Pathé Freres will handle these releases.

* * *

The combination of picture playwrights in this country is now practically formed. The society, its name has not yet been decided upon, will insist on the name of the author being given on every title with a minimum payment of two guineas ($10), for a one reel script.

* * *

Paris dominates the realm of feminine fashions and by common consent the "young blood" (American "dude" or "guy"), must turn to London if he would have the last word in masculine modes. It has, therefore, fallen to the lot of an English producer to turn out the first moving picture fashion plate for men. Of this, I am told, there are to be periodical releases while special sections will show what clothes a fashionable Englishman wears on different occasions.

* * *

Particulars have been given to me of a gigantic scheme to turn the moving picture into a vast advertising agent for commercial and domestic articles. The proposal—yet in embryo but vouched for by a member of the London Stock Exchange—contemplates taking over in every city of any size a non-paying picture theater. The public will be admitted free but the program for the most part will consist of films introducing advertisements of different articles. From what I have heard, some of these pictures have been very ingeniously produced in a special studio and surpass many of the clever fabrications of the American press agent. If it is found that the program "drags" upon the patrons it is proposed to introduce as an inducement an occasional feature film from one or other of the leading makers. In view of admitting people without charge the promoters anticipate keen opposition from exhibitors and renters but the individual who supplied me with this information states that in the event of a boycott in films they will produce their own subjects in their own studios in the North of England. Apropos of this the Great Northern Railway Co. announce that they will lend free, to responsible persons, films and projectors for lectures upon the territory covered by their lines.

* * *

A Viennese gentleman is applying for a patent here for a pair of spectacles for special use in kinema theaters. They are supposed to prevent eye strain from flicker for persons with defective sight. It is also claimed that people sitting close to the picture will see the image as if at a distance.

The Manchester trade exhibition closed last week after a successful but limited existence. Glasgow is the next Provincial center to hold an exhibition but this is not until next year. Of the Manchester show, Mr. E. H. Montagu (Selig's Agent), things it productive of more good than the one in London. "The one in London," he says, "was a fine thing for the promoters and the public, while the one in Manchester is good for the trade."

* * *

An amusing note, but one which speaks volumes for the western cowboy and domestic drama type of picture, has been struck in one of the large industrial towns in Yorkshire. At Batley it is the custom of the manager of a local moving picture theater to admit free to a special matinee all people over the age of seventy. A week ago he showed the "Last Days of Pompeii" and at the conclusion of the show the manager waited at the door for the old folks' congratulations as they passed out. The first veteran gave him a heavy scowl and went his way, the second hobbled along with his stick muttering something unrecognizable, and the majority of the others went out without even saying "good afternoon." He inquired of the next old man the cause of their displeasure and was informed that if he wanted to retain their patronage for his free matinees he would have to provide more suitable pictures. "We want less of that stuff and more cowboy pictures." the old man added. Thus we are given a very representative illustration of the popularity of the simple Western subject which, in most cases, were the sub-titles omitted, would impose no great tax upon the intellect; a modification impracticable with most historical pictures. Exhibitors in laboring class districts would be well advised to bear this fact in mind in choosing programs.

* * *

An ingenious ticket issuing machine has been placed upon the English market this week by Wrench and Sons, the Bioscope manufacturers. It issues tickets of several different colors with greater rapidity than the ordinary metal disc machine. An attachment upon the lines of a cyclometer registers the number of tickets issued and the dial of this can be fixed in the manager's office or any part of the house. Mr. Engelke, of Messrs. Wrench, is the inventor. A still more valuable invention, but one, the value of which can only be ascertained by a practical test, is being exploited on this side by a young Antipodean inventor. It consists of an endless projector shutter (circular), with bridge pieces connecting the openings thus reducing flicker. The projecting lens is embodied within the shutter with a mechanical device for its adjustment.

* * *

An apparatus of very limited application must be credited to an Italian inventor who is seeking to patent the materialization of his labor in this country. It has for its object the provision of reflected light as an illuminant for the projector. In place of an arc, in the lantern is an arrangement of mirrors that can be tilted to any angle. The outer mirror is to catch sunshine or very powerful natural light which is directed by the other mirrors in turn until it reaches the film.

* * *

It is common knowledge that a stereoscopic effect can be produced by super-imposing upon the same surface two distinct outlines of the picture, one black and one red, and viewing them through spectacles tinted with complementary colors. Can this effect be obtained on the screen? Messrs. F. Munie and H. T. Weck, of Brussels, say it can by developing out two images upon the same film in the two colors mentioned. The disadvantage of this proposal is that the exhibitor would have to furnish every patron with a pair of spectacles made of green and red celluloid, or glass. This deterrent, however, is not preventing a scheme for its practical negotiation in this country.

The Thanhouser Co., of New Rochelle, are looking out for a suitable London office and when this has been selected Mr. P. Kimberley (formerly of the Imp Co.), will, I hear, be put in charge of this end of their business.

* * *

An expedient which might commend itself to exhibitors in industrial—particularly colliery—districts and which is being successfully worked in Yorkshire and Lancashire is the morning performance. In these and many other districts throughout this island a large percentage of the male population is employed during the afternoon and evening in workshops and factories. Consequently it is being found profitable to run every day what are termed "morning matinees" at which the ordinary evening program is exhibited. Some of these start as early as six o'clock and continue for about two hours, while a theater at Cardiff, I am told, maintains a continuous program from that hour until ten-thirty in the evening.

* * *

Another attempt is being planned by the London County Council to secure Parliamentary legislation to enable them to enforce the licensing of all buildings where celluloid is stored or manufactured. Obviously this action has been inspired by the many recent fires in the Metropolitan area.

* * *

There are, a prominent film agent tells me, a few changes impending in the B. & C. Company, no doubt occasioned by their recent disastrous fire. Harry Lorraine, who took the lead in the noted Lieut. Daring series, has left to start business on his own account under the title "Daring Film Co." His first productions will be another series of Lieut. Daring pictures.

* * *

Mr. Charles Urban, the proprietor of Kinemacolor, has evolved an improvement in projector illumination which dispenses with the use of electricity supplied from the main or a dynamo. The device is expected to popularize Kinemacolor as an entertainment for private houses and from his price list, Mr. Urban intends to cater solely for the wealthy. The price for a two hours' entertainment is approximately $225.

* * *

A fashionable moving picture theater in the West End of London retains a clever black and white artist on the spot to decorate any special notices or slides which it may be found necessary to hang in the lobby or throw upon the screen. This week the Continental film "The Three Musketeers," is being shown and the artist's caricatures along the borders of the announcements are highly diverting. Americans contemplating booking this subject might obtain some insight into its potentialities from the fact that over 20,000 people have paid for admission to see it at the New Gallery where it has been showing for a week.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

NEW ENGLAND PICTURE PERSONALITIES, "CHARLIE" STERN.

Nearly everyone knows Charlie, so there is no need to introduce him. For the benefit of those of the trade not acquainted with Mr. Stern, let it be known that he is manager of the Universal's office in Bangor, Maine.

Charles Stern.

Mr. Stern broke into this industry in 1904, when he was an operator for A. L. Harsten at 138 East 14th Street, New York. He was a good operator, but even a better "booker" and worked until 1907 in this capacity for the Harsten people. The New England Film Exchange, of Boston, then advanced the ante, and Mr. Stern came to the Hub in 1907, as assistant manager of that exchange. In 1908 he became manager of the exchange, where he remained until 1910, when he went back to New York to manage the Peerless Film Exchange. In 1912, Mr. Stern again returned to Boston, opening the Exclusive Feature Film Company. After this he associated himself with Manager J. A. Eslow, of the New England Universal Film Exchange, Boston. Mr. Stern recently left this firm to manage the New England office of the World Special Films Corporation, but he didn't remain away long. Mr. Eslow decided to open a Bangor, Me., branch, and made Mr. Stern an offer so attractive that he simply couldn't pass it up. Everyone likes Charlie; he's pleasant, aimiable and a hustler, which is another way of saying that he has a host of friends in the trade, and is "planting" the Universal standard in every city, town and hamlet of the Pine Tree State.

QUEEN MOTHER ASKS TO SEE "POMPEII."

George Kleine's "The Last Days of Pompeii" was shown at a private exhibition to Her Majesty, Queen Mother of Italy, on her request last month. The Marquis Guiccioli, Gentleman in Waiting to the Queen Mother, wrote to Turin, October 22nd, asking that the picture be projected at the Castle of Stupinigi. The principal "leads" motored down from Turin, which is twenty miles away and were presented to Her Majesty.

Scene from the Kleine-Ambrosio Version of "The Last Days of Pompeii."

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Of Course It Pays.

J. W. BALLENGER, of the Dean Theatre, York, Neb., is the latest manager to discover that advertising pays. He sends in his first program; a souvenir of their anniversary, and writes:

> We cannot tell yet what results this will produce, as it is just off the press. However, prospects look good for it boosting our business. We feel that it will be a boost for our house even after the anniversary week has passed, as nothing of this kind has been attempted in our town before.

We cannot see how the program can keep from being helpful. It is sixteen pages and cover, the cover being cut to let through part of a half tone of John Bunny, carrying out the idea of the title line: "The Home of Good Humor." The only other printing on the front is Anniversary and "where your dime does its duty." It would have been better had the name of the house been printed in on the cover. The paper is a very light brown with a darker cover, printed throughout in brown and tied with a brown silk cord, instead of being wire stitched. Typographically it is well done, though too large a screen was used for the cut. The course 50 or 60 screen is all right for rapid newspaper work, but a finer screen should be used for slow printing on better paper. The cuts supplied by the manufacturers are all for use on cheap paper and with hurried press work, but in a careful job of this sort a 110-screen would have been better, even had it been found necessary to have a cut made direct. It should pay the manufacturers to have some fine screen half tones made up for precisely this purpose.

Two pages are given to the program for each day, a six and twelve-point face being used interchangeably. The effect would have been more elegant had an eight or ten-point face been used throughout, though this would have interfered with the arbitrary two pages to a day. The day and date is given on each left hand page.

It was the intention to use some general matter and other cuts, but the cuts did not arrive in time and the program had to be ready, so the general reading is confined to an explanation as to why sometimes the program had to be changed on account of the non-arrival of the reels, and a back page for a simple and convincing reading notice of the house.

So elaborate an edition is not practicable, nor necessary for that matter, each week, but for a souvenir program it does credit to the management and the printer and we agree with Mr. Ballenger that the effect will last long past the special occasion.

Getting Back.

Hay and Nicholas, of the Haynic Theater, Fairmont, Minn., have been getting into the papers. We would not be so uncharitable as to suggest that they wrote a letter denouncing their performance that they might make reply, but at any rate the local paper printed a letter from a "Fairmont Mother," declaring that she regretted that Hay and Nicholas did not live up to their talk of the educational value of the pictures and giving the titles of five films as samples.

Hay and Nicholas took twice as much space for their defense and we clip some of the argument that may be useful to others:

> We have ever had a keen realization of the responsibility which we assume in selecting the amusements for the youth of our city, and we have conscientiously tried to give our people the best programs obtainable.
>
> When we started we believed that "Fairmont Mother" would be interested in the kind of entertainment her offspring patronizes. We accordingly selected beautiful educational programs, and with what result? "Fairmont Mother" was conspicuously absent from the show, and "Fairmont Mother's" offspring in large numbers spent their money for entertainment of the Dead Eye Dick variety.
>
> There never has been a moment since the Haynic opened that we have not desired and sought the co-operation and assistance of the Fairmont mothers in the selection of our programs. The shaping of our programs is in the hands of the Fairmont people. If "Fairmont Mother," individually and collectively, will help select the kind of programs that Tuesday's communication mourns for, and will then patronize those programs, we shall be only too happy to put them on. We have no wish to show pictures that can be objectionable to any mother, but with an overhead expense of more than ten thousand dollars a year we have found it impossible to run only programs which will satisfy "Fairmont Mother," who, on her own admission, patronizes us to the extent of 10 cents once in three months—40 cents per annum.
>
> We want to ask our friends to avoid the use of the word "movies" in connection with this business. It is unpardonable slang, emanating from the gutter, and its use is deplored by everyone who wishes to see the photoplay occupy the dignified position which it deserves.

Help to Kill "Movies."

We particularly like that last paragraph with its reference to the use of the word "Movies." Like most current slang, it has been widely accepted, but it is not in any sense a word that will advance the cause of photoplay. It is all right to argue that a nickname helps to popularize, but it should be the right sort of nickname and to take the coining of the streets and the children's playground is not going to give emphasis to the fact that the photoplay is not the cheap and nasty thing it was.

Educate your own clients to use the more dignified "photoplay." Do a little missionary work on the screen with slides. The popular expression is a curse to the pictures and confirms the fanatic in his belief that the motion pictures are still the cheap rot that he saw back in '98.

Advertise that you do not show "Movies," but pictures in motion. Lay stress on the fact that your offerings are better than the word "Movies" would suggest. It will not hurt the attendance of those who employ the term. It will help to bring to your house many who do not know how good the photoplays now are.

Tinted Postals.

We have seen some of the new Kraus hand-colored postcards in sheets. There are thirty of the licensed players on postcards, but the sheets are not trimmed to postcard size, but kept in the original form, about 22 by 29 inches. Outside of the fact that we do not believe that so many of the players wear red neckties, the coloring is good and the sheet framed for lobby display or as an interior decoration is worth while, particularly at the prices asked. The card may be had either framed or unframed. They also make a number of the licensed players in larger size, which are sold by the set. Several exhibitors profit by an offer to give one of these with every sale of two dollars worth of tickets purchased in one block. They are not the familiar brown finish, but a mat surface card, suggesting a platinum print in the absence of half tone screen marks, the plates being virtually geletain negatives printed with ink instead of by exposure to the light. They are very effective.

Another Bunny.

We have had John Bunny theaters, but there is another Bunny in the field, Carl E. Schultze, whose Foxy Grandpa pictures, signed "Bunny," have delighted millions of kiddies of all ages. Mr. Schultze is vice-president of the Bunny Theater Company, which is to open a house at Broadway and 147th Street, New York. As a starter, cards were distributed bearing a pictorial puzzle, the solution of which entitles the solver to free tickets for the opening performance. The puzzle is too purely local to warrant reproduction, but "Bunny" announces that he is going to sketch for the house bulletin boards and we hope later on to show some of his work here.

At the moment the greater interest lies in the fact that a man of Mr. Schultze's standing in the world of men who do things finds it worth his while to lend his name and talents to a photoplay theater. In the last few weeks a number of really worth while photoplay theaters have been opened in New York, and presently we shall no longer suffer under the stigma of having the poorest collection of photoplay theaters in the country. A manager of national reputation is a most welcome addition to the growing list.

Card Folders.

The Broadmour Theater, Kansas City, issues a four-page card folder with a full week's program on three pages and a summary of features on the front cover. Those who have recently asked for programs should send a return envelope to the management and ask for one. It offers a very neat display, the titles being in full face and the underline in roman. A little smartening of the lines would help a little. Lubin's "All on Account of Daisy," for instance, reads, "Daisy is just a little pup, but she causes all kinds of trouble. Sure to please the children." Maybe it will, but the wife thinks it's another kind of a daisy and it is not altogether and completely a child story. If you can't be exact it's better to generalize. Nothing hurts a house more than the feeling that the manager himself doesn't know what he is talking about when he talks films.

His Rules.

S. C. Hurley, who has been with the Spencer Circuit in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick for about four years, has become the owner of that circuit's Princess Theater, Truro. It is a six hundred house, using Mutual service. Announcing his new venture he sends samples of a book mark for the children, carrying a picture of Marie Eline, the very clever little Thanhouser Kid, and these moral precepts:

A good rule to make a good life:
Study hard!
Don't get discouraged;
Obey your parents and attend the
Princess.

A book mark in the school season is certain to be kept and this is attractively gotten out, a card two by six and a half with the upper ends clipped and punched, apparently for cord and tassel.

Again!

Here is a letter from George M. Blackburn, of the Empire and Rand Theaters, Salt Lake City, who writes:

> Today I did not look over my program in the Empire Theater, at the first show, as I ordinarily do and, therefore, did not know until late in the evening that I was paying for and running a whole reel of film advertising a brand of canned peas under the title of "From Pod to Plate." To say that I was angry while looking at this film on my screen was putting it mildly. I consider it an unpardonable imposition and one that the trade in general should know of.

Most assuredly other exhibitors should know of this effrontery and should watch for the reel. Give your operator instructions to notify you of the slightest suggestion of advertising in any film and pass on it promptly. The insolent effrontery of exchanges in presenting in the guise of entertainment advertisements for the circulation of which they are paid should be resented in some material form. It should hold in law that this is obtaining money under false pretenses, since the contract with the exchange implies the supplying of entertainment and not advertisement. This thing is growing worse with the growth of the so-called industrial companies, and managers should be watchful. We are far behind England in this regard. There the evil was stamped out a long time since.

Fine for Four.

The Alamo theater, New Orleans, advertises that a special rate will be made to "Florence Lawrence parties" of four or more on the days when that favorite will be seen on the screen. It may seem foolish to offer a reduction on an extra strong attraction, but we take it that the reduction will not be continued after the theater party habit has been formed. Get the point?

Why Five Cents?

S. Barret M'Cormick, of the Denver Times, seems to have a keen perception of the exhibiting situation, better, perhaps, than some of the Denver exhibitors can show. In a recent issue he speaks of the multiplicity of features and adds:

> In view of all these notable attractions, the remarkable spectacles, the mammoth and beautiful productions, I think the most wonderful part is the price that Denver is asked to pay for such entertainment. Five cents! While the playing of such splendid attractions as these for the price of a street-car ride may reflect the enterprise of the exhibitors and probably net a dividend besides, I wonder if it doesn't detract just a little from the proper respect due such productions?
>
> We Americans, so they say, judge no little bit by the price we pay, which evidences a considerable, and not unwise faith in the selling agents, due, no doubt, to the high principles that govern our present day business. We let the seller appraise his merchandise, then we either purchase or reject.
>
> The comparison applies to the drama as well as other merchandise. Would we respect Mrs. Fiske in a speaking play at 10, 20, 30 cents as much as we do at $2? Would Caruso draw as many at variety show prices as he does with Mr. Hammerstein's scale? I doubt it. Our idea of the seller's appraisement surely has its effect.

One of the prominent feature film men put it into fewer words the other day when he remarked that some exhibitors cannot think more than ten cents at a time. Think it over.

Mr. Blanchard's Bookkeeping.

J. M. Blanchard, of the People's Theater, Sunbury, Pa., sends in a sample of his statement sheet. A single sheet carries all of the totals by days for the month and carries it in very comprehensive form. He says he can sell a year's supply for three dollars. We think that twenty-five cents a sheet is rather too large a cost, but we do believe that at a lower price than three dollars a dozen he could sell a lot, though he argues that it will cost a local house more than this to have the box type set and the ruling machine work. He might do a little more figuring. We have found stencils for the stencil seekers, photographs for those who wanted photographs. We will be glad to sponsor a good bookkeeping system.

By the way, did you ever stop to realize that it is through this department that you are able to get actual photographs of feature subjects if you want them? We inaugurated the agitation that led the Kraus Company and eventually the others to take up this scheme. If you do not see what you want, ask for it, but please don't ask for ten-cent "Quo Vadis" films.

A Seal Suggestion.

Mr. Philip P. Jacobs, who, by the way, is the assistant secretary and not secretary of the National Association, that one way of helping along the seal proposition is to have a Red Cross Seal day and stamp each ticket with one of the seals.

Bettering Mr. Chaney.

Even before the story of Mr. Chaney's door knob programs came out, D. L. Cornelius, of the Saenger Amusement Company's Princess Theater, Monroe, La., sends this letter:

> Am enclosing the second and third edition of a little publication that I have named "The Door-Knob Special" on account of it being intended for door knobs throughout the city.
>
> I print 1,000 of these each week, which almost covers the town, and every Saturday afternoon I get a bunch of small boys and we make every street and hang one on every house, being very careful not to miss any that we made the week before, and though it is pretty hard work to cover the town thoroughly I believe that my efforts are rewarded, as I find that they have caused favorable comment; a great many are looking for them and don't even give us a chance to hang them on the door, but come out and get them in person.
>
> Will appreciate your criticisms and suggestions.

The D. K. Special is one sheet of heavy card, 5½ by 8½ inches, with two or more lighter sheets all stapled together and provided with a string loop. The top sheet carries a greeting and the inner sheets various special announcements and a weekly program of the Lyceum and Princess theaters, the card working for two houses.

One card carries the offer of a free matinee admission if the other side of the card is filled out. The other side is self-explanatory—and a good idea, an extension of the lists of special interests spoken of before. In a small town with unlimited telephone service the scheme is doubly good. This is the card:

> FAVORITE PLAYERS' REQUEST CARD
>
> No doubt you have special favorites who appear in Photoplays shown at the Lyceum or Princess, and it will be a great pleasure for us to notify you in advance when they will appear, if you so desire; therefore, if you will fill out the blank below and write the names of your favorites, we will either phone or write you when they can be seen and the title of the picture in which they play.
>
> My name is..........
> My address is......................................Street
> My phone No. is....(If you have a phone be sure to give number)
>
> PLAYERS' NAMES
>
> ............................ ..............................
> ............................ ..............................
> ............................ ..............................

One thing we like is the care Mr. Cornelius takes to get the proper distribution. This is just as important as getting out a good card. Now that the blowy, snowy days are coming, the loop scheme is valuable. It is odd that two managers so far apart should have hit on the same idea about the same time.

---

Add Reading.

Add Reading, Pa., to the list of cities with photoplay departments in the local paper. The News has a Monday column conducted by Paul E. Glaze. From the same paper we note that Ben Zerr is importing a part of his program direct from Germany and showing it first at his house there. It's a wonder he wouldn't tell us something about it. He actually is getting the pictures, too.

Bad Business.

We note the advertising matter of a company that offers to supply exhibitors with one hundred books on how to write photoplays for five dollars the hundred and throw in an advertising slide free, suggesting that the exhibitor can easily sell the books for one dollar a copy. Possibly he can, but no exhibitor can get a dollar book for five cents that will look like a dollar's worth and in making the ninety-five cents' profit he may lose a customer worth more than the dollar when the patron finds out how badly he has been stung. An incompetent who starts to write pictures and finds he cannot will not thank the manager for leading him into trouble.

With Mrs. Fiske for Guest.

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske was the guest of the Lyric Theater, Minneapolis, while playing there in "The High Road," at a performance of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles." A handsome souvenir program was gotten out for her company and other invited guests that shows the usual good taste displayed by the Saxe Brothers, a folder of heavy cream paper printed in green on only two pages; merely the announcement and date and the cast of characters. The occasion was a unique one and fittingly marked.

Two for a Cent.

The Hippodrome, Lebanon, Pa., is giving two thousand feet of film for a cent, or ten for five cents. This sort of thing is foolish in the extreme. It is worse than foolish, it is wicked. The house uses a mixed program of Licensed and Mutual service and offers two two-reel subjects and four to six singles for each program. It is recent stuff, too. We do not know what the local conditions are or what opposition fight may be on, but we do know that when the fight is over all of the combatants will be dead—and the picture business, too, so far as the town is concerned, for a time, at least. This craze for long shows is regrettable in the extreme. Even where the reels are of recent issue instead of junk, the speed at which they are run is sufficient to kill off all interest. We know a place not a quarter of a mile from our office where we can see eight reels inside of an hour for five cents. Eight reels in sixty minutes; less than ten minutes to a reel! That is not management. It's murder. There should be some way of preventing a person from killing off another man's business even if he has no regard for his own.

De Suber's Catchlines.

H. De Subers has sent in some more catchlines, which will be good news to a lot of exhibitors. Here are some of them:

> One visit proves it.
> The best dime's worth.
> Friend-making films.
> The most of the best.
> No baits—just pictures.
> Every patron pleased.
> Always just what you like.
> Satisfying and gratifying.
> Pictures that back up our statements.
> No after regret goes with our pictures.
> Our success lies in your appreciation.
> Every dime a sure yielder of happiness.
> Pictures that make you come again.
> We build reputation by showing good pictures.
> Civil service is in vogue at the ———————— Theater. Their attachees are always polite.
> Those who believe they have no happiness in life are those who do not go to the————.
> There are a few folks in town who don't go to the————————. That's not our fault, but it is their loss.
> An ounce of "satisfaction" is worth a ton of talk. Satisfaction goes with every picture shown at the————————Theater.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by Epes Winthrop Sargent

Please Notice.

WILL readers of this department who are in possession of the literature of any school or who have been pupils of any school kindly send to this department the literature and their experience. If the latter, please supply name and address. This will not be used for publication, nor will it be given out in any way. We would particularly like to get hold of some of the alleged revisions made by these school concerns together with the original script of the same. It looks as though it was going to be hard sledding for the schools presently, and as most of the material we have accumulated has been passed over to other parties who can make better use of it for the time being, we want to build up our collection for the benefit of other competent inquirers. We will very greatly appreciate the co-operation of our readers in this matter.

The Inquest Club.

Miss Gene Gauntier and Phil Lang were the star witnesses at the last session of the Inquest Club, with Jack J. Clark as an added attraction.

Miss Gauntier gave a lot of useful advice to the beginner, telling of her sources of inspiration and giving a most interesting account of the writing of "From the Manger to the Cross," the most remarkable photoplay yet written and one that will long hold its supremacy.

Like all trained writers Miss Gauntier finds her inspiration in almost anything—books, paintings, the newspapers and the everyday things of life. She declares that there is a vast store of inspiration in every art gallery and food for thought in every magazine and book, nor did she forget to add that the inspiration did not lie in copying the story, but in getting the idea for another story from some single situation or character.

Mr. Lang spoke of the need for better two-reel scripts, citing, as we have done, the declaration of B. Nichols, that unless the American multiples run to stronger stories the European market will be lost.

The next session will be held at the Savoy Theater, November 24th.

Easy On One Reels.

It will be well to go easy on the one-reel stories for a time. Few studios are buying the one-part story, but all are eager for the multiple reel. Essanay is the latest to shut down on the one-reel story. The market will come back to the one-reel, but for the present the greater attention is given the multiple. This does not apply to comedies, but to the general run of drama.

Wants Optimism.

A Denver writer wants to know why we do not print some letters from the successful to offset the chronic kicker. We do, but the kicker merely decides that the writer of the letter is doing a little press work and remains a doubting Thomas to the end.

There are dozens of writers who are having fair success, who are plodding along toward the goal of fuller achievement, but they are too busy writing stories to write letters, and they are succeeding because they are not kickers.

There are few men outside of the studios who make a living writing photoplays and nothing else, and their wants are modest, but we know a lot of men and women who are making good money writing stories We know a man who has to ride nearly forty miles to mail a script and the time when he is not writing he is riding the ranch, yet his last letter says:

> Business continued fair during September; one to Essanay, one to Kalem and two to Selig. Prospects good for November with four, at least, being held for consideration.

Miss Cora Drew, who plugged away for two years without selling a single script, has started in to sell, slowly but regularly, and a young Westerner is getting rid of his comedies about as fast as he can write them. Editors are fairly begging for brisk comedies and no one is going to pass up a good two-reel story. The market is there, but really good scripts are scarce, because 998 out of every thousand writers get the idea that it is so easy to write stories that they do not have to half try.

Still At It.

Frank E. (Spec) Woods tells us that the Mutual Corporation is receiving letters by the score all in the form printed some weeks ago in this department and from all parts of the country, asking what the Mutual wants. Some time ago we sought through letters to some of the inquirers to locate the school advising this form letter, but we received not a single reply. If any reformed student knows what school it is that recommends this assinine stunt, we would appreciate the information. It damns the "pupil's" chances with every studio queried, and it should be stopped. The so-called graduates should at least be given a standing start.

Pricing Scripts.

A woman told us the other day that she no longer did business with a certain company because she always had to write and tell them that the check sent was not sufficiently large. The company always paid her an additional check, but they never took the hint, so she stopped sending there She is selling elsewhere and it is the company's loss—not, hers.

Some of these days they are going to find out that this is the reason why they get such poor scripts and then there will be a change in the editorial policy and a more liberal scale of prices will be adopted, just as has been the case with a lot of other studios. The matter is one that must adjust itself. It cannot be adjusted by the writers. The company must come to realize that they must pay for what they get or else merely get what they are willing to pay for.

Now that the great demand for two and three and four part stories has struck, coming almost overnight, the market is better than ever for those who really can write. There is no denying that the present output of two-reel stuff is deficient in plot and that this lack of story is killing the European market for American stuff. Every English sales agent is writing that there must be more story or no sales and the manufacturers are beginning to realize this. The first manufacturer to come out flat-footed and advertise that he will pay one hundred dollars a reel, in real money, for a subject with a part of the story in every foot, and who will keep his word, will get that sort of stuff if he looks to the photoplay author and not to the fiction writer, but he cannot be hurried to take this step. We must wait until the conviction come from within his own consciousness.

If we were doing two-reel dramas we would hold out our best until the prices get better. It's easy to string out a strong one-reel into a two-reel story, but to get a two-reel story in two thousand feet is quite another thing. The hardest thing to write is a half-reel comedy, unless you are used to it, but a story that is worth two thousand feet of film is worth more than the profit from one single print of the subject. We have mentioned Mrs. Breuil's sale of a two-reel to Pathe for $200 as being the top price that we know of for a regular release, but we know of a two-reel that brought only $35 the other day and a three-reel that went for $60.

We know some editors who do not "see" stories readily who let the best of the stuff get past them, and we know others who almost have heart disease when they are called upon to think more than $25 a reel, but there are a greater number of editors who see the conditions clearly and who are merely waiting for the head of the concern to wake up—and the alarm clock started to go off when the European sales began to fall.

It's ringing yet, and ringing hard.

"Something Easy."

Someone sends in a clipping from a middle Western paper that tells of the season's plans of a Greek letter fraternity in a woman's college. The paragraph states that some of the other chapters write stories while others edit college magazines, and continues:

> Since the members of the local Chapter are few, they have decided not to do anything so difficult as short story writing, but to try the scenarios for the rest of this term at least.

The members of the Chapter will find that it is just as difficult to write a good photoplay as to write a short story. The same command of good English is not required, but it is required that the author shall be perfect in the technique of the camera, the studio and photoplay form and able to invent original ideas and express these in novel and striking action, and if they can do that they will find that they are doing regular work.

This belief that photoplays are easy to write, requiring no application, is what floods the studios with impossible scripts and feeds the bank accounts of the fake schools. It costs the people of these United States hundreds of dollars every week to discover that the work is far from easy, and few, if any, are learning from the experience of others. There is just as much intelligence, just as much skill and more imagination required in the writing of an acceptable photoplay as in the preparation of a short story.

A Three Finger Script.

If you've written a script for a three fingered man (and we hope you have not) we can perhaps help you to connect with a man with the index and middle finger of his right hand missing—if that will fit your script. Mr. William Wright, of the Kalem Company, sends us this letter:

> I am sending you a drawing of my right hand, which has two fingers missing. Could you use me or my hand in any scenario? I have been a railroad brakeman for seven years and can be useful to you in a railroad scenario or maybe you can use my hand in some Sherlock Holmes plays or anything you may suggest, as the public is always looking for something new.

The Kalem Company courteously passes the idea along. We will supply the address to any company working in the vicinity of New York. We used to have a one-legged man who wanted to be an actor. Perhaps a script could use both of these starts, but we are afraid that the chance of selling a story written around a fingerless hand is too slight.

Meat.

There is so much in a letter from a Washington correspondent that we are printing it almost in full for the benefit of others.

> About a month ago when I visited New York and was in attendance at one of those enjoyable Inquest Club meetings, you made me promise that I would write you as to what I discovered in Washington, D. C., in the way of photoplaywrights, so here goes:
>
> As near as I can come to it, there are only three live ones; and by live ones I mean the sort who want to mingle, who want to find out what others are doing, who are willing to help and be helped by co-operation and who are willing to work for themselves and work HARD. We three, Bill, Fred and I, because of the scarcity of members, conduct our Inquest meetings a little different than we could if there more of us, but this doesn't mean that we don't want any more members; far from it, for there's always a glad hand waiting. After attending a picture theater, we knock and boost the films witnessed for a while, and then read each other's scripts with "malice intent." And oh, the faults we find and the mud we throw! Why, there isn't an eagle eye in the head of any editor who could possibly search out the reasons for rejection in such quantities as do we—when we read the other fellow's script. When our meeting adjourns and we wend our way sorrowfully to our respective beds away down deep in our hearts we feel a great sympathy for > editors in general, which lasts until we've turned out another masterpiece, one of those perfect scripts. But wait, just wait. On the next meeting night some one of those other guys is going to discover that you took a character, a principal, too, and worked him right into the heart of the action in one scene and then just because you didn't have any more use for him for the next few scenes you left him standing there; then when you did want him again you went and found him in an entirely different place, and it was a three-reeler, too! Lots of fun copying a revised three-reeler, I don't think. No use in saying "perhaps the editor wouldn't notice that." Oh, wouldn't he though! There's only one thing to do and if you are a true sport you'll do it—get busy and re-write it at once while the plot is still fresh in your mind. I know just how hard the blow felt, for I was the chap that got hit, but I do know that it was a lesson that I'll never forget, until I go and do the same thing over again. Here's hoping it won't be soon.

>
> Say, let's start a graveyard with some of those kickers. They seem to think that an editor is the personification of Dante's Inferno. I have had a script held up by one company since away last summer, and it's a summer story in two reels, too. But why should I worry when my noodle is so full of plots and things that I don't seem able to get rid of them fast enough. That's my worry—to find time enough to punch them into the keyboard of my Remington. And some there be who cry that an editor has no heart. 'Tain't so an' I can prove it. The editor who first discovered that I had a good idea in a story bought it and was there with the helping hand, for all my future stories, whether or not he bought them, for when he returned them (and he most always did), there was pretty apt to be a little note of suggestion or criticism that would make the story salable if heeded. And when I turned my hand to the photoplay I discovered an editor whose tactics were and are the same as my friend the magazine editor. Also, I have never lost a single story, article, verse or photoplay through fault of any editor. Uncle Sam lost an article for me once, but I had a carbon and the making of another copy didn't take me one-hundredth part of the time it does these kickers to get over their grouch.
>
> Also, why all this strong talk about having the author's name screened. I am in favor of it, yes, but I'm not making myself a pest to editors by requesting it every time they buy a script. When I can turn out stuff equally as good as Charles Van Loan, whose name at times adorns (and rightly, too) the cover of "The Saturday Evening Post," then, and not until then, shall I begin to worry. I think I'm getting my share of the checks and it's there I like to see my name.
>
> I took a run over to the Library of Congress last Sunday afternoon and looked over a bunch of the photoplay books and literature there. They have on file some of the stuff from the correspondence schools. Ugh! It's rotten. I counted 16 books listed on the art of photoplay writing, including yours and Leed's. Both your book and his have been missing since last June!
>
> Now, as to quantity. I mean to write two reels a week and get them onto the market. Sometimes I do and then again I fall down on my schedule, but I very seldom do more than two. I find that the class of stories that I write (mostly detective or along that line) demands a careful study of each detail. To make one's characters do a thing is easy, but to let them do it naturally and seemingly of their own accord, is another. And I find this especially true in working a detective story where logical movement is essential. Therefore, only two reels a week. I think it pays.
>
> Here's one of those unexplainable mysteries. Why is it that Bill, one of those quiet, thinking sort of chaps, who likes to sit and ponder over the heavy stuff, can sit down and punch out a rattling good comedy, farce or burlesque, while I, who habitually go about with a grin just ready to pop at the slightest provocation, who read Mutt and Jeff and the funny pages regularly, am listed by Fate to write drama—mysterious and tear-squeezing dramas? If any part of this letter is published, kindly refrain from mentioning my name. No press agent for me, thank you.

His lament that he must write drama while his serious friend does comedies is merely the exemplification of a natural law. The saddest stage comedian we ever knew was the funniest off the stage. Line him up in front of the bar and he would keep the crowd in a roar of laughter and then walk out on the stage with a doleful monologue that had been his offering for years. This correspondent wants to write comedy but he is better in serious stuff and so he keeps on writing serious stuff because that is what he does best, instead of insisting on writing what he wants to write. That's all a part of his willingness to wait for screen credit and his unwillingness to be credited here. His attitude is much the same as that of a more advanced writer who recently said that it didn't help any to roast the editors, or try to praise them, either.

Not Miss Justice.

The other week we spoke of a writer who had ambitions toward a purple velvet dress in her childhood days, but who had gratified another ambition by selling scripts. Miss Maibelle Heikes Justice writes that many of her friends have declared her to be the writer. It is not Miss Justice, but another and wholly different person, and in a more recent letter she writes that she has sold other scripts to Selig since she first wrote this department. She adds:

> I was overcome with bashfulness when I read my letter in the World, but other people's experiences had been helpful to me and probably mine will help someone else to keep "pegging away." That and horse sense is what it takes.

That is the whole prescription, only it is part of the horse sense to keep pegging away. There are some potentially good writers who throw away their careers because they want to sell the first few scripts and grow discouraged when they do not.

These little experiences do help. The other day we told of a housewife who had sold a number of stories in spite of domestic duties well performed, and it helped keep another busy housewife on the track and running in the right direction.

Another.

"Here's $150 a month.

"Increase your present income this amount and get somewhere."

That is the heading of a double column advertisement that is being run in many papers on the Pacific slope. Without qualification the advertisement states that "We make you succeed," as they do the technical work.

In other words, you can get $150 a month for supplying ideas to a technical expert.

There is not a writer in the country supplying ideas alone who makes that much, and with ideas being paid for at the rate of from $3 to $15 each, we fail to see where anyone can make even a third of one hundred and fifty dollars.

We hope that some of those who reply to this advertisement and get bitten will place the matter in the hands of the Post Office Inspectors. The entire advertisement is specious and misleading and many of the statements are absolutely untrue.

A somewhat similar scheme is being run in the suburbs of Brooklyn by a man well known as an author. It is the newest development of the correspondence school idea, but no more safe from the prying eyes of the postal authorities.

We will be glad to have the literature of either concern.

Railroad Stations.

It's out of fashion nowadays to take the company down to a railroad station and wait half an hour or an hour for a train to come along. The directer takes the crowd down and makes the picture in back of the station with the railroad atmosphere, but with no train in sight; the suggestion being that the train is on the other side of the station building and that these people have just come from that train. Generally it is just as effective and in the aggregate it saves forty-seven years and three months of the individual players' time each month. Do not write:

7—Railroad station—train comes in—Bess alights—greets father.

That was all right six months ago, but now you write it:

7—Rear of station—passengers coming from train—Bess enters with father—enters auto—off.

Inquiries.

NOTE—No inquiries can be replied to by mail. Look for your answer here. No question can be replied to that necessitates the handling of the manuscript. Always give your name and address. It will not be published. A list of addresses, to which photoplays should be sent, will be supplied on receipt of a STAMPED AND SELF ADDRESSED ENVELOPE. The request should be made to the paper direct and not to this department, nor to the Answers Man.

W. A. M.—Jack Smith, or Jack Pickford (he is Mary Pickford's brother), is seen now and then in films, but not as frequently as of old. We imagine he is at the awkward age.

G. E. M.—Roscoe Arbuckle, now with Keystone, is the player you ask for.

E. R. W.—The company has gone out of business. It never was really in it. All companies are buying multiple reels. Companies want plays in photoplay form. The "average price" is somewhere between $5 and $50 a reel.

R. B.—We do not place that first player. Miss Carmen Sobranes was the girl in "The Lesson."

RUBEENA.—The Answers Man did not laugh at your letter because he understands. Hard work always brings success in the long run. In "Daddy's Soldier Boy" the captain's wife was Mrs. Harris and the colonel's wife was Mrs. Fortune. Charles Clary is the Selig Tobias. Crane Wilbur is still with Pathe.

MRS. J. R.—Don't believe all you hear. No chance of a revival.

PAR.—Better try and get the story back and send no more there.

E. F. R.—There are three riding camels in Los Angeles that any company can hire and we believe that Selig has others. But don't write this special stuff except on order.

M. J.—Vitagraph is very careful about scripts and if they have no record it was not received. Copy the carbon and try them again.

X. Y. Z.—Sign your name and address when you ask questions, please.

J. J. P.—Vitagraph came east last summer. Send for a list of addresses every three months and keep posted. See note at the head of this column. It is probable that the scripts were sent east after the company.

F. A. W.—Don't blame all poor films on the staff writers. The scripts are generally good. The butchery is done by the producer and in the cutting room, as a rule. You cannot cut 500 feet of film out of a story and acceptably replace the amputation with twenty words of leader.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

☞ Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue - New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Operators Union Directory, I. A. T. S. E.

EACH union is entitled to have its roster of officers, meeting nights, etc., listed here once per year, free of cost. Preserve this list as it will not be republished. The mail address of the secretary should be included, and the address of regular meeting place, if any.

Local No. 546, Akron, Ohio.

Charles Sams, president; Henry Ross, vice-president; William Shaw, financial secretary and treasurer; Henry Hamm, recording secretary, P. O. Box 58, Akron, Ohio; R. A. White, business agent.

Question No. 8.

Best answer will be published and names of others sending in replies of excellence will be published in the "Roll of Honor."

Suppose your employer purchased a motor-generator set, and instructed you to go ahead and install it. Tell us in detail where you would locate it and the various devices appertaining thereto, explaining in detail your reasons for the selection of each location.

Now do not imagine this is quite as simple a question as it appears to be, because there are some very important matters involved. I wish to again impress upon the operators the fact that the use of theater power plants, and the rectifying of current by means of motor generator sets is becoming more common every day, and will become still more common in the future therefore you do not know what minute you may be called upon to apply the knowledge you must possess in order to answer these questions, and it is very much up to you to acquire it if you are not already posted.

The Chicago union idea, which advocates the suppression of knowledge will, before very long, be in disrepute, both among managers and operators. Knowledge is the thing, and the only thing, that is going to boost you permanently into the high salary class of the future, where, more and more, real ability will count. Therefore, it is up to you, and very much up to you, to study these questions, and study them deeply, whether you see fit to send in answers or not. Organizations can take advantage of this series, and I will be more than glad to co-operate with any union, to the end that these questions be made of the greatest value to their numbers. Unions may increase wages and better conditions simply by main strength, true, but to make their success permanent the members must be in position to "deliver the goods," and that is only possible through study and improvement. Good salaries and high-class work go hand in hand.

Roll of Honor for Question No. 2.

The Roll of Honor is somewhat limited this week; evidently the question was a poser. However, Mr. L. C. La Graw, Albany, New York; Mr. John Stone, Albany, New York, and Mr. A. C. Stewart, Rossland, B. C., Canada, are entitled to be enrolled, as well as an operator in Texas, whose reply is very excellent indeed, but whose name must, for certain reasons, be suppressed.

Is it possible that out of probably 30,000 operators less than half a dozen have sufficient knowledge to give a really intelligent answer to a question of this kind? Well, it simply goes to prove that my position is correct. The names above given were all that were sifted out after five hours spent in reading replies to this question.

Emmett E. Mickey, of Fostoria, Ohio, Again Reaps Honors.

I would recommend to all operators that they study Mr. Mickey's reply to Question No. 2. Taking everything into consideration, it is a very excellent and understandable explanation of dynamic action. Good-natured criticism or discussion of the published replies will be of value, therefore, will be welcomed.

The Question:

How and by what means is electric energy generated in a dynamo?

The Answer:

> Electric energy is generated in a dynamo by the phenomenon known as induction. By rapidly cutting "lines of magnetic force" an electro-motive force is generated which, in turn, produces a current when acting in a closed circuit. If we move a magnet rapidly in a coil of wire a current of electricity is induced, or, if the wire be moved over the magnet a current is induced. The strength of this current is dependent upon the rapidity of the movement and the direction, upon the direction of the movement. This is the principle by which electric energy is generated in a "Dynamo."
>
> The pole pieces of a dynamo, upon which are wound a number of turns of wire, become a magnet when a current of electricity is caused to follow along the wire. The magnetism produced by the current flowing over the field magnets consists of "lines of force" because they tend to flow in certain lines. The number of these lines of force depend upon the amount of current flowing around the field magnets, or the number of ampere turns of wire on the pole pieces; also the diameter, length and quality of the iron core of the field magnets, for magnetism, like currents of electricity, tends to flow along the path of least resistance, therefore, if the reluctance or magnetic resistance of the pole pieces is low the flow will be great, whereas if the reluctance is high the flow will be small, proportional to the number of ampere turns. Lines of force can also be shunted.
>
> "Ampere turns" is a term to indicate the magnetizing force. They are equal to the number of turns of wire on the pole pieces, multiplied by the current in amperes, flowing over same. Thus, one ampere flowing over ten turns of wire is ten ampere turns; also two amperes flowing over five turns of wire is ten ampere turns, because two amperes flowing over five turns of wire would produce the same flux density as one ampere flowing over ten turns of wire.
>
> The flux is equal to the total magnetizing force or magnemotive force, divided by the reluctance or resistance of the pole pieces.
>
> When the armature of a dynamo (which consists of a number of coils of wire that terminate at different points on the commutator) begins to revolve between the pole pieces, it is turning in a magnetic field of force, and as it cuts through these lines of force at an angle to them, and e.m.f. is generated, the strength of which depends upon the number of lines of force cut per second.
>
> We can, therefore, increase the e.m.f. by increasing the ampere turns, thus increasing the number of lines of force, or by increasing the amount of wire on the armature, or by increasing the speed of the armature, which would increase the number of wires cutting through lines of force per second. The direction of these lines of force, also the polarity of the field magnets depends upon the direction the current flows around the pole pieces, while the density of these lines of force depends upon the number of ampere turns—By their density I mean the number of lines per unit area (square inch, Ed.) of cross section. These lines of force leave the North pole of the field magnets, pass through the air gap and enter at the South pole. While air will insulate currents of electricity it is a conductor of magnetism, although it could not be transmitted very far on account of leakage. There is no known insulator of magnetism.
>
> As the armature revolves, passing from the influence of a North pole into that of a South pole, the current in the armature reverses its direction, so that the current is alternating in the armature of all generators, but the brushes are so set on the commutator that they change the connection as the wires of the armature pass from the influence of one pole to that of another, and thus the current is kept constant in the line. In an alternating current dynamo the current is collected from collector rings just as it is generated in the armature.
>
> Again referring to the field magnets. As the current is increased in the field magnets, thus increasing the ampere turns and the number of lines of force per square inch, the fields create a counter electro-motive force through self induction, which opposes the increasing e.m.f. That is why it is sluggish in reaching its maximum value. If it were not for this counter electro-motive force the change would be instant. There is, however, a point where no noticeable increase in magnetism is obtained by increasing current flow around the field magnets. This is called the "point of saturation," for as we increase the ampere turns, the permeability, or magnetic conductivity of the iron cores of the field magnets decreases, and when the point is reached by the increase in current flow, the iron is said to have become saturated, but all dynamos are so designed that they will not become saturated. If designed right the degree of saturation will be such that the e.m.f. is no longer equal to the ampere turns, for as the current is increased around the field magnets the per cent. of increase in flux density is decreased. If a dynamo is running too far below the point of saturation, the voltage will be very unsteady. After the pole pieces have once become magnetized, they will retain some of their magnetism, proportional to their retentiveness, which is called "Residual Magnetism," and it is this which starts the generation of current when starting up the machine. It may be very weak, but will nevertheless build up the field.

Brother Mickey has failed to say that this residual magnetism is not present in certain types of dynamo, and that with them the fields must be "excited" by a separate, small generator.

New Repair Department.

The Peerless Film and Supply Company, Indianapolis, Ind., have secured the services of Mr. Ralph E. Bishop, who was for many years connected with the General Film Company of that city. Mr. Bishop will have charge of the supply department of the Peerless, and it is the intention to immediately install a thoroughly up-to-date repair shop, which will no doubt be appreciated by the exhibitors in that vicinity. Mr. Bishop has the good wishes of this department in his new field of endeavor.

A Rather Foolish Examination Question.

From Brooklyn, New York, comes the following:

> I took the examination for operator's license not long ago, and one of the questions was: "What would you do in case of fire?" My answer was that if the fire be at the aperture plate I would snuff it out, or blow it out, before it could gain headway. If the fire was in the magazine I would keep the same shut tight and notify the manager. I later learned that this reply did not meet with the approval of the examiners. Now, I have had practical experience under an A1 operator; also I have studied your books and the department, and find nothing in the same pretaining to this subject.

No, you do not find anything on that subject, because such a question as this is, with all due respect to the honorable examiners, rather a foolish one. It is a good deal like asking a locomotive engineer what he would do in case his engine got off the track. He might give you any one of a hundred answers, but, as a matter of fact, what he would do would depend absolutely, entirely and altogether upon circumstances. The writer has himself, on several occasions, had the film catch fire at the gate, and he has always done exactly what you said you would do, viz.: Blew it out. When the fire first catches, a sharp blow will extinguish it, not sometimes but always, but the operator must be right there on the job, which is right where he should be, for that matter. Ordinarily I would not tell you what the examiner expected you to reply, but, inasmuch as I consider this question to be, for several reasons a rather foolish one, I will say that he probably expected you to answer: Drop the shutters and instantly carry the film storage box outside. I suppose that is what the examiner expected, because I, myself, could not evolve an answer that would fit all circumstances any better, but the truth of the matter is the operator ought not to have to touch the shutters at all, since they should drop automatically within two seconds of the starting of a fire, and they would do that if they were properly installed. The editor of this department has no desire whatever to hamper the work of examiners; in fact, he would much prefer to help them in any possible way, but he is not in sympathy with the turning down of men through failure to answer a question which, when all is said and done, cannot be correctly answered, except that the circumstances of each individual case be known. The most comprehensive answer and what would really be the best answer, everything considered, would, I think, be as follows: "I would see that the shutters dropped instantly, and that the vent-flue, if one there be, was open, and would then do everything possible to prevent alarming the audience, or, if a panic started, to quell it; also to save the other reels in the operating room from being ignited."

Now, this doesn't mean that a lot of you should start writing asking me the answers to other examination questions. If you do you will not get them.

Foolishness or Worse.

From time to time there comes a report from various sections of the country of the enactment of foolish legislation. Massachusetts furnishes the last example of ill-considered, ill-advised and rather silly law making. The particular example which I shall now lay before you was enacted something like two years ago, but although during all the time which has elapsed since then it is a perfectly good law, which the officials of the State and cities took a solemn oath to uphold, it has only quite recently been put into action, or, in other words, "enforced."

What the law really means is that there shall be a five-minute intermission, with a lighted house, after every twenty minutes of projection.

This law was brought into being by the report of a committee of eye specialists, who were appointed to investigate the matter of supposed injury to eye sight. To give the district police, whose duty it is to enforce the law, due credit, they seem inclined to regard it as being unnecessarily arbitrary and stringent. In fact, I am informed they would be glad to see it modified. As for the public, they find it exceedingly annoying to say the least; but after all it is the exhibitor who "gets it in the neck"—as usual.

The law requires a five-minute intermission every twenty minutes. Now, if you live up to that and run a reel of pictures in eighteen minutes you would either have to have a wait of three minutes and then a wait of five minutes, making a total of eight minutes, or else you would be compelled to run the next reel for three minutes and then close down. How absurd! The law allows the five minutes to be used for illustrated songs, or any other form of entertainment, but that does not work out worth a cent, especially when one is running, for instance, a two or three-reel special. In this case the continuity of the performance is absolutely interrupted. Imagine stopping "Quo Vadis?" at the end of twenty minutes and regaling the audience with five minutes of illustrated songs, or letting them enjoy that time in gazing at the surrounding walls, or amuse themselves with the efforts of the ordinary cheap vaudeville "artist."

As I said, the exhibitor is the one who suffers most, but he is not himself altogether blameless. Not so very long ago I was up in Springfield, Mass., and put in one whole afternoon visiting shows. For the most part I found the projection machinery to be of an antiquated type, which produced unnecessarily excessive flicker, and excessive flicker is precisely the reason for this particular piece of legislation. There is no doubt but that the eye strain caused by the flicker is to some extent injurious, and it therefore behooves the exhibitor to study the subject and keep up-to-date in his projection machinery, in order to eliminate flicker so far as possible. With the right kind of a screen, a reasonably long throw, or small picture, and a modern up-to-date projection machine having a three-wing shutter with all blades approximately the same width, there is no appreciable flicker in an ordinary picture, and very little in the lightest film made.

But in any event the lawmakers would have shown more sense and real knowledge of the subject with which they were endeavoring to deal had they, instead of enacting such a piece of idiocy as the foregoing into law, formulated an ordinance requiring the installation of modern projection machinery, or one or two other things which would largely reduce the flicker with the old style machines. I am not going to tell these lawmakers what the other two things are, because they might take action on it, and this is unnecessary, since the same purpose is served by the installation of a shutter of the type I have named, though such a shutter cannot be used with an objective lens of less than 4½ e.f. without excessive travel ghost.

As a matter of fact lawmakers are not, as a rule, sincere in wishing to secure full information before formulating legislation. For a long time past the fire commissioner of New York has been making more or less of a sputter about fire danger in moving picture theaters. In order to test the altruism of this estimable gentleman, Mr. Johnson by name, I wrote him a letter on the stationery of the Moving Picture World, on which my name appears as editor of the Projection Department, telling him that the prevention of panic in a moving picture theater was, at least in most of them, a childishly simple proposition. In this letter I informed Fire Commissioner Johnson that I, for one, was just the least bit weary of hearing all this howl about the danger of panic, when theater after theater is being built in which this could be prevented absolutely at very little expense, and I offered to tell him, and show him how it could be done. The Honorable Commissioner did not even take interest enough in the matter to reply to the letter; therefore, I feel justified in saying that his howl about fire danger and panic is nothing but a grand-stand play. If he was sincere he certainly would have spent a two-cent stamp to find out whether or not I really had anything of value to offer. He did not do it. Therefore, I repeat, his excitement about panic danger and fire should be taken with a couple of barrels of salt. When Mr. Johnson wants to know how to prevent fire panic in a moving picture theater badly enough to ask the question I will tell him, and what is more I will deposit the sum of $100 as a forfeit if I cannot equip a properly constructed operating room so that Mr. Johnson, or anyone else, can start a fire at either machine or the film box, and allow it to burn up as much film as they wish—one reel or a dozen—without the audience knowing anything at all about it, and the whole thing will be absolutely automatic in its operation. If the forfeit of a $100 is not sufficient for the Honorable Commissioner to bother with, why I will increase it to $200 or even $500, because I know what I can do, and the necessary equipment won't cost any large sum either. This is not hot air. I will do exactly as I say. Now, if the Fire Commissioner is not playing to the grand-stand let us hear from him.

Rectifier Question.

Mr. L. B. Minges, Lestershire, New York, sends in the following communication and interesting query. He writes:

> Enclosed find sketch of a choke coil connected in the positive circuit of a mercury arc rectifier. The operating room was first wired to use a.c. Later a mercury arc rectifier was installed and the wires from rectifier connected with the switchboard in such a way that the choke coil which had been in use on the a.c. is still in circuit between the rectifier and the lamp. I would like to have you answer the following questions in the Department. The wire in the choke coil measures .128 of an inch in diameter and 128 x 128 = 16384 circular mills area. It was, therefore, probably meant for No. 8 wire. And now the questions: (a) Does the coil connected with the rectifier injure the rectifier in any way? (b) Will the coil connected in circuit change the amperage or voltage at the arc? (c) No. 8 wire has about .025 ohms resistance per pound. About how many pounds of the wire would be in the coil?

Not being entirely certain of my ground, I referred this matter to the General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y. Their answers to the questions are as follows:

> (a) Provided the resistance of the coil is not too great there will be no damage done by leaving it connected in series. (b) Do not know how much resistance the coil has, but any amount will tend to lower the voltage, and the greater the resistance of the coil, the more the voltage will be lowered and the more loss there will be in the coil, meaning that the combination of rectifier and coil will not be as efficient, or, in other words, will be more inefficient than the rectifier would be without the coil. (c) As we haven't the dimensions of the coil or the number of feet of wire it is impossible for us to tell how many pounds of wire are in the coil. It is, however, a very simple matter to estimate this by counting the number of turns and estimating or measuring the length of one of the turns and multiplying this by the total number of turns, and dividing by the number of feet per pound.

As to this whole matter I do not quite see the point. The only reason there could possibly be for the use of a choke coil in series with a mercury arc rectifier would be where a rectifier was used which was built for a lower voltage than that of the line to which it was connected. If the rectifier is a 110-volt machine working on 110 volts, or a 220-volt machine working on 220 volts then there is no reason whatever for connecting the choke coil in series. I am not positive, but it seems to me that the effect would be to compel the making of the internal connection of the restifier such as to deliver its maximum amperage, where without the coil this might not be necessary; and even then the rectifier might not deliver sufficient current to the arc, since the effect of the coil is to lower the voltage and cause the rectifier to work on a lower voltage than it is designed for. I presume Brother Minges simply propounded this question to settle an argument he has had with some one who is using a plant connected up in this way.

To the Massachusetts Lawmakers.

The Massachusetts solons have, as set forth in another article, passed a law compelling a lighted house five minutes out of every twenty minutes. This is done on the assumption that the eye strain of continuous moving pictures in injurious.

I would like to ask them this question: If the eye strain is so very injurious why is it that motion picture operators who have been operating eight hours a day continuously from four to five years have suffered no appreciable ill effect?

Kindly answer me this question, ye wise men of Massachusetts, the baked-bean town of which is supposed to be the seat of all learning

A New Projector.

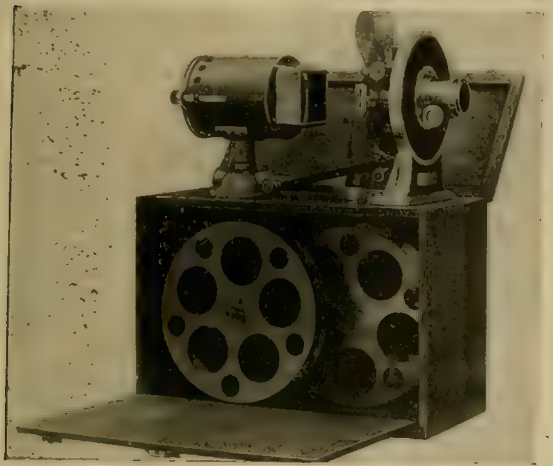
Last week the editor was asked to examine, and pass upon the merits of a projection machine which is, in its complete form, the property of the Knickerbocker Film Company, of which Messrs. J. L. & R. W. Davis are the moving spirits.

The machine is not designed for theatrical use, nor would it be practical for that sort of work, but for a home projector, and for the purpose the Knickerbocker Film Company proposes to primarily apply it to, it seems to be excellent. The construction is shown in the picture, as is also the action of the film. When closed the mechanism goes down inside the oak case, from which the reels are first removed. The case when packed contains the entire mechanism, including the lamp-house, rheostat and the sheet. It is then about the size of, and no heavier than, an ordinary suit case.



The head of the mechanism is of aluminum, hence very light. The shutter, fly-wheel and actuating cam of the intermittent are in one piece. The movement is an adaptation of the star and cam, and a very ingenious adaptation. It is strong, rugged and fairly accurate, though a little bit noisy. In action the film is taken off the outside reel (in the picture), passes up and then down through the mechanism on to the inner reel, which is the take-up reel. The machine projects a very good picture, from four to six feet in width, using something like three amperes of current. The plug is simply attached to any ordinary incandescent lamp socket.

The primary idea for its use is to demonstrate commercial propositions. For instance: A road grader manufacturer has moving pictures taken showing his machines at work grading roads. He then supplies his salesmen with one of these little projectors and is in position to show the authorities the machine in actual operation by means of moving pictures. He can do this in any room which has electric lights, and can prepare for the demonstration in less than five minutes. It seems to me this little machine is ideal for such purposes, and it certainly looks as though it has an enormous field.

As a home projector the machine is compact and perfectly safe from every point of view. The film can be stopped at any point and left standing with the full light on indefinitely, thus making possible a stereopticon view out of every one of the pictures in the film. The film is standard size.

From China.

The Arcade Amusement Company, Tientsin, China, writes:

> Since writing you August 1st, the mercury arc rectifier failed entirely, but two days thereafter we received from Mr. Hallberg the new starting magnet coil and replaced the old mercury bulb with the new one. The machine now works very satisfactorily. The tube rocks automatically as soon as the carbons are brought together. About this time we also received the notes you forwarded us from the General Electric Company, and these were very useful in putting the machine right. Please accept our thanks. As I said in my last, I am yet obliged to use a 110-volt, 25-ampere Pathe resistance between the arc and the rectifier in order to keep the current at the arc under 30 amperes, although the light company's engineer tells us that the rectifier is connected for its lowest output. I think there is still something wrong with it, as the first tube lasted barely eighty days, working about three hours a day. Do you think the short life of the tube was due to the resistance between the arc and rectifier? From table 2, page 33 of the handbook, I am able to find the current consumption of carbon filament lamps, but how am I to find the current consumption of Osrams and other metallic filament lamps? Is the ratio between wattage and amperage of lamps constant, or is it varying? What I want to know is, if a carbon lamp of 16-c.p. 110-volt, 56 watts will consume .51 of an ampere, will the consumption of an Osram marked 55 watts be the same as the 16-c.p. carbon lamp? Could you inform me as to where I can obtain a table similar to number 2, page 33 of the handbook, showing the consumption of Osrams and other metallic filament lamps?

In the first place, compare the wiring of your rectifier with the detail photograph on page 177 of the handbook. See to it that lead 6 is connected as per 11, page 181. Also observe the third and fourth paragraphs on page 178 and be sure that lead 32 is connected to stud 13, which will give you the lowest amperage. I think I cannot better reply to your question concerning the lamps than by quoting from a pamphlet entitled, "National Index to the Proper Lighting of Homes." The Mazda is a metallic filament lamp, which I am informed closely approximates the Osram of which you speak:

> Old-fashioned carbon filament lamps are generally purchased according to their candle-power. This is not an exact method of buying, because the lamps give their rated candle-power only when they are new. As they age, they will give less and less light, and the amount of electricity they use per candle-power actually increases. National Mazda metallic filament lamps are rated by the amount of electricity they consume in watts. This varies but slightly during the life of the lamp and is sufficiently accurate to form a basis for naming National Mazda lamps according to the number of watts of electricity they consume. The following table shows the relation between watts and candle-power for all National Mazda lamps ordinarily used in homes; also the number of watts that would be used in carbon lamps to produce the same amount of light.

| Type | Approximate Candle-power | Size of National Mazda Lamp, Watts | No. of Watts that would be used by Carbon Lamp to give same amount of light | Diameter National Mazda Bulb, Inches |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Regular | ..........11.5 | 15 | 35 65 | 2⅛ |
| Regular | ..........16. | 20 | 49.6 | 2⅛ |
| Regular | ..........21.4 | 25 | 66 34 | 2⅜ |
| Regular | ..........34.2 | 40 | 106.02 | 2⅝ |
| Regular | ..........53.6 | 60 | 166.16 | 3 1/16 |
| Regular | ..........92.6 | 100 | 287.06 | 3¾ |
| Round Bulb | .......11.5 | 15 | 35.65 | 2 5/16 |
| Round Bulb | .......21.4 | 25 | 66.34 | 3⅛ |
| Round Bulb | .......34 2 | 40 | 106.02 | 3⅛ |
| Round Bulb | .......53.6 | 60 | 166.16 | 3¾ |
| Tubular | ..........21.4 | 25 | 66.34 | 1¼ |

From this table it will be noted that National Mazda lamps use about 1.2 watts per candle-power, while carbon lamps use about 3.1 watts per candle-power.

Information Wanted.

Ohio submits the following, asking for a personal raply. Personal replies are only sent where a fee of $1.00 is enclosed, otherwise I would be swamped with that kind of requests. He says:

> I have always been ashamed to ask an operator this question face to face. I ran a Simplex in Chicago, with a two-wing shutter and d.c., and had the best picture on the south side, as conceded by both the manager, and the business agent of Operators' Union No. 2. An operator whom I know has a Power's Six and d.c. with a three-wing shutter, and had a trace of flicker. Now here is the question: Is there any difference in the two and three-wings with regard to the kind of current used? I am ashamed to thus expose my ignorance on this subject, but I have heard that with a.c. the three-wing shutter should not be used. I am a member of No. 2, I. A. T. S. E., Chicago.

The difference in effect you mention might have been caused by several things. The Power's Six man might have been using a more brilliant illumination or a semi-reflecting type of screen, as against your having a non-reflective type. Given the same conditions the two-wing shutter will produce much more flicker than the three-wing, not sometimes, but always, unless the three-wing shutter be a very badly proportioned one indeed. The three-wing shutter is, however, likely to get in synchronism with the alternations of 60 cycle current, if the speed of the machine be a little bit high, thus producing a flashing effect of the light—not a flicker, but a flashing or waving effect. The light will be bright and die down and suddenly flash up again.

Ye Editor No Longer with Power.

For almost four years the editor of this department has been inspecting finished machines for the Nicholas Power Company. Every working day from 2 p. m. to 4:30 he has inspected and passed upon the output of the factory, examining all mechanisms, adjusting them and testing them with a film. In that time he has projected the first film (a short one, of course) through about 12,500 machines.

The output of the factory is, however, increased to such an extent that it is necessary to enlarge the scope of inspection and have a man there all the time which was, of course, an impossible proposition for the writer. Therefore, with the best of feelings all around, the connection was severed Saturday, November 1.

I feel that the alliance with the Power Company was not the best thing anyhow. The time can be employed to as good or better financial advantage, and there was always the idea among other machine manufacturers that the editor was favoring the Power Company unduly by reason of his affiliation with them. The severance of the connection removes this suspicion, and I feel that it is, therefore, better that things are as they are.

My long connection with the Nicholas Power Company was very pleasant. From Mr. Power and Mr. Earle down to the machinists, the editor felt that he was dealing with friends and that friendship will, I am sure, continue. The Nicholas Power Company is now turning out more than one hundred machines a week. They have again enlarged their factory, and from present indications will have to enlarge it still again before very long. Square dealing has been the motto of the company and they are now reaping their reward.

Charging Batteries.

Appleton, Wisconsin, writes at some length commenting on our statement that Lyman Howe had trouble in securing first-class operators. He says it has been his desire for some time to get on the Lyman Howe force, but that he has failed to get a try-out, and wants to know the why and wherefore. He then continues:

> As to charging a storage battery, mentioned in October 11th or 18th issue, the voltage of the charging current does not make much difference, so long as it is not lower than the voltage of the battery when fully charged. The amperage, however, must not be more than the plates can stand. I have charged storage cells from a 20 light constant a.c. generator of 9.6 ampere capacity, with the 20 lamps in series with the battery. This would give you between 1,000 and 1,100 volts and 9.6 amperes. The same battery was a 6-volt, 60 ampere battery. The ideal way to charge storage batteries would be to have a generator of just the proper voltage and amperage, but as this is not always to be had, we have to put in a regulating device to control the amperes. The size, of course, depends upon the voltage of the supply current and the size and capacity of the battery to be charged. I take great interest in the department, and believe you are trying, at all times, to do what is best for the boys. Let the good work go on.

In the first place, Wisconsin, I think you would get a try-out quickly enough if you were willing to stand your own expenses in going to Wilkesbarre, Pa., but is costs a good deal to take a man there from your town, who may or may not prove to be competent after he arrives. I have sent your letter to Mr. Walkenshaw, business manager, for Mr. Howe, with the suggestion that your case might be worthy of investigation. As to the storage battery proposition it seems to me that what you say amounts to exactly what I said and that I am, after all, right. I stated that you could not charge a storage battery without resistance between the battery and the line, assuming, of course, that the line was an ordinary power plant line, in which the dynamo capacity was large and the voltage 110. You say that the voltage does not make any difference if the generator capacity is just the capacity of the battery, but otherwise you must have resistance to control the amperage. Well, doesn't that mean that you must have resistance to cut down the voltage? I do not pretend to be very well posted on storage batteries, but I will gamble a brass suspender button against a lady's powder puff that if you connect a storage battery directly to a 110-volt power plant line that battery would not be worth two hurrahs in the new Jerusalem inside of a very short time. If I am wrong, I am willing to be corrected, but I do not believe I am wrong. I don't understand what you mean by "giving 1,000 to 1,100 volts." Explain yourself, please.

That New Power's Plate.

The editor's mail is being congested with inquiries cencerning a new plate which the Power's Company is attaching to its number six machines. This plate informs all and sundry that only individual repair parts manufactured by the above company may be used on the machine. The sense of most of the inquiries is: (a) What is it all about? (b) Can they make it stick?

Replying to the second inquiry first, I will say that the Power's Company can undoubtedly make it "stick." The plate is attached to the machine when it is purchased, therefore, the purchaser is assumed to know that he is purchasing the machine with a restriction as to the use of parts and to agree to it. It is the same as selling a piece of real estate with the restriction that you cannot operate a saloon on it, or you cannot build a house costing less than a certain sum. The court would, I am quite sure, hold that the Power's Company is well within its rights in making this restriction. Replying to (a), I will say that the Power's Company is perfectly right in making this restriction for the following reasons: A machine manufacturer spends thousands upon thousands of dollars in perfecting a mechanism, and equipping a factory for its manufacture. The income upon all this expenditure depends, to a very large extent, upon the reputation the machine itself makes for the projection of a steady, flickerless, and otherwise perfect picture. By and by, however, some of the parts wear out, and instead of installing new ones received from a factory, which are guaranteed by the company to be mechanically perfect, the manager, perhaps, in an endeavor to "save" a few pennies, buys a cheap imitation from some small irresponsible manufacturer who cares nothing whatever as to the operation of the mechanism to which the parts are to be attached, as a whole. He is only interested in selling parts, not in producing a machine which will deliver good results on the screen. Now, when these parts are installed, as likely as not, they do not fit perfectly, and cause the whole machine to act badly and deliver poor results on the screen. Does the manufacturer of these parts get blamed? No! as a rule he does not, but the machine as a whole is pronounced guilty, and the penurious manager goes around telling others that he has a Power's machine, and that, while it used to deliver good results, now, after it has become old, it is rotten. He does not stop to think that the "rottenness" began with the installation of the cheap parts he bought. The editor of this department is heartily in accord with this method, and hopes that it will be made effective.

Carelessness.

Logansport, Indiana, writes thusly:

> Am using a Motiograph projecting an excellent 9-foot picture at 65 feet, with a 6-inch e.f. objective and a 7½-6½ condenser combination, the latter next to the arc. The current is 110-volt a.c. through a Fort Wayne compensarc. With the latter on 40-ampere contact I get a better light than an operator at another house who uses a greater number of amperes d.c. This, however, must be due as much to his carelessness as to my skill for, though I have never used d.c. myself, I understand it to be far superior for projection purposes. Have not broken a condenser lens in four years. I believe that keeping my lamp-house perfectly clean accounts for this, at least in part, as I know of another operator having precisely the same equipment as I, who suffers his lamp-house to become so dirty and clogged up that it has about as much ventilation as the interior of an incandescent lamp. He runs with his lamp-house door partly open to keep from breaking a condensing lens every five minutes, which is as long as a lens lasts with the door closed and the arc burning. As this man has "had eight years' experience," etc., I hesitate to suggest that he clean his vent holes, myself only having been four years at the crank. To settle a dispute: Can two Fort Wayne compensarcs be wired in multiple and their combined amperage delivery be used on one arc? I say they can, but am not equipped to prove it, therefore, ask your opinion.

Yes, you can wire two compensarcs in multiple and use their combined current on one arc. The wiring would be perfectly simple and practically the same as the wiring of two rheostats in multiple. You are perfectly correct in keeping your lamp-house scrupulously clean, and the other fellow is worse than wrong in failing to do so. If you are getting a better light with a.c. than another man is with a higher amperage of d.c., it is greatly to your credit and the other party ought to be ashamed of himself.

Loving Cup Presentation.

Cleveland, Ohio, contributes a newspaper clipping concerning a fifty-mile national motorcycle championship race pulled off in Cleveland, Sunday, October 12th, and writes:

> The boys of Local 160 are going to present our speed king, Mr. Don Canada, chief operator of the Dreamland Theater Company, with a loving cup, when the race is finished. By the way, I would like to say, with regard to the high amperage d.c. preposition, that I have used 80 amperes with ¾ top and 9/16 bottom carbons with a 16-foot picture on a plaster wall, the coating having a trifle of blue in it. The house is very well lighted and the picture—well, our friends, using forty amperes, envy it anyway.

Yes, you certainly would get a brilliant illumination with 80 amperes d.c. on a 16-foot picture, but I do not think it is enough better than what you would get with 45 to justify almost double the amperage. What I have said is this: While there is gain after you pass the 45 amperage mark with d.c., it is very slight compared with the increase in current.

Machine Binds.

Mr. J. A. Wetter, Stanton, Iowa, is having trouble as follows:

> My Power's Six A has, for the past two weeks, had a "catch" in it which I cannot locate. About every second turn of the crank there is a jerk. Have tightened every screw on the head, but that did not help. The last two or three runs the machine pulled very hard. I have given it a gasoline bath and oiled everything, but cannot locate the trouble.

Turn the machine very slowly until the "catch" occurs, and then stop instantly. Now rock the gears with your fingers, one at a time, and see which one, if any, is tight, and there you will probably locate the trouble; also try the shutter and see that its shaft is not bound up. I think, however, you will find that the vertical sliding bar, which carries the toggle gear at its top, is loose in its ways. If so, look at your Power's machine instructions in the Handbook, and tighten it. If that jerk occurred with every turn of the crank it wouid indicate that something had become wedged into the teeth of one of the large gears, probably the one on the crank shaft, or the large idler below it. However, you say that it only occurs every other turn, so that knocks that out.

Metallic Non-Breakable Slides.

The Never Break Slide Company, Omaha, Nebraska, whose address can be had from its advertisement, sends in a sample of its metallic, non-breakable slides. These slides appear to be made by drilling the outline of the letters with a very fine drill. Their appearance is identical with the paper slides punched out with a punch which outlines the letters in little round holes. The slide is made of heavy, galvanized metal, and would be, to all intents and purposes, indestructible, nor would they ever require cleaning, and there is no reason why one of them should not last for twenty years. The company has an assortment of eighty stock slides, covering almost every possible subject for which such slides are used. Their first cost is somewhat high, but in the long run they would be very cheap as compared with glass.

Local Union Ball.

The editor received a very neatly engraved invitation to attend the fourth annual entertainment and ball of the Motion Picture Union Operators of Paterson, Passaic and Rutherford, New Jersey, at Paterson, Friday evening, October 31st, the same being given by Local Union 543 I. A. T. S. E.

Sorry boys, but I attended your ball last year and, although there were all kinds of perfectly lovely ladies scattered around, you did not provide me with a single one—and I'm mad. In fact, as our French friend would remark, I am insult! Hope you had a nice time, however, and that the blowout was a howling success in every way.

Operators Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the
MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS
By F. H. Richardson

420 Pages Illustrated

$2.50 Each Postage Paid

will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years
Address all orders and remittances to
MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

"WHEN THE CLOCK STOPPED" (Lubin), November 14.—A business story in which the young husband endangers his own and his wife's property by taking an option on a valuable plot of ground. The buyer fails him and he writes a note to his wife that he will die by his own hand at five o'clock. The clock stops and the buyer changes his mind, so he is saved. This type of plot has been shown many times. In this instance it is well acted and is helped materially by smooth photography.

"THE SLATE INDUSTRY" (Patheplay), November 14.—Demonstrating very clearly how slate is handled, from the time it is blasted out of the mountain side until it is cut up into thin slabs and packed for shipment. Instructive and well worth seeing.

"BUTTERFLY PRESERVATION" (Patheplay), November 14.—Showing the manner in which butterflies are captured in nets, chemically treated, stretched, washed and mounted as specimens. Fine examples of them are displayed on the screen. An exceptionally interesting reel.

"THE MATTERHORN" (Selig), November 14.—Numerous views of the famous jagged peak in Switzerland which many persons have vainly tried to scale. The Matterhorn and its surroundings are picturesque and in this instance very well photographed.

"A CURE FOR CARELESSNESS" (Selig), November 14.—On same reel with above. An amusing little comedy in which the husband tries to cure his wife of thoughtlessness in leaving her rings lying around. He merely succeeds in making matters worse. This, with the scenic half, makes an enjoyable split reel.

"FANNY'S CONSPIRACY" (Vitagraph), November 14.—A light comedy offering, in which the young wife attempts to reduce her husband's weight by secretly doctoring his coffee. The hired girl suspects her of attempting to poison him and quite an amusing situation results. The torn note was an ingenious feature. Many quiet smiles in this.

"THE FICKLE FREAK" (Kalem), November 14.—An original comedy, featuring George Larkin as the Human Pincushion. His love wavers between the Bearded Lady and the Circassian Lady. The double love affair becomes complicated and a funny half reel is the result.

"HYPNOTIZING MAMIE" (Kalem), November 14.—This, on same reel with above, shows Ruth Roland in the part of a girl who poses as a hypnotic subject. John E. Brennan is the lover, who tries to stop the performance. Breezy and enjoyable. A good comedy reel.

"GETTING A PATIENT" (Edison), November 15.—An old theme touched up in a natural, quietly amusing manner. The young doctor has a hard time landing his first patient until the girl comes to his rescue and gets her gouty father to employ him. This comedy is well handled, but seemed a little strung out in places. The photography was dark in a number of scenes.

"HIS INSPIRATION" (Biograph), November 15.—One scene in the latter part of this reel makes the story worth while. That is where the enraged artist's wife rushes to the studio and pretends to be serving tea to her husband and his surreptitious visitor, in order to prevent a scandal. The film is clear and attractive photographically, but contains many seemingly purposeless scenes. One or two additional sub-titles would have cleared the action up in spots.

"ALKALI IKE'S AUTO" (Essanay), November 15.—A good Western comedy, in which Alkali Ike and Mustang Pete make love to the hired girl simultaneously. Pete gets a buggy to take her riding, but Ike goes him one better by trading two horses for an antiquated auto. The ride in this machine was indeed a wild affair and brought out much laughter from the audience. A pleasing comedy offering.

"WHOSE IS IT?" (Lubin), November 15.—A half-reel comedy, in which a flirtatious fat man on the beach becomes possessed of a stocking belonging to one of the bathing girls. His wife makes a scene. The pictures are well taken and this makes a fairly amusing subject.

"BADLY WANTED" (Lubin), November 15.—On same reel with above, in which the village constable confuses the moving picture outlaw with a real bandit and proceeds to arrest him. This works up considerable laughter.

"AGAINST DESPERATE ODDS" (Kalem), November 15.—A Western offering of ordinary interest, in which a trained pony rescues the girl from a perilous situation. The scenes lack continuity and the action as a result gets up little suspense. Some of the night scenes were too dark, though some pleasing Western views are shown in other parts of the film.

"IN THE SAME BOAT" (Patheplay), November 15.—Charles Arling in his character of Spuffy proves very funny. His efforts to prevent the widow and her friends from learning about his baldness were decidedly amusing. A very lively boy helps the picture along immensely. The final scenes were the best and the reel as a whole is a good laugh producer.

"A CURE FOR SUFFRAGETTES" (Biograph), November 17.—That the audience laughed over this picture is its justification as entertainment. It is a farce of suffragettes and comic cops.

"HE'S A LAWYER" (Biograph), November 17.—There was even more laughter over this than over the first on the split reel, but there is not real humor in it and it is aimed at a cynical and sophisticated audience. The lawyer is a grafter and is presented in a farcical way to make laughter that can hardly be called hearty, for the heart has nothing to do with it.

"NORA'S BOARDERS" (Edison), November 17.—A little farce of many characters with a love story for contrast. It is clever, brisk, amusing and has been well handled in every way and makes a pretty and acceptable offering, but there is no special vigor to it. Audiences will count it good company.

"THE STOLEN TAPESTRIES" (Kalem), November 17.—The story interests, but has many improbabilities. The photography is very commendable. Its hero has been told by the girl's father that he is a dreamer, but gets a chance to do some not very marvelous detective work and wins the girl.

"THE TWO FATHERS" (Lubin), November 17.—Not a very good picture. Its business is most improbable and the situation not much better. Besides, it is old without any new interest to justify it. Written and produced by Robert Drouet.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY" (Nov. 17).—From the Panama Canal comes a picture of the busting of Gamboa Dam as President Wilson put it. Among other items of much interest is a portrait of Judge R. Lindsey, good American.

"TANGLED WIRES" (Vitagraph), November 17.—It is more convincing to see people listening at party telephone wires and so overhearing plans of comedy conspirators than to see them in the immediate background or behind a curtain. The story of this picture which deals with such tangled wires is new enough and was the cause of laughter, but it has not been written skillfully enough to keep us from guessing the incidents before hand.

"HIS NEPHEW'S SCHEME" (Edison), November 12.—A farce around a rural breach of promise suit. It is artificially constructed, but there are moments in it when the fun gets over to the audience. It was written by Edward Montague and produced by Charles Seay.

"THE LAST LAUGH" (Essanay), November 12.—A farce of a boarding house keeper and her daughter, who think a newcomer is the missing heir to a fortune, as advertised in a paper, but after the mother has tricked him into marrying her, instead of the daughter whom he wanted, it turns out that he is not heir. It is a rather far-fetched offering and not spontaneous or very funny.

"LIZZARD LORE" (Patheplay), November 12.—Gives some authentic glimpses into the nature and habits of lizzards, choosing the most interesting ones. Raymond Ditmars, of the New York Zoological Gardens, directed it and it is certainly both interesting and of great value, especially to those who like to know something about the world's creatures. A fine offering.

"THE COAST OF CALIFORNIA" (Patheplay), November 12.—On the same reel is this series of sea pictures. Some of them are full of beauty.

"TRYING OUT 707" (Selig), November 2.—A picture with a human appeal. It seems to choose a hypothetical case in order to show the effects of kindness on the character of a convict, yet its author has carefully developed his situation for the sake of its dramatic possibilities and has made a picture that, if not wholly convincing, is not improbable. It is well acted.

"AN ELOPEMENT AT HOME" (Vitagraph), November 12.—A comedy that surely tickeled the audience; there was hearty laughter in which the reviewer joined. The author, Vita Hurst, has built up her climax to include an astonishing number of fresh elements of fun and gets it over in good shape. Van Dyke Brooke produced it.

"MRS. CASEY'S GORILLA" (Biograph), November 13.—A farce of Irish husbands, a foreign count and a monkey party and then, to go one better, a gorilla party. There is some fun in it, but Mr. Casey was more like a gorilla without his gorilla costume.

"MIXED NUTS" (Biograph), November 13.—Gives us the whole asylum and a few more. Some of them can act. William Murray, for instance, as Hamlet-Romeo, got laughs, but there was not a great deal of real laughter while it was on "OUR NEW MINISTER" (Kalem), November 12.—These rural melodramas, "The Old Homestead," "Our New Minister," and other favorites of a quarter of a century ago found a human response in myriads—they were truly popular. This reviewer never saw the play here revived by the Kalem Company, but watched it with the pleasure that one greets an old acquaintance from the home town. None of these melodramas were great, but they were human and justified themselves. We believe that audiences through the states will find in it a very welcome relief from many modern stage plays. It is well acted and competently handled all through. Joseph Conyers plays his old role, the village constable, with Thomas McGrath as Lem, the scape-goat. And what could be better than to have Alice Joyce, as Lem's daughter, and Tom Moore, as the new minister? Neither the minister, nor Hannible, the unscrupulous lawyer (Henry Hallam) nor the deacons are modern or very real, but they have been long liked.

"THE SEA ETERNAL" (Lubin), November 13.—A more modern melodrama of a fishing village by Lawrence McCloskey and produced by Arthur Johnson. It is vigorous and makes itself felt on the screen as well as seen. This is because there is logic in its action: for if expectation doesn't foresee all that happens; the time of its happening is natural and it all passes as matter of course. Then the characters are strongly contrasted and, if not actual, most of them have recognizable counterparts in life. Also, the locality and the backgrounds were well chosen and add much. Last of all, the cheerful spirit of a melodrama's storm and final sunshine are present. This is not real life, but it is acceptable. Florence Hackett plays the misunderstood wife, who goes mad very effectively; opposite to Arthur Johnson as her husband. Charles Brandt plays the miserly agent and Lottie Briscoe with Howard Mitchell play the juveniles.

"A SLAVE OF SATAN" (Patheplay), November 13.—A good, effective offering made abroad. It deals with a great love that many waters, and pretty filthy ones, too, couldn't wash out. The picture itself is not unclean, but it is passionate, and it certainly convinces us that the hero, an artist, is truly in love with the girl, a true Bohemian, and a daughter of a rich man, who poses for him under the name of Smith. The man's father tries to make a match between the son and the daughter of the rich man and then, of course, the son recognizes his model. Then she is cast out by her father and goes the whole bitter road as the slave of Satan, but is rescued in the end by the artist. It is artistically staged and acted.

"THE NEW SCHOOLMARM OF GREEN RIVER" (Essanay), November 13.—A Western that opens in a dreary tired way that has been used in too many other pictures, but the story, once it gets started, is good and was worthy of a fresher beginning. In spite of its poor start, it makes a good offering and will be liked.

"THE RIGHT MAN" (Vitagraph), November 13.—A worth-while story of modern life that is strongly presented. It has weaknesses, but its virtues far outweigh them. The characters ring true. George Cooper plays one of the most veritable cads we have ever seen on the screen. The role demanded a good deal of him, but he shows perfect command of it all and certainly convinces. It seemed to us that the reluctance of the girl, after the proposal, was over-pictured; the audience is looking at her to see what she feels, but it cannot forget that the man who has asked and been accepted is present, too, and must see what we see. Then having the butler show the cad out in another scene didn't convince under its circumstances; the boy was still the brother of the girl the man wanted to marry. Lillian Walker was perfect in her role, as well as lovely in the last scene. Earle Williams carries the role of the "right man" with dignity. The picture was written by W. A. Tremayne and it is not the first excellent thing he has done in the picture line. Frederick Thompson produced it.

Licensed Specials.

"THE BOOMERANG" (Essanay), November 14.—A story of intrigue in high government circles, with a touch of melodrama running thorugh it which renders the whole rather unconvincing. The yarn is entertaining, however. E. H. Calvert appears as a man of dual personality. He is in love with the daughter of the secretary of war, and at the same time is trying to steal plans for a criminal organization. The girl, portrayed by Irene Warfield, succeeds in outwitting and unmasking him. The photography is clear and pleasing.

"THE PHANTOM SIGNAL" (Edison), November 14.—A terrific arraignment of railroad officials for their failure to provide safety appliances and decent working hours. Death stalks through the picture in the form of an animated skeleton. Two train wrecks are graphically portrayed, involving in each instance families of the president and employees of the road. Not a pleasant picture, but very strongly presented and one that should do much to awaken public conscience and the attention of railway officials. The necessity for improved equipment should have been brought out more strongly at the close. A powerful preachment for better regulation of railroad service.

"JERRY'S MOTHER-IN-LAW" (Vitagraph), November 15.—A two-reel comedy dealing with the family of a young married man, which is invaded by the wife's aggressive mother. Kate Price proves very effective in this part and proceeds to stir up trouble for the newlyweds, portrayed by Sidney Drew and Clara Kimball Young. The situations are farcical and keep the audience in constant good humor. All of the scenes were good: The French ball, in the museum, at the club, the shower bath, shopping, etc. Married folks will particularly enjoy this.

"THE ESCAPE OF JIM DOLAN" (Selig), November 17.—In using this old theme, the escape of an innocent man from prison by the help of his friends who provide relays of ponies, the Selig people have justified themselves by the new verve and elan in the way they do it. It makes a good picture with sensational riding and with no breaks in the action. That is all that can be said about it, but that is enough. It is an offering sure to entertain. The producer's name is not given, but it seems to be to the credit of William Duncan.

"THE JUDGMENT OF BUDDHA" (Melies), November 13.—An extraordinary picture and unquestionably a first-class offering as entertainment. It is one of the few attempts to picture distantly former times that have seemed to this reviewer truly successful. In the first place, it was photographed in and about one of those astonishing buildings that were the glory of the East when it was in the heyday of its vigor, a palace and a temple of immense proportions and beauty and most convincing as the very locality where the myth story was born. It is plain that no white man made up the story. It is thoroughly Oriental and Buddhistic and has been played mostly, if not wholly, by Cambodians. There is a simple and effective sincerity all through it. Best of all, from the viewpoint of the exhibitor, it is a good story, clearly articulated, interesting and human. We believe it a very desirable release from all points of view. There is one poor scene, but the rest of the two reels seem to us about all that would be desired.

Independent

"SLIM PROPOSES, BUT——" (Frontier), November 29.—It is to be presumed this is a "Western" comedy. In it we have the not exactly new situation of a man trying to flirt with a woman whose face is concealed behind a sunshade and who proves to be a wench. Again Slim indulges in what we are assured is an annual bath, although whether he is moved to the step by habit or necessity we are not informed. When Slim asks a mother for the hand of her daughter he is greeted with the assertion, so the screen tells us: "You can never marry my daughter, you long, lanky, muzzle-faced sausage." Surely, this striving for the rough stuff is getting to be "somethin' fierce."

"THE SECRET OF BALANCED ROCK" (Frontier), November 29.—A story written around a rock. There is not much of entertainment in it; it is possible the personal brawls that are featured may have interest for some.

"FATTY JOINS THE FORCE" (Keystone), November 24.—In this number the Fat Boy saves a drowning child and is rewarded with a place on the police force. The boys steal his clothes while he is in bathing and much excitement follows. The humor of this is not as strong as in other offerings by this company.

"A MUDDY ROMANCE" (Keystone), November 20.—No political mudslinging occurs in this typical comedy offering. It is real mud that decorates the members of the Keystone Company when the jealous Ford dries up the lake and leaves the fair Mabel stranded with her friends. The police force appears and everyone is bespattered. Good comedy of its kind.

"THE SIGN OF THE SNAKE" (Kay-Bee), November 28.—The story of the love of a Chinese girl for a white man. The scenes are Western and quite appealing; the photography is only fair. Revenue officers are seen rounding up a band of Chinese smugglers and the love of the lieutenant for the Chinese girl follows. Later, when his sweetheart arrives from the East, Moon Choo saves him from assassination at the cost of her own life. A very fair production of its type.

"THE BURIED PAST" (Broncho), December 3.—The chief objection to this two-reel offering is that it presents so much of the seamy side of life, unrelieved by lighter situations. The characters of the brutal, drunken husband and the abused wife have been shown so many times that the opening scenes lacked freshness. Later the husband is sent to the penitentiary, for no reason shown in the story, and the wife marries another man, apparently without obtaining a divorce. The second husband shoots the first at the close. There is but little in this type of an offering to commend.

"UNTO THE THIRD GENERATION" (Victor), November 28.—A two-reel offering which presents those phases of the Jewish religion dealing with the subject of intermarriage. The work of P. D. Standing as the Rabbi was excellent. Others in the cast were J. Newton, Florence Lawrence, F. Bennet and Earl Fox. The story, written by Walter McNamara, is seemingly a plea for intermarriage, as the Rabbi finally allows his granddaughter to marry outside of her own religion. The story develops slowly in the first reel, but is strong and convincing in the second. The acting is sincere and competent. A picture that is certain to awaken much thought and comment and, while delicate subject matter, should not offend.

"MARY SAVES THE SCULPTOR" (Gaumont), November 25.—The famous sculptor is loved by his pupil, but loves a dame of fashion. His hands become paralyzed and he can't finish his sweetheart's bust, which gives her a chance to show how cold and heartless she is and gives Mary a chance to win his love. A pretty picture set in the studio of a sculptor and filled with well-made scenes. The photography of Gaumont offerings is well known.

"OSCAR FINANCES A THEATER" (Gaumont), November 20.—A good comedian plays Oscar, a character full of human nature and something of a "simp" who gets a job for a very beautiful woman as leading actress. He has to pay much and often, and instead of marrying her gets only a hot lemon handed to him in the end. It is in good taste; has some very amusing scenes. A safe offering.

"WHEN HE LOST TO WIN" (Nestor), November 28.—A comedy which will furnish amusement, but which, nevertheless, cannot stand the test of probability. A man is arrayed as a woman and is supposed to fool a girl; in time she discovers the deception and in turn arrays herself in man's garb. Certainly she could have deceived no one but a blind man. The idea was good, but was imperfectly executed.

"LAZY LOUIS" (Joker), November 29.—A low comedy, with Max Asher in the part of a lazy fellow who goes to sleep at his work. His wife and the doctor make him believe he is sick and give him such a scare that he is glad to work again. There are funny spots in this, but it is also very vulgar in places and will not appeal to the best houses.

"THE CLAIM JUMPERS" (Kay-Bee), November 18.—A typical Western release, the story being written by Richard V. Spencer. Doyle, in an effort to get Jim's claim, stuns the latter with a foul blow and begins a race to the registration office. The blow seemed unnecessary, as Jim was unaware of Doyle's knowledge that he had discovered the gold. But the scenes which follow are well photographed and the wife's experiences in heading off Doyle were exciting.

"THE BOND THAT BINDS" (Frontier), November 15.—This picture may serve as entertainment in the primitive community, such, for instance, as that in which it was filmed. The story is of the orthodox Western kind. There is a bride, a husband nearly in the possession of an old saloon flame; the pursuit by the cowboys when it is believed the two are eloping, which they are not, and the return of the husband to learn he is a father.

"HUBBY'S NEW COAT" (Crystal), November 25.—Pearl White and Chester Barnett try hard to make some fun in this short film; if they fail the fault is not theirs. They had little to work on.

"BALDY BELMONT LANDS A SOCIETY JOB" (Crystal), November 25.—On same reel is this short farce.

"ROARING BILL" (Eclair), November 30.—In this somewhat fantastical farce-comedy we are introduced to a city family's cousin, "Roaring Bill," who comes to town in a wildly driven automobile, with both his guns going overtime and dressed in his Western garb. His subsequent deeds will hold attention and are sure to win a laugh.

"WINE" (Keystone), November 13.—As a half-reel subject, dealing exclusively with the manufacture of wine from grapes, this would be very acceptable. The vineyard scenes and transporting of the grapes to the wine press were well shown, but the comedy scenes at the end were very poor from every point of view.

"THE MAELSTROM" (Kay-Bee), November 25.—The plot of this story is rather mechanical in its development, but the photography is good and there is plenty of action and excitement in the later scenes. Jim saves the sheriff's wife from the enraged half-breed and later they assist him to escape. An ordinary Western story with better handling than usual.

"OUR CHILDREN" (Keystone), November 17.—A story played entirely by children, containing some coarse spots and nothing of a particularly commendable nature.

"COHEN SAVES THE FLAG" (Keystone), November 27.—A burlesque on war, in which Ford Sterling appears as a Yiddish private. The photography is not very good in places, and while there are humorous moments, the story is not very strong. A few of the scenes will get laughs.

"HILDA OF THE MOUNTAINS" (Nestor), November 26.—In this drama of mountain folk a rich man's son and the daughter of a poor mountaineer fall in love and both his and her father are bitterly opposed to the match. Out of this situation is built up an interesting, at times, exciting story. The characterizations are good, particularly that of Hilda's father.

"A CLOTHES LINE QUARREL" (Thanhouser), November 21.—Portraying the domestic difficulties of two suburban families in a very pleasing manner. The husbands are seen running for the morning car; the wives and children get into a quarrel. Later the children make up and get lost in the woods. A light plot nicely photographed and close enough to human nature to be entertaining.

"HE COULDN'T LOSE" (Thanhouser), November 16.—Another of the "money-spending" stories fathered by Brewster's Millions, in which the hero must get rid of a large sum in order to inherit another. In this case his hazardous ventures win him millions. This is well pictured and nicely handled, but the edge has been taken off of this style of story pretty much.

"FRED'S WATERLOO" (Apollo), November 16.—This offering is rather off the key so far as the humor is concerned, although Mace's burlesque characterization of Napoleon was very good. But dealing with a mental affliction in the particular way it does, the observer's feelings are too much divided between smiles and pity; as a result the picture is not a great success either way.

"THE TOMBOY'S RACE" (Majestic), November 16.—A very speedy auto race is featured in this film. The slight plot hinges upon the girl's substitution for her brother, who was drugged before the race. The girl wins. The race feature is interesting, but the plot has been done many times and is, therefore, not very fresh to the observer.

"THE FIRES OF FATE" (Rex), November 20.—Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport play the leads in this tenement story. In spite of the fact that the plot itself is not very new, the scenes hold a strong interest and the story works out very appealingly. The motive is a good one, the girl striving to induce her father to improve the condition of his tenement structures. The fire scenes, while clearly manufactured in part, were realistic and gave opportunity for the hero to distinguish himself very creditably. Clear photography also helps this creditable production.

"A SEASIDE SAMARITAN" (Powers), November 28.—Trick photography, such as that employed at the beginning of this film, has no place in a legitimate drama, but should be shown only in fantastic offerings. The thieving couple are cast up on the seashore. They pretend to be insane, but the girl finally confesses their crime. Edwin August plays the part of the good Samaritan who reforms and converts them, and urges the man to marry the girl despite the fact that he himself loves her. The photography is cloudy in places, but the story possesses a fair degree of interest.

"PITCH THAT DEFILES" (Majestic), November 15.—The presence of a Christmas tree in this number gives it a timely appeal. The plot is rather tragic in a way, but ends happily. The young wife, whose acquaintance from the slums induced her to leave her husband, is finally reclaimed after some sad experiences. Good photography and competent acting help the story along.

"BREAD UPON THE WATERS" (Princess), November 14.—A pleasing film story in which a broken-hearted young man goes away to forget his first sweetheart. Later he falls in love with the landlady's pretty daughter, although he does not realize it for the time being. But when the first sweetheart sends for him, he then learns that his heart belongs to the second. Boyd Marshall and Muriel Ostriche make a very pleasing couple in this.

"TWO MEN AND A MULE," Series 4 (Reliance), November 17.—The last of this series in which the mule balked and refused to face the camera after the first number. The two hoboes go through further antics of a quite amusing nature.

"COMMENCEMENT AT THE INDIAN SCHOOL" (Reliance), November 17.—On same reel with above. Interesting views of the Indian school at Carlisle, Penn., showing the students in drill work. Close views of the intelligent appearing graduates are also shown.

"MAKING HIMSELF A HERO" (Komic), November 20.—Good photography makes this half-reel offering quite pleasing. The husband scares away the burglars and tells his wife a great story of his bravery. Just an ordinary comedy.

"MURPHY'S NEW HIGH HAT" (Komic), November 20.—On same reel with above. A rather amusing slapstick offering, in which the chief fun centers about breaking up hats by Murphy and Carey.

"HER FATHER'S DAUGHTER" (Reliance), November 22.—In this interesting story a man serves a long term in the penitentiary for a crime foisted upon him by another. Years later he returns to find his daughter engaged to his enemy's son. The photography is good throughout and the acting very pleasing. Anna Laughlin and Thomas R. Mills are among those who appear. The plot is somewhat hackneyed, but it is well handled and leads up to a pleasing climax.

Independent Specials

"L'ARTICLE 47" (Majestic), November 18.—This two-reel number gives a strong rendering of a well-known play. The opening scenes are laid in New Orleans, where the hero, George, meets a Creole named Cora. The later scenes occur in Paris. George is thrown in prison after shooting Cora. On his release he lives in Paris with his mother, under an assumed name, in violation of Article 47. The plot is dramatic, the settings agreeable and the acting and photography well above the average. A strong offering.

"THE WHITE VAQUERO" (Bison), November 25.—A hold-up in this two-reel drama of Mexican bandits and soldiers sent to capture them shows an exceptionally good piece of photography. The scenes throughout are very interesting. The White Vaquero, a very romantic Mexican bandit, is a character who will win many friends, and the story of his capture will command attention. An attempt to blow up his den and an Indian attack characterize the latter part of the film. It ought to be well received.

"THE WAR OF THE CATTLE RANGE" (Bison), November 29.—This is a commendable Western production of two reels, full of the best Western atmosphere and characterized by exciting episodes. The principal characters are a new school teacher, her brother, a bad range boss and a very courageous cowboy. The drama grows out of a war which a ranchman begins on some cattle rustlers whose identity is unknown until it is discovered that the range boss is leader of the gang. A brisk fight in a barroom, a good chase and a man-to-man fight at the finish make the film a good one of its kind.

"THE BELLE OF YORKTOWN" (Domino), November 27.—The story of Colonial days has now come around again and in this three-reel number is handled with a degree of care and liveliness that make it of strong appeal. The scenes occur in Yorktown in 1780, Anna Little appearing in the part of the girl. The spy and Colonel Gordon fight two very spirited duels with swords in the course of the story. The latter is seriously wounded, but the girl nurses him back to health. The photography is excellent, the costuming good and the settings well selected. Numerous battle scenes occur and the surrender of Yorktown by Lord Cornwallis is shown at the close. A good story of the revolution.

"A STOLEN IDENTITY" (Powers), November 21.—Edwin August produces these two reels and plays the lead. The theme is bold in conception—a crook attempting to take advantage of his resemblance to a successful hotel man in order to remove the latter while he secured possession of money. The picture is notable for the double exposure. In one instance the two, in different garb, walk together along a sidewalk in conversation. This, perhaps the most difficult scene, is convincing and certainly entertaining. "A Stolen Identity" is a good release.

"A SON'S DEVOTION" (Eclair), November 26.—The first reel of this story gives an unusually graphic picture of the trouble a man can get into by playing the races on money appropriated from his firm. Alec Francis portrays the part of the erring father, whose son assumes the blame. The first scene in the second reel practically completes the original story, which might better have been confined to one reel; the following scenes are padded and so improbable as to bring laughter where it was not intended.

"BACK TO LIFE," November 24.—Warren Kerrigan, as a redeemed bad man in this admirable picture, presents a likable character. He appears shooting up a saloon in the West, riding away with a posse at his heels and escaping to meet up with the dying wife of a gambler, who has deserted her for another woman. It seems that she is afflicted with tuberculosis, but the sun and the air in the mountains cure her and she lives to fall in love with the man she has rescued. The gambler, killed after a card scrape, leaves her free in the end. The story is well dramatized, the action is spirited and the whole gets over in good shape.

"FOR LOVE OF A MAN" (Reliance), November 15.—This offering, written by Carey Lee, who plays one of the leading parts, is quite strong in many ways. It shows convincingly how a trusting servant girl, in love with the rascally chauffeur, permits herself to be convicted of theft and sentenced to prison. Stanley Walpole and the girl are very good in these first scenes. Later, after the girl has been released, there follow further dramatic scenes and the chauffeur is finally made to pay the penalty of his crime. A good production of its type.

"WHAT THE GODS DECREE" (World Special Films).—A four-part picture made by the Paris Eclair Company. Charles Krauss and Josette Andriot have the leads. There is an abundance of action, although the director does not at all times pay heed to the probabilities. A wife in France, reading of a necklace adorning a statue in India, decided she must have it and that her husband must secure it. He steals the jewels. Before getting away from the locality he is detected, but, nevertheless, permitted to escape. Two persons confined in the hold of a ship unaccountably obtain possession of mallet and chisel and cut their way out of the hold, apparently near the bottom of the ship. When the two dive off it is from a point well up on the side. An Indian girl, without hesitation, writes a note in the language of the European country. She appears inside a mansion, but her mode of egress must be guessed at. There are titles that are necessary. The photography throughout is good; at one point, a pursuit in the water, is remarkable. There are thrilling incidents, one of the more notable being the capture of the two foreigners by the opening of a trap and dropping them, caged, into the cubliette.

Among the Picture Theatres

News and Views of Houses Here and There

THEATER DE LUXE, SAN JOSE, CAL.

Messrs. Turner & Dahnken, who own and operate a chain of moving picture and vaudeville houses on the Pacific coast, opened, in San Jose on August 14, last, an exclusive picture house known as Theater De Luxe. The house was started upon its career with speeches by the mayor of San Jose, who eulogized the opening of such a high-class picture house in the city. The Alaska-Siberia pictures, followed by "The Prisoner of Zenda," were the first films to be shown at the new picture palace, for an admission of twenty-five cents in each case. After the opening period, which lasted for six days, the price was lowered to ten cents for adults and five for children. When features are shown the price is raised to twenty-five cents.

Theater De Luxe, San Jose, Cal., of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit.

The structure and the ground upon which it stands represent an expenditure of $125,000, the building costing $75,000 and the remaining $50,000 being the value of the property. The auditorium is furnished with 1,350 opera seats, each one costing $4.25. A feature of the theater is the velvet drop curtain, the expense of which is $600, which is opened and closed at the beginning and close of each show. The entertainments are run on schedule time. The ventilation system is another feature of the house. Before a capacity house has made the air impure a fresh supply is sent into the auditorium, thereby always keeping the atmosphere healthy. A Kimball organ that is operated by a competent player furnishes the music.

Interior of Theater De Luxe, San Jose, Cal., of the Turner & Duhnken Circuit.

A word should be said of the employees. The ushers are dressed in blue with immaculate white caps, while the doormen and cashiers are uniformed in a cardinal red with gold trimmings. A man is kept constantly on the sidewalk who calls, by the electric number system, the automobiles of the patrons. On the mezzanine floor are the manager's office and the women's and the men's retiring rooms. These rooms are commodious and richly furnished, and an attendant is always ready to minister to the wants of those asking questions or desiring aid. Paper towels and liquid soap are used throughout the building, thus carrying out the policy of sanitation. The interior is beautifully decorated, and the different colors are in harmony and blend with one another. Predominant in its beauty scheme are bay trees, palms and other greenery placed in proper positions throughout the house.

---

NEW EMPIRE DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

One of the latest acquisitions to Detroit's amusement houses is the handsome New Empire Theater in Woodward Avenue. One of its features is a beautiful pipe organ, which alternates with the fine orchestra. The interior decorations are very harmonious and restful. The balcony effect is very clever and artistic. Its entire front is artistically hidden by realistic flowers and foliage, and a soft glow emanates from the hidden electric lights. The house is never dark, and a person, no matter where he sits, can read the program during all entertainments. The ventilation system changes the air in the house every two minutes. The upholstered opera chairs are of the most recent design; they are large and comfortable. An innovation in the management is the reservation of the last seven rows for ladies only, so that those who come without escorts may be seated by themselves if they wish. All the attendants are courteous and stylishly uniformed. The women's retiring room, which is of marble and tile and beautifully decorated, is always in charge of a maid. The decorating scheme throughout the house is old gold and ivory. Drinking fountains with sanitary drinking cups is another feature of the New Empire. Shows are given from 9 A. M. to 11 P. M.

New Empire Theater.

A new fireproof house, to be known as the Hyde Park Theater, is being built at 5314 Lake Park Avenue, this city, and will be completed in time to open on Thanksgiving Day. The theater is owned by the Hyde Park Theater Company. It will be under the direction of Philip Garrigan, who has been connected with the show business, in various capacities, for several years. Mr. Garrigan visited us last week and subscribed for The World. The Hyde Park will seat 700 people, and the admission will be ten cents. It is the intention to use exclusive service at this house.

CHICAGO LETTER

By JAS. S. McQUADE

IN an unostentatious way several manufacturers are daily adding to the store of educational moving pictures. They are aware of the trend of the intelligent mind, if not of that of the public at large, towards film subjects that make for instruction and for knowledge. The heights that are yet to be reached by this function of the camera and the projecting machine are still lost in the mists of future achievement; but that the pathway leads upwards and towards those sunlit regions is discernible to every thinking mind, wherein there exists a love for cinematography and its triumphs.

I was talking, the other day, to a well-traveled, widely-informed, genial, professional gentleman, whose name has appeared several times in my preceding letters, in connection with educational films, touching on geography and travel. The name, Dr. Edward B. MacDowell, will be recalled by many who have read these articles; and, if moving pictures could speak for him, many millions all over the earth would rise up and call him blessed.

Dr. MacDowell just recently returned from a zig-zag, round-the-world trip, which has lasted for over two years. In that time he has traveled 40,000 miles and over, and the negatives taken by him, at the nearest guess, will run between 60,000 and 70,000 feet. Dr. MacDowell assures me that every foot of film taken by him, on his long route, has a special educational value, and that he has ever kept that point in view when he turned the crank of his camera—every turn registering something that will assist in rightly informing millions of people (who have not the means or the opportunity for travel), on the far away, outside world. He believes that the thousands of feet of negatives taken by him will furnish a storehouse of geographical, scenic and sociological knowledge for the great predominating many who cannot see these sights for themselves.

Dr. MacDowell sailed from San Francisco for Tahiti, in the South Sea Islands, in September, 1911. He had visited the Samoan group as early as 1902, when a 50-foot reel was considered a long stretch of film. The Samoans he pronounces "Indolence personified." Even in those early days he took about 3,000 feet of negatives, all of which possess fine educational value, and which he uses to this very day in his lyceum lectures.

But to return to Tahiti, on his last trip; he spent several weeks there and took about 2,500 feet of films. This is a promising French colony, and the films show the customs and means of livelihood of the natives, who are a care-free, happy race. They simply eat, drink, sleep and sing, like most of their island neighbors in the South Seas.

After Tahiti, the Fiji Islands were visited. The natives were formerly cannibals, and would better not be trusted yet by any white man, in case of a stringency in victuals. Here 2,000 feet of negatives were taken. In fact, Dr. MacDowell has well covered all the South Sea islands by moving pictures.

The voyage to New Zealand was made from Tahiti in a small inter-island steamer that cruised for several weeks among the islands of the Cook group, named after Captain Cook, the great English navigator. Oranges, bananas, etc., were picked up on the islands and taken to New Zealand. The Cook Islands are visited by the steamer for only four months in the year, being completely isolated from the world for the remaining eight months. About 1,500 feet were taken in this group, which should prove exceedingly instructive and entertaining.

Two months were spent in New Zealand, where between 8,000 and 9,000 feet were run off, chiefly fine travelogues, with some magnificent scenics included. The famous hot springs, in the geyser district at Rotorura, in the North Island, were pictured. They do not at all compare with our Yellowstone Park, being only "vest pocket editions" of that great natural resort, according to the Doctor.

The great geyser of this district had been "mum" for several years, the Doctor found. It had not spouted naturally the last time, he was told, being induced to do so only by "soaping." This meant the throwing of a large quantity of common soap into the crater of the geyser. Wishing to obtain a moving picture of the largest Antipodean gusher, Dr. MacDowell—after the untying of much red tape—was permitted to coax the sleeping wonder with a liberal supply of saponaceous food. Thousands had assembled to view the sight, and, as the soap was poured into the cavernous mouth, the crowd rushed wildly to points of safety. Alas! There was no need for such precautions. The water remained at its normal level, and the only sign that the food had created energy somewhere was seen next day in the spouting of several miniature geysers, two hundred feet or so away. And thus have we all missed a view of the giant geyser at Rotorura!

On his way to the South Island, Dr. MacDowell rode down the valley formed by the Wangunui River, which he describes as affording the most thrilling and picturesque scenery viewed by him in any of his travels. The Rhine, the Hudson and even the marvelous beauties of the St. Lawrence, with its Thousand Islands, are all put into the shade by this river with the Mayori name. Here the Doctor took 1,000 feet.

The scenes pictured in the South Island climaxed all taken during the Doctor's New Zealand trip. The great feature was the fiord on the Western coast, known as Milford Sound. Here the mountains rise sheer from the water to a height of 5,000 feet, and wear their caps of snow all through the year. Rugged grandeur marks every vista in these pictures.

To reach this seldom visited region, Dr. MacDowell traveled on foot for 100 miles over the high mountains towards the west. As no domestic animals are to be found in the wilderness, the government loaned him three men to carry his impedimenta. A trail made by the government, with two log cabins located on it about 20 miles apart, where food and lodging could be procured, made the trip possible. The only wild living creature seen on this trail was a wingless bird, about the size of an American partridge, called by the native name, the "wiki." This strange bird is quite tame and runs swiftly along the ground. Dr. MacDowell got a good picture of it.

Tasmania, the playground for Australian tourists, was next visited. It affords a delightful contrast to the monotonous plain stretches of Australia. Here pictures were taken of a wonderful natural bridge and of a strange basaltic formation called the "Tessellated Pavement"—a stretch of sea beach formed of rectangular blocks, with all the appearance of carefully laid masonry.

Melbourne and Sydney were then visited, steamer to Japan being taken at the latter port. Five weeks were spent in the "flowery kingdom," and then China, the Philippines, Burma, India, Ceylon, Italy and Switzerland followed in succession, all these countries furnishing subjects for the Doctor's storehouse.

All the negatives taken by Dr. MacDowell on this trip were developed by him, and the films will be used by him in his illustrated lectures given on lyceum circuits throughout the country. These films will also be used in their entirety, from time to time, by the Selig Polyscope Company, among the firm's regular releases. Several of them have already been so released, and have been viewed with much pleasure and profit by patrons of moving picture theaters throughout the country.

Dr. MacDowell is a well known lyceum lecturer, whose work has been familiar to lyceum audiences for 12 years and more, in all parts of the United States. He is to the lyceum field what Burton Holmes and Dwight Elmendorf are to the independent field.

Sub Committee Appointed to Investigate, Before Passage of Chicago Ventilation Ordinance.

On Friday, November 14th, the Chicago building committee met in the committee rooms at the usual hour. The cramped capacity of the premises was not sufficient for the jammed audience.

Health Commissioner Young was not present, being occupied with important business elsewhere; but he was represented by his assistant, Dr. Hill.

Mr. Horner, counsel for the Chicago Exhibitors' Association, was present and made a motion that the ventilation ordinance be taken up first, or postponed until the next meeting, as he had to attend court in about half an hour.

Alderman Carr got up and expressed himself as being tired of hearing any more discussion on the ventilation of nickel houses; but Mr. Horner's motion was finally agreed to.

Mr. Horner stated that since his last appearance before the committee, he had thoroughly investigated the building ordinance as touching the ventilation of tenements, where only 200 cubic feet of air for an infant, and 400 for adults, per hour, were called for. He concluded by saying that the ordinance, as affecting picture theaters, should be passed as it exists, or as amended by the committee, after the members had considered all the testimony, expert and otherwise, submitted.

It certainly looked black for the exhibitors after Mr. Horner's departure, as the aldermen were in favor of barring further discussion. At this juncture, F. O. Nielson, owner of the Parkway Theater, gained the floor by permission of the chair, having announced that he had some vital expert tests and testimony concerning the Parkway Theater, which they had not yet heard and which might serve to direct them in amending the ordinance before its final passage.

Mr. Nielson submitted for reading, a letter written by Professor H. McCormack, of the Armour Institute of Technology, after making a ventilation test of the Parkway Theater, on November 11th. The letter, in substance, is as follows:

"Test No. 1 was taken at 6:30 p. m., on Clark Street, in front of the theater. Temperature 5° C.; carbon dioxide, 3.72 parts in 10,000 parts of air; bacteria, 720 on a five minute exposure.

"The following air samples were taken in the center of the lower floor, just under the balcony:

"Test No. 2 was taken at 7:00 p. m. Room temperature 14° C.; carbon dioxide, 4.22 parts in 10,000 parts of air; bacteria, 112 on a five minute exposure.

"Test No. 3 was taken at 8:00 p. m. Room temperature 17° C.; carbon dioxide, 8.14 parts in 10,000 arts of air; bacteria, 56 on a five minute exposure.

"Test No. 4 was taken at 9:00 p. m. Room temperature 18.5° C.; carbon dioxide, 6.40 parts in 10,000 parts of air; bacteria, 99 on a five minute exposure.

"There were so many air openings, both for air inlet and air outlet on this building, that it was impossible to take the velocity of the air at all the inlets, or of the air at the outlets, in order to estimate the quantity of air supplied to, or removed, from the auditorium.

"In addition to this customary ventilation test, a personal inspection was made of all parts of the building. Every part of the building was found to be in strictly sanitary condition. Indeed, it seems that the owner of this property takes very much more than the ordinary care in keeping his building clean and in sanitary condition."

The photographs made from the plates showing the bacterial tests were examined with great interest by the members of the committee and they appeared much impressed by the concluding testimony of Professor McCormack in his letter. It was the consensus of opinion that the tests and testimony on the conditions prevailing at the Parkway, warranted further careful consideration before the final passage of the ordinance.

A motion was then made by a member, and carried, that a sub committee of three be appointed by the chair to investigate thoroughly the case of the Parkway, and of other theaters in the same class, and report, or recommend, their findings at the next meeting, Friday, November 21st. It was considered that this action was only fair to these higher class moving picture houses, as only the very worst cases in the city had been cited in meeting.

Aldermen Littler, Schaeffer and Latchford were named by Chairman Clancy to serve on the sub committee, with Alderman Littler as chairman.

The three prime requisites called for by Health Commissioner Young in the ventilation ordinance which it is sought to pass, are:

First.—Twelve hundred cubic feet of air, per hour, per person, in old moving picture houses, and 1,500 cubic feet, per hour, per person, in all new houses.

Second.—The carbon dioxide in the air must not be more than 12 parts in 10,000.

Third.—The temperature of the air must not be less than 40 degrees Fahr., or more than 70 degrees Fahr.

Chicago Film Brevities.

The Rev. Elmer Williams, pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, La Salle and Locust Streets, this city, has introduced a campaign of moving pictures in his church. A presentation is given one night every week in the main auditorium of the church. Mr. Williams started in with George Kleine's "Quo Vadis?", the week of Monday, November 3rd. The reverend gentleman has secured a licensed operator and has purchased a brand new Power's 6A. Mr. Williams is a militant divine, and has done much to clean up the neighborhood in which he lives. Several of the bad characters in the locality have sworn to "get" him, but Mr. Williams has been sworn in as special officer and wears his badge at all times. When out at nights, he carries a big .45 in one of his hip pockets.

H. T. Loper, owner of the Kimbark Theater, 6240 Kimbark Avenue, this city, called at this office and subscribed for the World last week. Mr. Loper is from Springfield, Ill., and recently purchased the Kimbark from the Drexel Amusement Company. The Kimbark seats 700 people and Mutual programs and features are used. The admission is 10 cents for adults and five cents for children. Mr. Loper states that he is satisfied with the business thus far.

Thomas Wills, proprietor of the Royal Theater, Calumet, Mich., paid us a visit Thursday, November 13th. He stated that he was doing fine business with licensed programs at five and ten cents admission. The Royal seats 412 people and gives Saturday and Sunday matinees.

It is with regret that I have to mention the death of Dan S. Fishel, late manager of the Princess Theater, St. Louis. Mr. Fishel was well known in theatrical and circus circles. He was a bright light for several years with the publicity department of Barnum & Bailey's shows. Mr. Fishel died at St. Vincent's sanitarium as the result of a nervous breakdown, due to overwork.

F. J. Flaherty, formerly branch manager of the Mutual, at 164 W. Washington Street, this city, is now assistant to George A. Magie, district manager for the Universal of all the territory west of Pittsburgh. Head offices are at 172 Washington Street, this city.

A meeting of the representatives of manufacturers and exchange managers, regarding censorship in Chicago and the fee of 50 cents charged for each permit received for a film was held in this city, Friday, November 14th. Another meeting will be held in the near future to supplement the action taken at the meeting referred to.

D. J. Jarrett, whose home address is Aurora, Ill., called at this office, Monday, November 17th. Mr. Jarrett stated that he had purchased the State rights for Iowa of "A Prisoner in the Harem" (four reels, by Blache). He started in booking Thursday, November 20th. Mr. Jarrett has just finished playing Wisconsin with the "Inspector of Police" (Belmont), with which he did very fair business.

The members of the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute have been recently illustrating their lectures and valuable health suggestions with moving pictures. These lectures are being given daily for two weeks, at North Hoyne and Barry Avenues. Charts and models showing the causes, prevention and treatment of tuberculosis are exhibited free at the lectures.

The Department of Public Health, Washington, D. C., has also entered the moving picture business. Arrangements were made recently to secure a series of moving pictures showing the health department, the work accomplished by its members and the sanitary means employed to prevent disease throughout the United States. These films will be loaned to moving picture houses throughout the country, with the hope of bringing home to the average American the necessity of keeping his home and person free from contagion.

A clipping from the Panama Herald, of recent date, which has been forwarded me by my friend, H. H. Buckwalter, shows that building activity is the rule in Colon at the present time. Two modern and up-to-date buildings, on Broadway and Seventh Street, that city, and intended for moving picture theaters, are being built by W. E. Weigle, a well known contractor of Colon. It is expected that both theaters will be completed about February 1st.

PORTOLA FESTIVAL IN GOLDEN GATE WEEKLY.

One of the most extensive enterprises ever undertaken for the exploitation of any one section or event through the medium of motion pictures was that planned by the committee in charge of the Portola Festival, the big celebration held in San Francisco last week in commemoration of the discovery of San Francisco Bay by Don Gaspar de Portola, and likewise of the Pacific Ocean by Balboa. The California Motion Picture Corporation, through its "Golden Gate Weekly," was selected for the work and the exclusive right of taking pictures of the more important events granted.

McINTIRE & RICHTER DISSOLVE.

Official notice is given elsewhere of the dissolution, by mutual consent, of the firm of McIntire & Richter, who for the past eighteen months have been carrying on a moving picture exchange at 23 East 14th Street, New York City. The dissolution took effect on the 29th of October, 1913, and it has since developed that Mr. Richter has purchased all of the assets of the partnership. Mr. McIntire has retired from the business, and just what his present plans are is not known. Mr. Richter will continue the business alone, at the same address.

"The Silence of the Dead"

Delightful Romance Splendidly Related in a Five Part Subject by Gaumont.

UTILIZING two novels by M. Pierre Sales, entitled "Vivianxe de Montmoran" and "Le Marquis de Trevenac," the Gaumont Company has produced a most entertaining five-part subject under the title of "The Silence of the Dead." Along with an absorbing story goes a wealth of beautiful scenic effects, gorgeous interiors and views of special interest such as the maneuvers of the French fleet and the launching of a man-of-war, all deftly woven into the fabric of the picture, enhancing its value in point of interest. The photography is of the approved Gaumont quality and the acting is most convincing throughout, the choice of players being almost, if not quite, above question.

The story is too long to give in its entirety, but a brief resume of the plot will reveal its romantic character. Gilbert Trevor, in financial straits and failing to obtain assistance from his mother because he married without her consent, receives aid from a friend, the Baron Montmoran, to whom he presents a jeweled revolver bearing the arms of the family as a slight token of regard. Hardly has Trevor made his departure than the Baron de Kernizan, in dire straights because of his wife's extravagance, applies to Montmoran for money, but in a fit of madness he kills Montmoran as the latter is about to grant his request. Trevor's revolver is the lethal weapon used and it is found near the body of the murdered man, with the result that Trevor is convicted of the crime and sentenced to penal servitude for life. The heart-broken Trevor leaves his little son in the care of his servant, the Fisherman Ponting, and disappears from the scene, afterward committing suicide in his cell. Kernizan denounces his wife and also disappears.

Scene from "The Silence of the Dead" (Gaumont).

Ponting makes an attempt to induce Trevor's mother, the Marchioness de Trevor, to take the child, but she refuses because of her opposition to his marriage with a woman of lowly birth, but she provides money for the boy's education and directs that he be known by the name of Gilbert and never be brought into her presence again.

Fifteen years pass and Philip, the son of the murdered Montmoran, has become a captain in the French navy. His sister is now a beautiful young woman, and Trevor's son, Gilbert, is an ensign in the navy under Captain Philip de Montmoran. They are together on an expedition against the Arabs. Philip is captured by Arab women and Gilbert meets a like fate in an attempt to rescue his captain. The timely arrival of a party of hunters saves their lives, and in the leader of the hunters we recognize Kernizan, the real murderer of Baron de Montmoran.

Returning home after the expedition, Captain Philip gives his consent to the betrothal of Ensign Gilbert and his sister, which he had previously refused because of the supposed lowly origin of the ensign and the young folks are very happy. But when Gilbert tells his guardian, the old fisherman, of his good fortune he is told that the marriage is impossible because he is the son of the man who was condemned for killing the girl's father. While this new misfortune is disturbing the lives of the young people and their friends, Kernizan returns and confesses, dying immediately after of an affection of the heart. The young ensign is restored to favor with his grandmother, becoming her heir to the Trevor name and estates and all is merry as a wedding bell.

"Ten Nights in a Barroom"

The North American Feature Film Company Produces the Famous Old-Time Melodrama in Five Parts.

THAT famous old melodrama, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," from the book of T. S. Arthur, has been done into motion pictures by the Photo Drama Company, under the direction of Lee Beggs, for a long time with the Solax Company. Mr. Beggs also wrote the script. The story is one that is known in every hamlet; for small indeed would be the community that has escaped all of the road shows that have exploited this powerful temperance story. Practical exhibitors are not averse to placing before their patrons a strong moral lesson; they are bound to insist as a pre-requisite, however, that the picture shall furnish entertainment. "Ten Nights in a Barroom" will entertain. It will do more. It will put in a reflective mood nearly every man—and woman—who drinks, and, of course, it will be cited by the partisan non-drinkers as proving all they have said against the use of liquor. Any exhibitor who will take the trouble to give a preliminary showing of this subject to the clergy of his neighborhood should have no difficulty in bringing into his house many persons who heretofore have not been numbered among his patrons.

The picture is well photographed. The film seen by the reviewer was a first print, and contained a few inequalities which undoubtedly will not appear in the finished work. There is a good cast. Robert Vaughan has the role of Joe Morgan, the man who from a successful millowner sounds the lowest depths of the sot, even to the snake phase, and then is reclaimed to society when he is brought to the deathbed of his little daughter; Violet Horner has the part of his wife. Robert Lawrence plays Simon Slade, who buys out a tavern and for a time succeeds in business, but who eventually proves too good a patron of his own bar and meets death at the hand of his son; Marie Trado is Mrs. Slade. Gladys Egan, well known to picturegoers, has the role of the daughter. There are many others in the cast, including the mill owner and his son, the professional gambler and the son of the saloonkeeper. The story presents the worst side of the liquor question. There are many barroom scenes. The story takes no account of the moderate drinker, the man who goes through life and drinks as he feels disposed and then to his grave, leaving behind him friends and money.

In the introduction we are shown a typical village community, with its simple amusements—for instance, a straw ride and dancing. Morgan comes into possession of his father's mill. Slade is an employee, sharp and keen. From boss of the mill he becomes part owner. He sells out and opens a tavern. Morgan, drinking, finally loses his mill and turns loafer. A gambler comes to the little town and makes his headquarters in the tavern. There is a good scene when the gambler is denounced by the saloonkeeper for inveigling his young son into a poker game. We see a contrast between the inside of the prosperous tavernkeeper's home and that of the sot. It is strong. Morgan applies at the mill for work, but is refused. He saves from drowning the son of the millowner, who, drunk, has been thrown from a carriage into the river. The fall is cleverly staged. When the daughter of Morgan goes to the tavern to bring home her father she is struck by the saloonkeeper and mortally hurt as he aims a blow at Morgan. The drunkard has an attack of delirium, in which is introduced a large snake. It is a strong scene, but mercifully short. As he recovers, Morgan promises his dying child that he will stop drinking. He does, becomes a farmer and eventually is given charge of the mill. The gambler gets into a row with a fellow-player and shoots him when there is a protest against cheating. He is killed when on horseback he flees to evade arrest. Slade goes downward, and meets death at the hands of his son.

The closing scenes are of the rehabilitated Morgan, happy in his home and surrounded by his wife and friends. There is a punch at the end as Morgan and his wife think of the daughter whose death had been the means of bringing him to his senses.

---

"THE TERRORS OF RUSSIA" (Italian American).

A sensational three-reel feature, entitled "The Terrors of Russia," will be completed and ready for release in about ten days, by the Italian-American Film Corporation, at 701 Seventh Avenue, Columbia Theater Bldg. This three-part drama is said to be full of heart throbs, and replete with sensational scenes of life in Russia at the present time.

Director George K. Rolands was born in Odessa and is thoroughly versed in the life and persecution of the Russian Jews. One feature of this photoplay is that most of the scenes are being taken in Carmel, N. J., a Jewish colony, and will be enacted by over 500 Jews and Russian peasants.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

EXHIBITORS SHOULD GET TOGETHER.

A United Effort Should Be Made to Prevent Objectionable Legislation.

NECESSITY for organization of the motion picture exhibitors of this country was very pointedly stated by W. C. Eddy, secretary of the Iowa State League, in a letter published in the Moving Picture World of November 15. That the exhibitors of the State of Iowa were preparing to meet any and all emergencies is evident from Secretary Eddy's letter and exhibitors everywhere should take a leaf out of his book and prepare to meet all attempts that are made to unjustly restrict the usefulness of the picture theater.

Organization is the only cure for the activities of the reformer or the politician who attempts to make a reputation for himself at the expense of the motion picture, and there is great need for some curbing influence at this time. It seems to be the popular pastime just now to establish censorships and the aldermen of more than a score of cities are struggling with that question. Other questions dealing with the regulation of picture theaters are being discussed by city lawmakers and civic societies, and it is certain that State legislatures scheduled to meet with the beginning of the coming year will be flooded with proposed legislation for the picture theater. This must be scrutinized and that which is detrimental to the interests of theater owners must be properly combatted.

Failure to meet these issues in the past has resulted in the passage of laws that are a distinct menace to the exhibiting business. For example, in Pennsylvania a bill providing for a State censorship of pictures was slipped through the legislature and signed by the Governor providing for the levying of a tax of $2.50 for each reel of pictures shown in that State. Lack of funds for the administration of this law is the only thing that has prevented its enforcement. A similar law was passed by the Kansas Legislature. There is no assurance that other States will not take like action if no effort is made by the exhibitors to prevent. Other equally obnoxious laws may be put on the statute books at any time if the motion picture theater managers do not exercise more vigilance in future than they have in the past.

The proper action for every exhibitor to take is to see that his name is enrolled upon the membership books of his State association and to attend its meetings. It is the duty of every State organization to set a proper watch upon the actions of the legislators of its State that no legislative act affecting picture theaters may be proposed that is not given a proper hearing before it is passed and that, before it is permitted to became a law, the interests of the theater manager shall be fully considered.

It is not the purpose of the Moving Picture World to oppose the passage of legislation for the proper safeguarding of the public, but when this is being done there should be proper consideration shown for the theater manager. Usually the theater manager is not considered if he is not represented at the time the laws are being made. The only remedy is for him to be on the ground, either personally or in the person of his duly authorized representatives. This is imperative. There is only one way to insure such representation; that is by organization.

As a matter of information to exhibitors who are not in touch with the organization of theater men in their respective States, the Moving Picture World will publish next week names of the officers of the national league and its State branches, to whom they should write regarding membership. It is important that all should become affiliated with the established organization wherever one exists.

PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITORS WAKE UP.

Philadelphia exhibitors are reminded of the great open organization meeting which is to be held on the first Sunday in December in the Parkway Building at 2:30 p.m. It is of the utmost importance that all the exhibitors attend. Many subjects of great and immediate importance to the welfare of exhibitors will be taken up and speakers from out of town will address the meeting. A circular has been sent to all exhibitors in Philadelphia clearly setting forth the necessity of attending. The Philadelphia organization was at one time one of the strongest in the country and it is earnestly hoped that it will resume its old-time strength. All the questions to be taken up at the meeting are of vital interest. Chairman Jeffries expects to see a grand and harmonious meeting. Remember the date—Sunday, December 7th.

IOWA STATE CONVENTION.

The Iowa State branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America will hold on Tuesday and Wednesday, December 2-3, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, its third annual convention. State Secretary W. C. Eddy is giving his personal attention in directing an active campaign to have this convention the largest ever held by the State organization.

Tuesday morning, December 2nd, will be devoted to receiving the members and non-members of the league, also allowing all exhibitors to inspect the trade exhibits. The first business meeting will open at 2 p.m. and at this meeting representatives of the trades and film exchange managers will address the meeting. In the evening the visitors will be entertained by the Commercial Club of Cedar Rapids. Wednesday, December 3rd, there will be two business meetings of the league and the visitors being entertained in the evening.

Convention Chairman A. J. Diebold, of the Palace Theater, Cedar Rapids, is leaving no stone unturned to make this convention a big success, and Dr. Diebold will be pleased to supply all information in regard to program and exhibit space.

National Secretary Wiley will be in attendance and address the meeting on many important matters and every exhibitor in the State of Iowa, whether he is a member of the league or not, is urged to attend this big convention and learn many things, which will be of great benefit to him

Let the slogan be "On To Cedar Rapids."

MINNESOTA BRANCH WITHDRAWS FROM LEAGUE.

Otto N. Raths, president of the Minnesota State organization of exhibitors, visited Chicago, Thursday, November 13th, and made a call at the World's Chicago office. He reported that the Minnesota branch had severed connection with the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, the action having been taken on October 16 by the unanimous adoption of a resolution by the State executive committee, the resolution being referred to members by a referendum vote.

It was resolved, "That a temporary organization of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Minnesota be and is hereby organized with the following officers to wit: President, Otto N. Raths, St. Paul; vice-president, A. B. Robbins, Winona; assistant secretary, Miss Sadie Foley, St. Paul; treasurer, H. A. Sherman, Minneapolis. Executive Committee—C. E. Van Duzee, Minneapolis; J. Gilowsky, St. Paul; A. R. McLean, Virginia; John Christopherson, Benson, and John Wentworth, Spring Valley."

It was also further resolved, "That the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Minnesota be conducted for the Minnesota exhibitors alone, with no affiliation with any national league."

Mr. Raths stated that this position will be maintained by the State organization until the present strife and bitterness have been eliminated.

NEW YORK CITY ASSOCIATION MEETS.

A meeting of the New York City Exhibitors' Association was held at the Imperial Hotel on Wednesday morning, November 12. The question of proper sanitation was discussed by Dr. Loughran, director of the Laboratory of Industrial Hygiene and Sanitation, who explained that he had devised a plan for the proper sanitation of picture theaters. Messrs. Brandt, Rosenson, Hollender, Germain and Fleischman were appointed a committee to consult with Dr. Loughran.

Questions relating to the enforcement of the Folks picture theater ordinance were discussed by Architect Franklin Hunt.

Alderman John A. Bolles spoke upon the subject of an amendment designed to reduce the license fee for picture theaters which had been introduced in the New York Board of Aldermen by him. The standee law was also discussed by Rudolph Sanders, chairman of the law committee of the association.

Matters pertaining to the forthcoming exhibitors' ball were also considered.

EAST NEW YORK EXHIBITORS MEET.

The exhibitors of the East New York branch of the New York City Association held a meeting at the Bunny Theater, 2067 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., recently and the following committee was appointed to assist with the promotion of the exhibitors' ball: Mr. Forester, Mr. Schultz, Wm. Ensler, Mr. Freiberg, W. B. Fulmer, Mrs. Ewold, Miss Forester and Miss Shank.

PRESIDENT NEFF IN NEW YORK.

President M. A. Neff, of the National League, was in New York City during the week of November 10 and held several conferences with representatives of the State branches of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania at the Hotel McAlpin. President Jeffries, of Philadelphia, came over to meet President Neff and plans for awaking interest among the exhibitors of Pennsylvania were discussed.

KATHLEEN KERRIGAN IN UNIVERSAL PLAY.

An event which has been hinted at and looked forward to ever since J. Warren Kerrigan became an international screen star, is to become a fact. Kathleen Kerrigan, formerly Mrs. Clay Clement, one of the foremost actresses of this country and sister of J. Warren Kerrigan, has consented to fill a special engagement with the Universal during the gigantic production of Samson and Delilah, which is to begin at once.

Kathleen Kerrigan.

The novel and interesting feature of Miss Kerrigan's engagement is that she will play the part of Delilah against Mr. Kerrigan's Samson. It is this combination which has so long been looked forward to by photoplaygoers.

"So many admirers of mine," says Mr. Kerrigan, "call on Kathleen on my account and many of them have been considerate enough to express their wish that she and I might be seen on the screen at the same time. To this end I have been after her myself for some time, but, previous to this, she had always refused the invitation."

Aside from the interest of seeing Mr. and Miss Kerrigan playing against each other, Mr. Bernstein, general manager of the Pacific Coast Studios, is certain that the capability and remarkable personality of Miss Kerrigan is the last act to be accomplished which will make "Samson and Delilah" the greatest production ever attempted.

In an original production, and ever since, Miss Kerrigan has played the part of "Truth" in "Everywoman." The first of the year she begins a new engagement with Henry W. Savage. She starred in her own company in "The Lady of Lyons." When she was sixteen years old she began her stage experience with Frank Mayo in "David Crockett." She has played leads with Robert Mantell in Shakespeare. After having left the stage for ten years she returned and played lead with Clay Clement in "Sam Houston."

NEW YORK EXHIBITORS BALL.

The New York Exhibitors' Association is getting active on the subject of the third annual exhibitors' ball. Read the advertisement on page 1057 of this issue; it gives information regarding the sale of tickets. The big event takes place on the evening of Dcember 15 at Terrace Garden, East 58th Street, New York.

MARY PICKFORD WITH FAMOUS PLAYERS.

To Work Under Edwin S. Porter in a Studio to be Opened in Los Angeles.

Dismissing numerous rumors that she had been contemplating other offers from various film concerns, joint announcement comes from Mary Pickford and the Famous Players' Film Company, that the popular motion picture star will remain indefinitely with that concern. The news of this continued connection must be gratifying to all exhibitors and others interested in the advancement of the motion picture, as Mary Pickford's work has never been shown to better advantage than in the Famous Players' productions. Her characterizations in "Caprice" and "In the Bishop's Carriage" have been qualified by trade critics as the most brilliant efforts of her phenomenally successful moving picture career, and her future work in the pretentious subjects which the Famous Players are selecting for her will give her delicate art full scope for expression and artistic value.

Miss Pickford is termed by many the most popular motion picture star in the world, and has attained this success at a surprisingly young age and solely upon her own merits and talents. Before she adopted moving picture work she had been under the management of David Belasco, and last year when the great producer sought some one to play the part of Juliet, the blind girl, and the feminine lead in "A Good Little Devil," a part that called for unusual talent and the ability to express emotion in a quiet and simple manner, he thought of Mary Pickford. So it was that after an interval of four years Miss Pickford returned to the management of David Belasco and added to her fame as a film star the glory of a stage triumph. Evidently Miss Pickford is faithful to the camera, for she has been with the Famous Players ever since the making of the screen version of "A Good Little Devil," and has now, in the face of many flattering offers, abandoned the stage indefinitely to remain with that concern.

In a statement to the press, "Little Mary" said: "My decision to remain with the Famous Players' Film Company should not be surprising. After my connection with David Belasco in 'A Good Little Devil,' and my more recent association with the Famous Players, I could not consider any other affiliation. I am very proud and happy to know that Mr. Zukor has enough confidence in me to let me play some of the great parts that have been made famous on the stage, and I dearly hope my work will please the vast motion picture public, whose encouragement and kindness are my greatest inspiration."

The Famous Players' Film Company has opened a studio in Los Angeles, which will be under the management and direction of Edwin S. Porter. Miss Pickford is now on her way to Los Angeles, where she will resume her work for the Famous Players in several famous subjects which Mr. Porter now has ready for production. The interest of the film world will unquestionably be focused on the work of Miss Pickford and Mr. Porter in the West.

CORSE PAYTON'S THEATER BECOMES FEATURE FILM HOUSE.

Corse Payton's Theater, Lee Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., for the last thirteen years the home of stock, has switched to motion pictures and from this week will be devoted exclusively to feature films. The price of admission to matinees is ten cents, and to the evening performances fifteen and twenty-five cents is asked; the latter prices will hold on Sundays and holidays. For the first three days, November 17th to 19th, Pasquali's "Last Days of Pompeii" was shown, and to such big business that it has been recalled for three days more in the near future. Following Pompeii, will come "Sapho," "One Hundred Years of Mormonism," "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" and James O'Neil in "Monte Cristo." This shows a wakeful management and looks forward to a rich success in the new field.

SOME DOCTOR—WHAT?

George Terwilliger's medicine practice in Fort Dodge, Iowa, a few years ago was very useful the other day in aiding Earl Metcalfe, who was injured during the filming of a Lubin photoplay. The Shakespeare of The Silent Drama ordered his patient taken to his office in the scenario department where, with the assistance of Lawrence S. McCloskey and Nurse M. B. Havey, he applied restoratives. In a few moments Metcalfe was brought to. Upon the young physician's orders Eminent Campbell Hall took the patient in his motor to a nearby hospital, where it was discovered that had it not been for Terwilliger's prompt action, the young Lubin actor would have been a splendid case for the local physician.

At the Sign of the Flaming Arcs.

By George Blaisdell.

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company makes an announcement this week that will have much interest for many branches of the industry. Robert Cochrane, the treasurer of the company, states that in response to requests from exhibitors the Universal has decided to increase its output in comedies and comedy-dramas. Arrangements have been completed for the filming of ten comedy reels a week. This means nearly double the present number of comedy pictures. Mr. Cochrane said that the company was seeking comedy directors—good ones, the real article. He said the highest salaries would be paid both for directors and for comedy and comedy-drama scenarios. It was intended to give a director a good story and a strong company, carte blanche in the making of the picture—if he prove worthy of it—on the theory that in a comedy the essential factor is the working out, the business, the acting, the direction; that the producer would be permitted to spend all the money necessary to get results and that he would not be hampered. There's a big But right here. It is that the company will expect results. Mr. Cochrane said that some of the Universal's big stars would be seen in comedies, such players as King Baggot, Edwin August and Florence Lawrence.

"To scenario writers," added Mr. Cochrane, "we promise quick action on every script submitted. If we do not want the story it will be returned immediately. If we decide to accept it we will, besides paying the highest prices, return a check just as promptly. We want comedies and comedy-dramas of all sorts, from the so-called slap-stick up to the highest class. Of the former we expect to make about two reels a week, leaving eight reels for the straight stuff; there will be two-reel and one-reel subjects, as well as half reels. Scripts may be submitted either to the Hollywood studio or to the home office at 1600 Broadway. If such stories are directed to the comedy scenario department it will be appreciated."

* * *

One of the amusement companies to select its feature program on a merit basis is that of William Fox. Mr. Carlos, who represents the Fox circuit, is much in evidence at the private projection rooms these days picking what he deems to be winners. One of his latest selections is "The Sea Wolf" of Bosworth. This department of the Fox company has expanded so rapidly that it is said independent quarters will shortly be opened by Mr. Carlos in the film district.

* * *

Dave Wall, who has recently made distinct hits in several of the Famous Players productions, notably "In the Bishop's Carriage" and "The Port of Doom," has joined the Biograph forces and is working in stock.

* * *

Ingvald C. Oes, of the Great Northern, is anxiously awaiting the arrival of the first print of his company's nine-reel "Atlantis," the coming of which is also the occasion of much interest among film men. Mr. Oes says the feature will be here in a few weeks. The photographic sharps are particularly concerned. They know the marvelous quality of the laboratory work on the ordinary output of the Copenhagen corporation and are not to be blamed for wondering what the screen will reveal in the Bear's most ambitious effort. Mr. Oes has received the still prints of the fifth picture in the series of six in which Mme. Betty Nansen, the distinguished Danish tragedienne, appears. Mme. Nansen has succeeded in her impersonations before the camera beyond expectation. The finished pictures prove that the company was more than justified in the unusual expenditure it contracted for to secure the services of the eminent actress.

* * *

William Welsh, it was announced on this page a couple of weeks ago, joined the Biograph company. Mr. Welsh was a member for a long time of Mr. Brenon's Imp company. When the Universal director returned from Europe, one of the first things he did was to induce Mr. Welsh to return to the Eleventh Avenue studio. The whole company was behind the director, so what could "Billy" do? Mr. Welsh's latest picture was the six-part "Traffic in Souls," in which he appeared as the Man Higher Up. There was in the role a whole lot of opportunity for real work, and Mr. Welsh did it right.

* * *

Albert Blinkhorn, American agent for Hepworth Films and Turner Films, reports that already he has contracts for twelve prints for all his pictures. Other deals are pending. Mr. Blinkhorn says he will put out at least one big feature every week and will also release split reels.

* * *

Miss Margaret I. MacDonald has joined the reviewing staff of the Dramatic Mirror.

Vivian Prescott, whose work in Biograph comedies and dramas will be well remembered by picture followers, has returned to her first love after an absence from the screen for a period. Miss Prescott was leading woman for a year in the Imp company, where she did fine work in serious parts, and before her retirement was for a short time with the Lubin company. The screen seems to possess a lure for players as well as followers. 'Tis well. The return of Miss Prescott will be heartily welcomed.

* * *

Jack Cohen, at the head of the assembling department in the Imp studio, has taken a similar position at the Biograph plant. Mr. Cohen worked on the first release produced by the Imp company. That was five years ago. Practically all of the big productions of the Universal company have passed through his hands.

* * *

Ben Goetz, manager of the Crystal studio, is receiving congratulations on his approaching marriage to Miss Goldie Feldstein, the date for which happy event is set for early in the new year. On the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day, Mr. Goetz will give a reception to the "boys" at the Waldorf-Astoria. If we may be permitted to utter a word of warning, based on a personal experience in a rehearsal or preliminary canter for the Thanksgiving Day occasion, the "boys" will be well advised to leave word at home that the hour of their return is uncertain. Just ask Ben Schulberg if it is not so.

* * *

William F. Haddock went to Cuba recently with Augustus Thomas and Richard Harding Davis to look after the technical end of the filming of Mr. Davis' "Soldiers of Fortune." The first run of the film on the screen looked so good to the powers that be in the All Star Corporation camp that Silent Bill was promptly added to the producing staff of the Thomas organization. Simultaneously with the announcement of the foregoing came the news of the approaching marriage of the new All Star director. The date was November 19; the bride was Miss Rosa Koch, of Brooklyn. The Haddocks will, in the spring, become residents of Brooklyn, where a house in the Midwood section is now being prepared for their occupancy. A long life to both, with their full measure of health, happiness and prosperity.

* * *

Screeners will say on awakening on the morning of Saturday, "To-night's the night." The occasion will be the housewarming at the new club house, at 165 West Forty-seventh Street. The cards announce that the heat will be turned on at noon. Nothing is said as to the hour that will mark its turning off. Oversight, perhaps; and then again perhaps not. What a gathering of film men it will be—a fraternizing that a couple of years ago would hardly have been possible! Changes have taken place in the picture industry, and in the demolition of imaginary high fences the Screen Club has been a potent factor. More power to it and long life to it—and the same goes to its sister organization on the coast!

PASQUALI "POMPEII" GOING BIG.

The success of the Pasquali production, "The Last Days of Pompeii," has opened the eyes of the managers of houses who have been playing legitimate attractions when they could get them. Frequently these houses have been getting on attraction a week, and at other times the house has been dark.

The only reason most of these managers have taken the Pasquali picture is because it was booked to them by Klaw & Erlanger, who controlled their houses. Klaw & Erlanger have been flooded with telegrams since the picture has played, asking for an extension of the bookings and for return dates, showing that most of these managers have had a revelation as to the possibilities of the pictures as business getters.

The Pasquali Company is sending out new road companies to meet this demand as fast as they can be organized, but up to date have not been able to keep up with their bookings.

ACME LITHOGRAPHING COMPANY'S ADDRESS.

Through an unaccountable inadvertence we stated in our last issue that the Acme Lithographing Company's address was at 47th Street and Broadway, whereas it is the Marfield Building, newly erected at the corner of 47th Street and Eleventh Avenue. Our reporter must have been thinking of the Screen Club. The Acme Company is a new venture, but is already as busy as though it had been going for years. The eight presses are fairly snatching bundles of paper off the elevator.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE PAY-AS-YOU-ENTER MAN" (Essanay).

A few words of praise must be given the camera men who photographed this picture, as the photography is magnificently beautiful. Rarely have we seen such an excellent example of photographic quality.

Richard C. Travers, in playing the title role of the "pay-as-you-enter" man—a clerk in a large department store earning the enormous salary of twenty dollars a week, and supporting his wife and three children on it—must have given the character considerable study, for he puts it over admirably. This is the foundation of the story, and, when the holiday season opens and the clerk is without funds to buy a turkey for their holiday dinner, he is indeed blue. Some friends of his tell him that in a certain buffet they are raffling off turkeys on a paddle wheel. The clerk tries his luck and is rewarded with a big fourteen pound turkey—and by being arrested. The bartender and the participants in the gambling scheme are taken hurriedly to the police station where the clerk is told he will have to remain in jail over the holiday, unless he can find somebody to go his bond. The detective (Chas. Hitchcock), plays a friendly turn for him and telephones Mr. Straussman (E. H. Calvert), the clerk's employer. Mr. Straussman, although never having seen the man in mention, hastens to the police court, where he not only bails his clerk out, but promises him a raise in salary for his faithfulness in service. The silk clerk returns to his home where he breaks the good news to his wife (Irene Warfield). The turkey that has been his constant companion during his short term in the police cell is spared it's life on account of the good luck it has brought to the family. Another one is purchased and a holiday such as the family never had before, is celebrated the following day. The portrayal of characters is excellent and altogether this two reel feature is indeed a worthy deadline attraction. This production is booked for release December 6th.

Scene from "The Pay-As-You-Enter Man" (Essanay).

---

JOHN F. DOLAN DEAD.

John F. Dolan, manager of the Lyric Theater, of Dover, N. H., died on November 13 after a short illness. Mr. Dolan was born at Coxsackie, N. Y., January 1, 1870, and was a resident of New York City for several years, being identified with the politics of the 15th assembly district. After a brief residence in Boston he bought the Lyric Theater at Dover about four years ago, which he conducted successfully until the time of his death.

"THE HUNCHBACK" (Kalem).

"The Hunchback" deals with the efforts of a degenerate cripple, whose mind is even more deformed than his body, to force Marie, a wholesome, lovable girl into a marriage with him. By assuming the identity of a boy who was injured as the result of her carelessness years previous, this misshapen brute appeals to her sense of duty by declaring she can make reparation only by marrying him.

Tom Moore gives a wonderful portrayal as the hunchback. While this splendid Kalem performer makes the cripple absolutely repulsive, he also contrives to arouse a sense of pity for the unfortunate man. One feels that the hunchback's tigerish nature is due to the constant illusions to his deformity. And this feeling of pity remains with the observer even when the cripple is seen committing a murder in a way which shocks to the very core.

Scene from "The Hunchback" (Kalem).

As the unhappy girl, Alice Joyce is a splendid contrast to the hunchback. In the scene which shows "Humpty" Johnson presenting his demand to Marie, one feels a sense of impotence at being unable to reach out and save the lovable, delicate girl from the wretched degenerate. The acting throughout the picture is of unusually high standard. It will be released Monday, December 15th.

---

TRIPLE EXPOSURES IN NEW GOLD SEAL PLAY.

A remarkable picture as regards cinematography is in course of production at the Pacific Coast studios of the Universal at Hollywood, Cal. It is entitled, "The Twins' Double," and is in three reels. Francis Ford is the director and the scenario was written by Grace Cunard, Mr. Ford's leading woman.

The novel feature of this film is that Miss Cunard impersonates three people, twins and their double, and that in one scene all three people are on the screen at the same time. This is accomplished by means of a difficult triple exposure. It is especially difficult in that all three women talk to each other simultaneously.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS' NEW PLAY.

Kathlyn Williams' new Selig play, projected and completed under her own direction, is called "The Leopard's Foundling" and is a new note in dramatic daring in dealing with the oarnivora as though the treacherous big cats were the most tractable and gentle of animals. Miss Williams herself plays the leading part and has devised the series of interesting scenes and situations quite unusual in this line of entertainment.

"A WAIF OF THE DESERT" (Lubin).

The stories of the pioneer days are romantic and fascinating and "A Waif of the Desert" tells one of the most dramatic episodes ever staged or written. In the days when hundreds of emigrant trains braved the perils of the desert and mountains for weeks and months to reach the El Dorado of the West, many tragedies were recorded and hundreds of lives lost by landslide, privations and redskin opposition, leaving perhaps only a few to tell the gruesome tale. The Lubin picture will tell one of these stories that is very impressive.

In the early fifties an emigrant party of twenty-four people were lost in the desert between Salt Lake and the Sierras and all died except Zeke Stevens and Chispa, a child of the Munro's. Death seems inevitable when they are rescued by another emigrant train headed by James Osborne and taken into California. Ten years pass and Zeke Stevens is part owner of a lumber camp, Chispa, now about seventeen, being the only woman in the camp and despite the disparity of age, Zeke has fallen desperately in love with her. Some newcomers come into the neighborhood, a Mrs. Osborne and her daughter Grace, as guests of Harry Sinclair, a prosperous lumber man. Recognizing the Osbornes as part of the party who brought Stevens and Chispa into California, a holiday is declared and Chispa becomes infatuated with Sinclair. At the dance Stevens quarrels with Sinclair and is invited outside. A shot is fired from the bushes and Sinclair is wounded. Stevens is arrested, but acquitted. It is then resolved to drive the Osbornes out of the community. The two men meet and Chispa overhears Sinclair declare that he will marry no other than Grace. Chispa is heartbroken and wanders into the mountains where she is found by a rescue party. Eventually the two men marry the girls of their choice, a revival of the old maxim "What must be will be."

Scene from "A Waif of the Desert" (Lubin).

SOLAX GROWING.

The steady growth of the Solax and Blaché companies has made it almost imperative that an addition to their already commodious plant in Fort Lee be built. The new plant, the foundation of which is being laid now, will be 50 x 100 and built of steel and concrete and two stories high. It will be joined to their present plant measuring 100 x 150 by a steel bridge. The factory, laboratory and dark rooms will be moved into the new building and the space acquired will be utilized in the old building for office, studio and shipping purposes.

It is also announced by these companies that they will give a Solax and Blaché feature service in five centers, from Buffalo, covering New York State, outside of Greater New York; Indianapolis, covering Indiana and Kentucky; St Louis, covering Missouri and Southern Illinois; Kansas City, covering Kansas, Arkansas, Colorado and Northern Oklahoma, and Atlanta, covering the 8 Southern states of Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Louisiana. They are now taking bookings for the following features: "The Rogues of Paris," 4 reels; "Star of India," 4 reels; "A Prisoner in the Harem," 4 reels; "A Fight for Millions."

The Solax and Blaché companies together release two features a month. They expect not only to confine their operations to the exploitation of the Solax and Blaché output but will also buy outside makes in time.

"THE INFLUENCE OF SYMPATHY" (Victor).

Needless to say, Miss Florence Lawrence, now being featured in Universal Victor dramas, is one of the most versatile actresses ever seen on the screen. She has won her way to the hearts of a great host of friends, though a variety of roles. There are some of you who prefer to see this genius cast, perhaps as a little country harum-scarum, unwise to the ways of the world; there are some of you who prefer to see her in the part of a butterfly in the city, and then again there are some who prefer to see her in the more serious moods, playing a deep emotional character which demands the highest intelligence and a strong physique. All parts are found in Miss Lawrence's category of roles. She is bound in no particular part so far as her ability is concerned. She makes only one demand—that the play be a real play pulsating with genuine emotions—true to its interpretations of life. Such is the present play.

In "The Influence of Sympathy," to be released December 5th, Miss Lawrence is a young mother, with a strong temperament whose very life is threatened through an overpowering grief—the loss of her baby. She seems on the verge of decline, and to console her the husband adopts a child from the Orphanage Asylum. This child, wilful in spirit, hasty in temper, does not conform to the mother's idea of what her own baby should be. In the following scenes showing her grief, Miss Lawrence plays upon the heart strings of the spectator with a skill akin to that of the master violinist upon the concert platform.

Scene from "The Influence of Sympathy" (Victor).

SCOFIELD TAKES GLORIA AGENCY.

W. H. Scofield, formerly of the Ambrosio American Co., has just returned from Europe after a two months trip through the film centers of England, France, Germany and Italy. He has secured the agency for La Film Artistio Gloria, of Torino, Italy, for the United States and Canada, these films are produced under the direction of Mr. Mario Caserini, known to the film world as the chief producer with the Cines and Ambrosio Co. The leading man is Mario Bonnard whose name is world renowned for his impersonation of Satan in the film of that name, the leading lady is Lyda Borelli, long known on the stage as Italy's foremost artist and perhaps the highest priced artist in the film world. At any rate, Mr. Scofield says her acting will be a revelation to the American picture theater audience.

W. H. Scofield.

A company has already been formed to be known as the Gloria American Co. with offices in the World's Tower Bldg., 110 West 40th Street, these offices are now being fitted and will be ready in a few days.

The first Gloria to be released in this country is "The Ghost Club," in six parts, featuring Sr. Bonnard, which will be ready to show in about a week's time. This film has made a decided hit in London and is expected to go well here.

"A MODERN PORTIA" (Patheplay).

Isabel Vincent, a successful and charming woman lawyer, is called by her client, Mrs. Norman, to draw up a will leaving her fortune to her niece, Helen. That there may be no question about Mrs. Norman's soundness of mind at the time of the drawing of the will, Dr. Carpel is called to testify to her mental fitness. After the document has been duly signed, Isabel starts for her home in a motor car and is injured in an accident. When taken to the hospital she is attended by Dr. Carpel, who soon falls in love with her. Not long after her recovery they are engaged to be married. But Isabel sees only one side of the doctor's character. He is a gambler and so heavily in debt that he is threatened with disgrace at his club. At this critical time he receives an urgent message calling him to the home of Mrs. Norman, who is dying. He goes to a desk to write a prescription and his eye falls on the box in which valuable papers and money are kept. Unable to resist the temptation, he steals the contents of the box, but is so doing his actions are reflected in a mirror and Mrs. Norman sees the theft. The last moments of her life are spent in writing a note declaring that she saw Dr. Carpel appropriate the money.

Scene from "A Modern Portia" (Patheplay).

In searching for the money Helen finds a flower in the desk similar to the one worn by the doctor on the day of his last visit. She hurries to Isabel for advice. An investigation is commenced and the young woman lawyer is forced to recognize the guilt of the man she had intended to marry within a few weeks. Bravely sinking personal feeling in a larger sense of duty to her client, Isabel presses the case in court and suffers the agony of being the means of securing her lover's conviction.

FORTUNE TO BE SPENT ON "SAMSON AND DELILAH."

For twelve weeks sculptors, architects, costumers, property designers and makers, scene painters and carpet makers, have been busy at the Universal Pacific Coast studios in constructing the properties for the gigantic production of "Samson and Delilah" which is now under way.

Mr. Isidore Bernstein, general manager of the western branch of the Universal, is giving this big project his personal attention and interest. Before a tool was sharpened for this master production, exhaustive research into biblical lore was made which included the collecting of a good-sized library dealing with architecture, manners, customs, costumes, designs of household articles and statuary.

The temple columns which Samson rends from their foundation are twenty-seven feet high, the highest and most massive which have been used in motion pictures. So technically correct to history are these properties to be that even such small objects as vases, goblets and small articles of wearing apparel have been given days of consideration and research prior to their manufacture.

Six foot semi-conical shields, such as were used in this period, are being turned out by the carpenter and papier-mache departments. It is estimated that the properties in this production alone will cost the Universal Company in excess of $7,000. The sets are of such dimensions that they will accommodate as many as 1,500 people at one time. As these large props now stand they cover an acre of ground.

One of the busiest men on the job is Frank Armston, technical director, in whose department these properties are designed.

"A DIVORCE SCANDAL" (American).

A society drama in which a young newspaper reporter displays commendable aggressiveness to secure a much coveted raise in salary. This increase in salary means much to the young man as upon it hinges his marriage to a young woman he has courted for some time. By drastic action the reporter secures certain letters upon which are based a divorce action in a prominent society family. Disguised as a milkman the reporter gains entrance to the home of the society woman. While lavishing his attentions on the maid, he is surprised by his sweetheart who enters the room. The shock of what she sees causes her to drop the packet of letters. Quickly acquiring the letters he makes his escape, leaving the maid to her fate—his sweetheart to her sorrows.

Scene from "A Divorce Scandal" (American).

The production shows a modern newspaper office with all its equipment, including the linotype machines and press room, in full operation. An interesting and educational feature worked in with good effect. Here the reporter and editor have rather an excited interview with the fair divorcee and her friend, the reporter's sweetheart. Later the reporter calls on his sweetheart, but it requires the suave manner of the editor to mend the breach. The lovers are happily reunited, but how their future pans out is not treated in the subject.

The photographic quality and the dramatic are characteristic of the Flying A productions. Ed Coxen plays lead and is supported by Winnifred Greenwood and an able cast. The subject will be released December 6th.

GRIFFITH ENGAGES SCREEN NOTABLES.

At the Reliance studios, 262nd Street and Riverdale Avenue, New York, David W. Griffith has already taken personal charge of affairs and is surrounding himself with an array of moving picture talent that covers every department of the producing end of the business from directors and camera experts to screen favorites.

The directors now at work include Christ Cabanne, Eugene Sanger, Edgar Lewis, Carl Le Viness, Travers Vale, and George Reehm. Added to these well-known names, in the near future will be James Kirkwood and Eddie Dillon. Director Sanger was one of the Reliance's first directors, so that both he and Mr. Kirkwood are simply returning to the scene of former activities.

Billy Ritzer, camera expert, has joined the Reliance forces and the familiar faces of Mary Marsh, Robert Harron, Donald Crisp, Fred and Robert Burns, Eagle Eye, and numerous other notables are seen about the studio. Mazie Star probably heads the list of coming players to be announced in the near future. The new scenario department is headed by Frank Woods, who is located with his staff at the Mutual offices at 71 West 23rd Street, New York.

PHIL GLEICHMAN BACK FROM SOUTH.

Phil Gleichman, of the World Special Films Corporation, has just returned from a trip down South. He reports that the feature business is receiving a tremendous impetus by the exhibitor and that the business is in a more flourishing condition than ever before known. From now on he will spend considerable time at the home office allowing E. Mandelbaum to make a trip to the coast for the purpose of opening additional offices.

"THE MASTER OF THE GARDEN" (Selig).

A curious idyllic play, showing one side of the picture almost divine, and another stained deeply scarlet—Lanier Bartlett has achieved for Selig a play of striking modernity, harking back in its beautiful dissolves to the Master of the Scriptures and the Savior of us all. It is a very difficult and delicate subject to handle, but has been accomplished in a skilful and picturesque way. The illustration gives some idea of the types from the shadowy ways of the underworld that follow the path of the hapless heroine, but stop fearsomely at the borders of her Paradise where the Master welcomes her. This picture will be released December 8th.

Scene from "The Master of the Garden" (Selig).

"SIR HIGHWAYMAN" (Warner's Features).

A feature in three parts which depicts the thrilling adventures of a bandit who robbed for revenge and justice. Little Rex Marlowe is driven from home by a drunken father, who has been entrusted with the baby daughter of his deceased friend, John Ainsworth. Barely able to understand what has happened, little Rex sees his father killed and his adopted sister robbed of the property which should descend to her.

The scene shifts West. The members of the crime ring, responsible for the murder of Rex's father, have prospered through their ill-gotten gains. Rex becomes "Sir Highwayman" and steals from only those who have killed his father and robbed his baby sister. Rex falls in love with Scotty Ainsworth, not knowing that she is his adopted sister and playmate of former years. Scotty is rescued by "Sir Highwayman" when her horse throws her and they become aware of each other's identity. He justifies himself in her eyes by confessing that his sole motive in leading the life of a highwayman is to restore her rightful property, and he promises to place her money at a certain spot the next day. He does so, but Teef, the son of one of the members of the crime ring, steals the money. Later he is capturd by "Sir Highwayman," and the money is restored to Scotty.

Scene from "Sir Highwayman" (Warner's).

The story also introduces an Indian girl, named Oteka, whose father, "Sir Highwayman" rescues from a band of rustlers, and whose gratitude is so great that he reveals the hiding place of an old Aztec treasure.

"THE FINGER OF FATE" (Patheplay).

An unusually strong two-reel drama with a moral that is obvious, and with Eleanor Woodruff and Irving Cummings in the leading parts. Through visiting her sick mother in the hospital Marjorie Grayson becomes acquainted with a young doctor who is in attendance there. An intimate friendship springs up between them and Marjorie's visits to her mother become less frequent as she spends much of the time in the doctor's company. Her mother is released from the hospital at last and returns to her home. Learning of her daughter's new attachment she is deeply disturbed by it. Marjorie accepts an invitation to dine with the doctor in his apartment, since loving him she trusts him. The doctor, while waiting for his guest, falls asleep and in his dreams sees vividly pictured the inevitable result if he takes advantage of the girl's innocence; the sorrow and shame which would be her lot. The dream creates so strong an impression upon his mind that when Marjorie comes to his door he will not admit her to his apartment but takes her instead to a minister who marries them.

Scene from "The Finger of Fate" (Patheplay).

BETTY SCHADE JOINS UNIVERSAL.

The beautiful and accomplished Betty Schade, for the past three years a favorite on the screen, has been engaged by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to play second leads in Otis Turner's company. Miss Schade has the distinction of being one of the few photoplayers who has never been on the legitimate stage.

She was born in Berlin, Germany, but was taken to Chicago by her parents while still a baby. Her first experience in motion picture work was with Selig at Chicago, where she worked for some time under the direction of Mr. Turner. Miss Schade was with the Essanay for two years. She comes to the Universal from the American.

MIDGAR IMPORTING EUROPEAN FEATURES.

Mr. G. Blake Garrison, who is at present in Hamburg, has cabled to Midgar Features at the New York office, 135 West 44th Street, stating that he has just closed an exclusive contract to handle all of the H. A. Muller releases in America.

Mr. Cecil Charles Graham, general manager, said: "This is a notable contract as Mr. Muller is well known in the moving picture field in Hamburg and, in fact, all through continental Europe. He is a man of vast experiences personally, and his staff, from producer to stage carpenter, is one of the best in Europe. We have looked over some of the advance scenarios and the first one to be released, "The Mystery of Richmond Castle," is a picture of unusual rapid action throughout its entire length. "Something is doing every minute that this film is on the screen."

"WORLD'S SPECIAL" GROWING.

The plan of marketing films as outlined by the World Special Films Corporation to the manufacturer seems to have met with favor. Many propositions have been made to them by manufacturers, both American and European, to handle their output. They started out with the intention of having ten offices open by the first of January, which they considered ample for their needs, but so many inquiries came to the home office from territory in which they had no offices that they were compelled to enlarge on their original plan and now they have seventeen in operation, with five more to follow within the course of thirty days, which will give them a chain of offices extending from New York to San Francisco. The growth of this organization has been an endless source of wonder to all branches of the film industry, but so much has been offered to them in long-reel subjects worthy of being shown, that it was absolutely necessary to expand their operations in order to do full justice to these products.

The Bijou Dream, Philadelphia, did such a tremendous business with the World Special Films Corporation's "Protea" that they have booked it for a three-day repeat. They report the biggest business of the year done with this five-reel thriller.

---

BARON FASSINI NOT HEAD OF AMBROSIO.

Through an oversight in last week's issue of this paper the heading of the personal sketch of Baron Fassini stated that he was the head of Ambrosio, when it should have read that he is head of the Italian Cines Company. The error was caught before many copies had been printed and was changed. We make this explanation for those who received papers with the wrong heading.

MEXICAN SPECIAL BY KALEM.

The Kalem Company will issue for immediate release a five-hundred-foot picture of great special interest, entitled "War-ridden Juarez." This subject will show many interesting views of that seat of war which has been so prominently mentioned in the Mexican war stories during the past two years. It is an excellent topical picture and will enable exhibitors to do a bit of extra advertising on the strength of the showing.

---

TO ALL WHOM THIS MAY CONCERN.

Please take notice that on the 29th day of October, 1913, the co-partnership of James L. McIntire and Robert Richter, trading under the name and style of McIntire & Richter, at No. 23 East 14th Street, in the city of New York, was by mutual consent dissolved. Until further notice, beginning on the 20th day of November, 1913, the business will be conducted by Robert Richter individually.

ECLECTIC STATE RIGHTS.

W. B. Schram, of the Wolverine Feature Film Company, Detroit, Mich., has purchased the State rights for the States of Michigan and Wisconsin, for the following pictures: "Nero and Brittanicus," "The Thrust of Fate," "When Paris Loves," "The Message of the Dead," "The Doom of the Ocean," "The Fatal Plunge," "The Toils of Villainy," "The Wheel of Destiny" and "Vendetta."

APEX STATE SALES.

Messrs. B. D. Crose and H. L. Cohen, of the Empress Feature Film Company, 1517 Merchants Bank Building, Indianapolis, Ind., were visitors at the Apex offices and closed contracts for the rights of Indiana and Kentucky for "Humanity," "London by Night," "In the Python's Den," "Through the Clouds," "The Great Bullion Robbery," and "The Black 13," and the rights for Ohio for "Through the Clouds," "The Great Bullion Robbery," and "The Black 13."

---

NOTES OF THE TRADE.

A HOLIDAY among the school children of Stockton, Cal., was declared November 6th, that they might be the guests of George Kleine at the Yosemite Theater, of that city. This performance of the "Last Days of Pompeii" was also largely attended by the big Italian-American Association of Stockton, one of the largest colonies of Italians in America.

* * *

Robert E. Graham, Jr., although only a youth of twenty years, a juvenile man with the Lubin Stock Company, is an excellent actor. Having appeared in such successful productions as "Excuse Me," "Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," "Tillie's Nightmare," "Havana" and many plays under the Shubert, Savage & Lew Fields' management. He is the son of the well known comedian, Robert E. Graham.

* * *

The Pasquali production, "The Last Days of Pompeii," continues to fill the Park Theater, New York, equalling its record-breaking run at Wallack's Theater.

In a two-part feature just completed at the Edendale (Los Angeles) studio of the Selig Polyscope Company, by Director Colin Campbell, Bessie Eyton and Wheeler Oakman do a thrilling and difficult water stunt. The story is entitled "Madge O'Mara," or "The Tragedy of Ambition." Miss Eyton's running dive from the small window high above the water is one of the best things of the kind she has ever done.

* * *

"The Shriner's Daughter," a feature production by the "Flying A" Company produced under the direction of Thos. Ricketts will be released very shortly. It is a convincing story told with vigor and freshness that is inspiring.

* * *

Director James Gordon, of the Pilot Company, is on the last lap of their four-part picturization of the great English play "Hoodman Blind." Mr. Gordon thinks the picture will be far ahead of any picture he has yet produced, and that's going some, for Jimmy doesn't take a back seat in feature productions.

* * *

Contracts have been consummated by Joseph R. Miles for the output of Ramo and Film Releases of America for northern Illinois. The General Feature Film Co., of Chicago, who bought out the M. & F. Feature Film Co., fell heir to these contracts.

* * *

Herbert Blache, president of the Exclusive Supply Corporation, is opening offices in New York State, St. Louis and Indianapolis for the rental of Solax, Blache, American and other features on the Exclusive program.

* * *

F. M. Sanford has been engaged by Phil Gleichman, of the World Special Films Corporation, as manager of the Dallas branch, with headquarters in the Andrews Building. Mr. Sanford is one of the best known men engaged in the moving picture business in the Southwest.

* * *

New York's Board of Education witnessed a private exhibition of George Kleine's "The Last Days of Pompeii" while playing at the Bijou Theater, New York. The board adopted resolutions endorsing the picture for teachers and pupils of all the grades of the public school system as being of superior quality and a valuable help in studies of the Roman period, in which the action of the story occurs.

* * *

Bill Johnson, the first head carpenter in the Selig Polyscope Company, in Chicago, has taken his second degree in Masonry, and spends his spare time in studying the rites of the order.

* * *

When "Protea" was put on the market Monday, November 10, by the World Special Films Corporation, it carried with it eighty pages of specially written music by J. Loft. The music created almost as big a stir when played abroad as did the film.

* * *

Frank Woods is rapidly organizing a scenario department that will be worthy of its well-known and popular "Chief." Scenarios submitted for Reliance production should be sent direct to Mr. Woods, care of The Mutual Film Corporation, 71 West 23d Street, New York City.

* * *

During the last week seventy-five cases were treated at the hospital in Universal City, Cal. Although the Universal takes every precaution to insure the safety of actors, if sensational battle scenes and scenes of adventure are to be convincing, they must be done realistically. In the realistic production of these big scenes almost all of the accidents occur.

* * *

Arrangements have been made with the Eclair Company whereby the World Special Films Corporation will handle "What the Gods Decree," produced by their Paris factory. From the advance reports received, this film will create quite as great a furor as "Protea" has.

* * *

"American Born" is the title of a two-part drama by the "Flying A" Company, to be released Monday, Dec. 1. Sydney Ayres plays the lead and Vivian Rich plays the part of an American born princess. Excellent dramatic work marks the efforts of an efficient cast.

* * *

Every day now the offices of the Pilot Company, at 220 West 42d Street, are crowded with buyers of "Across the Continent," their four-part picturization of Oliver Doud Byron's great play. Many state rights have already been sold, and it looks as though the sales will far exceed those of their last feature, "The Streets of New York."

ELEANOR WOODRUFF
The Ethel Barrymore of Motion Pictures
PATHEPLAY

GOSH! ALL HEMLOCK!
I GOT THE RIGHT BAIT

SLIDES

If business is dull, try the Rube's bait. There's money in it for you, as we make Announcement, Player, Release and Advertising slides. The Best Slides made at the best prices quoted. This advertisement, and $2.00 will bring you 1 doz. Announcement slides. Send for catalog.

NIAGARA SLIDE CO.
LOCKPORT, N. Y.

Calendar of Independent Releases

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 23rd, 1913.
REX—His Old Fashioned Dad (Comedy-Drama)
CRYSTAL—The Cabaret Singer (Drama)
ECLAIR—Oh! You Rubber (Comedy)
ECLAIR—Soldiers Drilling in Turkestan (Military)

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24th, 1913.
VICTOR—Back to Life (2 parts—Drama)
IMP—Jane's Brother the Paranoiac (Drama)
POWERS—Jimmy's Deception (Comedy)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25th, 1913.
101 BISON—The White Vacquero (2 parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—Hubby's New Coat (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—Baldy Belmont Lands a Society Job (Com.)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, 1913.
NESTOR—Hilda of the Mountains (Drama)
JOKER—Mike and Jake Go Fishing (Comedy)
JOKER—Bally Bunion Railway in Ireland (Travel)
ECLAIR—A Son's Devotion (2 part—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly No. 90 (News)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27th, 1913.
IMP—Night Shadows of New York (3 parts—Drama)
REX—The Tale of a Lonely Coast (Drama)
FRONTIER—Slim Proposes—But (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th, 1913.
NESTOR—When He Lost To Win (Comedy)
POWERS—A Seaside Samaritan (Drama)
VICTOR—Unto the Third Generation (2 parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1913.
JOKER—Lazy Louis (Comedy)
FRONTIER—The Secret of Balanced Rock (Drama)
101 BISON—The War of the Cattle Range (2 parts—Dr.)

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 30th, 1913.
REX—The Boob's Dream Girl (Comedy-Drama)
CRYSTAL—The Convict's Daughter (Drama)
ECLAIR—Roaring Bill (Comedy)
ECLAIR—One On Tooty (Comedy)

MONDAY, DECEMBER 1st, 1913.
VICTOR—The Barrier of Bars (Drama)
IMP—Love vs. Law (2 parts—Drama)
POWERS—When Joe Went West (Comedy)

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2nd, 1913.
GOLD SEAL—Under the Black Flag (3 parts—Drama)
CRYSTAL—That Awful Maid (Comedy)
CRYSTAL—The Installment Plan Marriage (Comedy).

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3rd, 1913.
NESTOR—The Brothers (Drama)
JOKER—Mike and Jake in the Wild West (Comedy)
ECLAIR—When Pierrot Met Pierrette (2 parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly, No. 91 (News)

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4th, 1913.
IMP—Plain Jane (Drama)
REX—Thieves and the Cross (2 parts—Drama)
FRONTIER—Slim and the Boys at Breezy Beach (Com.)

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 5th, 1913.
NESTOR—Locked Out at Twelve (Comedy)
POWERS—Cross Purposes (Drama)
VICTOR—Influence of Sympathy (2 parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6th, 1913.
JOKER—A Pair of Bears (Comedy)
JOKER—Views of Yellowstone Park (Scenic)
FRONTIER—The Circuit Rider of the Hills (Drama)
101 BISON—The White Squaw (2 parts—Drama)

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 23rd, 1913.
APOLLO—The Mexican Sleep Producer
MAJESTIC—The House on the Tree (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Their Great Big Beautiful Doll (Comedy)

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24th, 1913.
AMERICAN—The Occult (Drama)
KEYSTONE—Fatty Joins the Force (Comedy)
RELIANCE—The Other Woman (Drama)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25th, 1913.
MAJESTIC—A Warm Welcome (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—The Blight of Wealth (2 parts—Dr.)
KAY-BEE—The Maelstrom (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, 1913.
BRONCHO—The Reformation (Drama)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 48 (News)
RELIANCE—A Rough Diamond (Drama)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27th, 1913.
AMERICAN—A Spartan Girl of the West (Drama)
DOMINO—Belle of Yorktown (3 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—Cohen Saves the Flag (Comedy)
KOMIC—A Method In His Illness (Comedy)
KOMIC—The Man with a Razor (Comedy)

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th, 1913.
KAY-BEE—The Sign of the Snake (Drama)
PRINCESS—Her Right to Happiness (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Curfew Shall Not Ring To-Night (Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1913.
AMERICAN—A Midnight (Drama)
MAJESTIC—An Accidental Clue (Drama)
RELIANCE—The Reporter's Scoop (Drama)

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 30th, 1913.
APOLLO—Her Husband and My Wife (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—Hendrick's Divorce (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—The Henpecked Hod Carrier (Com.)

MONDAY, DECEMBER 1st, 1913.
AMERICAN—American Born (2 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—Title not reported.
RELIANCE—Title not reported.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2nd, 1913.
MAJESTIC—Title not reported.
THANHOUSER—Title not reported.
KAY-BEE—The Revelation (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3rd, 1913.
BRONCHO—The Buried Past (Drama)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly, No. 49 (News)
RELIANCE—Title not reported.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4th, 1913.
AMERICAN—No Release This Date.
DOMINO—Devotion (2 parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—Title not reported.
KOMIC—Title not reported.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 5th, 1913.
KAY-BEE—Title not reported.
PRINCESS—Title not reported.
THANHOUSER—Title not reported.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6th, 1913.
AMERICAN—A Divorce Scandal (Drama)
MAJESTIC—Title not reported.
RELIANCE—Title not reported.

Exclusive Supply Corporation

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24th, 1913.
AMMEX—The Fatal Reckoning (Feature—2 parts—Dr.)

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25th, 1913.
GAUMONT—Mary Saves the Sculptor (Drama)
LACLEDE—The Pale Faced Squaw (Feature—3 parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, 1913.
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly No. 90 (News)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27th, 1913.
ITALA—The Leap of Despair (Feature—3 parts—Dr.)
GAUMONT—Gymnastics

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th, 1913.
F. R. A.—The Secret of Adrianople (Feature—4 parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1913.
GAUMONT—The Silence of the Dead (Feature—4 parts—Drama)

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2nd, 1913.
GAUMONT—The Living Doll (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3rd, 1913.
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 91 (News)

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4th, 1913.
GAUMONT—Oscar, the Hermit (Comedy)

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 5th, 1913.
SOLAX—The Shadow of the Moulin Rouge (Special Feature—4 parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6th, 1913.
GAUMONT—False News (Special Feature—4 parts—Drama)

IS A ROCK STEADY PICTURE WORTH ANYTHING TO YOU?

Has your picture a little quiver, slight up and down or side movement which you have been unable to eliminate?

Users of the Simplex do not have this trouble. Its wonderfully accurate, perfectly balanced and durable intermittent movement prevents such complaints.

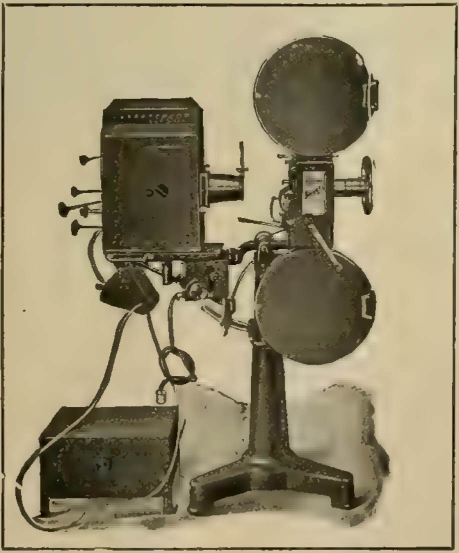
This is only one point of superiority in the Simplex The Peerless Projector

Huntsville, Ala., Nov. 3, 1913.

Gentlemen—We recently purchased two new Simplex machines through W. H. Peck of Atlanta, Ga.

These machines were shipped to us from the New York factory. They are all you claim for them and more. We are more than pleased with our purchase, and are only sorry that we did not take the advice of the best show people in the country and install the "SIMPLEX" some time ago. We have nothing but praise for the Simplex.

Yours very truly,
LYRIC AMUSEMENT CO.
(Per) C. A. Crute.



Don't be sorry, be WISE and install your Simplex machines right away

CATALOGUE A TELLS MUCH ABOUT IT

Made and Guaranteed by

PRECISION MACHINE CO.

317 East 34th Street, New York

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—All for Science (Drama)
EDISON—From Durban to Zululand (Scenic) 500
EDISON—Enoch and Ezra's First Smoke (Comedy) 500
KALEM—An Indian Maid's Strategy (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Just Cissy's Little Way (Comedy) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 70 (News)
SELIG—The Quality of Mercy (Special—2 parts—Dr.) 2000
VITAGRAPH—The Leading Lady (Drama) 1000

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 25th, 1913.

ECLIPSE—The Subterranean City; or Trailing the Jewel Thieves (Special—2 parts—Drama)
EDISON—The Vanishing Cracksman (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—The Little Substitute (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Her Sick Father (Comedy) 400
LUBIN—The Lost Switch (Comedy) 600
PATHEPLAY—The Shadow of Shame (Drama)
SELIG—Mounted Officer Flynn (Comedy) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Little Kaintuck (Drama) 1000

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26th, 1913.

EDISON—A Sense of Humor (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Dollars-Pounds-Sense (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Plot of India's Hillmen (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
PATHEPLAY—The Elusive Turkey (Comedy)
SELIG—Cupid in the Cow Camp (Comedy-Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Fellow Voyagers (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—Temples and Statues of Rome (Architecture)

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—A Circumstantial Hero (Comedy)
BIOGRAPH—The Somnambulists (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Naming of the Rawhide Queen (Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—A Waif of the Desert (Special—2 parts Dr.) 2000
MELIES—The Japanese Judo (Sports)
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly No. 71 (News)
PATHEPLAY—Old Nuremburg (Scenic)
PATHEPLAY—The Faithless Friend (Special—2 parts—Drama)
SELIG—A Message from Home (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Cure (Drama) 1000

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28th, 1913.

EDISON—The Gunmaker of Moscow (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
ESSANAY—The Brand of Evil (Special—2 parts—Dr.) 2000
KALEM—The Good Old Summer Time (Comedy)
KALEM—England's King at Liverpool (Topical)
LUBIN—The Scapegrace (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Making Eight Ton Ropes (Industrial)
PATHEPLAY—The Capital of Malay States (Scenic)
PATHEPLAY—Fashions Law in the Swiss Cantons (Sociological)
SELIG—The Supreme Moment (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Betty in the Lion's Den (Comedy) 1000

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Blue or the Gray (Drama)
EDISON—A Royal Romance (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Sophie's Hero (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—In Peril of His Life (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Turning the Table (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—The Blight (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Golden Pathway (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 1st, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—How the Day Was Saved (Comedy)
BIOGRAPH—Bink's Vacation (Comedy)
EDISON—South African Whaling Industry (Industrial) 1000
KALEM—The Octoroon (Special—3 parts—Drama) 3000
LUBIN—Melita's Sacrifice (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 72 (News)
SELIG—The Cipher Message (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
VITAGRAPH—A Game of Cards (Drama) 1000

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2nd, 1913.

CELIO—Venomous Tongues (Special—2 parts—Drama)
EDISON—The Price of Human Lives (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Autumn Love (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—The Hazard of Youth (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—A Peasant Marriage in Hungary (Customs)
PATHEPLAY—Edible Fish of the Mediterranean (Zoology)
PATHEPLAY—The Geysers of New Zealand (Scenic).
SELIG—The Rustler's Reformation (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Wreck (Special—3 parts—Drama) 3000

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3rd, 1913.

EDISON—The Thrifty Janitor (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Kitty's Knight (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Cave Men's War (Special—2 parts—Dr.) 2000
PATHEPLAY—A Break for Freedom (Drama)
SELIG—Within the Hour (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Pair of Prodigals (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Coliseum of Rome (Architectural).

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—The Birthday Ring (Drama)
ESSANAY—A Romance of the Hills (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—When Mountain and Valley Meet (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
MELIES—A Woman's Mission (Comedy-Drama) 750
MELIES—A Trip to the Famous Picnic Grounds, Arshyama, Japan (Scenic) 250
PATHEPLAY—Baseball's Peerless Leader (Special—2 parts—Comedy)
PATHEPLAY—Pathe's Weekly, No. 73 (News)
SELIG—Granddaddy's Boy (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Swan Girl (Drama)

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 5th, 1913.

EDISON—Alexia's Strategy (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
ESSANAY—The "Pay As You Enter" Man (Special—2 parts—Drama) 2000
KALEM—While Father Telephones (Comedy)
KALEM—Andrew Carnegie's Gift to the World (Top.)
LUBIN—Some Elopers (Comedy) 400
LUBIN—An Interrupted Courtship (Comedy) 600
PATHEPLAY—A Bear Escape (Comedy)
SELIG—Northern Hearts (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Lesson in Jealousy (Comedy) 1000

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 6th, 1913.

BIOGRAPH—In the Elemental World (Drama)
EDISON—What Shall It Profit a Man? (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Squareness (Drama) 1000
KALEM—The Foot Print Clue (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Her Father (Drama) 1000
PATHEPLAY—Col. Heeza Liar in Africa (Novelty)
PATHEPLAY—Glimpses of Pond Life (Zoology)
VITAGRAPH—Beauty Unadorned (Special—2 parts—Comedy) 2000

---

DID YOU write to us about song slide service? One week's supply shipped in advance. Write for special prices.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. First National Bank Bldg. CHICAGO, ILL.

Christmas

The season of all seasons, when the heart of man rejoices and his spirit responds to impulses of boundless liberality. The season of cheerful days and nights when more money is in circulation than in all other seasons joined. The exhibitor or showman who has a picture or a show that is appropriate to the season—that makes a direct appeal to the spirit of the hour—can get that money faster than he ever saw it come before. HERE IS THE GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY—a proposition filled with marvelous possibilities.

STATE RIGHTS to

Kalem's Biblical Monument

Produced under the co-operative supervision of the accepted authorities of Biblical history, in the authentic localities in Palestine and Egypt. Probably the most wonderful motion picture in existence, and by all means the most appropriate offering and surest money maker of this, the greatest money spending season of the year.

All States except

New York, Massachusetts and New Jersey are already sold. State Right buyers desiring this rich territory, should write or wire immediately to

General Film Company (Inc.)

State Right Department, 200 Fifth Avenue, New York

Which is Your Favorite?

Carlyle Blackwell

Arthur Johnson

Crane Wilbur

Maurice Costello

Warren Kerrigan

Francis X. Bushman

King Baggot

Vote for Him in the Great Moving Picture Hero Contest

See THE LADIES' WORLD

Full Details and First Ballot . . . In the December Number . . . At Your Newsdealer's Now

That's the latest plan of ours to interest the

1,300,000 readers of

THE LADIES' WORLD

This advertisement will appear in nearly all the leading magazines and street cars, in the United States.

Reaching over 50,000,000 people

We created "What Happened to Mary?"

But this is even better! We are willing to have you share this tremendous advertising campaign without one cent of cost to you.

We will give you FREE BALLOTS in this great contest for your patrons and they can vote for their favorite player. And this slide to announce it, too.

This offer is made for a limited time and we won't guarantee to extend it indefinitely. This means you must tear out the coupon and mail today. Remember you can set a date to give free votes in and everyone who is interested in the famous players of the silent drama can have a share in deciding this unique idea.

The Great Moving Picture Hero Contest

Which is Your Favorite
Vote for Him in the Great Moving Picture Hero Contest
THE LADIES' WORLD
Full Details in the Current Issue
ON DateHere

This slide sent to you FREE.

Be sure to mail this coupon right now. Don't put it off or you may be sorry.

Tear this off and mail today

"HERO" CONTEST. THE LADIES' WORLD, New York City.

Your offer to send me free ballots for my patrons in

The Great Moving Picture Hero Contest

together with a slide in four colors—all without one cent of cost to me is accepted.

PLEASE SENE ME. . . . BALLOTS

I will distribute them free at the box office to every purchaser of an admission ticket on .

and agree to dispose of them in no other way. My capacity is seats.

Name of house

My Name is

Street Address

City State

CORRESPONDENCE

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

LEE COHN will open a moving picture and vaudeville show in Massachusetts Street, in Lawrence, Kan.

Pupils and teachers of the public schools at Santa Fe, N. M., have organized a bureau to conduct a lecture course this winter. The proceeds will be used for the purpose of buying a picture machine and renting films for use in the schools.

E. J. Bookwalter will erect a new theater at Halstead, Kan.

W. H. Frame, who recently opened a picture and vaudeville show in the Odd Fellows' building at Shattuck, Okla., is running four reels of film. He gets a ten and fifteen cent admission

James W. Enlow, former owner of the New Colonial Theater at Argenta, Ark., is preparing to open another picture show in that city.

W. J. Hartson has purchased a picture show at Lehigh, Okla., from Robert Powers.

J. W. Pinkerton has moved the Happy Hour Theater to the Rhode Building at Hearne, Tex.

T. J. Tanner, of Muskogee, Okla., and Julius Singer, of Kansas City, Mo., are busy with plans for a moving picture company with headquarters in Muskogee. The early career of the concern will be confined to industrial work and local weekly sections, although there is some idea of filming a play or two with performers recruited from the "legitimate." Tanner has been in the feature business touring the country successfully with a three-reel picture of his roping contest at Muskogee and Singer also is experienced in the picture game.

The Grand Amusement Company has leased the Grand Theater at Searcy, Ark., to T. C. and M. E. Lash.

Photoplay houses in Orange, Tex., which were closed for some time because of the floods, have opened again.

The old Dixie Theater at Sallisaw, Okla., will be reopened by C. F. Haworth, of Muskogee.

Warner's Features, Inc., has been granted a charter in Texas with a capital stock of $35,000 for the purpose of manufacturing film service. The incorporators are Albert Warner, of New York City, and Alvis Johnson and L. F. Underwood, of Dallas. The headquarters will be at the Dallas branch.

The new Lyric Theater has been opened at Idabel, Okla.

H. Grady Montgomery has purchased the Iris Moving Picture Theater on East Seventh Street, in Topeka, Kan. Changes in the policy and also in the arrangement of the house are contemplated.

The Snapp Building at Hinton, Okla., is being remodeled for an opera house, which will be managed by W. T. Cutter.

William Wald is now manager of Dreamland Theater at Cuero, Tex. C. S. Johnson, who held the position for several years, has resigned to engage in similar work at El Campo.

A new building has been fitted up for the Electric Theater at Hunter, Okla., which recently was bought by P. J. Roach from Herbert Mills.

George Kanavuts and C. Haniotis have been remodeling their Olympic Theater at Okmulgee, Okla.

Because the fire department refused to grant permission to the Board of Education at Wichita, Kan., to move a picture machine from one to another of the thirty-two schools in the city the plan for using the films in educational work has been dropped as being too expensive at the present time.

W. C. Austin, state printer and a member of the State Textbook Commission of Kansas, has come out with the novel and yet practical idea of the state sending out films instead of textbooks to the pupils. These would be graded the same as the books and the state would own the films. He believes his plan is especially needed in the cities where the children have little opportunity for first hand information about plants, animals and birds. Subjects suggested are nature studies, agriculture, hygiene and health, fire prevention and first aid

Ralph Adams, Joseph Chamberlain, Jr., and Hogan Stevens, who have leased the Majestic Theater at Malvern, Ark., will remodel the building

The Airdome at Morrison, Okla., has given way to the Electric Theater, which is now quartered in the L. D. S. hall. The managers have installed their own electric light plant.

E. W. Green will be the manager for the vaudeville and picture theater at Chickasha, Okla., which has been purchased by S. H. Jones, who also owns the Empress at Altus, Okla.

Steel ceilings, new carpets, new seating arrangements and a gold fiber curtain are among the improvements manager L. M. Ridout has made to the Star Theater at Denison, Tex.

W. A. Miller and J. N. Jordan have let the contract for a new picture house at Plainview, Tex.

Paid admissions at the Queen Theater in Dallas, Tex., for the two days when the Imp "Ivanhoe" was shown were 11,000 it was announced.

Joseph Rierdon has sold his interest in the Colonial Theater at Tishomingo, Okla., to Miss Lucy Harris, of that city.

That portion of the $1,000 appropriated by the state for amusements, which was expended for a moving picture outfit for the Nevada Hospital for Mental Diseases, is declared to be yielding big returns. The first entertainment for the patients was so successful that four films will be shown each week.

M. H. Rimbley has rented the old City Hotel building in Weatherford, Okla., and will start a picture show.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE NORTHWEST

MR. MERCER, county superintendent of schools of Olmsted county, Minn., has been given authority by the county commissioners to purchase a moving picture machine for use in entertainments at the country schools.

William F. Friederich has purchased the Idle Hour Moving Picture Theater at Morton, Minn.

Manager Levy, of the Ansonia Theater at Butte, Mont., showed the two-reel feature "Damon and Pythias" in connection with the holding of the Montana state convention of Knights of Pythias in Butte.

Jansen & Meyer are now operating the Grand Theater at Graceville, Minn., W. R. Meyer having purchased a half interest in the place.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union declared against Sunday moving picture shows before it adjourned its convention at Twin Falls, Idaho.

C. M. Mast, formerly of Osage, Iowa, has purchased a picture house at Anoka, Minn.

The Grand Theater has been opened at Bismarck, N. D. Manager McClinton is giving his picture program close attention. The place has a seating capacity of 425 Miss Mary Ludden, of Chicago, and Clifford Clinton are the singers.

Representatives of all the picture houses in Denver, Col., met with the city commissioners and notified them that they would fight the bill for a censorship if the provision for a $2 tax on each film inspected was not eliminated.

Major Fred R. Reed, of Boise, Idaho, state commissioner of immigration, labor and statistics, announces that Idaho will show five thousand feet of motion pictures at the Panama exposition in San Francisco in 1915.

G. F. Harrington has purchased a picture show at Canton, Minn.

J. A. Bell, of Akeley, Minn., and L. W. Brooks, who recently purchased the Crystal Theater on Lincoln Avenue, East, in Fergus Falls, Minn., from Erick O. Erickson, are planning a number of changes. Illustrated songs will be added to the program. Later the seating capacity of the house will be increased.

The Modern Woodmen of America Hall at Harmony, Minn., is now the home of Hartwell & Hanson's moving picture theater.

Action on a bill introduced before the city council of Denver, Col., by Mayor Perkins which provides for a board of censorship for pictures was delayed until the public would have a chance to discuss the merits of the measure. It provides for three members, one or more which may be a woman. The mayor as commissioner of social welfare makes the appointments. Salaries of $50 a month each for the inspectors are contemplated. An inspection fee of $2 for each film will keep up the revenue. The mayor estimates that 450 new films a month, bringing in $900, would be examined. Forbidden pictures will include "acts of suicide, seduction, debauchery, aggravated crime, extreme drunkenness or of any indecent or immoral nature or films that disseminate information not proper to be given to minor children." Exhibitors will be fined from $100 to $300 for each day a condemned film is exhibited.

F. H. Daley will open a moving picture show in the McMalon Building in Bird Island, Minn.

Fred Haun has purchased the Freuen moving picture show at Chester, Mont.

E. Simon, of Canon City, has remodeled Glysson's Hall at Swink, Col., and opened a moving picture show, giving performances daily, including Sunday.

J. B. Ashton and others are planning to erect a new $50,000 theater at Provo, Utah.

"Tubercular hospitals should be made more attractive for the tubercular patients," said Miss Elizabeth Sprague, a Minneapolis, Minn., nurse at the Minnesota State Sanitary conference and suggested moving pictures as one of the best methods of attracting the sick to or getting them to remain at a curative institution

S. A. Grafsland will open a moving picture show at Lake Park, Minn.

The pictures of the fair and other local scenes at Faribault, Minn., were a big attraction at the Faribault Theater.

With the sale by Virgil W. Rothrock of his interest in the Isis Theater in Billings, Mont., to P. L. Linton, the latter and his brother, William, are now sole owners of the photoplay house.

George Claude has sold his moving picture show at Sherburn, Minn., to M. J. Donndelinger.

New opera chairs and other improvements have been installed at the Crystal in Alexandria, Minn. Mrs. E. H. Webb is the new pianist at this house.

E. E. Richards, of Wimbledon, N. D., has purchased moving picture shows at Wimbledon, Courtenay and Kensall.

J. J. O'Brien has sold his moving picture theater at Eugene, Ore., to E. L. V. Campbell.

The American Theater at Spokane, Wash., has been reopened with pictures, although it is announced that later it will go into a vaudeville circuit, in which the Advance Amusement Company, of Portland, Ore., is active. The lighting system has been replaced by a semi-indirect plan and the entire theater interior has been re-decorated.

G. H. DeGrace has purchased the Reo photoplay theater at Fourth and Franklin Streets in Olympia, Wash.

The Rockford orchestra has opened a picture show in White's Hall at Rockford, Wash., giving three shows a week.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

WARDEN THOMAS, of the Ohio State penitentiary, has asked Thomas A. Edison to donate a picture machine so that shows can be given to the prisoners.

Moving pictures will be a feature of the public amusement house which is proposed for Webster Groves, a Missouri town of 1300 persons. The movement originated with Dr. Charles L. Kloss, pastor of the First Congregational church, and more than $10,000 of the necessary $21,000 has been pledged by business men.

The Operators' Supply Company, of Shelbyville, Ind., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $1,000, to sell sectional fireproof film boxes. The incorporators are: B. and C. Steinhauser and A. S. Griffey.

The Wright Amusement Company, of Kansas City, Mo., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $2,500, by G. H. Wright, A. Sagand and A. I. Beach.

Demtrios N. Coloturos and Peter Koropulis, owners of a picture show in Zanesville, Ohio, have filed a suit for $10,000 damages in the United States court at Columbus against Clyde Quimby also a picture show manager of Zanesville. They charge him with having caused the circulation of libelous and false accusations concerning them in the papers of the city.

The General Film Company has closed a ten-year lease for the building at 3612 Olive street, and one now in course of construction near it. The alterations for the exchange will be one of the most up-to-date in the middle west, will cost about $10,000.

O. M. Grubbs, of Findlay, Ohio, has purchased the picture show at Bluffton, Ind., from M. C. Sterling.

Industrial films may be used at some remote time by the school of commerce in the high school at Omaha, Neb.

Harry O'Brien is erecting a new picture house at the corner of James street and Lagonda avenue, in Springfield, Ohio.

The Royal Photo and Film Company, of Columbus, Ohio, is now releasing a Buckeye Weekly. The first number showed a clambake, opening of the football season at the state university, and a run by a new type of fire engine in Columbus, in addition to other interesting subjects. This concern, in which Charles L. Dowman is conspicuous, has made a number of pictures of Ohio soldiers. Some of these reels were shown at the Chamber of Commerce.

W. A. Wallace who recently purchased the Lyric Theater at Jasonville, Ind., from Fred Pritchard has remodeled the house. Edward Walker and Beecher Cromwell have opened the Family Theater in Jasonville.

Moore's Indiana Theaters, Incorporated, of Muncie, Ind., have been granted a charter with a capital stock of $5,000 to do a theater business. The incorporators are Edward L. Moore, C. A. Feinler and E. N. Love.

When there are no other attractions, moving pictures will be shown at the Jefferson Theater in Goshen, Ind. and the Bucklen Theater in Elkhart, Ind. At the Goshen house free performances will be given at 10.30 o'clock Saturday mornings to school children.

The Mothers' Club of the Centennial School at Evansville, Ind., is planning to purchase a picture machine to be used in educational work for the school.

H. N. Marshall, of Superior, Neb., and David Sims, of Alba, Neb., are said to be planning an organization of picture shows in southwestern Nebraska for the purpose of saving money by standard operation. A stock company may be formed.

S. H. Armstrong has sold his moving picture business at New Lisbon, Wis., to the Ideal Theater Company, of that city. The new owners have leased Miner's Opera Hall and will give shows Tuesday and Friday nights.

Neil Duffy, of the Elite at Appleton, Wis., has closed a contract to show the Famous Players' Film Company's pictures in his house.

Manager J. W. Pemberton, of the Star Theater at St. Clairsville, Ohio, has installed an electric orchestrion.

MOTOGRAPHIC MASTERPIECES

NOW READY—

A Five Part Motion Picture Presentation of

HENRY M. BLOSSOM, Jr's.

Human Interest Story of Racing Life

"CHECKERS"

With the original THOMAS W. ROSS

IN PREPARATION

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS'

"SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE"

In six parts with DUSTIN FARNUM

Produced in Cuba on a mammoth and lavish scale under the personal direction of

AUGUSTUS THOMAS

THEN

"IN MIZZOURA"

With BURR McINTOSH,

AND THEN

EUGENE WALTER'S

"PAID IN FULL"

—The Results—
See How It Ran
What These Men Say

Louis Reeves Harrison
in
Moving Picture World

George Proctor
in Motion Picture News

Wen Milligan
in
The Billboard

Tracy Lewis
in
The Telegraph

Fred Beecroft
in
The Dramatic Mirror

All Star Feature Corporation

HARRY RAVER,
President.

220 W. 42d Street, N. Y. City

AUGUSTUS THOMAS,
Director General

Gus Sun, of Springfield, Ohio, is said to have purchased a camera and will film current events for his various vaudeville and picture houses.

Stanley J. Mayer, of Detroit, Mich., recently swore out a warrant for the arrest of John Von Hahn, charging him with stealing a moving picture outfit valued at $3,100. Von Hahn had been working for Mayer and when Mayer ordered the outfit sent to Johnstown, Pa., it is alleged, Von Hahn disappeared with it and shipped boxes of ashes and empty bottles. Thirty-five reels of film were included in the loss.

Fred Durkee, of Saginaw, Mich., sold the Rex Theater in that city to G. Rozenbaum, of Kalamazoo., Mich., who has several other picture houses in Michigan and Indiana.

Michigan deputy state fire marshals continue to cut the wires to picture houses which they declare unsafe. Among places put out of business were Charles Niggli's theater at Centerville and the state armory at Monroe.

The biggest coon hunt in the United States, conducted by the Randolph County Coon Club, near Moberly, Mo., October 28, 29 and 30, made a good subject for filming and the committee in charge planned to have some interesting pictures made.

No objectionable signs and pictures are displayed by moving picture men of Kansas City, Mo., according to W. C. Cunningham, investigator for the Board of Public Welfare.

Four reels of pictures are given each night in connection with the vaudeville show of the Hippodrome Theater, which has been opened at Springfield, Mo.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE

BUFFALO.

GEORGE H. VERBECK, manager of the Buffalo Feature Film Corporation, has the New York State rights on the Ambrosio feature, "Pilgrim's Progress." Several Buffalo ministers recently witnessed this film at the Globe Theater, in Main Street, Buffalo, and were delighted with the program. Sherman S. Webster is meeting with success as manager of the house.

Manager Newman, of the Allendale Theater, in Allen street, has engaged a new orchestra, which furnishes superior music. This new house is drawing excellent attendance. It has a seating capacity of 1,200.

Plans have been filed for a new motion picture theater to be erected by Christian G. Hopf, at 1223 Lovejoy street, at a cost of $4,500.

Burlesque and occasional features in moving pictures will be played in the Gaiety Theater, to be opened at West Huron and Pearl streets about January 1st.

Work on Shea's Hippodrome in Main street, near Chippewa, is advancing. Vaudeville and moving pictures will probably be featured here. The auditorium of the new Hippodrome will be 120 by 120 feet, with a seating capacity of 3,200. The stage will be 40 feet deep, and 104 feet wide, with a proscenium arch of 50 feet. The big "I" beam to be swung over this proscenium arch is the largest individual section of structural steel ever brought to this city.

A summer theater and other features, will be among the attractions at Elmhurst Park, to be opened next season near Hornell, N. Y.

Manager Marcus, of the New Lyric Theater, is meeting with success in his new position. Among his features, is the printing of New Lyric coupons in the "News," Buffalo's leading evening paper. Holders of the coupons may attend at reduced prices the matinees at that theater.

Delmillar's Touragraphs, moving and talking pictures, were shown for about two weeks at Elmwood Music Hall, recently, under the auspices of the Buffalo "Times."

Manager Laughlin, of the Majestic Theater, which features moving pictures on Sunday and plays during the week, has begun a "pretty girl contest," which will last ten weeks. Contestants hand in their photographs at the box office. Purchasers of tickets to the shows are permitted to vote. Several hundred pictures have already been received and the contest has aroused much interest. Valuable prizes will be given.

A five-cent moving picture theater is to be built in Seneca Street in the Cazenovia district by Charles Farrell. It is said the house will seat 1,000 persons.

The Aldermanic committee on fire is again considering the application of the Nassoy Amusement Co. to build a moving picture theater at 440 Prospect Avenue. John Martin, former alderman, led a delegation of residents of the district in opposition. Mr. Martin told the committee that there ought to be a rule forbidding the construction of moving picture shows in strictly residential streets. The committee decided to inspect the site. Similar action was taken on an application for permission to build a moving picture house at Grant Street and Potomac Avenue.

The Felare Tours in moving pictures, being shown at the Teck Theater on Sundays only, canceled one program recently. The reason was the necessity to clear the stage for the heavy scenery of "The Whip," a high-class melodrama, which appeared at that house during the week. John R. Oishei is manager of the Teck.

Buffalo users of "Made in Germany" goods will be interested in the purpose of the Association for the Promotion of German Export Trade, recently organized in Berlin. The scheme of the new organization contemplates the elaborate use of moving pictures for spreading the gospel of "Made in Germany" in foreign parts. Films illustrating the achievements of German industry in the most graphic style are to be shown in connection with lectures in the native tongue of each particular district.

Walter H. Foster, who recently became manager of the Family Theater, a Buffalo moving picture house, has been with the Mark-Brock Amusement Enterprises for eight years. Before coming to this city he managed the Valentine and Coliseum theaters, Toledo, the Comique of Detroit, and the Colonial of Indianapolis. Previously he was in charge of the Keith of Campello, Mass., and the Orpheum of Brockton, Mass., all Mark-Brock moving picture houses. Mr. Foster had the Family Theater overhauled and an electrical display introduced at a considerable expense. Frederick Carter will manipulate the $25,000 Hope-Jones unit orchestra, being installed. Mr. Foster has been featuring Laura Sawyer and House Peters in "An Hour Before Dawn," Lillie Langtry in "His Neighbor's Wife" and James O'Neil in "Monte Cristo," all furnished by the Famous Players' Film Co.

E. Meadows has become manager of the Exclusive Service Department of the General Film Co., at 122 Pearl Street. This service opened here recently and is being supplied to many leading houses in the Buffalo field. Mr. Meadows recently returned from New York City. His present territory covers New York State west of Utica and a large part of northern Pennsylvania. "This service," he said, "is providing in its exclusive and general tone a long felt want in the picture field." Mr. Meadows formerly represented the General Film Co. in the Middle West, with headquarters in Cleveland.

Harold Edel is meeting with success as manager of the Strand Moving Picture Theater. Centrally located and handsomely furnished, this house is drawing a high class patronage.

The Buffalo Times said in part recently: "Buffalo moving picture lovers and proprietors of the many theaters here are in arms over the efforts of metropolitan musical publishing houses to introduce cheap singers and illustrated songs as a permanent part of the moving picture performance, through a bill now before the New York State Legislature. The legislation proposed provides that five minutes' intermission must be given between each reel. This means that the patrons would only be allowed to see half the number of films now shown to make way for 'rag time' and the cheap singer."

Among the recent visitors in Buffalo was J. W. Hennesey, district manager of the Mutual Film Service.

On account of the satisfactory class of pictures provided by Harry Marsey, manager of the Happy Hour Theater, that house has a long list of patrons who attend regularly, week after week.

Henry Carr, manager of Shea's Vaudeville Theater, and Al Becker, operator, are pleased with the Victor Film Service used by that house. Manager Hopkins, of the local Victor branch, gives his customers, large and small, careful attention.

"BILLY BISON."

LOUISVILLE.

THE Harry K. Lucas Film Company, of Atlanta, Ga., which recently closed the Louisville office, formerly in charge of W. L. LeCompte, is handling the business in the territory formerly served by Louisville from the Atlanta office, that location being sufficiently central to enable this to be done without difficulty.

H. H. Bradbury has purchased of the Vando Amusement Company, of Louisville, the Columbia Theater, and will take charge at once, devoting his personal attention to the management of the house. Mr. Bradbury also owns houses at Petersburg and Oakland City, Ind.

"Les Miserables" is on for its third week at the Shubert Masonic Theater, which is the longest run yet made by a single motion picture attraction in Louisville. By special arrangement with the Masonic trustees, who control the house, two performances were given last Sunday, and Sunday pictures will hereafter be allowed in the theater. Joseph W. Love was recently selected as resident manager of the house, relieving Col. John T. Macauley, the well-known owner and manager of Macauley's Theater, of the routine work, although Col. Macauley will retain an interest in the theater. Mr. Love is an experienced theater man, and should make a success of the management of the Masonic.

A local insurance paper recently made a suggestion in the matter of fire protection, or, rather, the prevention of panics on account of fire in motion picture houses. It printed the suggestion of an expert on the subject to the effect that before every performance there be thrown on the screen a few lines containing instructions as to the proper conduct in case of a fire alarm. The following are the instructions suggested: "In case of fire be calm. Move quietly out by exits marked by red lights. Take your time and nobody will be hurt. The fire hazard of operation is confined to a fireproof booth. It is not dangerous to the audience."

Switow's Crystal Theater, in New Albany, was closed down all last week for repairs, remodeling and re-decoration. The house will be practically new when the work is completed, which is expected to be within a short time.

The three-reel Bison production of "Captain Kidd" made a pronounced hit with the large crowds attending the Novelty Theater last week.

Earl Rife, special representative of the Warner Special Feature Program, was in Louisville last week, booking engagements for his program. The feature idea is one which is very strong with exhibitors in this section.

The Marion Motion Picture Theater, of Corydon, Ky., is benefiting by some advertising in one of the papers at Henderson, Ky., the ads being placed in the "Help Wanted" column, and indicating that the thing that is "Wanted" is attendance at the Marion. Manager Luther S. Marshall is handling a good business, and devices like this help to keep things moving.

Manager John Venable, of the Princess Theater, at Hopkinsville, Ky., which is owned by the Crescent Amusement Company, is much pleased at the decision of the company to add Kinemacolor films to the program at the Princess. Mr. Venable has been making an effort to get these pictures for some time, and is convinced that they will add much to the attractiveness of his offerings.

The Empress, at Owensboro, Ky., showed "The Mystery of the Silver Skull," a two-reel Vitagraph number, with much success last week. The new Vitagraph policy of featuring the name of the author of the piece, illustrated by this drama, of which James Oliver Curwood is the author, met with the approval of the audience, this added bit of information meeting a long-felt want.

The Rex Theater, of Princeton, Ky., is installed in new quarters on the ground floor of the S. P. Pool building, Mr. Pool having spared no expense to make the theater modern in every respect.

Work has been started at Ashland, Ky., on the new motion picture house at Twenty-ninth and Winchester Streets, of which C. C. Moore is the owner. The new building will be of brick, and will be two stories in height. The theater and a storeroom will occupy the first floor, the second story being intended for apartments.

For the first time in Maysville, motion pictures were shown in a church a few evenings ago, when at the Church of the Nativity was presented a program including a three-reel presentation of the "Passion Play."

The showing of the film was an accident, in a way, resulting from the loss of some slides illustrating missionary work among the Indians, intended to go with a lecture on that subject. The "Passion Play" film was secured by Jack Hawthorne, operator of the Gem Theater, as a substitute, by a special trip to Cincinnati, and the audience was much pleased with the substitution.

The Crescent Amusement Company, of Nashville, Tenn., has announced that it will erect in Bowling Green, Ky., a handsome motion picture theater about January 1, on a site upon which a long lease has been acquired. The officers of the company and a representative of the Nashville architectural firm of Holeman & Marshall were in Bowling Green recently, looking over the ground. The Crescent Amusement Company already owns the Elite and Columbia Theaters in Bowling Green, and the third house is intended to surpass both of the others in every respect. It will have a seating capacity of 600 or more, and will be modern in every respect.

A. J. Boot, 15 Lee Building, Memphis, Tenn., desires prices on films, machines, and other equipment for motion picture theaters.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

A CORPORATION has been formed by the Goldsmith-Snyder Co., of which David Goldsmith, William C. Snyder, Theresa Goldsmith and Lucille Snyder are the partners; with a capital stock of $5,000, divided into fifty shares of a par value of $100 each. This firm will engage in the moving picture theater business at 1223 Seventh Street, Northwest.

"Les Miserables" in nine reels, divided into three sections, brought an immense crowd to the National Theater, where it was shown as a Sunday feature.

Work will soon be begun on a new moving picture theater in Alexandria, Va., which is to be one story in height, with a cellar where the heating plant will be installed. The lot on which the theater is to stand has a frontage of forty-five feet and a depth of eighty feet. The house will have a seating capacity of 450.

Realizing the value of co-operation between employers and employees, the Circle Amusement Company has inaugurated a series of get-together dinners. These are to be held periodically and while the good things are being served, both the owners and the "men on the firing line" are to be given an opportunity of voicing their thoughts as to how to make the service of the Circle Theater better. At the first of these little affairs several new ideas were brought out which will be given a trial.

The Greater New York Film Rental Company has secured quarters in the Warder Building, Ninth and F Streets, Northwest, with Mr. Robert R. Harcourt, formerly solicitor for the General Film Company, in charge. The many friends of Mr. Harcourt wish him success in his new undertaking.

The value of the moving picture as an educational agency is shown by the fact that several of the big government departments here are using

Copyrighted
1913, by HELEN GARDNER

Helen Gardner in
A Princess of Bagdad

Produced in
Miss Gardner's Studio

Written and Directed by
Charles L. Gaskill

FULLY conscious of the exact meaning of the words employed here, we state as a fact that "A Princess of Bagdad" is the most beautiful and absorbingly interesting picture ever made in America, the equal of any picture ever made anywhere, and the most beautiful original picture ever made in the world. Its charm is irresistible. It scintillates with brightness and beauty. The story is as interesting as any ever written. Its technical perfection is a model. It is a grotesque, tragedy, a light comedy, a fantastic play, a diabolique. It is fascinating always. It holds one's attention as by bands of iron—you are in the midst of tears and laughter every second of time. It has all of the mystery and glamour of a real Arabian Nights' Tale—all of the complications, all of those wonderful complications, of those old stories, all told so clearly and finely that a child understands as well as the most highly cultured man or woman. The picture is played by real artists—from the most important to the least important character. The wonderful grace and transcendent beauty of Miss Helen Gardner, her tremendous dramatic ability and genius in picture art, have never been seen to a better advantage than in this very unusual work. The picture lasts about two hours, being seven full reels long, each reel comprising one full chapter. Its photography is absolutely flawless. It is the legitimate successor to "Cleopatra." Everybody made money on "Cleopatra"—everybody will make money on "A Princess of Bagdad." Wire for prices now—or you may be too late.

Edwards - Zetler Feature Film Co. of Dayton, Ohio, owners of Helen Gardner features for Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

Sole Selling Agents THE HELGAR CORPORATION, 472 FULTON STREET
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK

We shall be pleased to give any parties interested screen examination in the above suite of offices

films to good advantage. The Navy utilizes films to promote its recruiting service by showing life at garrisoned posts and experimental stations, although possibly all by private individuals, and the Department of Agriculture will soon have a number of films on plant and animal life ready for the screen.

That every care is taken of the patrons of the Cosmos Theater in Pennsylvania Avenue, Northwest, is evidenced by the recent installation of a storm protection. This has completely enclosed the open lobby of the theater. The upper part is ornamented with large sections of stained glass in onyx style. This gives a very attractive appearance to the house.

A record breaking attendance was recently had at the Empire Theater in H Street, Northeast, when "Sapho" was featured. So many requests did Manager Greenberg receive for a return showing of this film by those who were disappointed at being turned away that it was again featured at the same house with similar results.

Pictures of romance, a review of current events and some western scenes formed the entertainment given at the Government Hospital for the Insane, at Anacostia for the patients and employees of the hospital.

The closing of all 5 and 10 cent shows on Sunday and the strict enforcement of the liquor laws was advocated in resolutions passed by the Sunday School Association of the District of Columbia at its annual meeting. These alleged clarifiers of impure conditions seem to lose sight of the fact that moving picture shows are big factors in the crusade against the use of liquor and are doing so much to educate the people.

C. L. LINZ.

INDIANAPOLIS.

MAYOR SAMUEL L. SHANK, of this city, who has attained an international reputation on account of the fight he has made against the high cost of living, is arranging to go on the vaudeville stage when his term of office expires, January 5. The mayor is having a film made illustrating the cause of the high cost of living and the cost of high living, and will use this in an eighteen-minute sketch. His opening engagement will be at the Lyric Theater in this city, Christmas week, after which he will begin a three-months' engagement over the State.

The strike of operators in a number of local motion picture theaters has been settled, and the men have returned to work. An agreement for one year, from November 1, 1913, has been signed with the operators by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, which represents sixty-seven motion picture houses in the city.

W. H. Lawrence, district manager for Indiana and Kentucky for Warner's Features, recently gave a private exhibition at the Idle Hour, in this city, for subscribers to the Warner service. Among the films shown were: "The Ku Klux Klan," "The Man from the Golden West," and a four-reel production featuring James J. Corbett.

John J. Ryan has leased the Colonial Theater, at Illinois and New York streets in this city and will make a specialty of high class motion pictures and light vaudeville, one of the special features will be an Indianapolis film each week. The theater formerly was devoted to productions by a stock company.

The E. G. Spink Company has begun the erection of a motion picture theater at 1124 Central avenue. It is to be a one-story brick structure, 45 by 155 feet, and will have a seating capacity of seven hundred. The cost, exclusive of furnishings, will be about $8,000. It will be completed in time for opening during December.

The Operators' Supply Company has been organized and incorporated at Shelbyville for the purpose of manufacturing and selling sectional fireproof film boxes. Those interested in the company, which has an authorized capitalization of $1,000, are B. Steinhauser, A. S. Griffey and Charles Steinhauser.

Permission to do business in this State has been granted the World Special Films Corporation, by the Indiana secretary of state. The company is a New York corporation with a capitalization of $50,000, of which $2,500 is to be represented in Indiana.

The Tacoma Amusement Company, which recently opened a beautiful new $15,000 motion picture theater at East Washington street and Tacoma avenue, has announced an increase in its capital stock from $15,000 to $25,000.

J. A. De Herity, F. C. De Herity and H. F. Mosiman, have organized the Alhambra Company, at Elwood, to conduct motion picture theaters. The company has been incorporated with an authorized capitalization of $10,000.

C. L. CUMMINS.

NEW ENGLAND AND CANADA

THE K. & K. Amusement Company, of Bridgeport, Conn., incorporated this week, to conduct moving picture theaters. This corporation is capitalized at $40,000.

Another incorporation is the Magnet Theater Company, of Boston, with Bernard H. Kerster, Raymond McKinnon, Thomas H. Canning, Louis M. Vidger and Alexander Vidger, named as the promoters. This is a $10,000 corporation.

The Union Theater Company, of Boston, filed its certificate of incorporation this week. William D. Bradstreet, William D. Bradstreet, Jr., and George E. Knapp, are named as the officers. The concern incorporated for $200,000.

The Plaza Amusement Company, of Boston, is a new concern, with authorized paid in capital of $15,000. The promoters are: Harry F. Campbell, Samuel Grant and Ephraim N. Cook. This concern has taken a ten-year lease on the property in Salem, Mass., formerly occupied by William Gane's Witch Theater, which was burned some months ago. The house is being entirely rebuilt, and will be a modern, fireproof theater, with a seating capacity of 1,000. The house will now be known as the Plaza Theater, and Warner's Features will be the special attraction here. The new owners show their faith in the pictures by so building the stage that no vaudeville acts could possibly be used.

The Eastern Theaters Company, of Boston, will open the Majestic Theater, Keene, N. H., under its management on November 21. The house has been remodeled and repainted. Manager Elbridge Campbell says he will wake up the rustics of Keene with Warner's Features. Elbridge was secured for the Majestic this week, having been in charge of the Scenic Theater, at Chelsea, Mass.

The White Amusement Company, of Boston, came into the light this week as a $5,000 concern. The promoters are: William White, Samuel V. Grand, and Samuel H. Steinfeld. The latter two named are connected with Novelty Feature Films, of Boston, a progressive feature film exchange.

On November 10, a new house opened at Rumford, Me., called the Empire Theater.

Gowan's new theater, at Springvale, Me., opened to good business recently. Mutual pictures, projected by a Power's 6, are relied upon to draw the trade.

The New England Amusement Company, of Hartford, Conn., incorporated this week for $50,000, to conduct a chain of theaters.

Rhodenhizer & Howlie have bought White's Opera House, Concord, N. H., from Dave Adams, and have installed the Universal program. The Lyric Theater, Natick, Mass., is also owned by this firm, and uses Universal service.

The New Comique Theater, Montpelier, Vt., is doing very nicely under the management of R. L. McIntyre. The company is now using Mutual service.

F. J. Dutton, of the Opera House, Waterbury, Vt., features Keystones regularly and finds trade good.

Mrs. Julius Cahn, wife of a theatrical manager, died suddenly on November 11, of heart disease, in the Greenwich Hospital, Greenwich, Conn. Mr. Cahn has a string of theaters in New England, many offering photoplay programs.

The Boston Association for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis, is mailing a letter to moving picture theaters asking them to make a special feature of Edison's new white plague story, if possible. The reel in question is to be released on December 2. The Association also asks for the co-operation of the exhibitors with reference to their colored slides, calling attention to the fact that Red Cross Christmas Seals are on sale after November 27.

Charles Coburn, a former New Yorker, is the new Maritime Provincial manager of the General Film Company, with headquarters at St. John City. By much personal visiting and rigid investigation into the particular needs of his territory, he is greatly helping the smaller exhibitors, much to their satisfaction. Mr. Coburn was formerly in another line of business, and is a great believer in the motto: "a satisfied customer is the best advertisement."

In the province of New Brunswick, Can., the provincial Board of Censors, located in St. John, issue ordinary stereopticon slides, to be used in announcing "passed films." A $50 fine is imposed if this slide does not precede every picture.

Allen McBeath, a St. John, Can., man, who had been managing the Gaumont interests in Montreal for about two years, has resigned from the Mutual officers, which succeeded Gaumont. Mr. McBeath is now visiting his home town, and intimates that he will soon be able to announce his new connections.

George Kleine's "The Last Days of Pompeii" is being exhibited at B. F. Keith's Bijou Dream Theater, Boston, and great interest is displayed by the public.

Harry Asher, general manager of the Famous Players Film Company of New England, 100 Boylston street, Boston, announces that he has secured the New England booking right on the original Pasquali production of "The Last Days of Pompeii," in 7 reels.

Keith's Bijou Theater, Boston, showed special films of the Catholic Missionary Congress on November 17, 18, 19.

Rhode Island in general, and Pawtucket in particular, is now in the censorship agony, due to a proposition that all films be passed by women representing the mothers of the state. The censorship agitation has been a live issue for months, but became unusually active this last ten days. A group of women, known as the Rhode Island Congress of Mothers and Parent Teachers' Association, wish to be made the official censors, so that their children may not be influenced by "ill-advised" photoplays. This association intends choosing a committee which shall thoroughly look into the moving picture conditions, and then prepare legislation to regulate things. The Association claims it is in business not only to tear down, but to construct also, and will be glad to co-operate with exhibitors. Scenes of violence are especially distasteful to the new Association, which, nevertheless, recognizes the value of the photoplay as an educational and entertainment agency. Sanitary conditions of Rhode Island houses will come in for attention, in fact everything pertaining to the picture, or the theater in which it is exhibited, is to come within the survey of the League.

On November 10, Mr. S. Z. Poli, the New England vaudeville and photoplay theater magnate, celebrated his silver jubilee, and had a large party at New Haven, Conn.

A suit has been filed against P. L. Morse, by A. A. Karbey and M. A. Freye for financial loss caused by the State Building Inspector revoking the license of the Lion Theater of Springfield, Mass. The Lion was a photoplay house, and lost its license because of conditions that did not comply with the law. Mr. P. L. Morse is the owner of the building, and Freye & Karbey claim he agreed to make the changes required by the inspector when the lease was signed. Up to date, Mr. Morse has made no changes, and the Lion is dark.

"The Last Days of Pompeii" pulled large trade for the Opera House, Lawrence, Mass., a Julius Cahn theater. The feature was exhibited the week of November 17.

Manager F. Johnson, of the Grand Theater, Brantford, Can., is using Edison's talking pictures.

Manager Nathan Robbins, of the Casco Theater, Portland, Me., is evidently going to be a worthy successor to Mr. Moxley Blumenberg. Mr. Robbins intends to keep the house right up to its old-time standard.

Edwin J. Sullivan, for some time connected, in an executive capacity, with the Greene and Abrams enterprises, in Portland, Me., has severed his connections with that firm, and expects to hook up with a New York producer.

J. Fred Miller, of Fall River, Mass., is now manager of the Savoy Theater, that city, a Julius Cahn house.

C. O. Baker, of the Weseley Theater, Greenfield, Mass., has turned the theater over to P. Brunelle, who will manage the theater just as before.

Ed. F. Galligan, well known at Taunton, Mass., has deserted his theatrical friends in this section, to take charge of a theater in Logansport, Ind.

The Ideal Theater, Milford, Mass., is reported as being in the market for a lessee, but Fred Ray, who has been acting as manager of the house since Noden & Perham gave it up, is still caring for it, and operating it as a photoplay theater.

D. R. Bluffington, manager of the Woonsocket, R. I., Opera House, closed his theater November 4, in order that extensive repairs and alterations could be made. The house is due to reopen November 24, with a show of photoplays and vaudeville.

Claude H. Tally, until recently manager of the Regent Theater, New York, has secured a ten-year lease of the Lyric Theater, Bridgeport, Conn., and the house is being refitted, to the tune of $10,000. Mr. Tally will run a photoplay program, making a specialty of features. Admission will be 10 and 15 cents. The Lyric was lately given up by William Fox.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts decided, last week, that the Nelson Theater, Springfield, Mass., is rightfully in the possession of the Nelson Theater Company, under a lease from the Shuberts. The court enjoins George D. Nelson and the William Fox Amusement Company from ousting the present tenant. There has been complicated litigation over the property. Mr. Nelson and E. G. Vinton leased the house to the Shubert Company in 1907, which concern assigned its lease to the United States Amusement Company of New Jersey. S. Z. Poli took the house over, and in 1908 assigned the lease to the Nelson Theater Company, whose right to possession has only now been established.

A new, fireproof theater is now building at Lowell, Mass., and Samuel Onbach is the owner. The new house will seat 1,500 on the ground floor, and the land measures 72 by 180 feet. The house will boast of a sliding roof, which may be removed in summer. Two Power's 6-A machines, with a motor generator set have been contracted for by Mr. Onbach. The house will cost about $30,000, and should be ready by December 15. Mr. Onbach will manage the theater, having formerly owned and managed the Colonial theater of Lowell.

J. L. French of Rosetown, Sask., Canada, has been appointed national vice-president of the Exhibitors' League for that province. The exhibitors of Canada are to be organized if possible, and a convention will be called by Mr. French before long.

"A Life for a Life," is a new 3-reel feature of the Film Releases of America, and the New England State rights were purchased by Harry Asher, manager of the Famous Players Film Company, of New England, Boston.

The Scollay Square Olympia Theater, Boston's new two-million-dollar theater, built for the exploitation of vaudeville and pictures, was opened to the public on November 17. On Sunday night, November 16, a special invitation performance was given, to which were invited many exhibitors, public officials and friends. Full details of the Olympia will appear in these columns next week.

HENRY.

DEPENDABLE FEATURE SERVICE

FEATURE TALKS—Talk 1.

MERE theorizing about features will lead nowhere. The exhibitor today is confronted not by theories but by conditions. The market is now in a mighty ferment. No one can tell what crystallizations will come, but one thing stands out pre-eminently:

The Three-Reel Feature of Quality is the Life Blood of Every Successful Program.

All the Crystallizations will form around this one big, rock-bottom fact. The most valuable thing which is offered to exhibitors at the present time is:

A Steady Supply of High-Class Features Averaging Three Thousand Feet.

Such features must be modern, original, sensational, and they must possess plenty of Variety. We capitalize the word "VARIETY." This variety you are sure to get from firms who specialize in Features. The True Feature Co. specializes in features. It has never made a single reel, it has no single reel on its shelves. The True Feature Co. represents selected producers, who have been called into existence by the demand for high-class features. These producers are not hampered by recollections of the past importance and prosperity of the single reel. They have never seen anything on the kinematographic horizon but Features. Ponder these last few words and hammer them down for future reference.

TRUE FEATURES are the BEST PROGRAM BUILDERS of THE DAY

THE TRUE FEATURE CO.

110-112 West 40th Street World's Tower Building New York City

Telephone 578 Bryant

SOLE AMERICAN AGENTS FOR THE CONTINENTAL ART FILM SOCIETY

LICENSED FILM STORIES

SELIG.

MOUNTED OFFICER FLYNN (Nov. 25).—A Secret Service operative is intrusted with plans by the U. S. War Department of the utmost importance, that he is to deliver in a Pacific Coast city. Spies of a neighboring nation have an inkling of their transmission, but their opportunity to seize them does not come until the last moment as the plans are about to be delivered. Mounted officer Flynn happens in and hears just enough of the reported loss to form the quick conclusion of the natural detective. He clatters away down the street and out into the lonely suburbs over his long dark beat with all of his senses tingling with the sensation of something imminent. He is passing an unoccupied cottage when his suspicions are aroused by a light momentarily illuminating the window, like the flash of a match. He dismounts, ties his horse and creeps up to the window. He surmises the two men he sees inside are the spies who have halted for a rest before sneaking on over the border. They are nervous and alert and his discovery is coincident with theirs. The man with the plans makes his way out of the rear window—the one with the gun waits at the door ready to give the butt any one entering. When the light goes out Flynn jumps for the door and with the skill of a "half back" splinters it from a shoulder shove. The man inside hits the officer's wrist, sending his pistol flying and tries to club him with his own weapon. In the struggle that followed all the fighting blood is up in Flynn, and he drags the armed man out into the yard, and the pair wrestle desperately on the brink of a well—with a mighty wrench he throws the weapon of the spy into the well and sends the owner after it.

The spy who escaped with the plans has a good start. Flynn flings himself automatically into his saddle and starts on the race for the border. The man in front is desperate, well mounted and armed; the mounted officer gains breath as he races along, is unarmed, but unafraid. The spy turns in his saddle and fires. Flynn ducks down and lies along the neck of his horse, Indian fashion—and rapidly coils the riata that touches his thigh on the saddle. The bullets hum over him like angry bees—closer and closer draw the riders. Suddenly Flynn rises in his stirrups and throws his riata. He gets a plug in the left shoulder, but the flying noose settles about the man ahead. The noose tightens and pinions the arms of the spy to his sides. Flynn closes up alongside twists the smoking revolver from his hand, stuffs it in his own empty holster and drags the documents from the mussed-up spy. He brings the Government back its own and more—he wins a Congressional medal and only says he merely worked along the line of duty.

CUPID IN THE COW CAMP (Nov. 26).—Bud Reynolds, the king of his class, applies at the Diamond "S" ranch for a job and promptly falls in love with the ranchman's daughter. They all contest at the County Fair, when Bud captures all the trophies in sight for his prowess, including the hand of the fair Katie. Arizona Bob, Soda Water Sam and Limpy Jim are disconsolate thereat, and take to reading openly and in secret, the small "ads" in the crumpled paper from Omaha. They all strike "a plant" of two confidence men: "A wealthy widow desires to make the acquaintance of a Westerner." Each, unknown to the other, writes, and are requested to send a sum of money as evidence of good faith. After several weeks of waiting for the return sign of the widow, their mutual secret becomes open and they conclude, both as individuals and syndicates, they have been stung. Arizona volunteers to mosey up to Omaha and try to get back the original heartbalm investment. He sends the coy widow an important check, and goes on the same train with the letter. He visits the newspaper office and lays for the "Con" who gets the letters, and then trails him to the lair of his confederates. As they are about to split the proceeds of the check he bobs up serenely, and covering them with his trusty irons, "persuades" them to pay his bill which includes his traveling expenses and the original investment of his partners, together with divers "extras" in the form of heart damages—in a naive western way that takes the starch and unearned increment out of the swindlers. Then he buys a handsome wedding present for Bud and Katie. His partners are reimbursed, but concluded that the risks of matrimony are too complicated for their simple calculation.

A MESSAGE FORM HOME (Nov. 27).—Jack Trask, a drinking and non-provident man, confers a hardship upon his wife, and an unenviable heritage upon his boy, Earl. This youth is jibed by his schoolmates because of his ragged clothing and his dissolute father, but he has a little champion in Gladys Hoffman, whose father, Judge Hoffman, employs Trask. The boy meets a friendly hobo and succumbs to the lure of the road. He confides to Gladys that he is going to run away; but in spite of her persuasion to the contrary, he feels that he is driven from home, and disappears. Gladys tells the secret to his poor mother and then to her father, who calls Trask to account, but his reformation is too late. Earl has disappeared. The zest of the wandering life soon wears off, but the boy has practically become a slave and is forced to continue the horrid pace of the tramp. His poor old mother sets a light in the window each night, hoping for the return of her wandering boy, and Gladys never loses hope in her playmate, and one day, in a strange humor writes a message in chalk upon the door of a freight car, trusting that it will meet the eye of Earl, and bring him back again. One day the gang of tramps with whom Earl consorts, plan to loot a freight car, and that night they steal into the yards, hoist Earl upon their shoulders, to pick the lock. He lights a match and by its flare, reads the message that he recognizes is for him. Just then the detective who is watching the yards comes upon the crowd and captures them. Their case comes up the following day before Judge Hoffman, and the ragged boy seems to be singled out as the chief conspirator. At this moment, Gladys, the Judge's daughter, comes into the court, recognizes the boy, explanations are quickly made, the real culprits are passed on to save time, and the repentant Earl is taken home to his parents and starts on a new life.

THE SUPREME MOMENT (Nov. 28).—In his youthful days of toughness Gangster Griggs had a companion in crime, named Brock, who had cut away from the gang; and by superior cunning, became "a master of finance," and a cash purchaser of respect. His methods were finer and more far-reaching than those of Griggs, whom he had betrayed and tried to forget. Griggs, "the worst man in New York," however, did not forget. He rallied his minions in a dungeon-like, underground dive, in darkest New York for a master stroke; but Brock was alert to the situation, and as usual, betrayed them to the police. It was Griggs' fortune, however, to escape this last raid, dangerously wounded. He fled away in the dark, and dropping off the train, strangely enough, landed at Brock's country place. He learned this fact later as he was having his wound dressed, and conceived a dastardly plan of "doctoring" the pleasure boat, used by his arch enemy's daughter. As he watched the little craft put out on the deep lake and begin to sink, carrying the dearest thing associated with the life of Brock, the diabolical glee of the revengeful gangster, Griggs, faded as he watched the dramatic death struggle of an innocent young girl—a sacrifice to his personal hate. At that moment the humane impulse surged superior to the meaner emotions in his darkened soul. To swim the intervening waters and rescue the girl meant certain death in his weakened condition, but the supreme moment could not be denied, and he took the chance. He reached the girl as her boat went under and left her struggling in the water. He sustained her until the father's boat rushed up and she was dragged aboard. The exertion was too much for the exhausted Griggs, and he sank as Brock recognized him.

THE RUSTLER'S REFORMATION (Dec. 2).—Bill Brant, a bad man, has a fine daughter, who is in love with a good man, Tom Travis, foreman of the Diamond "S" ranch. Brant has the unhappy faculty of eliminating the last letter of his name and adding a "d" on other people's cattle—in the argot of the West, a rustler. The redoubtable Tom Travis has been looking after his diminishing herd and happens to go by the Brant cabin, following a warm trail. He finds that the girl has been locked in the cabin by heavy bars having been nailed across the windows and door. He concludes that this is due to two reasons—one, that she cannot get away, and the other, that she cannot discover the operations of Brant and his accomplices.

Tom gives the girl her liberty and suggests that they go at once and get married. So they ride off double, on their happy errand. The rustlers, returning, find the girl gone and start after the couple. Tom and his inamorata reach the home of the minister first: but Brant arrives on the scene, furiously declaring that he is going to make his daughter a widow before she is a wife. He rushes into the room, and the daughter requests the parson to pray for her father. This smites the conscience of the old sinner, so that he gives up his murderous plan and orders his men to drive back the stolen cattle they have confined and concealed in a draw. So he happily becomes good, leaves the country, and the young people are happy ever after.

WITHIN THE HOUR (Dec. 3).—Mrs. Rowe cautions her little daughter, Nellie, that she will be gone only an hour and not to get into mischief. She has no sooner left the house than the child, looking through the window and seeing other children at play, goes out and joins them. Reddy, a thief, observes her departure, gets into the house, inspects the silver, piles it on a table, preparatory to wrapping it in the cloth and carrying it away. In the interim, Nellie has told her companions of the secret location of jelly and jam, and the little ones go back to the house for a luncheon. The thief, hearing the children, steps into the china closet, thinking that they will pass by and not observe the silver. Nellie, however, happens to see him, deftly turns the key in the lock, and then the little ones decide to hunt a policeman. The thief tries to kick his way out when he hears the coast is clear, but finding it vain, quiets down and gets out his gun to be ready for the coming police.

Reddy's child has found a doll which happens to belong to Nellie Rowe. This results in their acquaintance, and she goes back to the house with Nellie. Her father, imprisoned in the closet, hears her voice. In the interim, the policeman has come, likewise Mrs. Rowe, whose hour is up. The officer cautiously opens the door, gun in hand, but the conscience-stricken thief has dropped his own weapon, a ready prisoner. The father of Nellie sees the relationship and pleads with the policeman to let the repentant man go with his own child. The big man in the uniform shuts his eyes for once, and remarks: "Sure, I have kids of me own."

GRANDDADDY'S BOY (Dec. 4).—Grandpa Eaton, a white-haired old man, has reached infirm age, and his grandson, Bobby, is his chiefest joy. He has a comely granddaughter, aged 20, whose gaiety of disposition causes the old gentleman some apprehension. She has a sweetheart, Jim Weston, but when she shows Grandpa her ring and announces her engagement, he not only refuses to shake hands with the young man, but reduces his voice from quivering falsetto to the deep diapason note of displeasure. Then he goes on playing with Bobby as though nothing had happened. Bobby, however, sees through the window the waiting automobile of Jim and decides that the out-of-doors is for him. He rushes out, begs for a ride, but is refused. Undaunted by this, and unnoticed by Jim, he climbs onto the rear of the machine, and as the driver is not particular about speed laws, Bobby has to cling on for dear life. Finally he is jarred off, and is discovered in the street, injured and unconscious. A "cop" and several other Samaritaus rush in and pick up the injured one, with expressions of amazement, and one man points down the street towards the whirling auto, the driver of which knows nothing of his lost passenger. Jim, however, happens to come back that way, and is shocked and horrified to see the policeman carrying Bobby, whom he recognizes. He explains to him that he will take care of him, takes the child in his auto and carries him swiftly to his own home, a fashionable bachelor apartment. He dispatches his man at once for a doctor, then phones Bess. She, in turn, breaks the news to Grandpa Eaton, who makes his way to Jim's apartment and endeavors to carry the injured child from the sick-room. The doctor interferes at this point, but presently Bobby regains his wits, begins to mend, and exonerates Jim from the blame that his Grandpa has placed upon him. This results in restored happiness all around.

NORTHERN HEARTS (Dec. 5).—Old Inspector McGrath of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, is proud indeed when his son, Jim, gets his sergeant's stripes, and bids him to live up to the duties they impose; but the mother of Jim's trail-pal, Brock, whom the motherless boy regards as his own, bids Jim remember: "duty to God first and to the King second."

Jim and Brock are rivals for the hand of Ellen. She really prefers Jim, but piqued at his lack of perception, ,encourages Brock. One day she is attacked by a villain, Black. Brock happens along, and during the encounter that ensues, knocks the assailant over the cliff and he is killed. The girl persuades Brock, against his better judgment, to flee, and Jim is detailed to capture him. His inclinations revolt against such pursuit, and Ellen threatens him with her hatred if he does so, but the brand of duty has burned so deeply that nothing can swerve him from orders. He trails and arrests Brock, and, bringing him to quarters, he meets Ellen, who pleads with him for Brock's liberty, even offering herself as sacrifice. She paints such a pitiful picture of Brock's old mother, whom Jim loves as his own, that he recalls her words, andt hen and there ensues a struggle between the dual duties. Finally he tears the stripes from his uniform as a sign that he is unable to live up to them under the circumstances and frees Brock. He then discovers that Ellen is truly his own, and the story eventually ends well for all concerned.

THE FSCAPE OF JIM DOLAN (Special—2 parts—Nov. 17).—The love of Jim Dolan for Grace Wellington incurs the hatred of Ed. Jones, who is trying to win the affection of Grace. Jones, a foreman on the Brown ranch, and Brown, himself, call upon Dolan and request that he sell his little claim, which is bordering the ranch of Brown. Jim refuses to listen to them and his demands of Jones to keep quiet tend to intensify the latter's anger. Seeing a chance to get even with Jim, Jones puts a malignant motive into effect. One night he steals a number of branded hides from Brown, which he buries on the claim of Jim. He then reports that a number of the hides have been stolen and with the aid of the sheriff discover the missing skins. Jim is arrested and sentenced to ten years in the town calaboose. Grace, believing that there has been foul play, smuggles a saw and a note, which tells him of the relay of horses to help him escape.

It is not long before Jim is urging the steeds to great speed. The sheriff and the posse soon discover his flight and are soon upon his trail. When Jim comes to the last relay he makes the alarming discovery that the horse is lame. Breaking his rifle, he runs cautiously to the river, submerges himself and breathes only through the

"A LEAP OF DESPAIR"

Thrilling Feature In Four Parts

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

SENSATIONAL ACTS

Never before seen, are shown in this wonderful film. An absorbing love story is startlingly intensified by deeds of daring to take the very breath away from the audience. From the dizzy heights, shown in the illustration herewith, the brave equestrienne makes her horse leap to the ground. This is but one of a series of thrilling incidents which make this film a fitting

SUCCESSOR TO "TIGRIS."

Territory Open:

Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Carolina, New York State exclusive of Greater New York, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

NEXT RELEASE, IN TWO PARTS

"Death's Door"

"The Queen's Jewel"

IN FOUR PARTS

Territory Open:

Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Carolina, New York State exclusive of Greater New York, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA

HARRY R. RAVER, Director General

Candler Building New York City

Hallberg Talk No. 3

THIS IS THE HALLBERG
A. C. to D. C.
ECONOMIZER

USED BY ALL
LEADING M. P.
EXHIBITORS

MAKES THE BEST LIGHT
IN THE WORLD!

Adjustable from 25 to 60 Amp. D. C. for one or two Arcs.

CHANGES ALTERNATING INTO DIRECT CURRENT, PRODUCING A STEADY AND BRILLIANT PICTURE OF WONDERFUL DETAIL IN THE USUALLY DARK SHADOWS.

IT IS GUARANTEED TO GIVE THE BEST LIGHT WITH THE LEAST CURRENT BILL.

barrel of the gun. His ingenious tactic effectuates his escape from the posse, but he is later captured on the river bank by Apaches, who tie him to the tail of a wild horse as a sort of amusement. He is rescued by a prospector and nursed back to health. Around some supplies that the old prospector has bought in town is wrapped a newspaper stating that Ed Jones, who has been wounded in a saloon fight, confessed that it was he who stole the hides and cast the blame upon Jim Dolan. Jim tells his story to the kind hearted prospector, and it is not long before he is in the arms of his sweetheart, Grace.

THE QUALITY OF MERCY (Special—2 parts—Nov. 24).—Emma Leighton, an orphan, lives with her irritable old uncle and kind-hearted aunt on a farm far away from the city. Near the farm is a shooting lodge owned by Harvey Manning, who comes there with his friend, Paul Mason. In time Harvey, who is a club man of not the best type, meets Emma. He becomes infatuated with her and his city ways please the countrified girl. Shortly after Paul notices that his friend wants to take advantage of the girl and he remonstrates with him. Harvey, not being accustomed to taking advice, silences his friend. Harvey is suddenly called away to the city and before he goes sends a messenger with a note to Emma telling her to come to the city, where they will be married. The note is delivered to her just after she has been whipped by her irascible old uncle, and deciding that life in the country is no longer endurable, leaves at once for the city, where she meets Harvey, who takes her to his apartment. As the girl is demanding that the marriage be performed at once, Paul, who knows the character of his friend, also goes to the city and is horrified in learning the whereabouts of Emma. In order to overcome Emma's scruples, Harvey slips Paul a note asking him to bring some friend dressed as a minister. But Paul does not intend to be a partner to such a diabolical plot and he goes and brings a regularly ordained minister, who performs the ceremony. Shortly after the unscrupulous Harvey leaves his wife and writes her that their marriage was illegal and that she has no further claim on him. Almost simultaneously with the receipt of the note, Emma learns that her husband and Paul have been killed in an automobile accident.

A year later, Emma, through the importunings of her aunt, whose husband has died, is persuaded to return to the farm with her baby. No sooner has she arrived when the baby is taken suddenly ill. She summons Dr. Hartley and the next morning brings news that the little one is on the road to recovery. During his professional calls the doctor becomes interested in the young mother. One day at the general store he hears an uncalled for remark concerning Emma. He throttles the man and throws him off the porch. In order to put a stop to further remarks he offers to marry Emma. To show their dislike of the young girl the inhabitants of the village as they are coming out of church shun her. The doctor, who happened to be present, escorts her home and again asks her to marry him. She consents, the day is set and the minister is engaged. On her wedding day she receives a note from the minister telling her that he is called to the bedside of a dying man, but that he is sending a minister from a neighboring town. This minister proves to be the man who married Emma to Harvey in the city, and thus the stigma of supposed shame is lifted from Emma.

KALEM.

THE OCTOROON (Special—3 parts—Dec. 1).—McCloskey steals the paper which gives Zoe, an octoroon her freedom. The girl is the companion to Mrs. Peyton, her former mistress. She repulses McCloskey's advances. George, Mrs. Peyton's son, loves Zoe, and asks her to be his wife. Mrs. Peyton is heavily in debt to McCloskey. The man kills little Paul, who is bringing the mail to the house, and steals a letter containing a draft for $50,000 which would enable Mrs. Peyton to pay the debt. Unknown to the murderer, a camera is a silent witness of his crime. Wahnotee, an Indian, is the devoted friend of the murdered boy: Mrs. Peyton's slaves are confiscated and sold at auction to pay her debts. Zoe is seized as a slave because the paper telling of her freedom is missing. McCloskey buys the girl. George is heart-broken. The camera reveals McCloskey as the murderer of Paul. Upon the villain's arrest, Mrs. Peyton's draft and Zoe's document are found by Scudder, Mrs. Peyton's overseer. McCloskey is placed aboard a steamboat to be taken to prison. He escapes after setting the vessel afire. Wahnotee follows the man. Later, the two fight a terrific knife duel and McCloskey is killed. Ignorant that her freedom has been established, Zoe takes poison rather than become McCloskey's slave. Scudder arrives with the news of McCloskey's villainy, but he comes too late—Zoe is dead.

Get one and be pleased and show the BEST Pictures in your City as all HALLBERG users do.

Yonkers, N. Y., Nov. 11, 1913.
Mr. J. H. HALLBERG,
36 E. 23rd St., New York.

Dear Sir—Your "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. 60 ampere economizer which I installed in my 1500-seat "HAMILTON" Theatre last year has more than come up to my expectations. I have had a reputation for producing the best picture since the early days, but I must say that with your "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. Economizer I have realized my ideal of a perfect moving picture, and any moving picture man who wants a picture of great brilliancy and full of details in the shadows will do well to install your machine.

I was so well pleased that I put in another "HALLBERG" A. C. to D. C. Economizer adjustable up to 60 amperes in my Palace Theatre.

I also want to mention that I am pleased with the moving picture machine equipment which you sold for both of these theatres. Everything has worked out to my entire satisfaction, and I believe I show the best picture in the United States.

Wishing you success, I am,
Yours very truly,
A. E. HAMILTON, INC.
Hamilton Amusement Co.

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWERS, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS. I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY.

Free Circular on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 Pages, Costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG
"THE HOUSE OF QUALITY"
36 East 23rd St., N. Y.

THE CAVE MAN'S WAR (Special—2 parts—Dec. 3).—Red Axe, of the Cave Dwellers, is crippled in a combat with a member of his tribe, whose mate he attempts to steal. The defeated man is driven from his people. Strong Arm, of the Shell People, takes Lightfoot, daughter of Scarface, as his mate. Later, Strong Arm and several of his tribesmen come upon the crippled Red Axe. The Shell People and the Cave Dwellers are at constant war. Strong Arm saves Red Axe from death at the hands of the Shell men. He brings the injured man to his cave and orders Lightfoot to treat the Cave Dweller's injuries. Red Axe recovers rapidly. He covets Lightfoot, but she repels his advances. The Cave Dwellers attack the Shell People. Led by Strong Arm, the latter beat back their foes.

Red Axe shows his ingratitude by attempting to steal Lightfoot. The man is foiled and compelled to flee. He hastens back to his own people and induces them to make another attack upon the Shell People. The latter are defeated after a furious battle. Lightfoot is captured by Red Axe. Strong Arm is powerless to aid his mate. He lurks about the Cave Dwellers' vicinity watching Red Axe. While thus engaged, Strong Arm accidentally forms the first blow. He learns its use as a weapon after he fashions a rude arrow. Several days later, Strong Arm discovers Red Axe dragging Lightfoot along the beach. He speeds an arrow into the man's side. Red Axe pulls the arrow from his body. He is amazed that so small a thing can wound him mortally. The man staggers and falls. With the aid of the bow, Strong Arm restores peace to his tribe.

WHILE FATHER TELEPHONED (Dec. 5).—Marlin takes his daughter, Ethel, to the seashore in hopes that she will annex a rich husband. The father meets Bill, who looks like "ready money." Marlin introduces the young man to Ethel. The girl promptly takes a dislike to the man. The following day Don saves Ethel from drowning. Bill, who witnessed the incident, feared to go to the rescue because he might ruin his clothes. Ethel and Don fall in love with each other. Bill later asks Marlin for Ethel's hand. The father consents. Ethel stormily declares she will not marry him. To prevent her from seeing Don, Marlin locks her in her room. Ethel calls to Don through the window and he comes to the rescue.

Marlin enters a telephone booth to phone for a minister. Don nails the door. The minister promises to come to the hotel at once. Upon his arrival, Don, on the impulse of the moment, asks Ethel to be his wife. She consents. Marlin tries in vain to get out of his prison. Bill comes to the man's assistance and smashes the booth. Both

Demonyte

Is Sensational Film Wanted?

Being told by exchangemen every where that it is, we will release

"DEMONYTE"

It's a Startler!

The story is about a super-destructive explosive and the desperate efforts made by Governments and Anarchists to gain possession of it. A woman agent of the Anarchists is the central figure and her plots make excitement early and often.

It's in three reels.

Film Releases of America

220 West 42nd St., New York City

rush to Ethel's room. They arrive just too late. Ethel and Don have just been married. Marlin storms and rages until the humor of the situation dawns upon him. Embracing his son-in-law and daughter, he laughingly forgives them.

ANDREW CARNEGIE'S GIFT TO THE WORLD (Dec. 5).—The famous philanthropist's contribution toward the Peace movement—the Peace Palace at the Hague, is shown in a series of superb views. This edifice, majestically rising amid beautiful surroundings and with tower thrown toward the sky, stands as a perpetual protest against war's terrible devastations. This film also contains several other highly interesting topical scenes.

THE FOOT PRINT CLUE (Dec. 6).—Strong saves Harry from the Indians. Harry becomes a member of the Strong family. He falls in love with Laura, his benefactor's daughter. The boy's admiration for Strong causes him to imitate the man's dress. Harry learns that the heels of the ranch owner's boots are fastened by brass-headed nails arranged in star-shaped design. He promptly places the design on his own heels. Harry visits Dillon, a saloon keeper. The man is placing money in a bag when the boy calls. Shortly afterward Harry leaves. Still holding the money bag, Dillon picks up his pistol. The weapon accidentally goes off. The man staggers back. His hand hangs over a well behind him. As Dillon falls, the money and pistol fall into the well.

The heel marks of the footprints near the body cause the sheriff to arrest Strong as the murderer. A mob takes Strong away from the officers. Laura pleads for her father's life. Harry learns of his benefactor's peril. Hearing that the men intend to hang Strong on the evidence of the heel marks, the boy shows that his heels bear the same design and declares he has committed the murder. A hostler discovers the pistol and money in the well. He makes his discovery known to the sheriff, who dashes away to the rescue. Harry is just about to be hung when the sheriff arrives. The pistol is known to have belonged to Dillon. Further evidence reveals that the man was accidentally shot by his own weapon. Harry is freed. Laura comes into his arms, while Strong expresses his gratitude for the boy's noble act.

VITAGRAPH.

A GAME OF CARDS (Dec. 1).—With untiring love, Delia tries to comfort her mother, who has never ceased to yearn for her husband, who disappeared years ago. A knock at the door announces Walter Coombs, a native of the village, who insists upon forcing his attentions upon Mrs. Trent, Delia's mother. She tells him to leave at once. He goes away saying, "You'll be glad enough to get me yet. Just wait!"

Delia is taken dangerously ill and Dr. Faraday, a handsome, middle-aged man, restores her to health. Naturally he is liked by Delia and her mother and their preference is resented by Coombs. Doctor Faraday becomes very fond of Delia and she returns his affection. When her mother dies she turns to him as her protector. Coombs plans to strike at the doctor through Delia by offering to adopt her as his ward. The doctor claims her. Coombs tauntingly dares Faraday to decide the matter by a cut of the cards. At the village store the doctor wins the cut. He sends Delia to live at his aunt Ellen's.

Five years later, Dr. Faraday receives a letter from Delia begging him to visit them. She sends him a picture of herself. She is now seventeen and is very beautiful and lovable. The doctor goes to his aunt's home. Coombs leaves by the same train, determined to have revenge. Delia shows the doctor that she cares for him, and he realizes that he loves her. His conscience makes him feel he is too old to marry the young girl and he determines to go away. Delia wanders into the moonlit garden and is accosted by Coombs, who hands her a letter supposing to come from her father, who is said to be in hiding and wishes to see his daughter. She is about to go with Coombs when Faraday appears. Coombs draws a revolver and fires, hitting Delia, who falls in a swoon. Police take Coombs into custody. Delia recovers from her wound and proves to Faraday that no barrier can separate their love.

A PAIR OF PRODIGALS (Dec. 3).—Sandy and Shorty, two happy hoboes, see a fisher-boy in the distance. They run toward him and induce him to trade his fishing-rod and bait-can for a silver medal. While digging for angle worms in the woods Sandy's shovel suddenly comes upon something hard and he unearths a treasure—a tin box full of banknotes. Sandy and Shorty divide the money. Deciding that they are fatigued they lie down and go to sleep. Sandy dreams of ordering kegs and kegs of beer and of taking a bath in a tub-full of "suds." Shorty dreams of going to a gay restaurant and ordering everything on the menue.

When they awake they feel for their money and are happy to find that they still have it. They start out arm-in-arm toward the town. On their way they meet a man who sells them an automobile. This takes all their money but one twenty-dollar bill, which Sandy cautiously holds back. This automobile is peculiar in many ways. Its gasolene tank is a beer keg; its hood is a half-barrel, strapped down with a wide ribbon. The entire car is bolstered up with white-washed fence boards. Its windshield is a broken cellar window. It has a cow-catcher in front reinforced by a soft sofa cushion. Its lights are common oil house lamps. An alarm clock takes the place of an auto timepiece. The steps leading to the two little baby-chair stools for seats are ladder-like with four rungs. But this car can go. Sandy and Shorty speed all over town and have some hair-breadth escapes. When the car breaks down they pull and push it awhile until Shorty decides that it is hampered by surplus machinery, and proceeds to eliminate some. Then the car goes all right. It goes so well that it runs away with its two occupants, taking them right through a brick wall into the police court.

The judge fines the two malefactors twenty dollars, but Sandy is not sorrowful. With the air of aristocratic boredom, he pushes his last twenty-dollar bill toward the judge, and with Shorty, walks haughtily from the courtroom. The last seen of the two happy hoboes is when they are making time over the same old route on their way to other treasures.

IN THE OLD ATTIC (Dec. 4).—Because his son refuses to marry the girl he has selected, John Morton, an old aristocrat, disowns him and drives him from the house. John Morton, Jr., marries Ethel, a beautiful young singer, whom he loves dearly. When the son is gone, his old father has the boy's toys and belongings stored in the attic. Moved almost to tears by the sight of them, he suppresses his feelings and grimly resolves never to forgive his son. Fifteen years elapse. Society has moved uptown and John Morton in his aristocratic old mansion is in the midst of new neighbors. The streets which used to be patronized by the carriages of the wealthy are now swarming with ragged little children. It happens that into this section of the city Mrs. John Morton, Jr., and her little son, Billy, come to live. Her husband is dead. Just before he dies he writes to his father and begs him in memory of the little boy he once loved, to befriend his little boy, Billy. Billy and his mother live in an attic adjoining Morton's mansion. While playing ball on the roof Billy loses his ball down the skylight of the Morton home. He follows it into the attic and is charmed with the array of old toys which he finds. He plans to come back many times. Robbers enter the Morton home, binding John Morton's hands, take him to the attic and leave him. Billy comes to play with the toys. Morton believes he sees the ghost of his son and is so stricken with remorse he falls in a swoon. The thieves are captured and Morton is released. While in his bed ill, Morton speaks in his delirium of the "angel in the attic." His doctor, who also is Billy's doctor, learns of the affair in the attic, and takes Billy back to Morton. When the old gentleman sees the boy, he is overjoyed and takes his little grandson and his daughter-in-law into his home in memory of his son.

A LESSON IN JEALOUSY (Dec. 5).—He cannot make out what ails his pretty young wife, Mabel. She won't eat, won't be amused, won't do anything but sigh. Henry is uneasy about her. He writes to her Uncle John to come and help him discover the reason for his wife's discontent. Uncle John arrives and tells Henry he will find what the matter is. Henry hides behind the screen as Mabel enters and greets John affectionately. John tries to make her tell why she is unhappy. She finally discloses the reason saying "Henry isn't jealous!" Henry nearly knocks the screen over, and it is only with difficulty that Uncle John keeps a straight face.

John makes Mabel get him her husband's old soldier suit and dresses up in it. He says he has a plan to make Henry jealous, but it is to teach, not Henry, but Mabel, a lesson in jealousy. Henry pretends that he is furious when he sees from the street his wife sitting in the window with a soldier. He demands, when he enters the house, to know where the soldier is. Mabel will not

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA
788

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE
G. W. BRADENBURGH, Importer

Four Dare Devils (new copy)
2800........Cosmo. 6-3-1 photos, $280
Fall of Pompeii (Genuine)
2000..Ambrosio 12-6-3-1 photos, 200
By Whose Hand (Exclusive)
3000......Monopol 6-3-1 photos, 300
Three Drops of Poison
3400..........Luna 6-2-1 photos, 300
Spanish Blood (Asta Nielsen)
4000....Monopol 6-4-3-1 photos, 200
Dance to Death (Asta Nielsen)
3000......Monopol 6-3-1 photos, 175
The Black Viper
3200....Pyramid 6-3-2-1 photos, 175
Hero Among Men
2000........Lubin 6-3-1 photos, 100
Treasure of Devil's Valley
2700..........Eclair 6-1 photos, 100
The Minister's Daughter
2600. Messter 6-2 kds of l's pho's, 125
Sappho
2800.........Attas 6-3-1 photos, 125
The Scapegrace (Sensational)
1900........C. & M. 3-1 Banner, 100
Faust (colored)
2000....Pathe Art 8-6-3-1 photos, 100
The White Veil
3000........Vienna 6-3-1 photos, 100
Torch of War
3000....Continental 6-3-1 photos, 100

or 1000 good films from $5.00 per reel up. All with posters, every film examined and sent in good condition. Prices net cash with order or C. O. D. with privilege of examination on receipt of 25% in advance.

G. W. BRADENBURGH
802 Vine Street :: Philadelphia, Pa.

Our new Dissolving Slide Carrier makes our Song Slide Service indispensable. Operates from the right side only and eliminates reaching over the machine.

Write for 1914 catalogue and prices on carrier and service.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE, 37 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

In Eight Months

352 Motion Picture Theatres

both in the largest cities and in the smallest towns, installed Wurlitzer Motion Picture Orchestras. Why don't you? It pays.

20 BRANCHES WURLITZER 20 BRANCHES
CINCINNATI

GREAT NORTHERN

Paramount in the Field of Photoplay Features

"The House of Quality" Announces

"In the Bonds of Passion"

IN THREE PARTS

COPYRIGHTED 1913 INFRINGERS, BEWARE!

A sterling feature abounding in thrilling, dramatic situations, entwining a tale of heart interest out of the ordinary.

An unusual feature with an unusual theme and cast.

WRITE WIRE 'PHONE

Artistic one, three and six sheet posters, photographs and descriptive heralds.

Exclusive Supply Corporation Program

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO.

42 East 14th Street New York City

answer. He storms about the room, finally taking down a saber from the wall and hastening out, saying, "I shall murder the destroyer of my home."

The husband enlists the aid of his friends at the military club. They conspire to pretend that they are chasing him for having murdered one of their number. He daubs his saber with red paint and returns home. Mabel is scared so that she can hardly move when he shows her the red-painted saber. The soldiers force their way into the house. They overturn everything and follow Henry, who escapes out of the window, and down the street brandishing their sabers. Mabel tries to keep up with them assisted by Uncle John. Henry is caught and Mabel is greatly surprised to see the soldiers shaking him by the hand and laughing uproariously. She smiles when told of the ruse and begs forgiveness. The soldiers "present sabers" as Henry takes her by both ears and kisses her. Thanks to Uncle John, she has had her lesson in jealousy.

BEAUTY UNADORNED (Special—2 parts—Dec. 6).—Commodore Blunt, a wealthy, well-preserved man of about fifty, and Mrs. Preston, a well-preserved woman of about forty-two, have for some time looked forward to an alliance between their respective children, Henry and Helen. Helen is a charming, thoroughly unaffected girl, very fond of athletics, which has given her a splendid physique and natural beauty. Henry is a fine, healthy specimen of young manhood. They are about to fulfill the wishes of their parents when Henry meets Irene Pearl, and becomes desperately infatuated with her, while Helen in turn meets a foreign adventurer, the Viscount De Gagaine, and falls victim to his apparent charms. This causes the two parents great concern. The Commodore, discovering they intend to elope, proposes to Mrs. Preston that they all take a trip on his private yacht. In this way he hopes to gain time and find some way out of the difficulty.

The Commodore discovers by accident that the charms of his guests are false. Irene Pearl happens to get into Henry's cabin, mistaking it for her own. The Commodore looks in at the window and is surprised when he sees, not his son but Irene, who places her light wig on the bureau, along with a pair of eyelashes and other accessories. He then goes to the Viscount's cabin where he finds the Viscount brushing a false toupee and placing a set of false teeth on the bureau. Under the pretense of shipwreck, the Commodore plans to disclose the adventurers. He first, with the aid of a fishing line and rod, gets Irene's false make-up through the window and the Viscount's toupee and false teeth, all of which he carefully drops into the sea. A revelation comes to Henry and Helen, when their respective sweethearts are seen without their disguises. The revelation brings about a complete change of affections, much to the satisfaction of the Commodore and Mrs. Preston, when their children beg forgiveness of each other, and decide to end all discord in their marriage.

MELIES.

JAPANESE "JUDO," COMMONLY KNOWN AS JIU JITSU (Nov. 27).—An interesting demonstration of the principles of the theory of self defense as practised in Japan. Extraordinary because performed by members of the exclusive "Kodo Kan" club of Tokyo, Japan. The first time in the history of the club that any of its members appeared before the public in any manner.

ESSANAY.

AUTUMN LOVE (Dec. 2).—Kathleen Clifford, a wealthy widow, is undecided whom to marry, Ralph Fenton, a man of her own age, or George Rosslyn, a youth in his twenties. Both men are desperately in love with the charming widow. She returns to her home one evening after a society gathering, and picking up the photographs of the two men, she is unable to choose between them. In her dreams that night she sees herself the wife of Rosslyn, unhappy, discontented and miserable. A few weeks after the ceremony, Rosslyn elopes with Kathleen's niece, and Fenton comforts the wretched Kathleen. She sees, in her dreams, that Spring (youth), was meant for Spring, and when she awakens she decides that Autumn (age), is meant for Autumn, so she unhesitatingly agrees to become the wife of Fenton.

KITTY'S KNIGHT (Dec. 3).—"Pudge" Malone, an artist's model, is in love with Kitty Casey, but Mike McManus is fast making his way into the crevices of Kitty's heart. Mike isn't any better looking, but he makes a few dollars a week more than his rival. The night of the masquerade ball, Kitty has trouble in eluding Mike, as she had promised "Pudge" she would go with him. Kitty only weighs about seventy pounds, while Mike is a big, strong, healthy six-footer, so he just picks her up under his arm and carries her to the dance hall. "Pudge" is broke, so he borrows a suit of armor from his artist employer. Kitty recognizes "Pudge," and on every occasion the two are together. "Pudge" and his sweetheart win the first prize for their novel and beautiful costumes. This money they decide to use for a license and a ceremony. Mike causes a disturbance and spends an uneventful night in the police station.

A ROMANCE OF THE HILLS (Dec. 4).—Caleb Breen and Lucy Oliver are sweethearts and intend to marry just as soon as Breen strikes gold. Will Drummond arrives at Hillsdale, where he visits Henry McLean, a wealthy ranchman. Ruth, the ranchman's daughter, is engaged to Drummond. The stranger from the East meets Lucy one fine October morning, and the two become quite chummy. Breen is cast aside for Drummond. Some time later, Drummond marries Ruth and leaves Lucy sobbing over her unlucky misfortune. She is glad enough to accept Breen's offer of marriage a short time afterwards.

BRONCHO BILLY'S SQUARENESS (Dec. 6).—Earl Briggs, a ranchman, and Carl Underwood, a sheriff, are in love with Grace Woodward. Earl is the favored suitor and in time Grace becomes engaged to him. Some time later the stage is held up by Broncho Billy, a notorious outlaw. A fierce battle ensues in the woods between the posse and the bandit, in which Broncho Billy is wounded. Briggs, returning to his home, finds the wounded man and takes him to his shack, where he gives him first aid. A few weeks pass and Broncho Billy regains his health. Before departing from Briggs, he gives him a gold locket in appreciation of his kindness. The sheriff's sister recognizes the locket as her own, and informs her brother, who places Briggs under arrest. Broncho Billy sees Briggs being led to jail and promptly gives himself up to the law, saving the innocent man from disgrace. Grace marries Briggs—and Broncho Billy is left to face the court of justice.

THE "PAY-AS-YOU-ENTER" MAN (Special—2 parts—Dec. 5).—Henry Rosser is a man who has worked at the silk counter of a big department store for 20 years, this service being rewarded by the large salary of $20 a week. On this sum he has managed to buy a tiny house in the suburbs and raise a healthy brood of children—on $20 a week. The family, the children especially, look forward to the Day of Thanks, with anticipation and pleasure. But the father does not know where the turkey is coming from, because there are innumerable small things that take money, pressing him, and also a payment upon the house. The eve of their holiday, while on his way to the ferry, going home, he accidentally meets a friend coming from a saloon, the friend has under his arm a large gobbler, which, he explains to Henry, that he has just won. This gives Henry an idea, and on the spur of the moment, he goes in and takes a chance on the next raffle. He wins.

However, at this exact moment, the police enter and arrest the proprietor for running a lottery, holding the inoffensive commuter as a witness and taking the big turkey along with them. Imagine the heart-rending predicament of the long patient and suffering father as he is thrust into a cell to spend a night of misery. Consider the little family, which not only will lose it's holiday dinner, but the misery and uncertainty the mother suffers. What happens? A happy ending? Sure! Rosser, on the spur of the moment, and desperate, takes a losing chance and calls his employer, Mr. Straussman (whom he has never seen), asking him to come and bail him out. Much to his surprise, Mr. Straussman, his employer, does bail him out, and not only that, gives him $50, and tells him that he will see that his salary is substantially raised, and sends him on his way home rejoicing.

Thanksgiving the next day? Well, I should say so! The turkey was eaten to the last bone, but not the turkey that caused all the trouble—for Rosser said "No! we won't kill this fellow, he has brought us too much good luck, we'll buy another one instead."

GEORGE KLEINE.

THE STOLEN LEGACY (Cines—2 parts—Dec. 9).—Alarmed by the threats of his laborers, Manarez gives his little daughter, Carmen, in charge of his faithful friend, Roberts. Together with valuable papers relating to the whereabouts of a hidden fortune, he attempts to flee the country. He is shot and killed by the rioters, who then seek out Roberts. An encounter takes place in the woods and Roberts is shot, but manages to creep to the hut of two forest dwellers, Manuel and Juan, in whose home he dies, after consigning the fortune and little Carmen to their care. Juan yields to temptation and shoots his partner, leaving him for dead in the woods. At great risk to his life, he obtains the hidden treasure and in the years that follow, marries a beautiful and good women and leads a fashionable life in the city.

Carmen, meanwhile, has been picked up by gypsies and grows to womanhood in their wandering encampments. One day Juan's wife passes the gypsy encampment, takes a fancy to the pretty Carmen, invites her to her home and sends her back to the gypsys again, after a day of entertainment.

The gypsys plan to rob the home of Juan, and Carmen overhears the plot, warns the wife, and the capture of the thieves is effected. Naturally, they make much of Carmen, and in the jubilation that follows, Juan and Carmen recognize each other. Overcome with remorse, Juan rushed into another room to commit suicide, and is stopped in the act by Manuel, who, after years of work, succeeds in getting his hands on his old partner in time to prevent suicide. Thus Carmen comes into her legacy and Juan is allowed more time to repent for his misdeeds, in prison.

THE U. S. WAR DEPARTMENT USES THE
"Junior Professional Film Camera"
Selected after careful tests on shell explosions, at a speed of 1 5000 part of a second.
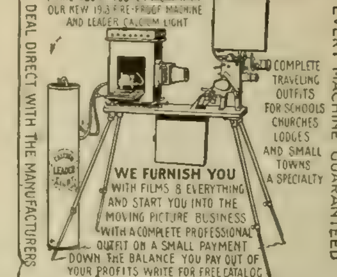
THE JUNIOR SATISFIED THE TEST without shaking up or breaking down
It Is The Camera For You
Tripods, Tilts, Developing Outfits,
Printers, Perforators, Film- Winders,
Polishers,
Measurers
THE NEW
UNIVERSAL VIEW FINDER FOR M. P. CAMERAS
NOTHING BUT ORIGINAL, SUPREME GOODS
FOR CATALOGUE
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 SECOND AVE. NEW YORK



GO INTO THE
MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS
MAKE $20 TO $50 PER NIGHT WITH
OUR NEW 1913 FIRE-PROOF MACHINE
AND LEADER CALCIUM LIGHT COMPLETE TRAVELING OUTFITS
FOR SCHOOLS CHURCHES LODGES
AND SMALL TOWNS
A SPECIALTY
WE FURNISH YOU
WITH FILMS & EVERYTHING
AND START YOU INTO THE
MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS
WITH A COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL
OUTFIT ON A SMALL PAYMENT
DOWN THE BALANCE YOU PAY OUT OF
YOUR PROFITS WRITE FOR FREE CATALOG
DEAL DIRECT WITH THE MANUFACTURERS
EVERY MACHINE GUARANTEED
Dearborn Novelty Co., Dept. M. P.
537 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

4 GENERAL FEATURES 4
ILL. AND WIS.
— EVERY WEEK —
WAR CORRESPONDENTS
Itala ....................4 Reels
DR. NICHOLSON AND THE BLUE DIAMOND
F. R. A....................4 Reels
THE FIRE FLY
F. R. A....................4 Reels
THE CURRENT
Ramo ....................3 Reels
WIVES
Ramo ....................3 Reels
THE MISSING WOMAN
F. R. A....................2 Reels
CARDS
Ramo ....................3 Reels
SISTER TO CARMEN
(Helen Gardner) ....................4 Reels
WIFE OF CAIN
(Helen Gardner)....................4 Reels
A Postal Brings List of 200 Winners.
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO.
5th Floor, 37 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

WHEN YOUR PICTURE MACHINE
NEEDS REPAIRING
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US!
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176. N State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill

THE
"BLACK 107"
A Portrayal of the Jewish Persecutions in Russia.
Who? Why—RUBY!
See Page 1047

Messrs. Shubert and William A. Brady

OFFER

MEXICAN WAR PICTURES

7,000 FEET OF FILM SHOWING

The Beauty of the land Before the War.

Effects of Bombardment Between Diaz and Madero.

Scenes immediately before and after the Murder of Madero.

The place where Madero fell, his funeral, his grave.

The destruction of railroads and public property.

Scenes in Mexico City, the capital of Huerta, his palace, his guards. Close views of the Dictator himself and the Congress he put in prison.

Scenes in the capital of Carranza. Close views of the Constitutionalist leader and his staff. His troops and equipment.

Actual battles between Huerta's men and Carranza's men.

Huerta inflaming his followers to war. Drilling citizens and youths pledged to fight the U. S.

The preparations of the U. S. The army encamped along the Rio Grande. The aeroplane scouting the border. Scenes which show the fighting force of this country ready to invade if necessary.

The fleet of U. S. battleships in the bay of Vera Cruz.

VIVID, AUTHENTIC and NEVER BEFORE SHOWN

EXHIBITED FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THE HIPPODROME SUNDAY NIGHT PLAYING TO $1,600 MORE THAN ANY PREVIOUS MOVING PICTURE PERFORMANCE. NOW PLAYING THE PLAYHOUSE AND THE ZIEGFELD THEATRE, CHICAGO

For State Rights Wire, WILLIAM A. BRADY, PLAYHOUSE

LUBIN.

MELITA'S SACRIFICE (Dec. 1).—Jess Mason, the popular foreman of the Hilton ranch in company with several of his cowboys, becomes involved in an argument at the "Cantino" road house with the Mexican vaqueros as a result of his kindness to Melita, the pretty flowergirl. The beautiful senorita becomes infatuated with the cowboy, and mistaking his kind words and slight attentions, believes her love returned. The foreman has a sweetheart, however, in the person of Lola Hilton, daughter of the ranch owner and his favors to little Melita are only friendly. Melita's step-father desires that she marry Sancho, a vaquero.

One day Jess rides upon the scene where Melita is being mistreated by her step-father in his effort to persuade her to meet his wishes regarding Sancho. Angry at the cowardly action of the two men, Jess interferes, and with a few well directed blows puts the two Mexicans to flight, thereby earning their undying enmity. Later, while Jess and Lola are riding over the ranch, they stop for a drink and are captured by the step-father and his gang. Melita witnesses the capture, and, stealing one of the captive horses, she makes a mad dash for the ranch house, bringing back the cowboys in time to rout the Mexicans. Thanks are returned to Melita for her brave action, and Jess never knows the love which prompted it or the sacrifice she made in saving his life, only to lose him.

THE HAZARD OF YOUTH (Dec. 2).—Barbara Young finds her desire for parties and the fun of having her friends call on her thwarted at every turn by her parents. If she goes to a party, father must go along and watch over her, and her fun is spoiled. She cannot go out, and callers at home are refused. One young man, named Adrian Scott, likes her and she likes him. He is to take her to a party, but father insists on going along, and poor Adrian and Barbara find they are watched every moment. The father of the girl giving the party, sees the trouble, and takes Papa Young off to the club, despite his protests. At ten o'clock Papa Young insists upon going back for daughter, and the other has to give in. The little walk home and goodbye at the door that Adrian and Barbara had counted upon is therefore spoiled, and killjoy papa waits until they shake hands and Adrian leaves.

Barbara gives vent to her feelings, begins to resist parental authority, and slips out the back way to meet Adrian. Father learns of it and threatens Adrian with a licking, and tells Barbara she is going straight to perdition with her disobedience. The inevitable result is that Barbara decides to run away and does, leaving a note telling them just why, and giving them a clear understanding of what they could not see. Mother finds it and sobbingly sees their mistake. So does father at the store, where mother rushes to him with the letter. At the depot as Barbara waits for the train, her courage wanes with each minute. Father and mother rush to her as the train pulls in, and after Barbara and mother have had a good cry, father takes hold of the situation and tells Barbara that they have been making a great mistake and begs her forgiveness. The final touch of happiness and better understanding comes when father takes Adrian by the hand and tells him he would like to see him around once in a while.

WHEN MOUNTAIN AND VALLEY MEET (Special—2 parts—Dec. 4).—Beth, a mountain maid, tastes of the fruits of the valley, and like Eve of old, promised he of the valley she would return. A month later her longing and desires become so great for another nibble of the forbidden fruit of clandestine meetings, that she, in her mountain home, makes her loving mother believe she is seriously ill and thereby secures permission to return to the valley, leaving the snow and the big, rough ones behind. The horse that was to carry her became sick and the mountain man (the big man), who loved quietly but no less fervently, determined to carry Beth through the drifts of the rockies to the flowers of the valley, there leaving her with an uncle, who was a hospital surgeon. The mountain man returned to his home, leaving a friend to watch over the girl he loved. The valley man, learning of her arrival, dropped his other escapades, and bent on one purpose of securing Beth for his own, little reckoning with God, who watches over those who are of the storm and heights. The mountain man's instinct leads him straight and true and saves his Godgiven mate ere she enters the gate from whence there is no returning, and on the mesa the mountain and the valley met, and there a truth was told and an act was done that prohibited the flowers from overcoming the snow ever more.

SOME ELOPERS (Dec. 5).—Hiram Green and Ruth Brown plan to elope, both believing that her dad would not sanction their marriage. They are discovered in the act by Ruth's father, who, in his elation, fires off his shot gun. Hiram mistakes this for a sign of anger, and tossing Ruth into a carriage, he whips his horse to a mad gallop. After a wild ride the young couple arrive at the minister's house, only to find that he has gone on his vacation. Disheartened, they start home. In the meantime, dad has gathered a number of the villagers, who get together, decorate the house and start to prepare a feast for the bride and groom. When within a short distance of the house, Hiram sees dad with a few husky farmers. He becomes frightened, and starts to run, leaving Ruth alone in the road. Hiram is chased and quickly caught and dragged back to the house, where he causes a furore by telling them that he hasn't married Ruth. Dad is at first angry, but determined that he shall not be disappointed. Dad dashes out of the house to the parsonage, drags the parson out of bed and returns to his home, there, to the young couples' surprise, and amid the cheers of the villagers, the ceremony is performed.

AN INTERRUPTED COURTSHIP (Dec. 5).—Papa Foy is in love with Mrs. Grant, a charming widow, who doesn't need to be held from jumping into matrimony, but Nell and her brother, Jim, his two children,, thinks he needs to be held, and when they conceive that he is going to marry the widow they don't know want to do to save him. Dick Hardy, Nell's sweetheart, sees father and Mrs. Grant on the beach, sitting under an umbrella. They run to get some shells to throw at them, but when they return, father and Mrs. Grant leave and two colored lovers are sitting in the shade of the umbrella. Nell and Dick throw the shells, they see Rastus and Mandy and beat it.

In the afternoon when father and Mrs. Grant are bathing, Jim, Dick and Nell conceive the brilliant idea of stealing father's clothes and leaving him in the bath house until he will capitulate and promise never to marry. He will not promise, and they leave him without even his bathing suit, telling him they will be back in one hour. Father's cries are heard by Mrs. Grant. She comes to the rescue. She buys him a pair of overalls and jumper. In this father and Mrs. Grant go right off and get married.

HER FATHER (Dec. 5).—Harry Redford, son of a rich orange grower, loves Mary Benson, a poor but refined young dressmaker. He proposes and Mary, though reluctant, finally accepts. Mary's father, Major Benson, once proud and well off, is now a drunkard. The major sees Harry kissing Mary and realizes the situation. Harry's father is proud of his own success. Harry hesitates to tell him of his engagement to Mary. The next morning father and son run across Major Benson in the orchard. The major is drinking, and foolishly addresses Radford as his future brother-in-law. Radford is in a rage when Harry acknowledges his engagement to Mary, and tells his son that he will disinherit him if he marries "that sot's daughter."

Radford goes to Mary's house and persuades her to give up Harry. The girl writes a note to her sweetheart telling him that she and her father will leave for the East on the afternoon train, and that it is good-by. When Mary goes to the depot for a time-table, Major Benson, reads Mary's note, in which his worthlessness is mentioned. Sobered and remorseful, the old man decides to sacrifice himself. He writes a note to Mary, telling her that he is going away so that she can marry Harry. He takes Mary's meager savings from a vase and drops the note in its place. He leaves just before Mary returns. Mary packs up her small belongings, then dispatches a boy with her note to Harry. Finding her money gone and the Major's note, she rushes to the railroad station, just in time to see the train pulling out with Major Benson on the back platform. Dazed, the girl sits on the station platform. Meanwhile, Harry gets the note. He denounces his father and declares that he will take the night train East and find Mary. Harry goes to his room and packs his suitcase. Mrs. Radford, whose aid has been enlisted by Harry, pleads with Radford to give his consent to the match. The orange grower refuses, until Mrs. Radford recalls their young days, when Radford, then a boy of twenty-one, took her from her drunken father. Radford gives in and he and Mrs. Radford start for the depot to see about taking the next train to find Mary. On the platform they are surprised to find the girl. They plead with her to go home with them, but she refuses at first. Harry, with suitcase packed, is leaving the house when he phones to the depot to ask about the next train. The ticket agent tells him, as a piece of news, that the afternoon train which left some time ago, has gone through a bridge with all on board lost. Thinking Mary was on the wrecked train, Harry goes temporarily insane, wrecking the handsome library of the Radford home. He is about to smash the big mirror when he sees the reflection of Mary, who has returned. The boy is overpowered by Radford and the servants. After a long illness Harry awakens in his right mind, to find Mary at his bedside.

BIOGRAPH.

HOW THE DAY WAS SAVED (Dec. 1).—The police system of Hicksville is in a very bad condition. They shoot craps, play ping-pong and sleep the livelong day. So the police inspector finds them. He is about to leave in disgust, when a small sized riot takes place. The fashion-plate of Hicksville is downtown with an X-ray sheath. The force gets ducked for their impudence, but they also get medals for bravery—the result of the inspector's conclusions.

BINK'S VACATION (Dec. 1).—His declaration of independence failing, he decided to leave home forever. Little he knew that detectives Sharp and Quick were on his trail. One drink before train time settled it.

THE BIRTHDAY RING (Dec. 4).—After the final break the wife never really gave up hope of her husband's return. Tired of what his sordid world could give, he came back too late. Put to the test

FOR RENT!

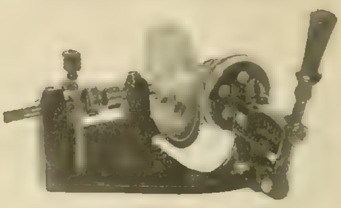
Largest selection of up to the minute SONG SLIDES. The best service at rates to suit you. Write for our BIG list.

We handle a complete line of HIGHEST QUALITY slides for every purpose. STOCK or SPECIAL to order.

SONG SLIDE SERVICE
12 UNION SQUARE
NEW YORK CITY

This device when used with a Motor will permit you to CHANGE THE SPEED

Easy to attach to any machine.



ANY SPEED by moving the handle from 5 to 30 min. to the reel. Price $12.50. Can be sent parcel-post. Write for circular. Runs quiet. Thoroughly practical. Used Everywhere. Has a Clutch to separate disc and roller for starting and stopping, also numbered indicator and Oilcups. Very rugged, simple, and well finished.

W. G. Preddey
669 Haight Street San Francisco, California

In Answering Advertisers
Kindly Mention
MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Made by RUBY, who knows how, with an All-Russian Cast.
See Page 1047

THE "BLACK 107"
A Feature in 3 Reels

Gaumont's Great Hand-Colored Masterpiece

This gorgeous film has already been booked in advance by most States. If you do not want to miss your opportunity

YOU MUST WIRE AT ONCE

GAUMONT CO.

1603 World's Tower Building 110 West 40th Street, New York City

1, 3, 6 and 12 Sheet Posters

Photos and special 4 colored heralds

If Your Film Exchange Claims It Cannot Supply

"GAUMONT'S FEATURES"

Make 'em Prove It

By Filling in the Form attached

Theatre

Manager

City

State

Your Exchange

Other Exchanges

Gaumont Co.

110 W. 40th St., New York City

Taggart-Kendall, Inc., New York

THE AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION'S

TWO SPECIALS

THE GIRL OF THE SUNNY SOUTH

4 PARTS COLUMBUS FILM 4 PARTS

PUNCH

After

PUNCH

Follows

Spectacular

Thrills

THE PROPOSAL IN THE PICTURESQUE SUMMER-HOUSE

LITHO POSTERS

2 KINDS OF 1 Shts. 3 Shts. 6 Shts.

PHOTOS

2 Kinds 8 x 10
1 Kind 11 x 14

2 Kinds of Heralds

Slides and Cuts

THE WATERS OF DEATH

3 PARTS PEERLESS 3 PARTS

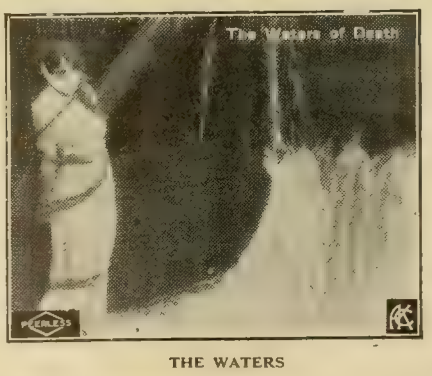
The Great

Lock Scene

Beats

Everything for

Sensation



THE WATERS

LITHO POSTERS

1 KIND OF 1 Sheet 3 Sheet 6 Sheet

PHOTOS

1 Kind 8 x 10

Heralds, Slides and Cuts

AMERICAN KINETO CORPORATION

1018 Longacre Building
Broadway at 42nd St., New York

of his resolution to live straight, he at last came face to face with her who had suffered all for him, but the bitter past was lost in joys renewed.

IN THE ELEMENTAL WORLD (Dec. 6).—Lost and without food, man and wife are left victims of fate in the forest wilderness. The first law of the wilds, self-preservation, struggling between them, causes a breach. The wife meets the wise young hunter, sparing of his store. Gratitude to get she steals for herself. Through her act a material supply is cut off. Her spiritual nature aroused, she seeks to make atonement.

PATHEPLAY.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 68 (Nov. 17, 1913).—Asheville, N. C.—Governor Craig attends the big barbecue which marks the second of the "good roads days" in North Carolina.

New York, N. Y.—Before appointment to the fire department, applicants are tested by different drills, of which climbing a six-story building with scaling ladders is one.

Denver, Colo.—R. B. Seymour and H. W. Soule, with their dog Nyka, leave the Y. M. C. A. for a cross-country walk to Los Angeles, Cal.

Hickman, Ky.—Confederate veterans and townspeople marched to the City Cemetery before the dedication of the arch erected by the Daughters of the Confederacy, in memory of those who lost their lives in the Civil War.

Denver, Colo.—The five zebras given to the Sells-Floto Circus by the United States Government, are unloaded. These animals are a cross between the zebra of Africa and the Rocky Mountain burro, and are easily trained.

Waco, Texas.—A parade of beautifully decorated floats is a feature of the cotton harvest festival in this place.

Louisville, Ky.—In recognition of his many public services, a statue of General John Breckenridge Castleman, seated on his mare "Caroline," is erected by the people of this city and unveiled before a large crowd.

Panama Canal Zone.—Only a few feet of earth, called Gamboa dyke, separate the Atlantic from the Pacific. In the following picture the waters of both oceans may be seen. Accepted as official records by U. S. Government.

Los Angeles, Cal.—In honor of the opening of the new aqueduct there is an industrial parade in which city officials, merchants and military organizations take part.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 69 (Nov. 20).—Houston, Texas.—Much decorative ingenuity is displayed in the motorcycle parade in the No-Tsu-Oh carnival.

New York, N. Y.—Children of all ages enter the Music School Settlement, East Third St., where under the direction of David Mannes, they are taught that music is not a trade or profession, but a true means of expression.

East St. Louis, Ill.—Because the city will not appropriate the money needed to improve the roads, the City Hall is closed and Mayor Chamberlain leads other city officials in doing the work of day laborers.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Before a crowd of 25,000, Adelphi Academy defeats Poly Prep. Institute at Ebbets Field 14 to 7, in a game which virtually settles the preparatory school championship of the borough.

Editorial Section.—The need for a certain means of identifying automobiles which figure in accidents has led to the invention, by O. A. Wissenborn, of a device that scatters discs bearing the license number when the machine strikes any object.

New York, N. Y.—Twenty-five members of the Swedish Gymnastic Society of Stockholm, arrive here to make a tour of the United States. All of the party participated in the Olympic games at Stockholm in 1912.

Panama Canal Zone.—Secretary of War Garrison and party get a bird's-eye view of the Panama Canal [illegible]. These pictures have been accepted as official records by the United States Government.

Houston, Texas.—Ed Brown, Alaska's famous mail driver, with his remarkable wolf and dog team, leaves this city on his 25,000-mile journey, which is to include every state in the Union.

Comic Section.—What d'ye mean you're contended?

A PEASANT MARRIAGE IN HUNGARY (Dec. 2).—Quaint customs are shown in these pictures, among them the method of proposal of marriage and acceptance. The suitor appears at the home of the girl and requests a light for his cigarette. If she strikes a match it signifies that he is accepted. Interesting glimpses of a picturesque Old World people.

EDIBLE FISH OF THE MEDITERRANEAN (Dec. 2).—Ten different species of living fish are shown in this film, most of them strangers to this part of the world. The Mediterranean fisheries are of great value to the bordering countries so these fish are of much economic importance.

THE GEYSERS OF NEW ZEALAND (Dec. 2).—There is a remarkable resemblance between this particular section of New Zealand and our Yellowstone National Park. These are beautiful scenes of one of the finest manifestations of nature.

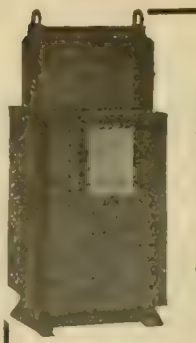
A BREAK FOR FREEDOM (Dec. 3).—Arthur Fisher, a trapper, becomes by chance, owner of a pair of handcuffs and amuses the Indians with demonstrations of their use. Red Wing, the chief's daughter, is promised by her father to one brave, but loves another. She meets her lover away from the camp and they are surprised by the other suitor. In the fight which follows her lover kills his enemy. Fisher is promised the girl by the chief if he captures the murderer. This he does by means of his [illegible]. He handcuffs him and secures him to a tree. Red Wing, remembering the demonstration of the handcuffs, under cover of the night releases her lover and escapes with him.

BASEBALL'S PEERLESS LEADER (Special—2 parts—Dec. 4).—Frank Chance proves himself to be an actor of much merit. Paul Norwood is a rabid "fan" with a charming daughter, whom he wishes to marry to an Italian Count, but the girl has a mind of her own and refuses to consent. She takes a motorboat out alone and is wrecked on the rocks. Soaked to the skin and shivering she makes her way to a bungalow and finds no one at home. The house belongs to Chance who comes home and finds her asleep before the fire. The telephone being out of order, they cannot communicate with her frantic parents. Hours later her father learns her whereabouts, and enraged at her escapade, punishes her by sending her to her grandparents, who keep her a prisoner. She writes to Chance asking him to rescue her. He leaves an important game to do so and she escapes with him, disguised in the baseball suit of the mascot. Chance wins the game and the girl is forgiven by her father in his great joy at the victory.

A BEAR ESCAPE (Dec. 5).—Professor Arlington, who is touring the West in charge of a number of attractive boarding school girls, accepts an invitation to visit a Colorado ranch. The cowboys welcome the girls with uproarious glee, and the professor is dismayed to find billing and cooing the order of the day. So he rounds up his pupils and compels them to go in bathing under his watchful eye, to keep them from mischief. But the cowboys, to get revenge, turn loose a tame bear, which chases the professor up a tree and enables the girls to escape their chaperon.

COL. HEEZA LIAR IN AFRICA (Dec. 6).—Another of those irresistible funny cartoons which have taken the country by storm. The action in these pictures is lifelike and not "jumpy." Col. Liar penetrates the desert and meets with surprising adventures. He hatches an ostrich egg, is saved from a hungry bear by a sleeping porcupine, is chased by an angry tiger, which he slays in a novel way, overcomes another bear by getting him drunk, is persecuted by a frolicsome monkey, and finally leaves the desert triumphant, having killed a regular menagerie, all at one shot.

GLIMPSES OF POND LIFE (Dec. 6).—Most interesting views of minute crustaceans, which are prevalent in stagnant ponds. Even the heartbeats of the tiny creatures are shown. An idea of their size is obtained from the fact that their eyes are no larger than the point of a needle.



For Better Pictures

It is a well-known fact that direct-current arc lamps are steadier and produce less flicker than alternating-current lamps. They are easier to focus, waste less light, and use less current. They can be run on an alternating-current circuit by aid of a

Westinghouse - Cooper Hewitt Rectifier Outfit

Just connect the outfit to the A. C. lighting circuit and use a D. C. arc in the usual way. No moving machinery—no adjustments.

Send for folder 4205.

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sales Offices in 45 American Cities.

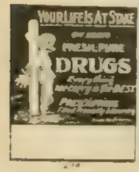
WHAT FILM DO YOU DESIRE?

I am in a position to furnish any film, old or new, at lowest prices. Address,

B. SPITZ, 108 WEST 116th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Sales Co.
130 Kearny St., San Francisco, Cal.

A G-E Rectifier
will make your pictures more brilliant and at the same time reduce the cost of electric current.
General Electric Company
General Office Schenectady, N. Y.
4488



WE HAVE EVERY REASON TO BE THANKFUL

WE HAVE MADE MANY FRIENDS IN THE PAST YEAR, MANY MORE CUSTOMERS COMING IN EVERY DAY. OUR CUSTOMERS ARE OUR BOOSTERS. GET IN LINE BY SENDING FOR OUR CATALOG. SLIDES MADE TO ORDER, OUR SPECIALTY. STOCK SLIDES AS ILLUSTRATED, WITH NAMES INSERTED, 40 CENTS EACH. MANY OTHERS IN OUR CATALOG. WE HAVE ALL MAKES OF MACHINES AND SUPPLIES IN STOCK. WRITE US TO DAY. WE WILL TREAT YOU RIGHT.

ERKER BROS OPTICAL CO. 608 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

Nothing is more soothing than a COOL SHAMPOO and MASSAGE once your BARBER we're always your Barber
209

JUST PLAIN COMMON SENSE tells you—When you want to SEE yourself you use a Mirror. Because you SEE yourself better with a Mirror than any other means in the world. Now the same thing applies. When you want to SEE motion pictures, use a MIRROR SCREEN. Because you SEE the pictures so much plainer, better and clearer on a Mirror Screen than on any other surface under the sun. Besides it tickles your patrons and makes picture fans. It's a fact. The difference between a motion picture on a MIRROR SCREEN and any other screen of any other kind is the same comparison between seeing your own reflection in a fine French plate glass mirror and in a mud puddle. The "MIRROR SCREEN" is a Mirror. A magnificent mirror made from the finest polished plate glass that the world can produce. Get Right and Write to us to-day for our new Snow White Prismized Finished Surface. Eastern Representative, Frank Manning, 121 W. 48th Street, New York City; 160 Irving Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

F. J. REMBUSCH
President
MIRROR SCREEN COMPANY SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA

A NEW ERA OF MOTION PICTURE CLASSICS, ADAPTED FROM THE WONDERFUL RED-BLOODED PSYCHOLOGICAL STORIES OF

JACK LONDON

The First of the Series Now Ready for Delivery

THE SEA WOLF

IN SEVEN REELS

TYPICALLY CLEAN, BREEZY, AND AS POWERFULLY RUGGED AS THE AUTHOR HIMSELF

Wire or write us for particulars of our exclusive territory contract for the first twelve Jack London releases

BOSWORTH
INC.

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
648 South Olive St., Los Angeles, Cal.

SALES DEPARTMENT
110 West 40th St., New York City

GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S EXCLUSIVE PROGRAM

PATHEPLAY.

THE MYSTERY OF THE CRIMSON TRAIL (Released Week of Nov. 10).—A comedy in which a tramp finding the kitchen door of a farmhouse open, enters, and in the absence of the farmer and his wife, eats and drinks from the dinner temptingly spread on the table. The farmer returns and finding the intruder throws him out. To revenge himself the tramp takes a can of red paint and by splashing it on the walls of the farmhouse and along the walk and road simulates a trail of blood. The farmer, in the meanwhile, has found his daughter in the company of a young neighbor and objecting to the intimacy locks her in her room. With the aid of the young man and a ladder she escapes. The farmer finding the crimson trail and thinking a murder has been committed calls in the neighbors and they follow it. The young lover in the absence of the girl's parents kidnaps the justice of peace and with the tramp as witness, marries the girl.

UNMASKED (Released Week of Nov. 17).—Clayton, the central character, is to all appearances a gentleman, whereas in reality he is the leader of a band of desperate crooks. On the golf links of a country club he meets Inez, the daughter of a wealthy business man, who is to figure in the largest affair ever undertaken by the gang. Profiting by a pleasing manner, Clayton soon wins the favor of the young woman and is prepared for the fulfillment of the plan. Accompanied by Inez, he waits in the club garden on an evening appointed for the kidnapping of the girl. He pretends to fight bravely against the thugs, but the heiress is captured and held for ransom. Later she escapes and Clayton, still determined to get the fortune, attempts to win her for his wife. Exposure comes just in time to prevent the ceremony and Clayton makes a sensational but unsuccessful break for freedom. He is unmasked and brought to justice.

A RASH REVENGE (Released Week of Nov. 24).—We have two men, who are the best of friends until a woman is the innocent cause of a rupture. Trouble begins when they both fall desperately in love with her. The rejected suitor conceives a plan that will present his rival in a most unfavorable light on his wedding day. While the prospective bridegroom sleeps contentedly in a chair, his friend makes use of a bottle of red ink to mark his face in a manner strongly suggestive of smallpox. Unaware of his altered appearance the victim of the red ink arrives at the home of the girl, where the guests are assembled in readiness for the wedding. One glimpse at the suspiciously marked face and they flee in a panic from the mystified cause of the disturbance. When the would-be bridegroom looks into a mirror the strange actions of his friends are accounted for, and he promptly prepares to get even, which he does in an amusing fashion.

SELIG.

THE SHERIFF AND THE RUSTLER (Exclusive Service Program—2 parts).—Joe Wood, a cattle rustler, has grown rather careless and particularly bold in plying his mischievous and sinful vocation. He is about to brand a maverick when he is surprised at his task, abandons it quickly and rides away. Unfortunately for him, his horse sheds a shoe close by the scene of the branding, which is picked up by the sheriff. This horse-shoe has the initials of the bad "J. W." stamped in the metal and when the sheriff rides to the town blacksmith shop with his good-luck symbol and finds Joe, he having just had the shoe replaced, the rustler sniffs a rat, jumps into the saddle without touching the stirrups, and is away like the wind. The sheriff drops the horse-shoe, and unlimbers his artillery; but ineffectually, for the rustler not only get away scot free, but sends a bullet back that clips the sheriff in the shoulder and sends him down for the count. Joe, with his usual shiftiness, jumps into a job, and is next seen on a ranch doing some dare-devil stunts with frenzied steers and outlawed horses. These acts are far away from the conventional in originality and daring, and the reel closes with the loud approval of all the rival, but admiring cowboys.

The sheriff has recovered from the leaden compliment sent by the rustler, and is again on his trail, and happens to get a sight of the much wanted individual, who is driving a lot of stock to the roundup. Again Joe gets away. Subsequently he sees the sheriff at the spring taking a drink, and just to show him there is no ill-feeling, and that he has not forgotten how to shoot, he sends a bullet through the cup, knocking it out of the sheriff's hands. This starts something. The outlaw, finding that he is closely pursued, rides toward the railroad, and seeing a freight train moving along, rides close enough to clasp the rungs of the iron side ladder, and, abandoning his pony, swings onto the train and climbs up on the top of the cars. The sheriff, not to be outdone in this specie of agility, also catches the same moving train. Then commences the duel proper over the tops of the cars as both empty their guns until the last cartridge is gone. They then close in and have an exciting and desperate fight on the roof of the running cars. The train is crossing a river, and the men, clasped in each others' arms, fall into the water far below. The bath apparently cools them off, and each man starts to swim for himself. Singularly enough, the cowboy, in heavy chapparos, reaches the shore first, and although almost exhausted, he struggles up the bank to a place of concealment; and, the sheriff having providentially secured a horse, starts in pursuit.

Joe, the rustler, in a frantic effort to escape, rushes into a bed of quicksand, finding himself in a most dangerous and desperate predicament. He is being slowly engulfed in the soft sands when the sheriff comes upon the little bluff and sees his man, who has given him such a chase, gallantly struggling against the seeming inevitable. He takes his trusty lasso, and by a skillful cast, he loops it about the outlaw's shoulders. Then giving it a turn about the cantle of the saddle, he hauls the victim of the quicksand out and these two game men shake hands at last on firm ground, face to face, and the outlaw gives himself up at last.

TERRORS OF THE JUNGLE (Exclusive Program—2 parts).—The scion of old Milbank, an Africander pioneer, who lives in the borderland, responds to a paternal message from his fast-failing father, who has been incapacitated while prospecting for mines far up in the mountainland of the interior, and hastens to his rescue. He takes with him his wife and child; the preparation for their journey is simple, but substantial. They are accompanied by Nig, a faithful black, who has just returned from the ailing Milbank, bearing the news of his illness and a rude map of his mining claims, with the boundaries of their location.

The thorn of complication commences early, in the person of Blackmoor, an adventurer, inspired by two motives: first—gold; the second—revenge—to trail the little party, compass their injury, and if possible, pick up an easy fortune for himself. On the trip through the jungle, he early has a rival, in a lion, which has tasted human blood and relentlessly follows the trail of the Milbanks. Eventually, the Milbanks locate the lonely thatched cabin of the old man, but they have arrived too late, for he has passed away. The son dutifully performs the last rites, and then packing together an outfit, starts out alone to locate the mining claims his father has discovered. Blackmoor, thinking to find the woman defenceless and possibly to secure the coveted mining claim, makes a night visit to the shack. He finds the faithful negro asleep from exhaustion at the door of the shack, steals his gun, and then fires the hut.

Finding that Milbank has gone on ahead, evidently taking the map of the mines, now thoroughly armed, at the same time having disarmed the camp, Blackmoor starts on the trail of Milbank. The woman, awakened by the crackling flames, clasps her child in her arms, runs out over the sleeping form of Nig, who jumps to his feet and they all take to the fastness of the jungle, seeking a water course. To add to the peril of their situation, Nig has discovered the loss of his gun and realizes they are powerless against the treacherous and bloodthirsty habitants of the jungle. The woman and child reach the bank of a river and the negro hastily throws together a raft, their only safety seemingly being on the face of the waters. Even there they are not secure, for a famished lion swims out to their frail raft anchored in its stream and boards it. The woman takes the child in her arms and swims ashore, to net 10 per cent.

General Film Co.

We offer ten to fifteen shares of the preferred stock of this company at $71, to net 10% in dividends. Here is an excellent investment and an opportunity to participate more fully in the profits of this big corporation

We also offer.
20 Mutual Film Co. (12 %), at $90.
25 Kinemacolor (common), at $15.
50 Universal Film. Bid.
10 N. Y. Motion Picture. Bid.

Quotations furnished on all motion picture securities.

FRED R. JONES & CO.
(Investment Brokers)
Real Estate Trust Bldg., Phila.

Mr. Commercial Photographer, for best work and rates, send to

The Chicago Feature Film Co.
4108-22 Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

THEATRES DESIGNED AND COMPLETELY EQUIPPED
Theatre Supply Co.
ROANOKE, VA. Percy L. Smith, Manager
Motion Pictures, Supplies and Accessories
Everything for the Theatre from Street to Screen
Special Representative Theatre Specialty Mfg. Co. Brass Frames and Lobby Display.
Theatres for sale at Danville, Lynchburg, Roanoke, Va., and Columbia, S. C.

G. & G. FEATURE FILM SERVICE CO.
NEW AND ATTRACTIVE FEATURES AT REASONABLE PRICES

Also a large number of single reels, all in good condition. $1.00 Per Day

Send for our list of features and single reels.

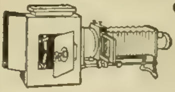
350 NORTH CLARK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories



CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO.
Large Line of Edison Goods. Established 1899.

WHY SHOW A
Jumpy—Flickery—BUSINESS KILLING Picture?
WHEN YOU CAN
HAVE YOUR MACHINE FIXED AS GOOD AS NEW, WORK GUARANTEED
We sell all makes of machines, new and second-hand. Also machine parts, supplies, tickets, carbons, etc.
CHICAGO MOVING PICTURE SUPPLY CO.,
538 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Illinois.

FILMS FOR SALE
$3.00 per Reel Up

Send for our new revised list. 50 features for sale, low prices. Second-hand machines, all makes.

ECONOMY FILM CO., 105 4th Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

OUR CATALOGUE OF
Brush Electric Lighting Sets
contains more useful information about electric lighting in general than any other book ever issued. Write for it today.

THE CHAS. E. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

FOR SALE 50 FEATURES
First Class Condition
Elegant Advertising Matter. 1000 COMMERCIALS
VERY CHEAP
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS
WEST 14th STREET, NEW YORK

For $6.50
You can get a One-Sheet Easel Poster Frame

Solid oak body covered with 2½-in. wide angle Brass - turned edge, glass front, detachable compoboard back, solid brass tilting easel and legs.

Prices on all of our other styles and sizes of Frames in proportion.

All prices F. O. B. our only factory, Cleveland, Ohio

(We are originators of this type of frame.)

We are producers of Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of any description.

THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. CO.
INC.
1232 EAST THIRD ST., CLEVELAND, OHIO

New York Agents, Yerkes Sound Effect Co., 42nd St. & Broadway.

Virginia and W. Va. Agents, Theatre Supply Co., Roanoke, Va.

THE "BLACK 107"

A Portrayal of the Persecutions of the Jews in Russia

Founded on the Recent Trial at Kiev

3 REELS

Look Out For Cheap Scheme Men Who Will Follow With Cheap Imitations! They're Sure To Come!

With a cast of Russian actors, produced by the maker of the Universal's successes, "Sorrows of Israel" and "Bleeding Hearts." Here is the entire story, played by actors who have lived in the shadow of the Czar's throne, and trembled at the hoof-beat of the Cossack's steed. It's a story of hearts, of blood, of sorrow; there's a tear in every knout-lash, a throb in every scene. There's sympathy, there's devotion, there's love. Fine is our Johnson, our Baggot, our Pickford, our Lawrence, our Costello—but, GREAT SCOTT! you should see these Russians act! Why not? They are living over again a sorrow that is carved into their souls; it's real with them—they cry real tears, they laugh real laughs.

Can YOU afford to miss it? It's only ONE of the regular features in our output. Happy is the Ruby customer. Be One!

From "The Gunmen of N.Y." to Gov. Sulzer, We Have Scooped Them All. They Are Frantic, We're Alive. That's All!

RUBY FEATURES

145 W. 45th St.
NEW YORK

while the faithful black battles with the infuriated beast bare-handed upon the raft.

In the interim, Milbank has been attracted from afar by the blaze of the shack, and he hurries back to the site of the camp, distressed beyond measure to find it in ashes, and his loved ones fled. Blackmoor, who has been close on his tracks, picks up the hat he has lost in his haste, and finds tucked in its lining the description of the mine locations, and retraces his steps to his own hiding place. After Mrs. Milbank escapes from the rampant lion on the raft, she wanders on in the forest until she falls unconscious. Then along comes an enormous ape that, after looking curiously at the sleeping child, carries it away. The mother awakens to find the little one gone, impressing a new terror of the forest, and frantic, starts in pursuit, dropping her shawl. In the interim, Milbank has discovered her footprints, then finds the shawl, and rejoins his wife, and both wander onward in search of the child.

The ape has been a kindly guardian for the little one, climbing trees, bringing down fruit for it, leading it to water, and otherwise caring for its simple wants in a way that suggests the attributes of Darwin's "missing link." This big ape's home happens to be at the base of a mountain, close by where the elder Milbank prospected and found his mine. Hither, eventually, come Milbank and his anguished wife, happy to find their child still alive, still safe. To add to their fortune, he finds the lost mine and the gold his father has hidden away; then they all start back to civilization to fortify their rich mining claim before the chagrined Blackemoor arrives on the scene with his now useless data.

THE HOPELESS DAWN.—Two stalwart young fishermen, Al and Rob, brothers, have been daily companions for years, in work and play. They are orphans and live with their sister, Meg. They all live happily together until one day when joyous Jo, a coquette, warms the hearts of both brothers with the rosy radiance of her presence. Jo is a happy, careless girl, and coquettishly consciously allows both brothers to make love to her, neither knowing the infatuation of the other. One night she agrees, separately, to meet both. Rob, seeking her out earlier than she had expected, catches his brother Al in the act of kissing her. Thereupon the young men quarrel and from that moment doubt; all the bitter enmity of jealousy takes possession of their souls.

The next morning, as usual, they start out to their fishing, but they have hardly dropped their oars and reached deep soundings before their quarrel renews. The brothers fight fiercely and fall overboard in the struggle and are drowned in each other's arms.

Poor Meg, who has observed the beginning of the quarrel at home, knowing her brothers as she sees their hatred deepen, has grave doubts as to the consequences. She scorns the heartless Jo, who essays to laugh off her seeming idle fears. Then the fatal day comes, drags on and night comes and Meg's grief cannot be sustained in silence. She overcomes her prejudice to Jo, and confides to her the depth of her fears. Then the two watch anxiously through the night. In the morning they see the two men, the forms of the brothers locked in each other's arms, cast like flotsam and jetsam in the tides that ebb along the rocks of the shore. Meg's grief brings so forcibly to Jo her own culpability that she loses her mind.

VENUS AND ADONIS.—Venus is an attenuated "maiden lady" of uncertain years and Adonis is a skinny old chap with whiskers. They spend their days of coy courtship on the beach, where they engage in the gentle pastime of allowing the waves to beat against their bones. They are such sights in their bathing suits that the whole summer colony rush away with laughter and give them the freedom of the beach. One day while in their airy attire, they quarrel, and Venus testily betakes herself to a rowboat some distance down the beach and settles down for a nap. Poor old shivering Adonis gazes admiringly at her from afar through an antiquated telescope.

Soon a band of boys who had been playing "pirate," come along and tow Venus' boat to a rocky island some distance from shore, and maroon her. Adonis sees this movement and quickly secures another boat. The boys, however, have a weather eye for him, and when he lands they capture him, at once deprive him of his bathing suit and leave him only a barrel for protection. Then they row to the mainland and inform the life-saving crew that two human beings are marooned on the lonely island. The crew makes a dash that way.

In the meantime, Venus strolling about the island happens to meet Adonis, and finding that his only clothing is a barrel, is shocked enough to die on the spot. She is cruel to be coy and refuses to be saved in the same boat with her scandalous lover until she is carried aboard by main force.

A MAD MARATHON.—Silas Brown piles up weight until he reaches 380 pounds and his physician prescribes walking to reduce him to the normal. Brown reluctantly starts out this way, but happens to pass a lunatic asylum, where Mad Pete is confined. One day, Mad Pete manages to escape and chases Brown twenty miles up hill and down dale, over fences and through hedges until the fat man falls utterly exhausted, thinking that Mad Pete is about to brain him then and there. Thereupon the lunatic gently touches him upon his shoulder and says: "Tag, you're it—now you chase me." Brown, on dragging himself back to town, and taking weight and measurements, finds that he has lost 150 pounds.

THOR, LORD OF THE JUNGLES (3 parts).—Henry Barlum, son of a circus owner, goes to Africa intrusted with securing wild animals for his father's menagerie touring America with a circus. On the edge of the jungle Barlum's expedition rests by the home of John Brant. As an intrepid hunter and woodsman, he is enlisted to go with the expedition. Gene Brant, his daughter, also accompanies them. She has a devoted admirer in honest Jan Karl, who lives on a neighboring farm. Barlum is not slow to observe the beauty of Gene. All preparations complete, the procession moves on and soon begins winding through the jungle. It approaches a wild and picturesque spot, the black spearsmen are thrown out as advance scouts and soon stick their spears in the ground, showing the site of the camp for the night. Brant, who has recommended Jan to Barlum, has been leading with him and they dismount as the caravan comes up.

The scene flashes to Thor, Lord of the Jungles, a splendid black maned African lion, that stands triumphant over the spoil of his hunt. He raises his head and roars, attracting the attention of two Kaffir hunters, who report his presence.

Gene and Barlum are walking alone, and Jan, unobserved, sees them. Presently, when Barlum attempts a liberty, Jan flies from his concealment, springs upon him, hurls him to the earth, and administers a beating. Gene stands back terror-stricken and then fearing that Jan will kill the man, pulls him off his victim. Her touch restores the infuriated fighter to his senses, and he deserts the scene. She starts to run after him, but is herself too proud and really gives comfort to the disheveled victim of his hate. When she gets back to the camp she finds a brief note from him, that she has broken his dream; he has gone to accept service in the Transvaal Mines. The next scene shows Kaffirs at work digging a deep lion pit. It is baited with a live goat and then carefully covered with brush and grass. The lion has fallen into the pit. Gene has gone with the others, joyous in the excitement of the capture, but even she is deeply moved when this King of the Wilds is cabined in a cage.

A month later the caravan returns to Brant's farm. They bring many of the denizens of the wild in captivity. The main expedition is about to push on for the Coast, but the girl has formed a deep affection for the chief captive, Thor: and she goes out into the moonlight to play with the dangerous pet who threatens death to all but her. Barlum appears, takes advantage of his own influence and the girl's affection for the other beast, and asks her to accompany them across the sea. She believes him implicitly as a man of honor and goes. They are only a few days on their voyage when Barlum reveals his real self as a drinker, a gambler and a libertine. She joins the circus and becomes its queen. The disembarkment of the animals and the scenes in the circus are all startlingly realistic, novel and picturesque. The strange motley groups in the wardrobe room of the circus and in the dressing rooms are quite unusual and vastly interesting. Then follows a night scene in the big lone menagerie tent, with Thor's cage in the foreground and poor brokenhearted Gene now disillusioned, is the lone figure striving to whisper her own cruel story to the caged monarch.

Gene's mail has been intercepted by the scheming Barlum and she fears she has been forgotten by the friends at home and even Jan. Barlum plots to accomplish her ruin with two villains who are hired to bind and carry her away, which plot is overheard by a dwarf freak in the circus, who tells Gene. He has a grudge against Barlum, who has ruined him for life, and a fearful thought to get even. He pens a note, signing it with Gene's name. "Meet me at Thor's cage at midnight." Then with malignant and scientific care he files the bars of Thor's cage, so that they can be readily broken. The vengeful dwarf, knowing Gene's habit of visiting the lion at night, naturally expects Barlum will keep the engagement. She unsuspecting the plot, goes to the cage as usual, when Barlum staggers in sodden with drink. He tries to clasp her in his arms; she struggles and raises her voice, which arouses her friend, Thor, who lashes himself into a fury, breaks through the weakened bars of his cage and with one mighty blow tosses Barlum aside as one dead and stands at the side of the girl like a protector before he leaps to further liberty. Thor is recaptured and condemned to death by the Circus Tribunal, but Gene rushes in, flings herself at the feet of the elder Barlum, tells her pitiful story, and requests: "Give me Thor. I want to take him back with me to his home in the jungle." Her wish is gratified. In due time she comes back to the old African farm and as the great wagon bearing the cage lumbers up the dusty trail, her father sees a familiar figure riding ahead that gladdens his eyes, for he welcomes Gene as one back from the dead. By his side is faithful Jan, who has wearied of his life in the mines and came back to bear the old man's company. Gene meets them joyously. She shows that she is home and where the heart is, and then they go on to the jungle. There she frees Thor and then finds herself happily imprisoned in the faithful arms of Jan.

You Need It!

There must be a cracking good REASON back of that INCREASE of $200,000 in my business this year over last year. Such an increase is enormous. The increase alone is bigger than many concerns' WHOLE BUSINESS. Why don't you find out the REASON and inject some of it into your own business, Mr. Exhibitor? Any of my four offices will show you THE HOW AND THE WHY!

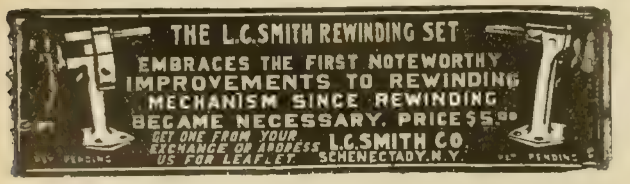
CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

204 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farnum Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the World"



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET.
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
[illegible] PENDING
[illegible] PENDING

THE A. B. WYNNE CURTAIN CO. (Inc.)
Theatrical Scenery, Attractive Wall Panels
SOLE PRODUCERS OF THE CHEMICAL MOTION PICTURE SCREEN
No. 30 FAIRLIE STREET, ATLANTA, GA.

Would you fight for your pard's sister?

They fight—and to a finish, in

"HER BROTHER'S PARD"

THREE REELS

It's a State Right
Feature

AND A GREAT ONE

---

Ammex Film Co.
Candler Bldg., New York City

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

REX.

THIEVES AND THE CROSS—(2 parts—Dec. 4.)—Botts, an evil companion of her early life, offers to stake Belle, a reformed woman swindler, money and an outfit if she will go to an exclusive hotel and rob a wealthy English widow of her jewels. Belle consents and registers at the hotel. She at once makes friends with the rich widow's little daughter, and through the child, she comes to know the widow.

Things go nicely with Belle until a scientist arrives. The widow begins a flirtation with him. Through close observation, Belle comes to admire the scientist, and envy the widow her companion. Belle's opportunity to steal the jewels arrives. However, her slight association with the scientist has worked a change in her. She puts off the robbery. The scientist is pleasantly impressed with Belle and a slight intimacy springs up. Botts, suspecting trouble, comes to take charge of the robbery himself. Belle is now in love with the scientist, and throws Botts aside. As a matter of revenge, Botts steals the jewels and places them in the scientist's grip, hoping in this manner to show Belle what manner of man her scientist really is. The robbery is discovered, and the blame falls on the man of science. To save the man whom she loves, Belle confesses that she is the thief. She writes the scientist that since she has learned that he is a thief, life is unbearable. She then swallows poison.

The scientist and Botts hurry to her room. They find her apparently dead. Botts is overcome and confesses. He is arrested. Through his medical knowledge, the scientist saves Belle's life, and the picture ends with the suggestion of a love that is to grow.

JAMES LEE'S WIFE (Dec. 7).—James Lee is an artist, light and selfish. His wife is that tragic type of woman who loves intensely and feels deeply. In a pretty milkmaid the artist finds a model to his liking. She is fresh, young and appeals to his imagination. In the petit liaison that springs up between them, James Lee forgets his wife, and the milkmaid turns with scorn on her fisherman lover.

Hurt to the quick and happy light dies out in the wife's life when she observes James Lee caress the girl. When the artist takes the milkmaid in his arms and she feels the brutal warmth of his kiss, she shrinks away in fear and returns penitent to her fisherman. When James Lee returns to his wife she is gone. He tries to reason it out. He misses her and her thousand little vares. A deep love never felt before now awakens. She goes to a holy hermit who advises her to pray and fast. In a lonesome spot in the rocks where the waves break, James Lee finds his wife praying. In shame he kneels beside her. She looks and the fond light returns to her eyes and she knows that her prayer has been answered.

GOLD SEAL.

UNDER THE BLACK FLAG (3 parts—Dec. 2).—The present story concerns Henry Morgan, the famous bussaneer who afterwards became Governor of Jamaica. We are first taken on board his ship, when Morgan is gaining the enmity of Jack Teach, his mate, by winning all his savings through gambling. Following is an attack on Captain Mardo's ship. All hands are murdered, except the Captain's little son, Juan, who is saved by the Padre. Teach takes a hand in the boy's defence. Morgan gouges out his eye. The Padre and the boy later escape to land safely.

Years pass and Morgan becomes the Governor of Jamaica. His identity is discovered and a trap is laid for his arrest. He escapes to the "Undertow," an old ship converted into a tavern and owned by Jack Teach. Teach recognizes Morgan and plots revenge. The latter rallies his men and with Teach they take to sea to renew their old trade. Incidents full of excitement pursue them. In one a city is completely destroyed by fire when the pirates raid it for plunder.

Juan and his sweetheart are captured. Teach offers to bring about his escape on condition that when Morgan is captured he will be turned over to him to deal with as he sees fit. This is done and in the end Morgan is placed in irons. He is turned over to Teach, who chains him to a rock in the sea and leaves him to die.

POWERS.

WHEN JOE WENT WEST (Dec. 1).—Like Peter Pan, Joe refuses to grow up. His six feet, five inches, also his age, does not make the slightest difference. He is the same mischievous boy. He goes to visit his Uncle Bill, whom he has not seen for years. On his arrival at the station he is mistaken for the new minister. He determines to allow the joke to stand. At the station he is introduced to Elder Scott's charming daughter, Bertha. With pomp they escort him to Elder Scott's, the minister's boarding place.

The next day, when Elder Scott returns home with a drop to much, Joe severely lectures on the evils of drink. He then demands the bottle and calmly drinks its entire contents before the eyes of the astonished Elder. Joe follows the Elder that evening and discovers the staid committee quietly enjoying a little game of poker. He proves an apt pupil and wins everything in sight, including an I. O. U. from Deacon Jones. Upon the arrival at the house he finds the real minister and an indignant church committee. Joe's knowledge of their little gatherings helps to control the mens' tempers. When Uncle Bill stepped forward and vouched for the young man, even Bertha was forced to accept his humble apology.

CROSS PURPOSES (Dec. 5).—Cleo drops her bonnet while sitting on the wall. Young Wally picks it up. Their eyes meet and the old, old tale follows. Cleo's father writes to Wally's father, reminding him of an agreement between them, whereby their daughter and son, respectively, were destined for each other as soon as Wally reached the age of twenty-one. Cleo is shown the precious missive by her father and flatly refuses to marry a man she has never seen. Wally is also informed of the agreement and is quite as emphatic.

Cleo tries to run away and is locked in her room. Wally keeps clear of his father and works his automobile double time. The fathers meet and talk the matter over, and determine to be obeyed. Cleo in the meantime escapes. She sees Wally in his auto, hails him and in a cozy tea garden tells him her troubles. Cleo's father discovers her absence, and with Wally's father goes after the young couple, having learned where they are from the returning chauffeur. Seated at another table is the minister. When the irate fathers arrive the pair retreat. The unfortunate clergyman is taken along in the chase, which ensues. The youngsters are caught and are brought face to face with their doom—and to their mutual surprise the parents have no further objections to make.

BISON.

THE WHITE SQUAW (2 parts—Dec. 6).—Mourning that he is childless, the chief of the Utes drives his squaw, Watahnah, away from the tribe. Hiram Paul and a party of emigrants are caught in a sand storm on the desert, without water. They have a small boy, Val, and a baby, Phyllis. The emigrants meet Watahnah, and she furnishes the nursing mother with water, and is taken in as one of the party.

After a stroll in the mountains with his son, Paul returns to find the entire party massacred by the Indians. His baby girl, however, is spirited away by the old squaw. Many years later, Paul is a colonel, commanding a Western military post. With him is his son, Val, now a man, Lieutenant Clifford and Margaret, Clifford's sister. Val is in love with Margaret. While scouting, Val and Clifford meet Phyllis, now a woman with the Indians of another tribe. Clifford is struck by her beauty. Two days later, he goes alone to find the Indian girl. Val follows and observes him meet the girl, mistakes his purpose, and upon returning to the post, criticizes Clifford. Phyllis likewise is suspected of duplicity by the chief's son, who loves her. She goes to the post to appeal to Clifford, but instead, meets Val and Margaret. The suspicious Indian has followed her, and when he sees Val accuse and mistreat the Indian girl, he shoots and wounds him. Margaret wounds the Indian. Learning that his son has wounded the colonel's son, the chief decides to move the tribe. Colonel Paul decides to bring the chief's son to justice. There is a battle, and the Indians are defeated. Watahnah, the old squaw, recognizes Colonel Paul, and tells him that Phyllis is his daughter. Val wins the hand of Margaret, and Clifford that of Phyllis.

NESTOR

THE BROTHERS (Dec. 3).—The story opens in the West and shows a happy family made up of the father, mother and two brothers. Lee, the younger brother, is not only the pride of his mother's heart, but of his elder brother's, as well. In line with the wishes of his family, Lee loves and intends to marry Rose, a girl of his own type. However, the tranquillity of the family is rudely disturbed by the arrival in the small town of Ramona, an adventuress from the East. Lee meets her in the village saloon and falls an easy victim to her wiles. Donald, the elder brother, remonstrated with Lee. Lee, deep in the coils of the adventuress, refuses to listen to his brother's advice. To save him, Donald makes love to Ramona. She is duped, believing she is adding another easy victim to her already large collection. Ramona spurns Lee now that there are new worlds to conquer. Lee, in the blind rage, shoots Donald. He escapes from the saloon, but is pursued and brought back.

The scales, falling from Lee's eyes, begs Donald's forgiveness. Donald forgives, and in that his object has been accomplished. He scorns for Ramona. A detective arrives from the East and arrests Ramona, explaining that she is wanted for forgery. With the removal of the adventuress, the happy tenor of their lives continue. Rose and Lee are reconciled.

LOCKED OUT AT TWELVE (Dec. 5).—The boss tells Eddie, a clerk, that he will not be back to the office that day, as he is moving into a new apartment house. Eddie is left in charge. However, his good intentions ooze out of his finger tips when his sweetheart invites him for a walk. He goes, comes face to face with his boss, and is discharged.

The boss has taken the apartment across the hallway from that of Eddie's sweetheart. That evening, attired in his night shirt, the boss hears a woman screaming in the hallway. Rushing out, he is unable to find her. On returning, he finds his own door locked with the key inside. He tries to arouse the janitor, but that worthy is making love to a maid in the basement. The boss hears someone approaching, and to conceal himself, rushes into the first room to hand. It is an old maid's. She screams "Burglar!" The boss runs into the hallway, and into the room of Eddie's sweetheart, who has returned from theatre with Eddie. They make him reinstate Eddie in his job as the price of saving him from arrest.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 89 (Nov. 19).—Governor Harrison Arrives in Manila.—Moro chieftains in gala costumes, greet Governor General F. B. Harrison, and hear his message from President Wilson to the Filipino people.

The Los Angeles Aqueduct.—San Fernando Valley, the mecca of a notable gathering when the gates of the new aqueduct are opened by Lieut. Gen. A. R. Chaffee.

President Poincare at Rheims.—The president of France has a splendid reception when he visits the aviation grounds to witness spectacular and nerve-trying flights.

San Francisco Builds New City Hall.—Undaunted by earthquake and fire, California's afflicted city lays corner-stone of new municipal building before an enthusiastic audience.

A Royal Wedding in London.—Prince Arthur of Connaught, marries Princess Alexandria Victoria, "Duchess of Fife," in the chapel of the Palace of St. James.

The Weekly Fashion.—Plaids in serge and silk are popular for early winter. (By courtesy of The Ladies' Home Journal.)

Cyclone in Wales.—High winds prevail, and many hamlets suffer as a great storm sweeps over the Welsh hills.

Frolicsome Football at Fordham.—Strenuous play and hard work combine to produce football stars at Fordham University, New York.

Atlanta Floral Parade.—Motor enthusiasts from many states gather at Atlanta, Ga., and exhibit their cars with floral decorations from the Sunny South.

THE GREAT MIDDLETOWN DRAG HUNT.—Following the hounds is a social event and a popular pastime at Middletown, New Jersey, when men and women vie for supremacy in the chase.

Topical Cartoons by the World-Famous Cartoonist—Hy. Mayer.

CRYSTAL.

THAT AWFUL MAID (Dec. 2).—Mr. and Mrs. Smoothe experience in securing a good maid. Mr. Smoothe brings Katie home and immediately Mrs. Smoothe and she become enemies. Later, Katie neglects her duties to make love to the cop. Mrs. Smoothe enters the kitchen to investigate the trouble. But the cop has slipped out and she flirts with her employer. Mrs. Smoothe enters to investigate.

Katie's sister visits her with the baby. It grows sick and the mother, leaving it in the arms of Mr. Smoothe, goes to get some medicine. Mrs. Smoothe, finding her husband holding the infant, demands to know who's it is. Katie infers that it is Mr. Smoothe's. Mrs. Smoothe faints away and Mr. Smoothe runs to get the cop. The mother returns, and after more exciting complications, the trouble is straightened out.

THE INSTALLMENT PLAN MARRIAGE (Dec. 2).—Lillie's father tells his future son-in-law that he cannot marry his daughter until he has furnished a flat. Baldy finds one, pays a small deposit and buys some furniture on the installment plan. Lillie and father are invited in and the marriage is arranged.

All goes well until the first payment falls due. Baldy is broke. The collector sends his huskies and in spite of father's objections, they commence to clear the house of the furniture. Baldy goes out and borrows some money from a friend, and returning, induces the collector to allow him to pretend that he is throwing them out of the house. Father-in-law looks on and imagines his son is a hero. He forgives and Lillie and Belmond go to live with him.

A WOMAN'S REVENGE (Dec. 7).—Smith, unable to meet his obligations to Brown, decides to commit suicide rather than face bankruptcy proceedings. Vera, Smith's daughter, finds a note from Brown beside the dead man and resolves on revenge. Later she secures a position as seamstress in the home of Ethel Wilson, fiancee of Allen Brown, only son of Vera's enemy, a fact of which Vera is ignorant at the time. Later she wins the love of Allan and marries him, hoping to strike the father through the son.

We Told You So—

Beginning last September we passed the word around that WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc., would release some remarkable three-part features. We have kept our promises to the letter.

And now we take great pleasure in announcing

THE HAND OF THE LAW

a Masterpiece of Action, Plot and Photography, in three gripping parts, featuring the most talked of man in America today—

Thomas J. Tynan

Warden of the Colorado State Penitentiary at Canon City, Colorado.

WHO IS "TOM" TYNAN ?

Colorado in the matter of penal reform leads the entire country. Warden Tynan's methods are being taken up by prison reformers everywhere. The road making camps have proved the greatest possible help toward the reformation of the men sent to the penitentiary. With three hundred men working in the camps and with not an attempt of escape in six months, something of the moral reform being effected in these men is apparent.

—Pueblo Chieftain.

Warden Tynan has won national fame for the roads he has built and is considered an authority.

—Denver Republican.

So wonderful has been the success of Warden Tynan, of Colorado, with his convict road builders, that we recommend his methods be adopted in this state.

—Board of Prison Control, Connecticut.

In the Colorado penitentiary there are about 750 prisoners. Over half of this number are outside the prison walls, and never a sign to show they are condemned of society. Thos. J. Tynan, responsible for this simple system of rebuilding broken men, dropped a drummer's grip when appointed warden.

—January Delineator.

"Tom" Tynan has come nearer than any other man to a practical solution of the problem of the criminal.

—Harper's Weekly.

Over 700 convicts take part in this surpassing WARNER'S FEATURE made by the Colorado Motion Picture Co. in and around the penitentiary at Canon City. It will be one of our regular program releases and if you have not yet secured a franchise for our THREE-A-WEEK service, write today to one of these offices:

Atlanta, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, St. Louis, Seattle, Washington, D. C., New York City.

Coming Attractions
Helen Gardner in "A Daughter of Pan."
Marion Leonard in "A Leaf In The Storm."

WARNER'S FEATURES, INC.

130 West 46th Street
New York City

Brown disowns his son for marrying a girl beneath his station unaware at the time that Vera is the daughter of the man he drove to suicide. Vera writes him a letter informing him of the fact and then leaves Allan. The boy is too proud to seek reconciliation with his father. Time passes. Both Vera and the father read in the paper where Allan has been injured trying to stop a runaway. Struck with his heroism, the spark of love is kindled in Vera's breast and she goes to the hospital. Here she comes face to face with the father. He demands that his son choose between them. Allan takes the girl and then the father gives up. Reconciliation and forgiveness is had.

FRONTIER.

SLIM AND THE BOYS AT BREEZY BEACH (Dec. 4).—Slim's suggestion that he and the boys take advantage of the special excursion at Breezy Beach starts the cowhands of the Bar S ranch on an outing that deprives them of more than their money. Had Slim known that his sweetheart and her strenuous mother had taken an auto trip in the same direction the same day, it is a safe bet that he would have remained at home, or, at least, would have deported himself in a more circumspect manner. In order to secure enough money to pay for the dinners of his newly found friends at the Breezy Beach cafe, Slim borrows all the boys' suits, socks and neckerchiefs from the bath house.

In the meantime, Slim's intended and her mother have located the girls and incidently hear of the cafe engagement. Molly and her mother disguise themselves as the show girls and meet the cafe engagement themselves. A note which Slim had unintentionally left behind informed the boys what was going to happen, and clothed in bathing suits and a pleasant smile, they swooped down on the cafe in a body. The incidents that follow are full of ludicrous situations.

THE CIRCUIT RIDER OF THE HILLS (Dec. 6).—Mary, daughter of Tom Ashe, revenue officer, is in love with Bud, the son of Lige Stillwell, a moonshiner. Though Bud does not sanction his father's illegal business, he is condemned by Mary's father, and when he finds them together after repeated warnings, he disowns the girl. The minister tries to bring about a reconciliation, telling the revenue officer that he should not blame Bud for the sins of his father. Mary and Bud make their way to the cabin of his father, where Mary is received with open arms. Here the minister finds them after a narrow escape from death, when he is mistaken for a revenue officer..

Determined to gain conclusive evidence against the moonshiner, Ashe and his men search the hills for the still. Making his way to the cabin, he is about to give the signal to his men waiting below, when he observes his daughter being married to Bud by the minister. Ashe observes the old moonshiner forswear his practice and the destruction of the still. As she comes forward and extends his hand to the old moonshiner, who takes it readily, the deadly enmity of years is quickly turned into a strong friendship. Since the officer's only objection to Lige was the latter's illegal business, he gives his blessings and departs to carry the news to his men.

JOKER.

MIKE AND JAKE IN THE WILD WEST (Dec. 3.)—Mike and Jake, in the cattle country, are compelled to go to work. They tell the ranch boss they are experienced cow-punchers, and from thenceforth, they are beset with dire misfortune.

"Aw! this ain't no fun!" remarks Mike one day, "let's go out and kill a few Indians!"

The cowboys overhear this conversation. They masquerade as Indians. One of them dresses as a maiden. Mike and Jake go out in search of Indians. The phony woman rides up and tells them that the Indians, on the war-path, are after her. The two knight errants shake with fear, revive and beat it, leaving the defenseless woman to look after herself. The fake Indians carry the woman off. Mike and Jake take refuge in a cabin, and see her tortured almost to death. The rest is war until the ranch boss arrives and sends the cowboys to work. Mike and Jake are again rudely ejected into the cold world.

A PAIR OF BEARS (Dec. 6).—Max and Lee would attend the circus, except they are broke. When they try to sneak in they are collared and taken to the ticket seller. The result is, they get a job as strong men.

Little Juke Willy sits with his girl watching the show. When Lee and Max appear and do their fake strong man tricks, she applauds their powers and Willy is annoyed. But they fail in one of their stunts and the fake is exposed.

They are then induced to go on with two performing bears. Taking a dislike to the men the bears turn upon them and pursue them out of the tent. The audience follows in a panic. Willy promises to capture the bears. Max and Lee escape right enough, but the bears create a riot in the village. Willy makes the capture right enough and leads the bears off to jail. Willy is proclaimed the hero of the hour, while the beasts remain in durance vile.

VICTOR.

THE BARRIER OF BARS (Dec. 1).—Worthington is a confidential clerk in the office of a manufacturing concern. Living beyond his means, he has just received a letter from one of his creditors to the effect that if he does not pay his debt his employer will be informed. Thus spurred on, he robs his employer's safe. While in the act, he is discovered by Kerrigan, a factory hand. There is a struggle. Kerrigan is stunned and falls with a number of the stolen bills in his hand. The daughter of the factory owner finds him. The owner accuses Kerrigan of the theft. He is tried and condemned to a long term of imprisonment. He says nothing in his defence, because the blow delivered by Worthington robbed him of his memory.

After a lapse of one year, Worthington becomes a partner in the manufacturing business on the money he stole from the safe. The manufacturer's daughter still bears an interest in Kerrigan and visits him in his cell, though she finds his mind is still a blank. The prison authorities investigate and Kerrigan undergoes an operation. It is a success and Kerrigan picks up the thread of his life. He tells his story, which is discredited. The girl again visits him, hears and believes. She smuggles a file to him in the back of a bible. He escapes, confronts and accuses Worthington. The real culprit cannot bear up under the mental strain of the accusation. He confesses and is taken to prison. Kerrigan is rewarded with the hand of the manufacturer's daughter.

MAKE YOUR LOBBY DISPLAY ATTRACTIVE

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

Don't fail to visit our complete New York showroom, 101-103 4th Ave.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
715-721 Sycamore St.
Cincinnati, O.
Established 1882

AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS

are acknowledged by the leading expert film producers to be the finest and most accurate Cameras in the world.

We also manufacture a complete line of Studio and Dark Room Equipment.

Distributers for Eastman Raw Film

Send for Catalogues

American Cinematograph Co.
617-631 W. Jackson Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

VISCO PICTURE MACHINE OIL

If your dealer will not supply you send us $1.50 and we will send you a 128-ounce can of Visco Picture Machine Oil direct. 6-oz. bottles, 25 cents at your dealer's.

THE VISCO MOTOR OIL CO., Cleveland, O.

The Old Reliable
BULL DOG CEMENT
AND
ONE DROP OIL
At Your Exchange
ONE DROP OIL CO., 15 S. Leavitt St., Chicago, Ill.

MAKE MOVING PICTURES
WITH
Our Ideal Moving Picture Camera

Excellently constructed, beautifully finished, simple to operate, fitted with a B. & L. Zeiss Tessar Lens, I. C., F 3-5, one of the best and fastest lenses in the market; holds 200 feet stock.

Send for Illustrated Catalogue
PRICE COMPLETE $75.00

Motion Picture Camera Co., Inc.
Dept. A 5 West 14th Street, New York

LET US DO YOUR
Developing and Printing

WE WILL DEVELOP YOUR NEGATIVE, MAKE YOU A POSITIVE PRINT AND SHIP WITHIN 24 HOURS FOR 5c PER FOOT COMPLETE.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED BY OUR FIFTEEN YEARS' EXPERIENCE. EASTMAN STOCK USED ON ALL OUR WORK.

FILM TITLES and ANNOUNCEMENTS
3 Feet for 25 Cents In Any Length

GUNBY BROS. Inc.
145 West 45th Street, New York City

IMP.

PLAIN JANE (Dec. 4).—"Plain Jane" is the cinderella of the Belgrave studio. Jane has fallen in love with Shelley, the famous portrait painter. Shelly, in love with Miss Goelet, a rich heiress, refuses to consider Jane. Miss Goelet is a coquette, caring little for the artist. When Shelley learns that she is engaged to a foreign nobleman he denounces her, while Jane, with her mop, an unseen witness to the scene, looks on with joy.

Shelley, determined to get a final answer, goes to the Goelet home and is treated with the sight of the girl in the arms of his rival. He departs in anger, realizing that his hopes are vain. Meanwhile, Plain Jane, having found the dress and hat in the studio that the heiress posed in, puts them on. When she fixes her hair and puts the hat on there is a wonderful transformation—the drudge becomes the woman of the world, so far as appearances are concerned. Shelley arrives. Plain Jane, in trying to escape, trips and falls from the top of the stairs to his bottom. Shelley is struck by her beauty. After carrying her to his room he is surprised to find that the seeming society woman is none other than Plain Jane. This is the beginning of the end of Plain Jane as a drudge, with a delightful romance following.

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION.

AMERICAN.

AMERICAN BORN (2 parts—Dec. 1).—A story involving the failure and success of the nobility of England, with the House of Danvers of England, and the large estates inherited by Dorothy Travers, an English child born in America, of English and East Indian parentage. The opening scenes embrace dramatic and pathetic views of the dying mother, telling her only child, an orphan, of the wealth and power of her family and of her royal blood. Guided by the honesty of an old Indian servant, Dorothy, known in America as Pepita, the orphan, goes to Europe to see for the first time her relatives. It is in the House of Danvers that she first meets Richard Danvers, the elder son of the Earl of Danvers. It is a case of love at first sight.

The Earl of Danvers does not depend solely upon his heritage, being an inventor of great ability. His invention of a new X-ray machine is, in the opening part of the story, unsuccessful. This, combined with the degeneracy of his younger son, brings failure and ruin to the respected Earl of Danvers and his family. Richard, the elder son, is engaged to Dorothy, and is forced, through financial ruin, to break the engagement. He goes to America to seek his fortune in the mines. Dorothy's great love for Richard and her wonderful knowledge of the big American country Richard is going to, prompts her to follow her sweetheart. She engages passage on the same steamer and boards the same train, unbeknown to her lover. She precedes him in the big open country, and changing her pretty traveling dress for the picturesque Indian dress of her girlhood days, she encounters many thrilling experiences.

Upon Richard's arrival in the mining country, he purchases an outfit to try his luck as a prospector, and at a psychological moment confronts Dorothy fighting for her life in the hands of a Western desperado. Richard, breaking into the door of the cabin, saves Dorothy, known only as Pepita. Dorothy at no time gives any sign of recognition to Richard. Love dominates and the finale brings the lovers together in their English estates, success to the Earl of Danvers in his invention and the degeneracy of the younger son strengthens and develops into supreme manhood.

A DIVORCE SCANDAL (Dec. 6).—Billy Barnes, a young reporter on a large city daily, is engaged to a young woman of the name of Bettina. He urges her to marry him at once. She replies that she will wed him upon the event of his next raise. Somewhat encouraged, Billy goes to his work and finds there opportunity awaiting him. The city editor tells him to go to the house of a certain

MUSIC — THE VERY LATEST — MUSIC

ORGAN ORCHESTRIONS

PLAYS TWO WAYS

AUTOMATICALLY
AND
BY HAND

MEETS EVERY REQUIREMENT

An instrument of this kind will meet the requirements of any first-class picture theatre. You can play popular, classic, sacred or dance pieces, as the instrument is only limited to the kind of music desired.

BUILT FOR ANY GIVEN SPACE.

THEY REPRODUCE THE PLAYING OF THE GREATEST ORGANISTS

ELIMINATE EXPERIMENTS

When you purchase a WELTE instrument you eliminate experiments. Your value is represented in every detail, as is attested by being in the homes of the wealthiest and most representative people in the world.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE

M. WELTE & SONS, Inc., 273 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. City
ESTABLISHED 1832

---

ELECTRA

CARBONS

Brilliant white light with steady, noiseless burning, has been the distinguishing quality that has made

"ELECTRA" Pink Label Carbons

the choice of well-informed operators. Their use insures a perfect arc, requiring least adjustment.

PINK ELECTRA LABEL

TRADE MARK

Hugo Reisinger, 11 Broadway, New York young society woman, who is at the time mixed up in a divorce scandal, and procure, by hook or by crook, a certain packet of letters, which are said to contain all the details in regard to the case, which the newspapers are most anxious to get.

Billy, upon arriving at the front door of the mansion, is thrown down the steps by an able and irate butler. Nothing daunted, he watches the house in the hope of intercepting the matron in one of her trips. He sees the milkman coming and surmises that the domestic, like most hopelessly unattractive people, is over-anxious for affection of any sort. Billy, thinking he sees a chance, bribes the milkman to allow him to change places with him. Bridget is much impressed by the appearance of the new delivery man, and also delighted at the fact that he seems strongly attracted to her. He is invited to a cup of tea in the kitchen. Unknown to Billy, his sweetheart, Bettina, is a social friend of the grass widow, and she happens to be visiting at the house as Billy is being entertained by the maid. As girls will, they immediately change confidences, and in less time than it takes to tell it, Bettina has the much sought-for letters in her hand. The divorcee rings for tea. This takes us to the kitchen, where Bridget is too taken up with her new "gintlemin frind," the milkman, to notice anything so mundane as the jingling call to duty. In the adjoining room, impatient at the delay, the two women start out to the kitchen to investigate, where Bettina, still clutching the precious packet of letters, upon seeing her fiancé in the embrace of Bridget is so shocked that she drops the letters. The young divorcee, alarmed and forgetful of her treasure, supports Bettina, as Billy beats a hasty retreat with the package of letters, leaving the poor, amazed Bridget to finish the fight. At the newspaper office everything is in a rush on the front page and Billy has his raise. The city editor accompanies Billy on his next visit to Bettina, and a warm reception is accorded them. The suave manner of the editor soon pacifies the irate Bettina, and he leaves the lovers in a fond embrace.

THANHOUSER.

THEIR GREAT BIG BEAUTIFUL DOLL (Nov. 23).—The twin sisters had one possession of which they were greatly fond, an extremely large doll, which excited the envy of all their little playmates. It really was a beautiful doll and they took much comfort in it; therefore, one day when it was stolen their grief was profound. Of course, they had other dolls, but none could compare with the vanished queen of the nursery, and for several days the little girls refused to be comforted. Then one morning while passing along a shabby street they noticed a beautiful child peering out of a window of a tumble down old cottage. They thought at first she was a doll, but when they found her to be alive they bribed her with candy to consent to be their doll "just for a little while." The little girl was all alone in the house, and tired of doing nothing she consented to the plan, was helped out of the window, and taken away to the home of the twins. There they arrayed her in the purple and fine linen of the doll who had disappeared, had a pleasant happy time, and later in the afternoon they started out for a walk through the city, the "doll" complaining then in the doll carriage. In the meantime the baby's home had caught fire through her carelessness in playing with matches and her mother, a poor widow, who had been out working, returned to find the place in flames. She believed her child was dead, and for a while her grief was profound. Then down the street came the twins with their new doll, and the mother's grief changed to joy. She took her little one, doll dress and all, and rushed off with her, leaving the twins mourning their unhappy lot, for as one said and the other agreed, "She was such a great big beautiful doll."

THE BLIGHT OF WEALTH (Nov. 25).—The young man had been used to hard work all his life. From his childhood days he had labored steadily, and now as a young man he owned a large marble quarry, which supplied him with a small but steady income. The quarry was located in a section where many society people made their country home, and a number of them visited the quarry at different times, merely out of curiosity. In this way the young owner met a wealthy society girl and they soon fell in love, and after a brief courtship were married. The husband had planned to continue his work, but he soon found a wealthy wife had first claim upon her husband. Gradually the business was turned over to subordinates while the young people lived abroad in luxury and idleness. What might have been expected, happened. The hired manager wrecked the business of the quarry and ran away with all the funds he could lay his hands on. At first this was a bitter blow to the husband, but as his wife said, there was no real reason why he should worry, as she had more than enough for both. He had been idle long enough to accept this view of the situation, and as time passed, became more and more worthless. Fortunately for him, his wife's money was swept away during a financial panic, and this reverse brought the young man to a realization of what he had become and what he should be, and told his helpless wife that the time had come when he should be the bread winner. He forced her to return to America and re-visited the quarry, which had once been his pride and joy. The place was now abandoned and fast going to rack and ruin, but the owner was again energetic and optimistic and cheered his wife with the prediction that he would soon show her that the blight of wealth had passed, and he was again a self-respecting man, who could support in comfort those dependent upon him.

CURFEW SHALL NOT RING TONIGHT (Nov. 28).—In the days of Oliver Cromwell, justice was swift and merciless. The poem, "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight," concerns the adventures of a young follower of King Charles, who was captured, tried and sentenced to die "at the ringing of the curfew," the bell which announced that the day was over. The young man had a sweetheart, Bessie, who failing to win over his stern judges, finally appealed to the village sexton, urging him not to ring the curfew, hoping that thereby the execution would not take place. The aged sexton loved her as though she had been his own child, but refused to shirk his duty, although he knew it meant her lover's death. At the last moment inspiration came to the girl. She ran into the church, and by a ladder "none had trod in hundreds of years," reached the belfy. To silence the bell she seized the iron clapper, and desperately clung to it while it swung her far out into space. Plans for execution were all made, but the bell did not ring. the puzzled officers waited, and while they conferred, Cromwell arrized. Bessie ran to him with her story, and when he realized what she had dared for love, the stern old protector told her that she would have nothing to fear. He freed the prisoner, telling him he did it because of the love and faith displayed by the heroine, who at the risk of her own life had silenced the curfew bell.

ROBIN HOOD (Feature—4 parts).—The story opens with showing Robin Hood, bow in hand, searching for Marian, whom he finally meets, and together they see a notice on a tree, which reads that no Saxon shall slay a deer in Sherwood Forest. And this sign soon plays an important part in their lives, for Robin ignores it, shoots a deer, and the next picture shows his table, spread for a feast, and surrounded by guests. They knew that the penalty for disobeying the law was to cut off the ears of the offender, so great consternation seized them when the sheriff and his men came to arrest Robin, and not being admitted, they fired their arrows into the court, one of which struck Marian's father dead. The sheriff and his men retreated, only to return reinforced by more soldiers, and a bitter hand to hand struggle took place on the drawbridge, the women having reached the forest by a secret underground passage. They were later joined by Robin and his men, who after Robin and Marian had been married by the friar, pronounced them king and queen. They took oath to punish the rich and cruel, but aid the poor and oppressed. Alan-a-Dale appears on the scene, and is made a captive, but after he tells his story, they agree to help him. He seeks the hand of a young lady whose miserly father wants her to marry a decrepit old nobleman, who promises her parent money if she will marry him. Marian disguises herself as a gypsy and vists the girl to assure her that Robin and his men will aid her at the critical moment. They are ready, and when the Saxon maiden is standing before the bishop, who is about to pronounce her the wife of the nobleman, Robin Hood and his men pour in through windows and doors, and Friar Tuck places her hand in Alan-a-Dale's and pronounces them man and wife, whereupon they all return to the forest, where they are free from morestation. On one occasion the sheriff arranged for an archery contest, open to all comers. Robin appears in disguise, and wins the prize. The King disguised as a mendicant, is shown such consideration by Robin and his men, that he returns to the palace and pardons them for all past offenses.

MAJESTIC.

THE HOUSE IN THE TREE (Nov. 23).—It was a quaint little house built amid the great branches of a giant oak on the grounds of Helen's home, and it was the little girl's proudest possession, for her parents had given it to her on her birthday. Bob, her little playmate, was a welcome guest, and the children spent many happy hours there. The years passed. Helen became a pretty girl, and Bob a sturdy young man. Mistaking friendship for love, they became engaged, but the romance was soon shattered because of a petty quarrel. The girl went abroad, and the man plunged into business, each determined to forget the other. The house in the tree saw them no more, but stood deserted and desolate. Helen became engagd to an aristocratic foreigner and Bob to a pretty girl who claimed to care for him alone, but disillusionment came to them. Helen learned that the aristocrat cared for her money alone, and Bob's fiancee cast him aside for a wealthier man. The man, bitter and despondent, thought of his boyish romance, and the tree which had played so strong a part in his early life. He returned to the little house and the sight of the possessions of childhood days awoke longings for the girl whom he had never quite forgotten. The girl had returned from Europe and the same impulse drew her to the house in the tree. There she found the man, and the realization that both cherished the past was a tie which drew them together and awakened the love which had never died.

AN ACCIDENTAL CLUE (Nov. 29).—Jim Stevens was known as the king of the cracksman. He was shrewd and courageous, and was held by the police in great respect. For years his little band baffled the cleverest detectives, but finally "Slinky Jim," a member of the gang was captured. News was brought to Stevens of the arrest and he arrived on the scene just as Detective Davis and his captive were waiting for the patrol wagon. "Slinky Jim" was freed, but at the expense of Davis' life. When help arrived the detective was unconscious and he was unable to tell who had shot him. Mrs. Davis, in recognition of her late husband's services, was appointed a police matron. The years passed, and the widow, by virtue of many clever bits of detective work, was appointed a detective, and she searched incessantly for her husband's slayer. No clue was obtained until "Slinky Jim" was once more gathered in the police net and revealed the fact that Stevens was the man who fired the fatal shot. "No one has seen him in five years," the prisoner declared. "He is a rich man now, and can afford to live straight." The woman detective searched anew, but without success, until one day fate aided her and she discovered that a certain wealthy and respected man was in reality Stevens, the once famous cracksman. By a clever ruse, she secured a position in his household as maid, and watched Stevens and his wife constantly. The former outlaw yearned for the old life, and a former comrade induced him to take one more tilt with fate. The widow overheard their plans, but was discovered, tied and left in a locked room. The cracksmen left for their rendezvous, but the woman by a supreme effort, struggled to a nearby candle, burned the cords which bound her hands, and escaped from the room in time to summon the police and capture the outlaws red-handed. Stevens paid the penalty of his crime, for his accomplice positively identified him as the man who killed Sergeant Davis.

PRINCESS.

HER RIGHT TO HAPPINESS (Nov. 28).—Boyd Marshall is a nature loving young business man who works when he works and plays when he plays; thoroughly business while in the office and a good fellow out of it. His pretty stenographer loves outdoor life also, but is prim and efficient during business hours. Although knowing each other only in their business life they love and are married and each tries to live up to their conception of the other as they have known each other in the office. The strain proves too great and Boyd goes on a hunting trip to relieve the strain. The little wife sees that there is a joyous side to her husband's life of which she had not guessed the existence and follows Boyd into the woods and claims her right to share its happiness.

KOMIC.

METHOD IN HIS ILLNESS (Nov. 27).—Grey, a very much henpecked husband, has an engagement with his friend Batch, and two girls. Everything seems to conspire against him to keep him from going to meet them. He feigns illness and is immediately almost smothered in blankets. His wife sends for a doctor, who knowing what his illness is, prescribes that he be kept in bed. Mrs. Grey goes to the door with the doctor, and Grey, seeing his chance, jumps from the window. As he nears the cafe he sees Batch and the girls coming out. His wife, who has discovered his flight, appears on the scene. He gets an inspiration and falls to the ground, feigning insanity. His wife has started to berate his companions, but is overcome with pity for her spouse and all is forgiven.

THE MAN WITH A RAZOR (Nov. 27).—A customer enters a barber shop and asks for a shave. One barber starts the process, lathers his face and begins to strop the razor. An organ grinder stops in front of the shop and starts to play a "Turkey Trot." The music is so inspiring that the barbers cannot resist it and begin dancing. This so infuriates the customer that he chases them out of the barber shop with a razor in his hand. In their mad flight the barbers upset the organ grinder, scare a number of policemen, break up a woman's suffrage meeting, drench a dude in a watering trough, deluge two milkmen in forty quarts of milk, and give a negro woman a bath in the tub with her washing. The chase is brought to an end when the customer catches up with a barber who has fallen exhausted on the ground, and insists that he finish shaving him right where he is.

RELIANCE.

A ROUGH DIAMOND (Nov. 26).—James Burrell, having served his term, is discharged from prison. On account of his past life, he is unable to secure employment. He is hounded from place to place by detectives, who are trying to get information from him about some crooks, of whom he protests he knows nothing. Mrs. Van Horton, whose husband is too engrossed in business to give her proper attentions, has pity on him, and gives him her card, telling him to go to her husband's office, where he will secure work. He is employed by Mr. Van Horton, but is forced to give up his position, owing to the threats of a detective. As he can get no work, he decides to return to his old life—that of a thief. The first house that he decides to enter is that of the Van Horton's, although he does not know it. He enters the house in time to discover

MÉLIÈS FILMS

"Exclusive Service" Release

Week of December 8th

The YELLOW SLAVE

IN THREE PARTS

Copyrighted 1913 by G. Melies.

Superb offering of a phase of modern Japanese Life. See advance review.

Beautiful one, three and six sheet posters—out of the ordinary

---

November 27th

JAPANESE "JUDO" commonly known as JIU JITSU

Wonderful exhibition of the Japanese theory of self-defense.

PRODUCED IN JAPAN.

---

VITAGRAPH

SPECIAL FEATURE

"THE WRECK"

IN THREE PARTS.

REGULAR RELEASE - TUESDAY DEC. 2ND.

that Mrs. Van Horton is about to elope with a man named Clifford. Burrell, in gratitude for her kindness to him, decides to save her from herself. He steals around to the front door and slams it. Clifford and Mrs. Van Horton, hearing the door shut, both guilty, jump to the same conclusion—that it is Mr. Van Horton. Clifford makes a hasty exit and Mrs. Van Horton, realizing the greatness of the sin she was about to commit, breaks down completely. Van Horton comes home, and finding her in tears, blames himself. Burrell, who is outside of the house, sees the shadow of their embrace on the shade and has the secret satisfaction of knowing that he has accomplished some good in the world.

THE REPORTER'S SCOOP (Nov. 29).—Senator Dunn is ambitious regarding his daughter's future and looks with disfavor upon the suit of Bob Norton, a reporter, who aspires to the hand of Alice. The young people do not agree with the Senator's expressed doctrine that "love is not everything," and continue to indulge in the dreams of youth. Henry Marshall, a wealthy middle-aged railroad president, is another suitor favored by the Senator, but refused by Alice. Misfortune blights the dreams of the young people when adversity overtakes the Senator and he accepts financial aid from Marshall. The day for payment arrives and the Senator's affairs are in no better shape. Marshall tells Dunn that he wants Alice, and offers to cancel the obligation if Dunn will induce Alice to become his wife. With ruin and disgrace staring him in the face, the Senator agrees. He tells Alice of his difficulties, and in order to save her father from ruin, she promises to marry Marshall. Bob learns of the match and in a stormy scene with the Senator, accuses him of pretending "that love is not everything," and yet he is relying on his daughter's love to save him from ruin. Bob is ordered from the house. In the meantime, the Government has ordered an investigation of the charges of rebating that have been preferred against Marshall's road, and Bob is assigned by his paper to get an interview from Marshall on the subject. Bob, calling at Marshall's office for the interview, overhears the Senator tell Marshall that he has reconsidered his proposal and that he has come to a realization of what he, as a father, should do and that he cannot sacrifice his daughter's happiness to save himself. Marshall swears he will ruin Dunn. A little later, Bob is an unseen witness of a transaction involving the influencing of the verdict of the Senate Investigating Committee by bribery, attempted by Marshall and aided by one of the Senators. Bob confronts them and forces them to forego their attempted bribery, and also secures an extension of time for Senator Dunn to pay his indebtedness. In return, he sacrifices his "scoop" on a good story, but a little later lands another, but different kind of "scoop," when the Senator unexpectedly gives Alice into his keeping.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

MUTUAL WEEKLY, NO. 47 (Nov. 17).—Blizzard Clutches Cleveland.—Ohio city isolated for days by terrific storm.

Paris Auto Exposition.—Pres. Poincare opens the fourteenth motor show in the French capital.

A Royal Wedding.—Prince Arthur of Connaught, weds the Duchess of Fife in London.

Christmas in India.—Hindus celebrate important festival in mosques and in the streets.

A Submarine Subway.—New York is sinking her passenger tubes in the Harlem river.

"Texas"—A strong man gives an exhibition of his strength in Portland, Oregon.

Freight Handling in Kingston.—The women perform most of the manual labor in Jamaica.

Connaught Leaves England.—Governor General returns to his position in Ottawa.

Berlin Celebrates.—Great historical parade is held in German city.

A Tug of War.—Utah University students contest for supremacy at Provo.

The Irish Strike.—Soldiers stationed in Dublin compelled to haul their own coal.

A Smash-Up in Michigan.—Two engines meet, head-on, at Kalamazoo Fair. The auto races.

DOMINO.

THE BELLE OF YORKTOWN (3 parts—Nov. 27).—Betty, daughter of Sir Thos. Ledding, a loyal subject of King George, is loved by both Capt. Warrenton, of the staff of Lord Cornwallis, and Col. Gordon, of the Continental troops. Gordon captures Warrenton in Betty's house, but thinking Warrenton is favored by Betty lets him escape. Betty's love for Gordon is enhanced by this action and she marries him and accompanies him throughout the war.

Just before the Battle of Yorktown, Gordon is sent by General Washington into the British lines with false despatches. He is to allow himself to be captured so as to lead the British astray. Gordon and his wife, arriving at the tavern, are attacked by Capt. Warrenton and a party of Hessians. Gordon is injured, but leaving the despatches where they fall in British hands, he escapes. He is being nursed back to health by Betty in a house from which the Battle of Yorktown can be viewed.

Capt. Warrenton is separated from his detachment when the British receive a smashing defeat. In his aimless wandering he arrives at the old mansion where Gordon is convalescing and attacks him. Betty in defending her liege lord kills Warrenton. A beautiful historic picture is presented when Cornwallis is seen surrendering to Washington.

KAY-BEE.

THE SIGN OF THE SNAKE (Nov. 28).—Colonel [illegible], in charge of a fort near the Mexican border, receives word that some Chinese are about to be smuggled across the line. He details Lieutenant Hurd to attend to the matter. Hurd, with a few soldiers, succeeds in capturing the Chinese, among whom is a Christianized girl, Moon Chew. She falls in love with Hurd. Moon Chew has been sold to a wealthy Chinaman in Frisco and Foo Choo, who is looking after his interests at the fort, informs him of what has happened. Hurd finds a sign on the door on which is drawn a snake and also an inscription telling him to leave Moon Choo at the depot. Hurd informs the colonel of this action. Word comes from Washington that all the Chinese captured, including the girl, must be deported. Moon Chew is heartbroken. Hurd's sweetheart, Edith, comes to the fort to marry Hurd. One day as he is dressing he discovers the snake on the bosom of his shirt and he sends a lieutenant to the laundry, where they capture the wealthy Chinaman, who has come to the fort. He protests innocence, but to no avail. In the meantime, while Hurd and Edith are in a trysting spot, Moon Chew comes upon the lovers' scene. In the background she sees Foo Choo with poised dagger aimed at Hurd. She intervenes and receives the dagger, which finally results in her death in the arms of Hurd. Foo Choo in trying to escape is shot and killed by the soldiers, who have taken the wealthy Chinaman prisoner.

EXCLUSIVE SUPPLY CORPORATION

LUX.

MABEL'S RIVAL (Nov. 21).—Harold is introduced to his aunt's protege, the fair Mabel. Unfortunately Harold does not consider Mabel even passing fair. Her type of beauty in fact is one which can scarcely be called popular. Harold is in love with his cousin, but as Harold's aunt has a lot of money, he does his best to please her and becomes engaged to Mabel. However, his cousin finally succeeds in defeating the ends of fickle fortune and Mabel retires somewhat hastily while Harold and his cousin are left in peace once more.

GEMS OF BRITTANY (Nov. 21).—This is a charming scenic film which shows us a few more charms of Brittany. The beauties of this French province have always been a popular feature with the British public.

GAUMONT.

THE LITTLE PEACEMAKER (Nov. 27).—For one reason or the other, Leonce has a tendency to fickleness, and there is no doubt that on this occasion his wife had cause to be annoyed. Unmindful of his duties as a husband, he chose to leave the entertainment of their guests to his wife, whilst he flirted on the river with a lady friend. His denials were of no avail. Mrs. Leonce had kept watch upon him and had seen, with her own eyes, incidents which he strenuously denied. Of course such dreadful conduct could not continue. Mrs. Leonce firmly pointed out that she was his wife and he had no right to trifle with her affections and those of another woman. That evening they parted in anger, but in the calm watches of the night the anger of one cooled, and the other realized that his roving tendencies were leading to unhappiness. Matters were moving in the right direction when Leonce received a letter which he would not show to his wife. Concluding, and perhaps not without reason, that the letter was from a lady, when Leonce, with an armful of flowers drove away, she followed him in the car. Leonce, however, was only calling upon his mother, and his wife at once saw that her suspicions were unjustified. She was very glad such was the case, as she had a secret to confide. Her confidence brought joy both to Leonce and his mother. The last scene takes us to the following summer, when grandmother is nursing the baby, while Leonce takes his wife on the river.

SWEDISH GYMNASTICS (Nov. 27).—Amongst the various "schools" of physical culture which have come into vogue during recent years, the system as organized by Swedish gymnasts holds an individual place, and has now come to be recognized as an ideal means of physical development, suitable to the delicate and strong alike. Swedish drill does not aim at the abnormal development of muscles, so much as the exercise of the body in a manner calculated to keep it perfectly "fit." There is no need to dwell upon a description of the various exercises, as the film illustrates these in a clear manner, and it will be seen that these—carried out by teams of well-knit and alert youths—are distinctly novel and refreshing.

THE SILENCE OF THE DEAD (Four parts—Feature).—Amid the financial ruin which faces him, Trevor is confronted by his servant, Ponting, and later by Count Montmoran. As an old friend, the former has no difficulty in obtaining for the ruined marquis the few thousand which are necessary for the commencement of his new life. As the only thing of value which Trevor possesses, he gives to Montmoran a small, jewelled revolver, bearing the family crest and name, as a token of his regard, and Montmoran eventually shows his friend out by a private door. Just as Montmoran is about to reenter he is met by Kernizan, who has called to borrow a large sum of money to pay his wife's debts with. Fearful lest Montmoran should disappoint him, he can only think of the ignomy of the scandal which would ensue from his inability to meet his wife's debts. He observes Montmoran turn out valuable bonds and securities, and an occasional banknote, when suddenly his eye chances upon the revolver lying on the table which Trevor has left to the count. Montmoran, shaking his head, is about to say that he has nothing left, when a fit of madness seizes Kernizan, and, snatching the revolver, he fires at Montmoran. He then hurriedly fills his pockets with valuable papers and leaves the house as he came in.

Nobody knows that Kernizan has been to the house at all, and the thief returns to his wife. Flinging the securities on the table, he accuses her of being the cause of everything, and announces his intention of going abroad for good. The discovery of Montmoran's body, Trevor's revolver, the money which Montmoran gave to Trevor, coupled with the damning evidence that Montmoran's wife had spoken to Trevor in passing through the drawing-room to her husband's study, constitute a chain of circumstantial evidence, out of which it is utterly impossible for Trevor to extricate himself. Subsequently sentenced to penal servitude for life, rather than suffer the torture of a living hell, he commits suicide in his cell. His devoted servant, Ponting, assumes guardianship over his master's son, and contrives to get his birth registered as the child of unknown parents by the local authorities, and bearing the name of Gilbert. Ponting's attempts to get the old marchioness to see the boy are unavailing, but she really gives an ample sum to cover his education, and bids the fisherman never to importune her again.

Fifteen years pass away. Phillip, the son of the murdered Count Montmoran, is now a naval lieutenant, though long service abroad has aged him in appearance. On the occasion of the launching of a new battleship, his mother and his sister Lilian give a garden party in honor of the event, and of Philip's gazetting to the new ship.

Not many miles away from the home of the Montmorans there lives a fisherman named Ponting, who is the guardian of a young naval ensign of the name of Gilbert, who is quite unaware that he is the Marquis Trevor. The ensign is also to serve the new battleship, and, after the launching ceremony, Philip invites him to his house, where he introduces him to his mother and sister Lilian. Here also he meets the Baroness Kernizan, who has designs on Philip as a future husband. Gilbert and Lilian find much that is attractive in each other, and friendship develops between them. On reaching their destination, the sailors receive instructions to be in readiness for possible attacks by tribes in insurrectionary Arabs. In a careless moment, Philip Montmoran is enticed into a Moorish house and made captive, whilst Gilbert, who goes to his rescue single-handed, is also made prisoner. Attracted by the noise of pistol shots, a party of European hunters are led to explore the neighborhood, and they arrive just in time to save the two officers from assassination.

The man who is their rescuer is none other than Baron Kernizan, who lives in this isolated district, trying to forget his crime of fifteen years previous. He refuses to give his name, but accepts the young men's cards, and perceives that in Philip Montmoran he meets the son of his victim. When the ship returns home, Lieutenant Montmoran and Ensign Gilbert are mentioned as having performed distinguished service, and subsequently Gilbert's engagement to Lilian is achieved. When Gilbert announces his betrothal to his old guardian Ponting, the latter is horrified, and is compelled to reveal the fact that Gilbert is the Marquis of Trevor, and that his father had murdered Lilian's father. This terrible revelation puts the marriage of the young people out of the question, and not even the fact that the old Marchioness of Trevor, who learning of the identity of Gilbert, implores her grandson to come to her and take up his rightful position, does anything to assuage the bitterness in the young man's heart. In the midst of all this, a man disembarks at Marseilles. It is the Baron Kernizan, who returns home to make a complete avowal of his crime. The encounter with Philip Montmoran in the colony has convinced him that the step was necessary. Eventually, in the presence of the families of Kernizan, Trevor and Montmoran, and the public prosecutor, he states what actually occurred. The avowal is too much for his weakened condition, and he subsequently dies of heart failure.

KINEMACOLOR
(COMMON SHARES)
We offer 25 shares of the above stock at $15. We understand that a large block of this stock has recently been accumulated by well known theatrical firm. This odd lot offered to the first buyer.
(Established 1904)
FRED. R. JONES & COMPANY
Real Estate Trust Bldg. Philadelphia

The Most Important News

IN THE

Moving Picture World

Is the THIRD ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT and BALL of the MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS to be held at TERRACE GARDEN on MONDAY EVENING, DEC. 15th

EVERYBODY WHO'S WHO IN THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS WILL BE THERE. HOW ABOUT YOU ?

THE BALL OF THE SEASON

A NIGHT OF INTRODUCTIONS AND JOLLITY

ENTERTAINMENT COMMENCES AT 7 P. M.
DANCING CEASES AT 6 A. M.

---

TICKETS AT ANY MOTION PICTURE THEATRE, OR AT

No. 136 Third Avenue : New York City
Brooklyn Branch : : : : : 1923 Fulton Street

FEATURES FOR BOOKINGS

THE LAST DAYS

THE GREAT ORIGINAL

IN EIGHT MAGNIFICENT REELS DIVIDED INTO A PROLOGUE AND TWO PARTS—BULWER LYTTON'S HISTORICAL NOVEL WHICH HAS BEEN READ BY MILLIONS WHO WILL FLOCK TO SEE THEIR FAVORITE CHARACTERS PORTRAYED

HUGH HOFFMAN

AN ARGUMENT

WE WANT TO HELP YOU LIFT YOUR THEATER OUT OF THE ORDINARY MOVING PICTURE CLASS. NOTHING BUT SPECIAL FILM PRODUCTIONS HANDLED ON A SCALE OF A LEGITIMATE ATTRACTION WILL DO THIS. OUR FEATURES WITH THEIR COMPLETE LINE OF ADVERTISING WILL AID YOU IN OBTAINING THIS RESULT.

A SENSATION

IN FIVE PARTS PROTEA MADE BY ECLAIR, PARIS

THE SPECTATOR IS TREATED TO A SUCCESSION OF THRILLS AND SURPRISES, CHANGES OF COSTUMES, RAPID, STARTLING AND EXCEPTIONAL FEATS OF SKILL AND DARING THAT KEEP HIM GASPING WITH EXPECTANCY FROM THE START TO THE END.

WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORP

RENTAL OR PERCENTAGE

OF POMPEII

PASQUALI VERSION

THE MOST COSTLY PHOTODRAMA EVER PRODUCED—A QUARTER OF A MILLION DOLLARS SPENT IN THE MAKING—TEN THOUSAND IN THE CAST—AN AWE INSPIRING ERUPTION OF VESUVIUS—NOW EARNING THOUSANDS FOR EXHIBITORS

SOME REAL FEATURES

THE BLIND SCULPTOR
A MOST BEAUTIFUL HEART INTEREST STORY. PRODUCED BY THE ECLAIR COMPANY OF PARIS

THE GOLDEN CROSS
A STORY OF LOVE AND DEVOTION—BY PASQUALI

SAPHO
MADE BY ECLAIR CO., PARIS—IN FOUR REELS
A REAL SENSATION WHEREVER IT IS DISPLAYED

THE TWO SERGEANTS
A STRONG DRAMA FOUNDED ON A FAMOUS MILITARY STORY—DONE BY PASQUALI IN 6 PARTS

FATHER JOHN, RAGPICKER OF PARIS
A STORY OF HONEST POVERTY VS. ILL-GOTTEN WEALTH

OUR BRANCH OFFICES

NEW YORK—PHILADELPHIA
CLEVELAND—CINCINNATI
DETROIT—MINNEAPOLIS
INDIANAPOLIS—BOSTON
CHICAGO—NEW ORLEANS
KANSAS CITY—PITTSBURGH
ATLANTA—WASHINGTON
BUFFALO—ST. LOUIS—DALLAS

110 WEST 40th ST., NEW YORK

FEATURE FILM STORIES

WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORPORATION.

THE BLIND SCULPTOR (Feature—2 parts).—The story of the play opens in the studio, showing Arden feverishly at work on a large block of marble, still shapeless, whence, however, an adorable woman's head is discerned for which the master's daughter has sat. Now and then the artist halts in his work and gazes upon his handiwork with great emotion. Notwithstanding the joy he feels on beholding the gradual appearance from the chaos to the features of his beloved child, a strange feeling of impending danger passes over him. A mist passes before his eyes and he is compelled to stop work. After reassuring his daughter, who has become solicitous for his welfare, he again attacks the block of marble, but suddenly halts, experiencing the agonizing premonition of approaching blindness. The arrival of Robert, the favorite pupil of the master, brings the timely diversion. While the master's back is turned, Robert makes an avowal of love to Jane, and the two are discovered in a fond embrace. The father drives Robert out of the house and breaks his rough cast. Resuming work, a new attack seizes him and, tragically extending his arms, realizes that the light has gone out of his eyes. Jane, realizing the ambition of her father has been unfulfilled, sends for Robert and asks him to complete the work that has been begun by the master. He comes, and in the stillness of the night, carries on the work begun by the master. This goes on for several nights and the old man, lying in his bed, hears, as in a dream, the incessant chiseling. He grabs a knife to attack the marauder; lurching into the room, he lifts his arm to strike, but, in so doing, touches the polished marble and his hands tremulously wander over the harmonious form and he cries out with unmistakable joy. He grasps the statue with infinite tenderness, murmuring: "Take my Jane, Robert, let us exchange masterpieces and be happy."

JACK (Feature—4 parts).—The story of "Jack" is well-known It is a beautiful story of a natural child. His mother, Ida de Borancy, worships the dear little nameless and fatherless being whom she decides, as he is getting on in years, to place in a boarding school. The child's professor of literature is a certain Amaury D'Argenton, a failure of the faculty, and an uninspired poet. During one of her visits to the institution, Mme. de Borancy is attracted by D'Argenton, and falls in love with him. The "Ne'er-do-Well" soon gives up his starving position and makes his abode with her, exercising over her absolute control. He soon learns to hate little Jack and forces her to leave him permanently at school. The poor child, unaccustomed to the separation, runs away, only to find —when he arrives at his former home—that his mother has moved and is now living thirty miles away. He undertakes the journey on foot, and reaches his mother's house completely exhausted. Here he meets Dr. Rivals and his daughter, Cecil. One day Jack, while out for a stroll, meets a peddler on the road, a Mr. Belisaire, worn out with fatigue and privations. Greatly moved, the boy takes him home and is giving him food, when D'Argenton arrives, throws out the peddler and sends Jack away as an apprentice. A new life now opens to Jack, and for two years he labors diligently in the iron works of Indret, living with his foreman, Father Roudick. The latter's nephew, a gambler, steals a small fortune that was to constitute his cousin's dowry, and Jack is charged with the theft, cruelly beaten and dragged before the Magistrate. Filled with remorse, the real culprit acknowledges his guilt and returns the money. The unpleasantness of that adventure, coupled with the insufficient wages he receives, impells Jack to seek another position. He makes for the seacoast, and ships aboard a trans-Atlantic steamer as a stoker. One night a collision takes place. The boat is struck below the water lines and every man makes a wild, frantic rush to save himself, every man for himself. As by a miracle Jack is saved and returns to his old home, irresistibly attracted by a desire to see his mother. Thanks to the devotion of good old Dr. Rivals, Jack, who has gone through a terrible illness, is restored to health. The two young people fall in love with one another, which is encouraged by the doctor, provided that Jack will study to take his place. Jack goes to Paris to take up his studies, rents a room, where his mother seeks refuge when maltreated by D'Argenton. D'Argenton discovers her retreat and begs her to come back to him. It is in vain that Jack drives him away, for, by means of a touching letter, he succeeds in inducing her to return. The hate he bears Jack is not yet gratified, and he writes to Cecil threatening to reveal her true identity to Jack. She, fearing the the engagement. When Jack learns of this he starts for Paris In despair he tramps the road all night, and finally drops to the ground, worn outcome of such a revelation, decides to break off out by cold, fatigue and despair. He is carried to the home of Belisaire, and the doctor is hastily summoned, who diagnoses the case as an acute attack of consumption, and orders Jack taken to a hospital Here a last vision recalls to him his past life—all the hardships and miseries he has endured. He yearns to press in his arms once more his mother, however guilty she may have been, and whom he heartily forgives, but the ravages of disease have sapped his strength and, just as she enters the room, Jack passes to the Great Beyond, his last wish denied him.

RAMO.

CARDS (Features—3 parts).—Helen, unhappy with her husband, Jim Benson, a smuggler, consults the cards with superstitious trust in the story they tell. The cards tell her of love, a dark man, wealth and happiness. Jack Morton, a wealthy young man, camping in the vicinity, meets Helen, who sees in him the dark man of the cards. Admiration for each other is mutual, and Helen weakly conceals the fact of her marriage. Distracted by her husband's cruel treatment, Helen notifies the revenue officers of his smuggling. As a result Jim is wounded, as Helen believes, fatally. Helen, thinking herself free, renews her acquaintance with Jack, and promising to marry him, visits his parents.

A newspaper article, announcing their marriage, is read by Jim, who seeing therein an opportunity to get money for his silence, straightway visits Helen and succeeds in so doing. The rich man's life with valet, etc., which he attempts to lead soon requires more money, however, and he now demands a diamond necklace, Helen's engagement present from Jack. Pursuant to a curt note, Helen goes to Jim, who, seeing that she has the necklace in her bag, discovers and appropriates it, as well as her little revolver. He places the revolver in his desk and Helen leaves. Jim's valet, observing the entire proceeding, and seeing the opportunity to enrich himself and yet hide the crime, turns out the lights, and through the portieres shoots at Jim. Helen, hearing the shot, steps into the shrubbery to avoid being seen, and overhears the valet tell the police that Jim has been killed. At last, believing herself free, she hastens to the church. The wedding ceremony has already been delayed because of her absence. In the meantime, the police, following the wrong clue, arrive at the church and arrest Helen at the altar.

In an ante-mortem statement Jim also accuses Helen, and this is the final blow to her tottering reason. The valet's guilty conscience, however, betrays him to the suspicious detective, and he is arrested and formally charged with the murder. Helen, dazed with her many misfortunes and disappointments, once more takes up the cards. In them she reads again of wealth, love and happiness, and not knowing of the valet's arrest for the murder of Jim, and believing that the cards have lied, she sweeps them from the table in a frenzy of despair.

AMBROSIO.

THE BELLS OF DEATH (Feature—3 parts).—Long suffering under the cruel domination of the Bourbons, a small congregation of Sicilian inhabitants arise in arms against their oppressors. Not having any artillery with which to defend themselves, Bosolino, Pilo, their leader, applies to Friar Lawrence of a neighboring village for aid. Alfio, a young shepherd, is entrusted with the secret message, and bidding farewell to his sweetheart, Carmela, the bell-ringer's daughter, he sets out on his dangerous mission.

The Friar, a man of both word and deed, arises to the occasion. Hiding a weapon in the wool of each sheep, Alfio leads them safely through the enemy's lines, and smuggles the necessary arms into his village. The people in acknowledgment of the weapons again send Alfio to the Friar, but unfortunately the stratagem practiced on the Bourbons has been discovered, and Alfio is wounded on the way. By a great effort he escapes the pursuing soldiers, but in his great hurry drops the message, which is found by the enemy.

Almost exhausted from the loss of blood, Alfio finally reaches his village and with his remaining strength he pulls at the great bell rope. The villagers, aroused in time, are successful in routing the Bourbons, and when they enter the bell-house they find Alfio stretched dead on the ground. Bravely he died for his country.

Bosolino Pilo, as leader of the insurgents, receives the following day a warning from the great Bourbon General Bosco that unless immediate surrender is made all would be ruined by fire and sword, but his message is treated with contempt. Now that all hands are required to fight against the enemy, how were they to secure sufficient weapons? There was but one way. The great old bells which have rung for their victory for so many years would be sacrificed for the aid of the country. Sadly they are removed and melted into cannons, and Gesualdo, the first bell-ringer proclaims himself the first cannonier.

But where was the enemy stationed? Carmela, whose lover had died a patriot's death, decides to locate their encampment, and with her country's flag in hand she bravely sets forth. Coming near a river, she sees the reflection of the enemy's troops. She hides behind a bush and when their caravan passes cautiously creeps into it and is taken directly to their quarters. Stealthily she avoids their watch and reaching the roof wildly waves her flag as a signal to her countrymen.

The small Bourbon reserve, completely taken by surprise, is overcome. Carmela, who has been discovered at her post, struggles with her assailants, but firmly continues to wave her flag until she too dies a martyr to her country.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

THE MASTER AND THE SLAVE (Feature Subject).—Franz Bush and his wife, Amelia, are members of the celebrated company at the Municipal Royal Theater. Perfect peace reigns in their modest little home, which is beautified by the presence of their little daughter, Gertrude, seven years old. One evening when Bush is preparing himself for the coming performance, he hears a strange noise in his wife's dressing room. He opens the door of the room only to be met by a scene which makes his blood curdle. He discovers his wife in dishabille, and the manager making love to her. Bush staggers out of the room. After the performance Bush and his wife go home together. Arriving home, Bush immediately starts to carry out his decision. He packs all the belongings of his wife, gives her some money and points his finger towards the door, with the stern command never to return again.

Ten years later we find Gertrude grown into full womanhood. She is the only object on whom Bush concentrates all his love. The only fear which is always present in the heart of Bush, is the thought that Gertrude might develop a longing for the stage, for she has inherited the histrionic ability of her parents.

One day Gertrude comes to the theater to meet her father, and as she is standing behind the scenes, she meets the manager. He engages her in conversation and tells her that he sees in her the making of a great actress. Bush sees them and understands the situation at a glance. He commands Gertrude to come along with him. Gertrude's mind is already poisoned. The demoniacal mind of the director guesses right the ambition of Gertrude, and he sends her a part to study, in which she is going to appear as soon as she feels ready. Bush implicitly forbids Gertrude to think of a stage career. Gertrude cannot understand the objections of her father, and when the director makes the next move, she responds. In spite of her father's opposition, Gertrude is given a trial and plays the part of the young heroine together with her father. According to the play, the father, rather than see his daughter go wrong, shoots her. The part of the father is played so realistic by Bush that it ends in a real tragedy.

UNION FEATURES.

THE TRADUCER; or THE GLACIER HOUSE (Feature Subject).—When Darbois, a rich manufacturer, tells his daughter, Jeanne, that he is soon to be married again, it depresses the young girl, for she perceives that the love her father has showered upon her since her mother's death will be diverted upon his new wife and step-daughter, Christiane. Not long after their marriage, the new Mrs. Darbois, with her daughter, prevails upon her husband to send Jeanne to the mountains in Switzerland for her health. This step is actuated by the fact that Mrs. Darbois wants to get Jeanne away from Roger Marvel, the secretary to her husband, with whom she is betrothed, and to ingratiate her own daughter, Christiane, in his good graces.

Mr. Darbois decides to send his daughter away, and in due time she arrives at the Glacier House in Grindelwold, where she is expected by Dr. Larrius and his wife, who, conforming with instructions given by Mrs. Darbois, are to be friendly hosts, but unrelenting jailers. She soon tires of her seclusion and escapes one night. Her departure is later discovered by Dr. Larrius, who, with three servants, go in pursuit and find the girl at the bottom of a precipice. The bronchitis contracted by her exposure to the cold the night of her attempted escape has been held in check by the care ordered to be given her by Dr. Larrius. During her convalescence as she is reposing in the terrace of the Glacier House, she hears the sounds of a well-known voice. Going to the edge of the height upon which the house stands, she sees at the foot Roger Marvel, who had been able to trace her to Grindelwold by the indiscretions of a servant. They elope that night, but before they have gone far Dr. Larrius is soon after them. They manage to come within a short distance of the railroad station, when Jeanne is taken suddenly sick. Her friend and Roger take her to a hotel and a doctor is summarily called. Her low condition alarms the doctor, and Roger, fearing the worst, writes to Mr. Darbois to come at once, as his daughter is afflicted with brain fever and is in a critical condition. Perceiving that he has been misled by his wife and step-daughter, Mr. Darbois loses no time in getting to the bedside of his daughter. The presence of her father has a beneficial effect upon Jeanne and it is not long afterward that they are in the home in Paris. Mr. Darbois forgives his wife, and Jeanne and Roger look forward to a happy future.

A MAGIC MONEY GETTER

The Magic Veil, or The Love of a Hindoo

IN FOUR PARTS

A SENSATIONAL DRAMATIZATION

Ready for Shipment Wire or write for territory

ITALIAN AMERICAN FILM CORP. 701 Seventh Avenue
Columbia Theatre Bldg. Room 401-2 NEW YORK

---

The Spirit of Thanksgiving

is upon us. 1913 has been exceptionally kind to us, and at this time our representatives join us in thanking all exhibitors who have contributed toward making the

Radium Gold Fibre Screen

America's Leading Projection Surface

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Company
105 N. Main Street, Sole Manufacturers, ST. LOUIS, MO.

G. H. CALLAGHAN, 1405 Broadway, New York
GEORGE BRECK, 70 Turk St., San Francisco, Cal.
DISTRIBUTORS

---

MANAGER or EXHIBITOR

which are YOU? Do you find your receipts increasing or decreasing? If you are a manager you'll give the public the best show possible and something more. You'll give them a premium; a present; something that helps your business and at the same time a gift that is appreciated. THE POST CARD of the film favorites creates a desire for a collection.

It's the uniformity of the 300 Players that appeals to your patrons.

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand: formerly sold for $4.00. Over 300 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 30 of the most popular Association players, $10.00 per thousand.

Photo Post Cards

for hand coloring. NOTE: The public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—30 Association Players $5.00 per thousand

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 300 different names, 20 cents each.

LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.

LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14, Prominent Association players, $2.00 for set of 12.

Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of Kalem, Lubin and Edison, and also all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Set of 12, $2.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.

Lobby frames to hold 12 pictures with necessary cards—$6.00 each.

KRAUS MFG. CO. 14 East 17th St., New York

Send for Catalogue of over 300 players and samples free. All letters answered the same day as received.

---

The LURE of NEW YORK

FOUR PARTS

Best Feature Best Lobby

Write for States still open

NEW YORK FILM CO.

145 West 45th Street - - - - - New York City

The Turner Films,

FLOR

The Most Pop

Charles Dickens'

DAVID COPPERFIELD

A Seven Part Hepworth Film

Produced under the direction of Thomas J. Bentley the greatest authority on the works of Dickens.

DAVID COPPERFIELD TERRITORY SOLD:

| Territory | Buyer | Address |
|---|---|---|
| ARIZONA | Golgate Feature Service | 234 Eddy St., San Francisco, Cal. |
| CALIFORNIA | Golgate Feature Service | 234 Eddy St., San Francisco, Cal. |
| COLORADO | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| IDAHO | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| INDIANA | Classic Feature Film Co. | 43 East 27th St., N. Y. City. |
| N. ILLINOIS | Motion Drama League | Battle Creek, Mich. |
| KENTUCKY | Classic Feature Film Co., | 43 East 27th St., N. Y. City. |
| MONTANA | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| MICHIGAN | Motion Drama League | Battle Creek, Mich. |
| NEVADA | Golgate Feature Service | 234 Eddy St., San Francisco, Cal. |
| NEW JERSEY | Modern Feature Film Co. | 22 Clinton St., Newark, N. J. |
| NEW ENGLAND STATES | Doeva & DeLeon. | |
| NEW MEXICO | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| NEW YORK CITY | Theater Film Co. | 71 W. 23rd St., N. Y. City. |
| NEW YORK STATE | Theater Film Co. | 71 W. 23rd St., N. Y. City. |
| OHIO | Motion Drama League | Battle Creek, Mich. |
| OREGON | Golgate Feature Service | 329 Oak St., Portland, Ore. |
| E. PENNSYLVANIA | American Feature Film Exchange | 211 N. 12th St., Philadelphia, Pa. |
| UTAH | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| WASHINGTON | Golgate Feature Service | 329 Oak St., Portland, Ore. |
| WYOMING | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| WISCONSIN | Motion Drama League | Battle Creek, Mich. |

Just Arrived! THE FIRST IRISH NATIONAL PILGRIMAGE to LOURDES

YOU FOLLOW THE PILGRIMAGE FROM IRELAND TO ENGLAND, THE TRIP TO LONDON, ACROSS THE ENGLISH CHANNEL TO THE NORTH OF FRANCE, AND THE LONG TRAIN JOURNEY TO LOURDES, IN THE HEART OF THE PYRENEES MOUNTAINS.

Advertising matter includes:
Heralds
Booklets
Lobby Photos

A. BLINKHORN
World's Tower Building
110-112 West 40th Street, NEW YORK

Advertising matter includes:
Newspaper Cuts
1, 3 & 6 Sheets
Lithographs

Ltd., Present "The Harper Mystery" Featuring

MISS

ENCE TURNER

LATE OF THE VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA

ular Moving Picture Actress in America

A Great Racing Melodrama

"Kissing Cup" FOUR PARTS

A Hepworth Winner

RACING AUTOS, AEROPLANE FLIGHT, HORSE RACE, LOVE STORY

KISSING CUP TERRITORY SOLD:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| ARIZONA | Golgate Feature Service | 234 Eddy St., San Francisco, Cal. |
| ARKANSAS | Southern Feature Film Co. | Dallas, Texas. |
| CALIFORNIA | Golgate Feature Service | 234 Eddy St., San Francisco, Cal. |
| COLORADO | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| IDAHO | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| LOUISIANA | Southern Feature Film Co. | Dallas, Texas. |
| MONTANA | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| NEVADA | Golgate Feature Service | 234 Eddy St., San Francisco, Cal. |
| NEW MEXICO | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| NEW YORK CITY | Theatre Film Co. | 71 West 23rd St., N. Y. City. |
| NEW YORK STATE | Theatre Film Co. | 71 West 23rd St., N. Y. City. |
| NEW JERSEY | Progressive Feature Film Co. | 800 Broad St., Newark, N. J. |
| OREGON | Golgate Feature Service | 329 Oak St., Portland, Ore. |
| OKLAHOMA | Southern Feature Film Co. | Dallas, Texas. |
| E. PENNSYLVANIA | American Feature Film Exchange | 211 N. 12th St., Philadelphia, Penn. |
| TEXAS | Southern Feature Film Co. | Dallas, Texas. |
| UTAH | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |
| WASHINGTON | Golgate Feature Service | 329 Oak St., Portland, Ore. |
| WYOMING | Golgate Feature Service | Denver, Colo. |

Valuable
Territory
Still Unsold

A. BLINKHORN

Sole American and Canadian Agent
World's Tower Building
110-112 West 40th Street, NEW YORK

I Help You
Help the Exhibitor

D. W. GRIFFITH

Producer of all great Biograph successes, founding the modern

Included in the innovations which he introduced, and which are now generally followed by the most advanced producers, are: The large or close-up figures, distant views as represented first in Ramona, the "switchback," sustained suspense, the "fade out," and restraint in expression, raising motion picture acting to the higher plane which has won for it recognition as a genuine art.

Among the motion pictures which he produced productions famous the wo

Adventures of Dolly
The Redman and the Child
For Love of Gold
Behind the Scenes
After Many Years
Taming of the Shrew
The Song of the Shirt
Money Mad
The Reckoning
Edgar Allan Poe
The Curtain Pole
A Fool's Revenge
Mr. & Mrs. Jones Comedy Series
The Voice of the Violin
The Drunkard's Reformation
A Baby's Shoe
The Jilt
The Resurrection
The Cricket on the Hearth
What Drink Did
The Violin Maker of Cremona
The Lonely Villa
Was Justice Served
The Necklace
The Country Doctor
The Cardinal's Conspiracy
The Renunciation
Sweet & Twenty
The Slave
A Strange Meeting
The Mended Lute
With Her Card
The Indian Runner's Romance
The Mills of the Gods
The Sealed Room
1776 or the Hessian Renegade
Comata, the Sioux
The Broken Locket
In Old Kentucky
Leather Stocking
Pippa Passes
Fools of Fate
The Little Teacher
The Expiation
In the Watches of the Night
Lines of White on a Sullen Sea
The Light That Came
Two Women and a Man
The Open Gate
The Mountaineer's Honor
The Redman's View
A Corner in Wheat
To Save Her Soul
The Dancing Girl of Butte
On the Reef
The Honor of His Family
The Cloister's Touch
One Night and Then
His Last Burglary
The Newlyweds
The Thread of Destiny
In Old California
The Twisted Trail
Gold Is Not All
An Unchanging Sea
Love Among the Roses
The Two Brothers
Ramona
A Child of the Ghetto
On the Border States
The Face in the Window
A Call To Arms
The House with the Closed Shutters
The Sorrows of the Unfaithful
Wilful Peggy
Rose of Salem Town
Examination Day at School
The Broken Doll

Also two, three and four reel features not yet re

of Bethulia, The Massacre, The Battle of Eld

D. W. GRIFFITH

revolutionizing motion picture drama and technique of the art.

For two years from the Summer of 1908, Mr. Griffith personally directed all Biograph motion pictures. Thereafter as general director he superintended all Biograph productions and directed the more important features until October 1, 1913.

and which have contributed to make American rld over are the following:

- Waiter No. 5
- The Song of the Wildwood Flute
- The Golden Supper
- Greaser's Gauntlet
- The Muggsy Series
- The Two Paths
- His Trust
- His Trust Fulfilled
- Three Sisters
- Fisher Folks
- The Barbarian
- A Decree of Destiny
- Was He a Coward?
- The Lonedale Operator
- Madame Rex
- His Mother's Scarf
- The Sunbeam
- How She Triumphed
- The Smile of a Child
- Enoch Arden
- Fighting Blood
- Bobby, the Coward
- The Last Drop of Water
- The Sorrowful Example
- Swords and Hearts
- The Revenue Man and the Girl
- The Making of a Man
- The Long Road
- The Battle
- The Miser's Heart
- The Failure
- A Tale of the Wilderness
- The Eternal Mother
- A Blot in the 'Scutcheon
- Billy's Strategem
- The Mender of Nets
- Iola's Promise
- The Female of the Species
- One is Business, the Other Crime
- The Lesser Evil
- The Old Actor
- A Lodging for the Night
- A String of Pearls
- A Beast at Bay
- Home Folks
- Man's Genesis
- The Sands of Dee
- A Pueblo Legend
- Two Daughters of Eve
- So Near Yet So Far
- A Feud in the Kentucky Hills
- The One She Loved
- The Painted Lady
- The Musketeers of Pig Alley
- Brutality
- The New York Hat
- The God Within
- Three Friends
- The Telephone Lady and the Girl
- Oil and Water
- The Sheriff's Baby
- A Little Tease
- The House of Darkness
- The Yaqui Cur
- Death's Marathon
- The Mothering Heart
- The Reformers
- Two Men on the Desert

ALBERT H. T. BANZHAF

Counsellor-at-Law Personal Representative leased for exhibition in America, including Judith

erbush Gulch, and Wars of the Primal Tribes

THE PHOTO-DR

Pres

TEN NICHTS

IN 5

MADE IN

An Abundance of Advertising M

FIFTEEN STYL

Endorsed by the Censors, Pre
Temperance Masterpiece Ever
Father and Mother, every So

TEN NIGHTS IN

The Most Popular Play in the World. Protec

CANDLER

ROOM 1209 J. H.

AMA COMPANY

ent

IN A BAR ROOM

PARTS

AMERICA

atter, 18 Photos, Heralds, Slides

ES OF LITHOS

ss and Clergy as The Greatest Produced. A Play that every n and Daughter should see.

A BAR ROOM

tion Guaranteed. Bids for Territory Wanted.

BUILDING, N. Y.
MAHER

MONTHLY RELEASES

THE CHAMPION

PUNCHES

As we prognosticated in our previous issue, the Champ really has made a killing. Miss Exhibitor, wanting to see more than an impromptu display of the Champion's wares, accompanied him to his training quarters, where he showed her some "reel" punches; (Kay-Bee, "The Maelstrom"); (Broncho "The Reformation"); (Keystone, "Cohen Saves the Flag"); (Domino, "Belle of Yorktown").

Now, all her young life, Miss Exhibitor was interested in anything that carried a "punch," and at this date is quite an authority on them, and upon viewing these afore-mentioned "punches," "she was his'n and he was her'n."

FUTURE RELEASES

KEYSTONE
COMEDIES

November 24—FATTY JOINS THE FORCE
November 27—COHEN SAVES THE FLAG
December 1—THE WOMAN HATERS
December 4 — ROGUES' GALLERY — SAN FRANCISCO CELEBRATION (Split Reel)
December 8—RIDE FOR A BRIDE
Dec. 11—THE HORSE THIEF
Dec. 15—THE GUSHER

KAY-BEE
FEATURES

November 25—THE MAELSTROM
November 28—SIGN OF THE SNAKE
December 2—THE REVELATION
Dec. 5—THE LONG PORTAGE

DOMINO
WINNERS

November 27—BELLE OF YORKTOWN (3 Reels)
Dec. 4—THE FILLY
Dec. 11—DEVOTION
December 18—THE CURSE
December 25—TRUE IRISH HEARTS

BRONCHO
HEADLINERS

November 26—THE REFORMATION
Dec. 3—THE FRAMEUP
December 10—THE WOMAN
December 17—THE OPEN DOOR
December 24—HER FATHER'S STORY
December 31—THE BURIED PAST

MUTUAL PROGRAM EXCLUSIVELY

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORP., Longacre Bldg., 42d Street and Broadway
NEW YORK CITY

Keystone Comedy Special

A TWO PARTS

Zuzu, the Band Leader

2,000 FEET OF SCREAMING LAUGHTER

Made under the personal direction of

Mack Sennett

Managing Director of the

Keystone Film Company

All Star Cast with

Mabel Normand and Ford Sterling

Booking can be secured from any office of the

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION

Mutual Film Corporation

71 WEST 23d STREET NEW YORK CITY

THE MAR-LEON CORP. Presents

America's Most Gifted Photo Play Dramatic Actress

MISS MARION LEONARD

IN A STORY OF WOMANHOOD ELEMENTAL IN THREE ACTS

WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY STANNER E. V. TAYLOR

A LEAF IN THE STORM

Productions Made at Miss Leonard's Studio, 423 Classon Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

ALL EXHIBITION RIGHTS SOLD TO

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc.

126 WEST 46th STREET, NEW YORK

To Whom, or Their Branch Offices, All Inquiries Should Be Addressed

Business Office, Mar-Leon Corporation,
472 Fulton Street,
Brooklyn, New York

RANOUS MOTION PICTURE CO.

INCORPORATED

THE NEW PRIVATE SECRETARY

IN THREE REELS

FEATURING

LEONARD GROVER, JR.

IN THE TITLE ROLE

THE WORLD'S RIGHTS HAVE BEEN SOLD TO THE WARNER'S FEATURES, INC.
126 WEST 46th STREET, NEW YORK CITY, OR ANY OF THEIR TWENTY EXCHANGES, TO WHOM EXHIBITORS SHOULD ADDRESS THEIR INQUIRIES

---

Helen Gardner in A Daughter of Pan

A STORY OF ANCIENT GREECE

Written and Directed by Charles L. Gaskill
Projecting Length, 45 minutes in 3 chapters
Copyrighted, 1913, by Helen Gardner

The circumstance that the Helen Gardner Picture Players have agreed to make twelve three-reel pictures in a year for the Helgar Corporation, and that these twelve pictures have been sold to the Warners' Features, in no way does or should be construed to mean or even indicate any further relations between the producing company and the ultimate purchasers—except such relations as usually obtain between producers and purchasers of territory rights. Miss Helen Gardner is not a Warner Features "star"—whatever that may mean—any more than she is an Edwards-Zettler "star," or the "star" of any other purchaser of territory rights to a picture in which she plays a part. Miss Gardner's productions are entirely independent of any extraneous influences; the studio in which she works is her own property, and she is handicapped by no contract which could possibly operate to embarrass the quality of her picture plays. Announcement will shortly be made of a new six or eight-reel picture—now in course of preparation.

This picture was produced in Miss Gardner's Studio at Tappan-on-the-Hudson for the Helgar Corporation. The world rights have been sold by the Helgar Corporation to the Warner's Features, Inc., 126 W. 46th Street, New York City, to whom Exhibitors should address their inquiries.

Ambrosio Feature

COMING!

The BELLS OF DEATH

3 Reels (Copyrighted 1913)

A beautiful and pathetic war drama of a brave fight against overwhelming odds. Having no artillery with which to defend themselves, the poor villagers are obliged to melt the great bells which have rung for so many years, into cannons. Their unexpected victory is due to the heroic deed of Carmela, the bell-ringer's daughter, who dies bravely as a result of her sacrifice.

State Rights Now Open

Exchangemen! Exhibitors! Get Busy

Copies Ready for Delivery NOV. 26th

Publicity—1, 3, 8 sheet posters, heralds, cuts, photos

Ambrosio Two Reel Weekly Releases

Nov. 22nd

Griffard's Claw

(Copyrighted 1913)

A thrilling detective drama in which the famous Sherlock Holmes frustrates the plans of a much-feared blackmailer and restores a kidnapped child to his father.

Nov. 29th

The Goose a la "Colbert"

(Copyrighted 1913)

In this comedy-drama a former cook grown rich desires a great nobleman for his simple daughter. She, however, succeeds in destroying his high aspirations through the dressing of a goose, and marries her simple lover.

Dec. 6th

A Tragic Experiment

A young aviator whose advances are repulsed by the woman with whom he is infatuated, seeks vengeance in ruining her husband's invention at a critical moment. His base action is discovered, and, fearing arrest, he resolves to attempt the experiment himself, which results in his death.

Exchangemen take note

We sell but one exchange in each territory. Be the purchaser and you will have the exclusive for your territory.

Publicity—1, 3, 6 or 8 sheet posters, heralds, cuts, photos

Beautiful hand-colored slides for all AMBROSIO productions supplied direct by the Novelty Slide Co., this city

Società Anonima Ambrosio TORINO

Ambrosio American Co.

15 East 26th Street NEW YORK

READ WHAT YOUR STATE RIGHT BUYERS SAY ABOUT

VICTORY The Greatest Spectacular Love and War Drama Ever Produced

5550 Feet in Five Reels Made with the Aid of The United States Navy

NORTH AND SOUTH CAROLINA RIGHTS OWNED BY EAGLE FILM CO.
CHARLOTTE NORTH CAROLINA
LONG DISTANCE PHONE 1581

Charlotte, N. C. Oct-27th, 1913.

The Victory Company,
#232 W. 42nd St.,
New York City.

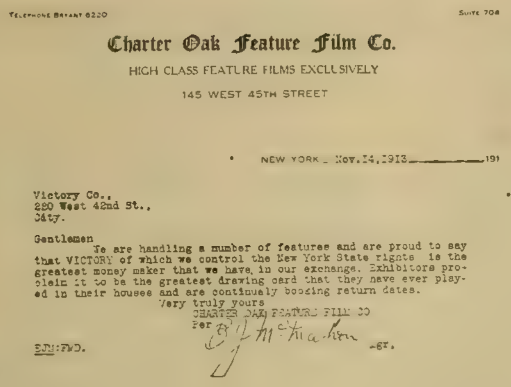
Gentlemen:

We have neglected writing to you in regard to VICTORY owing to the fact that we have been very busy. We knew that VICTORY would be a money maker before we bought the rights for the Carolinas, and we are pleased to state that it is far beyond our expectations as a meritous production and from a money-making standpoint.

With best wishes and sincerest regards we are.

Yours very truly,
EAGLE FILM COMPANY.
President.

EDC/dr



TELEPHONE BRYANT 6220
SUITE 704
Charter Oak Feature Film Co.
HIGH CLASS FEATURE FILMS EXCLUSIVELY
145 WEST 45TH STREET

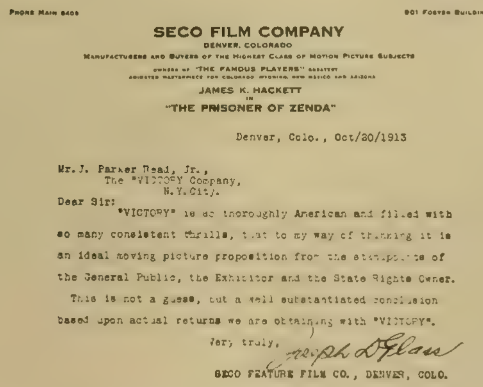
NEW YORK Nov.14,1913 191

Victory Co.,
220 West 42nd St.,
City.

Gentlemen
We are handling a number of features and are proud to say that VICTORY of which we control the New York State rights is the greatest money maker that we have in our exchange. Exhibitors proclaim it to be the greatest drawing card that they have ever played in their houses and are continualy booking return dates.

Very truly yours
CHARTER OAK FEATURE FILM CO
Per E. J. McMahon Mgr.

EJM:FMD.



PHONE MAIN 6408
901 FOSTER BUILDING
SECO FILM COMPANY
DENVER, COLORADO
MANUFACTURERS AND BUYERS OF THE HIGHEST CLASS OF MOTION PICTURE SUBJECTS
OWNERS OF "THE FAMOUS PLAYERS" GREATEST ANIMATED MASTERPIECE FOR COLORADO WYOMING NEW MEXICO AND ARIZONA
JAMES K. HACKETT
IN
"THE PRISONER OF ZENDA"

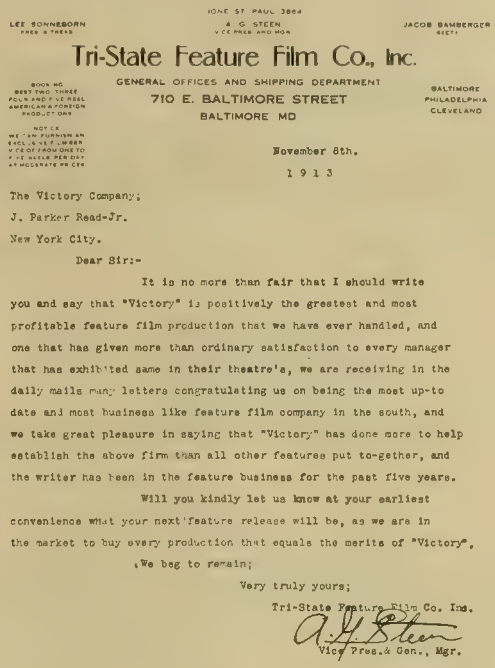
Denver, Colo., Oct/30/1913

Mr. J. Parker Read, Jr.,
The "VICTORY" Company,
N.Y.City.

Dear Sir:
"VICTORY" is so thoroughly American and filled with so many consistent thrills, that to my way of thinking it is an ideal moving picture proposition from the standpoints of the General Public, the Exhibitor and the State Rights Owner.

This is not a guess, but a well substantiated conclusion based upon actual returns we are obtaining with "VICTORY".

Very truly,
Joseph D Glass
SECO FEATURE FILM CO., DENVER, COLO.



PHONE ST PAUL 3864
LEE SONNEBORN PRES & TREAS
A. G. STEEN VICE PRES AND MGR
JACOB BAMBERGER SECTY
Tri-State Feature Film Co., Inc.
GENERAL OFFICES AND SHIPPING DEPARTMENT
710 E. BALTIMORE STREET
BALTIMORE MD
BOOKING BEST TWO THREE FOUR AND FIVE REEL AMERICAN & FOREIGN PRODUCTIONS
NOTICE WE CAN FURNISH AN EXCLUSIVE FILM SERVICE OF FROM ONE TO FIVE REELS PER DAY AT MODERATE PRICES
BALTIMORE
PHILADELPHIA
CLEVELAND

November 8th.
1 9 1 3

The Victory Company;
J. Parker Read-Jr.
New York City.

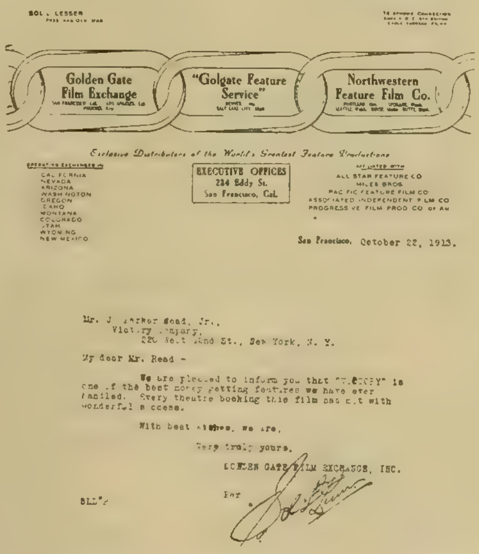
Dear Sir:-

It is no more than fair that I should write you and say that "Victory" is positively the greatest and most profitable feature film production that we have ever handled, and one that has given more than ordinary satisfaction to every manager that has exhibited same in their theatre's, we are receiving in the daily mails many letters congratulating us on being the most up-to date and most business like feature film company in the south, and we take great pleasure in saying that "Victory" has done more to help establish the above firm than all other features put to-gether, and the writer has been in the feature business for the past five years.

Will you kindly let us know at your earliest convenience what your next feature release will be, as we are in the market to buy every production that equals the merits of "Victory".

We beg to remain;

Very truly yours;
Tri-State Feature Film Co. Inc.
A. G. Steen
Vice Pres.& Gen., Mgr.



SOL L. LESSER
Golden Gate Film Exchange
"Golgate Feature Service"
Northwestern Feature Film Co.
Exclusive Distributors of the World's Greatest Feature Productions OPERATING EXCHANGES IN CALIFORNIA
NEVADA
ARIZONA
WASHINGTON
OREGON
IDAHO
MONTANA
COLORADO
UTAH
WYOMING
NEW MEXICO
EXECUTIVE OFFICES
234 Eddy St.
San Francisco, Cal.
AFFILIATED WITH ALL STAR FEATURE CO
MILES BROS
PACIFIC FEATURE FILM CO
ASSOCIATED INDEPENDENT FILM CO
PROGRESSIVE FILM PROD CO OF AM

San Francisco, October 22, 1913.

Mr. J. Parker Read, Jr.,
Victory Company,
220 West 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Read -

We are pleased to inform you that "VICTORY" is one of the best money getting features we have ever handled. Every theatre booking this film has met with wonderful success.

With best wishes, we are,

Very truly yours,
GOLDEN GATE FILM EXCHANGE, INC.
Per

SLL/

Absolute Guaranteed Money Maker. Never fails to play to capacity and often return dates

LAST CHANCE FOR THE FEW STATES OPEN

ILLINOIS
INDIANA
MICHIGAN
WISCONSIN
MINNESOTA
IOWA
NEBRASKA
KANSAS
MISSOURI
OKLAHOMA
ARKANSAS
TENNESSEE
LOUISIANA
MISSISSIPPI
VIRGINIA

Wire or write at once what territory you can handle

VICTORY COMPANY 220 West 42d St. NEW YORK CITY

"ACROSS the CONTINENT"

ACTED BY PILOT'S FAMOUS ALL-STAR CAST

The picturized version of America's Greatest Melodrama in Four Thrilling Parts, consisting of 250 Scenes of "Punch" and pathos, teaching a great moral lesson and depicted in fine lustrous photography, is undoubtedly

THE BEST MONEY-MAKER ON THE MARKET

Wise buyers who saw the film lost no time in closing for the most sensational feature yet produced in America. Neither time nor money was spared in the production of this marvelous photoplay, and

FOR STATE RIGHT BUYERS

We Are Confident We Have The Greatest Box Office Attraction

YOU CAN OBTAIN FOR EXHIBITORS

A MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY OF ADVERTISING MATTER

One-Sheets, Three-Sheets, Six-Sheets, Pennants, Heralds, Photos for Lobby Display, 4-Sheet Streamer, Cuts and Slides.

DON'T WAIT TO WRITE but WIRE RIGHT NOW

Coming!

Henry Arthur Jones'
Famous English Drama

Hoodman Blind

as Played by
Wilson Barrett
IN FOUR PARTS
Will be ready Dec. 1st

PILOT FILMS CORPORATION

220 W. 42d St. New York City

THE FOOS

SPECIAL ELECTRIC, GAS, GASOLINE, AND KEROSENE ENGINES

furnish light equal to the best central station service at less than half the cost. Ask us how we can reduce your charges for current from 25 to 75 per cent. Bulletin S. E. 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
809 Linden Ave. · Springfield, Ohio

COMING

The Terrors of Russia

The persecution and freedom of

The Russian Jew

500 PEOPLE in the cast.

An entire village in riot.

Be an Early Bird
Wire or write for open territory

Italian American Film Corp.
Columbia Theatre Bldg., Room 401-402
47th St. and Seventh Ave. NEW YORK

SPECIFY

GUNDLACH Projection Lenses

when ordering new machines

You may as well get the best lenses with the machine as to buy them later.

Supplied to order with Powers Cameragraph, Motiograph, Simplex, Standard

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.
808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

KEEP THE MOVIES MOVING

Others Are Doing It
WHY NOT YOU?

Souvenir nights attract the cash. Pennants and table centers, such as we can furnish you, are the best Souvenirs.

Low prices and quick action.
We Invite Correspodence

AMERICAN PENNANT COMPANY, 459 Broadway, NEW YORK

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

A-1 OPERATOR & ELECTRICIAN.—Any machine, go any place outside Greater New York. Best references. OPERATOR, 43 4th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY.—Piano player. Professional theatrical musician, strictly sober, reliable and steady. Eastern position preferred. CHARLES J. W. JERRELD, 1205 Hampden St., Holyoke, Mass.

ORGANIST.—Formerly R. C. Church, Atlanta, Ga., wants position moving pictures. Descriptive dramatic music specially composed. Address DONALD GREY, P. O. Box 51, Kent, Ohio.

HELP WANTED.

AGENTS—Wanted everywhere for the "Vim Vapor Screen." Attractive disinfectants and deodorizers. See display advertisement. Address HYGIENIC SPECIALTY CO., Greensburg, Pa.

WANTED.—Capable booking agents for first-class features. Address VERO SOCIETY, Room 704, World's Tower Bldg., 110 W. 40th St., N. Y. City.

WANTED.—A combined pipe organist and piano player to play the pictures in a city 25 miles out of Chicago. Address THOMAS LIMBER, 1317 N. Dearborn Ave., Chicago.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

WANTED—A young man with factory experience to fill position as assistant manager. An investment of $2,000.00 required. Address THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio.

OWNERS AND MANAGERS.—Ten ways to get the money with a picture show; ideas with a "kick," schemes with a "punch." If your competitor gets these you will be sorry, they're yours for a dollar. EGGLESTON & ANDERSON, 1215 S. Mirick Ave., Denison, Texas.

TEN YEARS' LEASE—On a prime location, 46 x 135 ft., on best side of street for motion picture theater, in a Texas city of 35,000 inhabitants. No large shows in the city. BOX 630, Austin, Tex.

THEATERS WANTED.

MACHINIST—Would purchase theater or shop interest where used as dance-orchestra cornetist. Double saxaphone and novelties. BERNARD, 234 Indiana, Toledo, Ohio.

WANTED—To buy, first-class Moving Picture Theater, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, preferred. Tell all in first letter. Address THEATER, 207 6th Ave., Peoria, Ill.

WANTED—Picture theater in or near Minnesota, town two to ten thousand population. BOX 39, Willmar, Minn.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Picture and vaudeville houses from $500 to $30,000 in Los Angeles and southern California. JACK E. CLOYD Company, 512 South Hill St., Los Angeles, Cal.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater seating 550 on ground floor, on Main Street in Connecticut town of 15,000. Doing good business. Address IMMEDIATE SALE, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE.—Largest motion picture theater in county seat of a rich agricultural northwestern Ohio county, new building, long lease, new Simplex machine; seating 275, best business. Address R. M., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Seating capacity 300 to 1,200—some suitable for vaudeville guaranteed O. K., with Chicago Ventilation ordinance. ROOM 513, 608 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in a town of 3,200. No opposition, price reasonable. Address MOVING PICTURE THEATER, Palmyra, Pa.

FOR SALE—One of the best equipped and newest motion picture theaters in Newark, N. J. In business section and well established. Capacity 600. Strictest investigation invited. Price $4,000, including complete equipment and ten-year lease. W. J. EGAN, 188 Market St., Newark, N. J.

THEATER—"The Arcade," one of the best moving picture theaters in Montreal, Canada. On the main thoroughfare, east end, 1,100 seats, completely equipped and running since six months. The sale will take place on the premises, 853 Ste. Catherine St., E., by public auction, at 10 o'clock A. M., November 27th. For further information, apply to PREVOST & BEDARD, 107 St. James St., Montreal, Que., Can.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER FOR SALE—Seven years' lease of one of the handsomest houses in the country. New, thoroughly modern. Seats 400, located in a large Ohio city. Average weekly gross business, $988. Average monthly profits, $1,000. Unless you have $10,000, save your stamps. Trial allowed. Address GYLIE, care of Hennegan & Co., Printers, Cinn., Ohio.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE—110 or 220-volt Economizer, 60 Cycles, a few films and features; give full particulars. MARTIN L. FREDERICKS, 2017 North Twelfth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED—To buy two hundred opera chairs, four ft. elevated floor, must be in good condition and at a bargain. Address PRINCESS THEATER, Custer, Okla.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES—For one, three and six-sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. THE NEWMAN MFG. CO., Cincinnati, O.

FOR SALE—Complete road outfit, including Edison moving picture machine, gas outfit with material for six shows, five reels film, screen, slides, trunk, rewinder, all complete for business, $85. ROBERT DAUPHINEE, Woodland, Me.

FOR SALE—Complete "Ozo-Carbi" gas outfit with tanks, 2 burners, ten-pound "Ozo," 65 pounds carbide. $50 takes all. FRANK L. REID, Grenola, Kansas.

FOR SALE—Top Motiograph lamp, lamp house, support, double front lens support, dissolver, one half size objective, condenser, slide carrier, rheostat, base boards. List over $100. Like new, $55. Address T. C. R., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

CAMERAS FOR SALE.

PROFESSIONAL MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS—Two sizes. Tripods, Zeiss-Tessar 50M. lenses, $150, $225. Special cameras to order. Repairing all makes. R. W. PITTMAN, 246 Canal St., New York City.

FILMS FOR SALE.

STATE RIGHT MEN—Here is a money-getter, "Conscience," three reels. Ohio and Western Pennsylvania rights. Film used only ten days. Make me an offer for either state. A. E. IRONS, 432 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

FOR SALE—"Bold Bank Robbery," two reels, $90. "James Boys in Missouri," two reels, $120. Big front. I have purchased theater, cannot give them the proper attention. R. N. DAVENPORT, Watertown, Wis.

300 COMMERCIAL REELS—With posters, $5 to $10. OMAHA FILM EXCHANGE, Omaha, Nebr.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FOR CAMERAMEN—Developing, 1c; printing, 5c (slow printer). Intensifying and reducing extra; titles, 8c. GEO. KINGSBURY, Star Special, 837 W. 46th St., New York City. 'Phone, 3255 Bryant.

MOVING PICTURE FILMS—Made to order for anyone, anywhere. Only 20c per foot. Work guaranteed. CHICAGO MOTION PICTURES CO., McVicker's Theater Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

OPERATORS—I have a good side line which pays me $10 to $12 a week. If you want to get in on it, write me and I'll tell you how. RUSSELL LIPPEN, Majestic Theater, Battle Creek, Mich.

INFORMATION—Bright, interesting book on making, taking, finishing of moving pictures. The moving picture camera, its construction; by a cameraman of 20 years' experience, sent postpaid, 25c. FORDS, DENVER, Colo.

TYPEWRITER—For authors, 40 cents per 1,000 words. Special book rate. JACK LIVERPOOL, 394 Massachusetts Ave., Boston, Mass.

SAVES YOU MONEY—It costs but 35c to make a gallon of my spraying oil. Absolutely prevents flying dust while sweeping. Thoroughly deodorizes. Equals preparations costing $2 per gallon. Beats all sweeping compounds. Send 50c for my formula and make it yourself. J. B. Stine, Lebanon, Ind.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

WURLITZER ORCHESTRIAN FOR SALE—Electric Style C, with all attachments, good condition. Used in Moving Picture Theater. List price, $1,400. Will sell for $400. Address M. R. STERN, Chattanooga, Tenn.

---

SCENARIOS WANTED

We are looking for one, two, three and four reel subjects. High class Comedy, Dramatic, Historical and Biblical. Best Rates paid for exclusive subjects, but positively nothing considered that is not exceptional.

PROMPT ATTENTION GIVEN ALL MANUSCRIPTS

THE BALBOA AMUSEMENT PRODUCING CO.

Suite 806, Security Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

H. M. HORKHEIMER, Pres. & Gen. Manager, Member National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers

Six Electrifying Features

Booking Now For Greater New York and Northern New Jersey!

TWO PASQUALIS:
"A RACE WITH DEATH," 2 Reels
"THE POWER OF INNOCENCE," 3 Reels

TWO ITALAS:
"THE GREATER LOVE," 2 Reels
"UNMASKED," 3 Reels

TWO RAMOS:
"THE CURRENT," 3 Reels
"CARDS," 3 Reels

Our paper will draw the crowds

EUROPEAN FEATURE FILM CO.

'Phone, 5307 Bryant 220 West 42d St. Room 1608, Candler Bldg.

---

EDWARD H. WAGNER

38 PARK PLACE NEW YORK CITY Telephone Barclay 6979

GENERAL AGENT FOR

DANIA BIOFILM COMPANY

of COPENHAGEN

Is Now Ready

To Sell State Rights for

"A MOTHER'S LOVE"

IN FOUR PARTS

OUR FIRST FEATURE—MAKE APPOINTMENTS

---

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

| | |
|---|---|
| 670 Film Exchanges, U. S. | $3.50 |
| 70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S. | 1.00 |
| 34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers | 1.00 |
| 231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries | 3.00 |
| 520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries | 3.00 |

Ask us for full particulars.

TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.

166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880.

---

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

---

BOOK THESE NOW!

BOOK IT NOW!

"The Great Lure of Paris"

A Drama in 3 Parts.

BOOK IT NOW!

"SALVATION"

A Drama in 4 Parts.

BOOK IT NOW!

"JUSTICE or LOVE?"

A Drama in 3 Parts.

Paper, photos and heralds de Luxe. In every one of these "Hitters" you will find excellent photography, splendid acting, a highly dramatic plot and beautiful settings; everything to call forth the admiration of your patrons.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

220 W. 42d St. New York City
Candler Bldg. Bryant 8486 Room 903

---

THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR

An Alternating Current Transformer for Motion Picture Arc Lamps

Every claim made for superior merit, high efficiency and current saving qualities has been proven by over five years' constant service. Nearly 3,000 INDUCTOR COMPENSATORS now in use.

PRICE:

| | |
|---|---|
| 110 Volts, 60 Cycles | $50.00 |
| 220 Volts, 60 Cycles | 50.00 |

Prices for special transformers to control other voltages and cycles quoted on application. Order from your exchange or from

BELL & HOWELL COMPANY, Designers and Manufacturers
217 West Illinois Street :: :: :: :: Chicago, Illinois

---

JUST RELEASED

The latest, most up-to-date method of deodorizing your theatre with attractive disinfectants.

Why buy a machine to purify the air? Use your own electric fans, attach a "Vim Vapor Screen" and obtain the same results.

A simple screen with double tanks and wick. Economical and efficient.

Highly finished nickel-plated screen complete with one quart of "Vim Vapor," sufficient for six months' average use.

Your choice of disinfectants, Cedar, Pine, $4.00 each, or the sweet scented redolents, Oriental Sandal, Violet, $5.00 each.

Orchid Blossom Special, $6.00 each.

Delivered by Parcel Post, C. O. D., any part of the United States

HYGIENIC SPECIALTY CO.

Greensburg, Pa.

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS ..... 999
AMONG THE PICTURE THEATERS ..... 1010
"ARMED INTERVENTION" (American) ..... 993
AT THE SIGN OF THE FLAMING ARCS ..... 1016

"BARGAIN WITH SATAN, A" (Apex) ..... 989
BUFFALO ..... 1030

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES ..... 1024
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES ..... 1022
"CHECKERS" (All Star) ..... 992
CHICAGO LETTER ..... 1011
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed) ..... 1007
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) ..... 1008
CORRESPONDENCE ..... 1028

DISTINCT ART, A ..... 984

FACTS AND COMMENTS ..... 983
FEATURE FILM STORIES ..... 1060
FOREIGN TRADE NOTES ..... 947

"HARPER MYSTERY, THE" (Turner) ..... 990
HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS ..... 985

IN THE NORTHWEST ..... 1028
IN THE SOUTHWEST ..... 1028
IN THE MIDDLE WEST ..... 1028
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES ..... 1050
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES ..... 1080
INDIANAPOLIS ..... 1032
INQUIRIES ..... 1002

"LEAP OF DESPAIR, A" (Itala) ..... 987
"LIFE OF RICHARD WAGNER, THE" (Meesters) ..... 995
LICENSED FILM STORIES ..... 1034
LICENSED RELEASE DATES ..... 1082
LOUISVILLE ..... 1030

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES ..... 1017
MARY PICKFORD WITH FAMOUS PLAYERS ..... 1015
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE ..... 1014

NEW ENGLAND AND CANADA ..... 1032

OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN ..... 996

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE ..... 1001
"PORT OF DOOM, THE" (Famous Players) ..... 989
"PRINCESS OF BAGDAD, A" (Helgar) ..... 991
PROMOTER'S RAINBOW ..... 986
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT ..... 1003

"SILENCE OF THE DEAD, THE" (Gaumont) ..... 1013
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed) ..... 1034
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent) ..... 1050
STORIES O THE FILMS (Features) ..... 1060

"THE THIRD DEGREE" (Lubin) ..... 992
"TEN NIGHTS IN A BARROOM" (North American) ..... 1013

"WARDS OF SOCIETY, THE" (Patheplay) ..... 988
WASHINGTON, D. C. ..... 1030

"YELLOW SLAVE, THE" (Melies) ..... 995

TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
KIEWERT, C. L. & CO. ..... 1084
REISINGER, HUGO ..... 1053

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO ..... 1097
BELL & HOWELL ..... 1077
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO. ..... 1092
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO ..... 1075
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO. ..... 1038
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO. ..... 1044
GENERAL SPECIALTY CO. ..... 1093
HALBERG, J. H. ..... 1036
HOKE, GEO. M., SUPPLY CO. ..... 1040
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO. ..... 1095
SMITH, L. C. & CO. ..... 1048
STRELINGER, CHAS. A. & CO. ..... 1046
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC MFG. CO. ..... 1044

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURES.
A. K. C. ..... 1045
ALL STAR FEATURE CORP. ..... 1029
AMBROSIO ..... 1072
AMMEX FILM CO. ..... 1049
APEX FILM CO ..... 1090-91
BLINKHORN, ALBERT ..... 1062-63
BOSWORTH, INC. ..... 1045
CALIFORNIA M. P. CO. ..... 1088-89
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO. ..... 1046
EUROPEAN FEATURE FILM CO. ..... 1077
FAMOUS PLAYERS ..... 970-71
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO. ..... 1077
FILM RELEASES OF AMERICA ..... 1037
FILMS LLOYD, INC. ..... 1084
GENERAL FILM CO. ..... 972-73, 1025
GENERAL SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO ..... 1040
GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM CO. ..... 1039
HELGAR CORP. ..... 1031-1071
ITALA FILM CO. ..... 1035
ITALIAN AMERICAN CO. ..... 1061-1075
MAR-LEON FILM CORPORATION ..... 1070
MONARCH F. F. CO. ..... 1092
NEW YORK FILM CO. ..... 1061
PHOTO DRAMA CO. ..... 1066-67
PILOT FILM CO. ..... 1074
RAMO FILMS ..... 1086
RANOUS MOTION PICTURE CO. ..... 1071
RUBY FEATURE ..... 1047-1040
SUPREME F. F. CO. ..... 1085
TRANS. OCEANIC F. CO. ..... 1086
TRUE FEATURES ..... 1033
UNIQUE FEATURES ..... 1079
VICTORY FILM CO ..... 1073
VOLUNTEER ORGANIST CO. ..... 1087
WARNER'S FEATURES ..... 1051
WORLD SPECIAL FILMS CORP. ..... 1058-59

FILM BROKERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS ..... 1046-1096

FILM EXCHANGES.
BRADENBURG, G. W ..... 1038
CHICAGO M. P SUPPLY CO. ..... 1046
ECONOMY FILM CO ..... 1046
G. & G. FILM SERVICE ..... 1046
GREATER N. Y. FILM RENTAL CO ..... 1082
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE ..... 1048
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM SERVICE ..... 1093
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO. ..... 1092
STEBBINS, C. M. ..... 1046
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE ..... 1097
THEATER SUPPLY CO. ..... 1046
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO. ..... 1077
TURNER HALSEY CO. ..... 1092
VISCO MOTOR OIL CO. ..... 1052
WAGNER, E. H. ..... 1077
WILLIAMS, BROWN & EARLE ..... 1093
WOODRUFF, ELEANOR ..... 1021

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN ..... 1081
ECLAIR CO. ..... 1094
GAUMONT CO. ..... Insert
NEW MAJESTIC ..... 1098
N. Y. M. P. CO. ..... 1068-69
THANHOUSER ..... 962
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURERS ..... 964-5-6-7-8-9

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON ..... 979
ESSANAY ..... 963
KALEM ..... 982
KLEINE, GEO. ..... 976-77
LUBIN ..... 980
MELIES ..... 1055
PATHE FRERES ..... 978
SELIG ..... 1079-1099
VITAGRAPH ..... 982-1055

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN CO. ..... 1075

MISCELLANEOUS.
ADVANCE M. P. CO. ..... 1093
AMERICAN PENNANT CO. ..... 1075
BALBOAH AMUSEMENT CO ..... 1076
BLOCH, P. A. ..... 1092
BRADY, W. A. ..... 1041
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS ..... 1076
DEARBORN NOVELTY CO. ..... 1040
EASTMAN KODAK CO ..... 1096
EXHIBITORS' BALL ..... 1057
FIELDING, ROMAINE ..... 1085
GRIFFITH, D. W. ..... 1064-65
GUNBY BROS. ..... 1052
HYGIENIC SPECIALTY CO. ..... 1077
JONES, FRED R. ..... 1046
KRAUS MFG. CO. ..... 1061
LADIES' WORLD ..... 1026-27
NATIONAL TICKET CO. ..... 1080
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO. ..... 1079
ONE DROP OIL CO. ..... 1052
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO. ..... 1093
PHOTO-CINES CO. ..... 1095
PHOTOPLAY CO., INC. ..... 1092
PREDDY, W. G. ..... 1042
SARGENT, E. W. ..... 1097
SPITZ, B. ..... 1044

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.
AMERICAN CINEMATOGRAPH CO. ..... 1052
MOTION PICTURE CAMERA CO ..... 1052
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD ..... 1040

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTOPLAYER SALES CO. ..... 1044
DEAGAN, J. C. ..... 1093
SEEBURG, J. P., PIANO CO. ..... 1096
SINN, C. E. ..... 1097
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH ..... 1038
WELTE, M. & SON ..... 1053

PROJECTION MACHINES.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. ..... 1092
KINEMACOLOR CO. ..... 1085
POWERS ..... 1100
PRECISION MACHINE CO. ..... 1023

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. ..... 1097
ANDREWS, A. H., CO. ..... 1097
BENNETT SEATING CO. ..... 1097
HARDESTY MFG. CO. ..... 1097
STAFORD, E. H. ..... 1097
STEEL FURNITURE CO. ..... 1097
WISCONSIN SEATING CO. ..... 1097

POSTERS & FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO. ..... 1024
A. B. C. Co. ..... 1078
GENERAL FILM CO. ..... 1083
NEWMAN MFG. CO. ..... 1052
THEATER SPECIALTY MFG. CO. ..... 1046

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO. ..... 1061
GENTER, J. H. ..... 1096
MIRROR SCREEN CO. ..... 1044
WYNNE, A. B., CURTAIN CO. ..... 1048

SONG & ADVERTISING SLIDES.
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE CO. ..... 1038
CURRENT EVENT SLIDE CO. ..... 1094
ERKER BROS. ..... 1044
NIAGARA SLIDE CO. ..... 1021
SONG SLIDE SERVICE ..... 1042
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO. ..... 1077

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO. ..... 1093

ORDER THESE ONE, THREE AND SIX SHEETS AT ONCE

Kalem's "THE OCTOROON" (Two Styles of ONE SHEETS) In Two Parts. Released December 1st

Kalem's "THE CAVE MEN'S WAR" (Two Styles of ONE SHEETS) In Two Parts. Released December 3d

Lubin's "When Mountain and Valley Meet"

In Two Parts. Released December 4th

A. B. C. COMPANY :: :: Cleveland, Ohio

EXCHANGE MEN!

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING!

"80 Million Women Want--?"

An absorbing story of love, intrigue and detective work.

The "Fair Suffragette" defeats the political boss after a struggle in which her lover is involved.

A PICTURE WITH A PUNCH
A FEATURE WITH HEADLINERS

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst the English Militant Leader and Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch are featured in this film.

Wire bid for territory to-day. To-morrow may be too late. Many States already closed

UNIQUE FILM CO., INC.
110 W. 40th St., N. Y. City

---

Selig

SUPREMACY

in The Field of the Open with The Lords of the Jungle has been Widely Complimented by a Host of Imitators

ORIGINALITIES

- CAPTAIN KATE
- BACK TO THE PRIMITIVE
- LOST IN THE JUNGLE
- A WISE OLD ELEPHANT
- WAMBA, A CHILD OF THE JUNGLE
- IN THE MIDST OF THE JUNGLE
- TERRORS OF THE JUNGLE
- THOR, LORD OF THE JUNGLE

---

EYE COMFORT LIGHTING System

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theatres a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium..............................
Ceiling Height..............................
Width of House..............................
Name..............................

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.

Chicago
229 W. Jackson Blvd.

New York
505 Fifth Ave.

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.

Nov. 20—The Tale of the Ticker (Drama)......
Nov. 20—A Modern Steel Plant (Edu.)......
Nov. 22—Calamity Anne's Dream (Drama).....1000
Nov. 24—The Occult (Drama)................1000
Nov. 27—A Spartan Girl of the West (Drama).1000
Nov. 29—A Midnight (Drama)................1000
Dec. 1—American Born (2 parts—Drama).. 2000
Dec. 4—No Release This Date.
Dec. 6—A Divorce Scandal (Drama) .. ..1000

AMBROSIO.

Oct. 18—The Two Mothers (2 parts—Drama)..2000
Nov. 15—The Sculptor's Masterpiece (2 parts—Drama) ........................
Nov. 22—Griffard's Claw (2 parts—Drama)....
Nov. 29—Goose a la "Colbert" (2 parts—Comedy-Drama) ......................

APOLLO.

Nov. 2—His Nobs the Plumber (Comedy).....
Nov. 9—Freddy Loosebelt from Africa (Com.)
Nov. 16—Fred's Waterloo (Comedy)..........
Nov. 23—The Mexican Sleep Producer (Comedy)

BISON.

Nov. 15—Lasca (2 parts—Drama).............
Nov. 18—The Raid of the Human Tigers (3 parts—Drama)......................
Nov. 22—Wynona's Vengeance (2 parts—Dr.)..
Nov. 25—The White Vacquero (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 29—The War of the Cattle Range (2 parts—Drama) ......................
Dec. 6—The White Squaw (2 parts—Drama).

BRONCHO.

Nov. 12—The Impostor (2 parts—Drama).......
Nov. 19—The War Correspondent (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 26—The Reformation (Drama)..........
Dec. 3—The Buried Past (Drama)..........
Dec. 10—The Woman (Drama)...............

CRYSTAL.

Nov. 18—Her Secretaries (Comedy)............
Nov. 18—Percy's New Mamma (Comedy)......
Nov. 23—The Cabaret Singer (Drama)........
Nov. 25—Hubby's New Coat (Comedy)........
Nov. 25—Baldy Belmont Lands a Society Job (Comedy) ......................
Nov. 30—The Convict's Daughter (Drama)....
Dec. 2—That Awful Maid (Comedy).. ....
Dec. 2—The Installment Plan Marriage (Com.)
Dec. 7—A Woman's Revenge (Drama)..... ..

DOMINO.

Nov. 13—The Ghost (2 parts—Drama)..........
Nov. 20—The Witch of Salem (Drama)........
Nov. 27—Belle of Yorktown (3 parts—Drama)
Dec. 4—Devotion (2 parts—Drama)...........
Dec. 11—The Filly (2 parts—Drama) ........

ECLAIR.

Nov. 19—Partners (2 parts—Drama)..........
Nov. 23—Oh! You Rubber (Comedy)...........
Nov. 23—Soldiers Drilling in Turkestan (Military)..............................
Nov. 26—A Son's Devotion (2 parts—Drama)
Nov. 30—Roaring Bill (Comedy)...............
Nov. 30—One On Tooty (Comedy)...........
Dec. 3—When Pierrot Met Pierrette (2 parts—Drama) .... ....... .... .....
Dec. 7—Trouble on the Stage (Comedy).. .
Dec. 7—Magnetism and Magnets (Scientific).

FRONTIER.

Nov. 8—The Girl and the Bandit (Drama)....
Nov. 13—Caught At His Own Game (Comedy)..
Nov. 15—The Bond That Binds (Drama)......
Nov. 20—Slim Becomes a Detective (Com.)...
Nov. 22—The Double Cross (Drama)..........
Nov. 27—Slim Proposes—But (Comedy)........
Nov. 29—The Secret of Balanced Rock (Dr.)
Dec. 4—Slim and the Boys at Breezy Beach (Comedy) .... .
Dec. 6—The Circuit Rider of the Hills (Dr.)

GAUMONT.

Nov. 18—Leonce and the Milkmaid (Com.)....
Nov. 19—Gaumont's Weekly, No. 89 (News)...
Nov. 20—Oscar Finances a Theater...........
Nov. 25—Mary Saves the Sculptor (Drama)....
Nov. 26—Gaumont's Weekly No. 90 (News)..
Nov. 27—The Little Peacemaker (Drama).....
Nov. 27—Gymnastics .. ....... .... ......
Dec. 2—The Living Doll (Drama) .. .....
Dec. 3—Gaumont's Weekly No. 91 (News)..
Dec. 4—Oscar, the Hermit (Comedy) . .

GOLD SEAL.

Dec. 2—Under the Black Flag (3 parts—Dr.)

GREAT NORTHERN.

Nov. 1—A Dilemma (Comedy)................
Nov. 1—An Isle in the Baltic Sea (Scenic)..
Nov. 8—A Bogus Here (Comedy)............

IMP.

Nov. 6—The Old Parlor (Drama)............
Nov. 10—On Pine Mountain (Drama)..........
Nov. 13—Levi and McGinnis Running for Office (2 parts—Comedy) .................
Nov. 17—Who Killed Olga Carew? (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 20—The Child Stealers of Paris (Drama)
Nov. 24—Jane's Brother the Paranoiac (Dr.)
Nov. 27—Night Shadows of New York (3 parts Drama) ........................
Dec. 1—Love vs. Law (2 parts—Drama) ....
Dec. 4—Plain Jane (Drama) . . . . .

JOKER.

Nov. 22—The Stinger Stung (Comedy).........
Nov. 26—Mike and Jake Go Fishing (Comedy)
Nov. 26—Bally Bunion Railway in Ireland (Travel) ... .......................
Nov. 29—Lazy Louis (Comedy)...............
Dec. 3—Mike and Jake in the Wild West (Comedy) .. ......................
Dec. 6—A Pair of Bears (Comedy).........
Dec. 6—Views of Yellowstone Park (Scenic)..

KAY-BEE.

Oct. 31—Borrowed Gold (Drama).............
Nov. 7—An Indian's Honor (Drama).........
Nov. 11—For Mother's Sake (Drama).........
Nov. 14—Efficacy of Prayer (Drama)..........
Nov. 18—The Claim Jumper (Drama)........
Nov. 21—Days of '49 (Drama)...............
Nov. 25—The Maelstrom (Drama)............
Nov. 28—The Sign of the Snake (Drama).....
Dec. 2—The Revelation (Drama)............

KEYSTONE.

Nov. 6—Louis' Sickness at Sea (Comedy)....
Nov. 10—Small Time Act (Comedy)...........
Nov. 10—The Milk We Drink (Educational)....
Nov. 13—Wine (Comedy) ....................
Nov. 17—Our Children (Comedy)..............
Nov. 20—A Muddy Romance (Comedy)........
Nov. 24—Fatty Joins the Force (Comedy)....
Nov. 27—Cohen Saves the Flag (Comedy)....

KOMIC.

Nov. 6—Poor John (Comedy).................
Nov. 6—Caused By a Clock (Comedy)........
Nov. 13—An Affair of Honor (Comedy)........
Nov. 13—Biddy on Her Mettle (Comedy)......
Nov. 20—Making Himself a Hero (Comedy)..
Nov. 20—Murphy's New High Hat (Comedy)..
Nov. 27—A Method In His Illness (Comedy)..
Nov. 27—The Man With a Razor (Comedy)....

LUX.

Nov. 7—The Amateur Detective (Comedy).... 590
Nov. 7—Roman Rivers (Scenic)............. 312
Nov. 14—Tommy's Camera (Comedy).. .......
Nov. 14—The Auvergne Mountains, Central France (Scenic) ................ ....
Nov. 21—Mabel's Rival (Comedy) . . .. .. 590
Nov. 21—Gems of Brittany (Scenic) . . . . . 390

MAJESTIC.

Nov. 15—The Pitch That Defiles (Drama).....
Nov. 16—The Tomboy's Race (Drama)........
Nov. 18—L'Article 47 (2 parts—Drama).....
Nov. 22—(No release this date).
Nov. 23—The House in the Tree (Drama)....
Nov. 25—A Warm Welcome (Comedy)........
Nov. 29—An Accidental Clue (Drama). .......

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

Nov 3—Mutual Weekly, No. 45 (News)......
Nov. 10—Mutual Weekly, No. 46 (News)......
Nov. 17—Mutual Weekly, No. 47 (News)......

NESTOR.

Nov. 21—An Elephant On His Hands (Comedy)
Nov. 26—Hilda of the Mountains (Drama)...
Nov 28—When He Lost to Win (Comedy)..
Dec. 3—The Brothers (Drama).............
Dec. 5—Locked Out at Twelve (Comedy)......

POWERS.

Nov. 21—A Stolen Identity (2 parts—Dr).....
Nov. 24—Jimmy's Deception (Comedy)........
Nov 28—A Seaside Samaritan (Drama).......
Dec. 1—When Joe Went West (Comedy)......
Dec. 5—Cross Purposes (Drama). ...... ...

PRINCESS.

Nov. 7—Friday, the Thirteenth (Comedy)....
Nov. 14—Bread Upon the Waters (Drama)....
Nov. 21—A Shot Gun Cupid (Comedy-Drama)..
Nov. 28—Her Right to Happiness (Dr.).. ..

RAMO.

Sept. 8—The Black Opal (Drama)............1[illegible]
Oct. 1—Cards (Feature—3 parts—Drama)....
Oct. 15—The Current (Feature—3 parts—Dr.)

RELIANCE.

Nov. 19—A Man and a Woman (Drama)......
Nov. 22—Her Father's Daughter (Drama)......
Nov. 24—The Other Woman (Drama)... .. .
Nov. 26—A Rough Diamond (Drama).....
Nov. 29—The Reporter's Scoop (Drama).. ..

REX.

Nov. 20—Fires of Fate (2 parts—Drama)......
Nov. 23—His Old-Fashioned Dad (Com.-Dr.)....
Nov. 27—The Tale of a Lonely Coast (Dr.)..
Nov. 30—The Boob's Dream Girl (Com.-Dr.)..
Dec. 4—Thieves and the Cross (2 parts—Dr.)
Dec. 7—James Lee's Wife (Drama). .... ..

THANHOUSER.

Nov. 9—Looking For Trouble (Com.-Dr.)......
Nov. 11—The Campaign Managers (Com.-Dr.)..
Nov. 14—The Children's Hour (Drama).......
Nov. 16—He Couldn't Lose (Comedy).........
Nov. 18—Baby's Joy Ride (Comedy-Drama)..
Nov. 21—The Clothes Line Quarrel (Drama)...
Nov. 23—Their Great Big Beautiful Doll (Com.)
Nov. 25—The Blight of Wealth (2 parts—Dr.)
Nov. 28—Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight (Dr.)

VICTOR.

Nov. 17—Forgotten Women (Drama)...........
Nov. 21—Where the Hop Vine Twines (Drama)
Nov. 24—Back to Life (2 parts—Drama)......
Nov. 28—Unto the Third Generation (2 parts—Drama) ...........................
Dec. 1—The Barrier of Bars (Drama) ......
Dec. 5—Influence of Sympathy (2 parts—Dr.)

FEATURES.

(A. Blinkhorn)

Nov. 10—Kissing Cup (Hepworth—4 parts—Dr.)

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES
Five Thousand - - $1.25
Ten Thousand - - $2.50
Twenty Thousand - - $4.50
Twenty-five Thousand - $5.50
Fifty Thousand - - $6.50
One Hundred Thousand - $8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000, $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

SEE AMERICANS FIRST
FLYING "A" FEATURE FILMS

AMERICAN BORN

A Two-Part Production

Featuring SYDNEY AYRES and VIVIAN RICH

in an intense drama of love and emotion.

One, Three and Six Sheet Lithographs.

Release Monday, December 1st, 1913

---

A DIVORCE SCANDAL

A thrilling Society Drama with Ed Coxen and Winifred Greenwood in leading roles.

One and Three Sheet Lithographs.

Release Saturday, December 6th, 1913

Coming! A Spectacular Feature Coming!

TRAPPED IN A FOREST FIRE

Sensational Forest Fires furnish the biggest hit of its kind. Book this early.

Release Monday, December 8th, 1913

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO. :: CHICAGO

LICENSED
RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph (Special).

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Patheplay, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Vitagraph, (Special).

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Patheplay, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Patheplay, Lubin, Vitagraph (Special).

Saturday— Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Patheplay, Vitagraph, (Special).

BIOGRAPH.

Nov. 8—Old Coupons (Drama)................
Nov. 10—No Place for Father (Drama).......
Nov. 13—Mrs. Casey's Gorilla (Comedy)......
Nov. 13—Mixed Nuts (Comedy)...............
Nov. 15—His Inspiration (Drama)...........
Nov. 17—A Cure for Suffragettes (Comedy)...
Nov. 17—He's a Lawyer (Comedy)...........
Nov. 20—The Detective's Stratagem (Drama)..
Nov. 22 -By Man's Law (2 parts—Drama)....
Nov. 24—All for Science (Drama)............
Nov. 27—A Circumstantial Hero (Comedy) ...
Nov. 27—The Somnambulists (Comedy)........
Nov. 29 -The Blue or the Gray (Drama)......
Dec. 1 How the Day Was Saved (Comedy).
Dec. 1 Bink's Vacation (Comedy) .... ..
Dec. 4—The Birthday Ring (Drama)..........
Dec. 6—In the Elemental World (Drama)....

EDISON.

Nov. 8—Elise the Forester's Daughter (Dr.)..1000
Nov. 10—Camping With the Blackfeet (Manners and Customs) ........................ 500
Nov. 10—Seth's Woodpile (Comedy)............ 500
Nov. 11—The Doctor's Duty (Drama).........1000
Nov. 12—His Nephew's Scheme (Comedy)....1000
Nov. 14—The Phantom Signal (Special—2 parts —Drama) ...........................2000
Nov. 15—Getting a Patient (Comedy).........1000
Nov. 17—Nora's Boarders (Comedy)...........1000
Nov. 18—A Cause for Thankfulness (Drama)..1000
Nov. 19—The Girl in the House-Boat (Com.)..1000
Nov. 21—A Good Sport (Special—2 parts—Comedy)...........................2000
Nov. 22—A Proposal Deferred "Who Will Marry Mary"—No. 5 (Drama)....1000
Nov. 24—From Durban to Zululand (Scenic).. 500
Nov. 24—Enoch and Eyra's First Smoke (Com.) 500
Nov. 25—The Vanishing Cracksman (Drama)..1000
Nov. 26—A Sense of Humor (Comedy).......1000
Nov. 28—The Gunmaker of Moscow (Special—2 parts—Drama) ...................2000
Nov. 29—A Royal Romance (Drama)........1000
Dec. 1—South African Whaling Industry (Inudustrial)..........................1000
Dec. 2 The Price of Human Lives (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 3—The Thrifty Janitor (Comedy) . ...1000
Dec. 5—Alexia's Strategy (Special—2 parts - Drama) ............ .... ........2000
Dec. 6—What Shall It Profit a Man? (Dr.)..1000

ESSANAY.

Nov. 8—Broncho Billy's Secret (Drama)......1000
Nov. 11—The Man Outside (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 12—The Last Laugh (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 13—The New Schoolmarm of Green River (Drama) ..............................1000
Nov. 14—The Boomerang (Special—2 parts—Drama) ..............................2000
Nov. 15—Alkali Ike's Auto (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 18—The Lost Chord (Drama).............1000
Nov. 19—The Usual Way (Comedy)...........1000
Nov. 20—The Cowboy Samaritan (Drama)....1000
Nov. 21—The End of the Circle (Special—2 parts—Drama)........................2000
Nov. 22—Broncho Billy's First Arrest (Drama).1000
Nov. 25—The Little Substitute (Drama).......1000
Nov. 26—Dollars—Pounds—Sense (Comedy)....1000
Nov. 27 The Naming of the Rawhide Queen (Drama)..............................1000
Nov. 28—The Brand of Evil (Special—2 parts Drama)...............................2000
Dec. 2—Autumn Love (Drama) ............1000
Dec. 3—Kitty's Knight (Comedy) ........1000
Dec. 4 -A Romance of the Hills (Drama).. 1000
Dec. 5 The Pay As You Enter Man (Special 2 parts -Drama . ... . . ...2000
Dec. 6—Broncho Billy's Squareness (Dr.).....1000

KALEM.

Nov. 8—The Silent Warning (Drama)........1000
Nov. 10—The Runaway Freight (Special—2 parts —Drama) .........................2000
Nov. 12—Our New Minister (Special—3 parts—Drama) ..........................3000
Nov. 14—The Fickle Freak (Comedy).........
Nov. 14—Hypnotizing Mamie (Comedy)........
Nov. 15—Against Desperate Odds (Drama)....1000
Nov. 17—The Stolen Tapestries (Drama).......1000
Nov. 19—The Express Car Mystery (Special—2 parts—Drama)..................2000
Nov. 21—The Laundress and the Lady (Com.)
Nov. 21—The Dublin Horse Show (Topical)...
Nov. 22—Primitive Man (Drama).............1000
Nov. 24—An Indian Maid's Strategy (Dr.)....1000
Nov. 26—The Plot of India's Hillmen (Special—2 parts—Drama)..................2000
Nov. 28—The Good Old Summer Time (Comedy)
Nov. 28—England's King at Liverpool (Topical)
Nov. 29—On Peril of His Life (Drama).......1000
Dec. 1—The Octoroon (Special—3 parts—Dr.)3000)
Dec. 3—The Cave Men's War (Special—2 parts —Drama) ........ ............ ..2000
Dec. 5—While Father Telephoned (Comedy).
Dec. 5 Andrew Carnegie's Gift to the World (Topical) ..........................
Dec. 6—The Foot Print Clue (Drama)... .. 1000

GEORGE KLEINE.

Nov. 4—Zuma, the Gypsy (Cines—2 parts—Drama—Special) ...................
Nov. 11—The Penalty (Cines—Special—2 parts —Drama)..........................
Nov. 18—For the Love of a Toreador (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama) ..........
Nov. 25—The Subterranean City; or Trailing the Jewel Thieves (Eclipse—2 parts—Special—Drama) ..................
Dec. 2—Venomous Tongues (Celio Special—2 parts Drama)................. ..
Dec. 9 The Stolen Legacy (Cines Special—2 parts Drama) .. .......... ..

LUBIN.

Nov. 7—Cocoanut Industry (Industrial)....... 400
Nov. 7—Getting the Best of Dad (Comedy).. 600
Nov. 8—Hiawanda's Cross (Drama)...........1000
Nov. 10—The Locked Room (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 11—A Miracle of Love (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 13—The Sea Eternal (Special—2 parts—Drama) ..............................2000
Nov. 14—When the Clock Stopped (Drama)....1000
Nov. 15—Whose Is It? (Comedy)............. 400
Nov. 15—Badly Wanted (Comedy)............. 600
Nov. 17—The Two Fathers (Comedy)..........1000
Nov. 18—Shadows (Drama)....................1000
Nov. 20—Partners In Crime (Special—3 parts—Dr.).................................3000
Nov. 21—His Chorus Girl Wife (Drama).......1000
Nov. 22—The Harmless One (Drama)..........1000
Nov. 24—Just Cissy's Little Way (Comedy)..1000
Nov. 25 -Her Sick Father (Comedy).......... 400
Nov. 25—The Lost Switch (Comedy).......... 600
Nov 27 A Waif of the Desert (Special—2 parts—Drama) ....................2000
Nov. 28—The Scapegrace (Drama)..............1000
Nov. 29 -Turning the Table (Drama)........1000
Dec. 1 -Melita's Sacrifice (Drama)..........1000
Dec. 2—The Hazard of Youth (Drama)......1000
Dec. 4—When Mountain and Valley Meet (Special—2 parts—Drama).........1000
Dec. 5—Some Elopers (Comedy)............. 400
Dec. 5 An Interrupted Courtship (Comedy).. 600
Dec. 6—Her Father (Drama)................1000

MELIES.

Oct. 2—Things Japanese (Typical)............1000
Oct. 9—Cast Amid Boomerang Throwers (Dr.).1000
Oct. 16—Scenes of Saigon, Cochin China (Sc.)..1000
Oct. 23—Old and New Tahiti (Drama)........ 850
Oct. 23—Grand Opening of the Schichijio Bridge, Kyoto, Japan (Scenic).............. 150
Oct. 30—A Japanese Wedding (Manners and Customs)...........................
Oct. 30—A Japanese Shoemaker at Work (Typical)...........................
Nov. 6—Sidney and Its Harbor (Travel).....1000
Nov. 20—Shooting the Famous Hozu Rapids of Japan (Sports).................
Nov. 20—A Lemon Plantation (Industrial).....
Nov. 27—Japanese "Judo," Commonly Known as Jiu Jitsu (Sports)..............1000

PATHEPLAY.

Nov. 7—A Phony Alarm (Comedy)............
Nov. 8—Tortoises At Close Range (Nat. Hist.)
Nov. 8—Egyptian Temples (Architecture)....
Nov. 8—Ice Cutting in Sweden (Ind.).......
Nov. 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 66 (News)......
Nov. 11—Winter Sports in Switzerland (Sports)
Nov. 11—Siberia's Holy Lake (Travel)........
Nov. 12—Lizard Lore (Zoology)................
Nov. 12—The Coast of California Near Carmel-By-the-Sea (Scenic)................
Nov. 13—Pathe's Weekly, No. 67 (News)......
Nov. 13—A Slave of Satan (Special—2 parts —Drama).........................
Nov. 14—Butterfly Preservation (Entomology).
Nov. 14—The Slate Industry (Industrial).....
Nov. 15—In the Same Boat (Comedy).........
Nov. 17—Pathe's Weekly, No. 68 (News) ....
Nov. 18—Mr. Gaston from Paris (Comedy).....
Nov. 18—Flowers of Japan (Horticulture)....
Nov. 19—By Impulse (Com.-Dr.)...............
Nov. 20—Pathe's Weekly, No. 69 (News)......
Nov. 20—The Green-Eyed Monster of Jealousy (Special—3 parts—Drama) ........
Nov. 21—Natives of Australia (Manners and customs) ...........................
Nov. 21—The Pond Snail (Zoology)............
Nov. 21—In the Spanish Pyrenees (Travel)....
Nov. 22—Kenton's Heir (Drama)..............
Nov. 24—Pathe's Weekly, No. 70 (News).....
Nov. 25—The Shadow of Shame (Drama)......
Nov. 26—The Elusive Turkey (Comedy).......
Nov. 27 Pathe's Weekly, No. 71 (News) ....
Nov. 27—The Faithless Friend (Special—2 parts—Drama) ......................
Nov. 27—Old Nuremburg (Scenic).............
Nov. 28—Making Eight Too Ropes (Industrial)
Nov. 28—The Capital of the Malay States (Scenic)...........................
Nov. 28—Fashion's Law In the Swiss Cantons (Sociological).......................
Nov. 29—The Blight (Drama)................
Dec. 1 Pathe's Weekly No. 72 (News).. .
Dec. 2—A Peasant Marriage in Hungary (Cus.)
Dec. 2 Edible Fish of the Mediterranean (Zoology) .... ....... ...........
Dec. 2 The Geysers of New Zealand (Scen.).
Dec. 3—A Break For Freedom (Drama).....
Dec. 4—Baseball's Peerless Leader (Special - 2 parts—Comedy) .. . ...........
Dec. 4 Pathe's Weekly, No 73 (News) ...
Dec. 5 A Bear Escape (Comedy)...........
Dec. 6 -Col. Heeza Liar in Africa (Novelty)
Dec. 6 -Glimpses of Pond Life (Zoology)....

SELIG.

Nov. 7—The Schoolmarm's Shooting Match (Comedy)...........................
Nov. 7—Views Along the Rhine (Travel).....
Nov. 10—Phantoms (Special—2 parts—Drama).2000
Nov. 11—Movin' Pitchers (Comedy)...........1000
Nov. 12—Trying Out No. 707 (Drama)........1000
Nov. 13—The Child of the Prairie (Drama)....1000
Nov. 14—A Cure for Carelessness (Comedy)..
Nov. 14—The Matterhorn, Switzerland (Travel)
Nov. 17—The Escape of Jim Dolan (Special—2 parts—Drama)......................2000
Nov. 18—The Port of Missing Women (Drama)..1000
Nov. 19—The Touch of a Child (Drama)......1000
Nov. 20—An Actor's Romance (Drama)........1000
Nov. 21—Outwitted by Billy (Drama).........1000
Nov. 24—The Quality of Mercy (Special—2 parts—Dr.)........................2000
Nov. 25—Mounted Officer Flynn (Comedy).....1000
Nov. 26—Cupid In the Cow Camp (Comedy)...1000
Nov. 27—A Message From Home (Drama).....1000
Nov. 28—The Supreme Moment (Drama).......1000
Dec. 1—The Cipher Message (Special—2 parts Drama) .... ............. .......2000
Dec. 2—The Rustler's Reformation (Dr.)....1000
Dec. 3—Within the Hour (Drama)...........1000
Dec. 4 Granddaddy's Boy (Drama)..........1000
Dec. 5—Northern Hearts (Drama)............1000

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 8—The Diver (Special—2 parts—(Dr.)..2000
Nov. 10—Thieves (Drama) ...................1000
Nov. 11—The Price of Thoughtlessness (Drama)
Nov. 11—The Canals of Venice (Travel).......
Nov. 12—An Elopement at Home (Comedy)...1000
Nov. 13—The Right Man (Drama)............1000
Nov. 14—Fanny's Conspiracy (Comedy)........1000
Nov. 15—Jerry's Mother-in-Law (Special—2 parts—Drama) ......................2000
Nov. 17—Tangled Threads (Drama)............1000
Nov. 18—His Last Fight (Drama).............1000
Nov. 19—Why I Am Here (Comedy)..........
Nov. 19—Farming In Ancient Thebes (Agricul.)
Nov. 20—The Sale of a Heart (Drama).......1000
Nov. 21—The Schemers (Comedy).............1000
Nov. 22—The Whimsical Threads of Destiny (Special—2 parts—Drama).........2000
Nov. 24—The Leading Lady (Drama)........1000
Nov. 25—Little Kaintuck (Drama)............1000
Nov. 26—Fellow Voyagers (Comedy)..........
Nov. 26—Temples and Statues of Rome (Architecture) ..........................
Nov. 27—The Cure (Drama) ................1000
Nov. 28—Betty In the Lion's Den (Comedy)..1000
Nov. 29—The Golden Pathway (Special—2 parts —Drama) ..........................2000
Dec. 1 -A Game of Cards (Drama).........1000
Dec. 2—The Wreck (Special—3 parts—Dr.)..3000
Dec. 3 -A Pair of Prodigals (Comedy).......
Dec. 3 The Coliseum of Rome (Architecture)
Dec. 4—The Swan Girl (Drama)..............1000
Dec. 5 -A Lesson in Jealousy (Comedy).. 1000
Dec. 6—Beauty Unadorned (Special—2 parts - Comedy) .. ........................2000

Greater New York Film Rental Company
116-118 East Fourteenth Street, New York
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

MR. EXHIBITOR

We want to impress on you that GOOD ADVERTISING is the LIFE of any business, and is just as essential towards the success of your house as good films.

Let Us Assume Your Advertising Worries

Don't fret about Posters, Banners, Slides, Date Strips, Display Photographs, Frames, Photos of Actors and Actresses appearing in Licensed Films and other advertising helps that every exhibitor needs to conduct a successful show. That's our business. We can fit you out completely with dispatch and at prices you couldn't beat if you shopped the world over.

SEND US YOUR STANDING ORDER FOR POSTERS, DISPLAY PHOTOGRAPHS AND "COMING FEATURE" ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Everything for Advertising a Picture Show

GENERAL FILM COMPANY, Poster Department

(Formerly Photoplay Advertising & Specialty Co.)

71 W. 23rd Street and 440 Fourth Avenue, New York; 121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 1022 Superior Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio; 7th and Walnut Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio; Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.; 218 Commercial Street, Boston, Mass.; 122 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; 737 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.; 921 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.

First Impressions

Will have much to do with your later opinion

In regard to

LACLEDE WESTERN FEATURES

That's Why

We were so Mighty Particular with the first release

"The Pale Face Squaw"

(3 Reels)

---

We Are Our Own Pace-makers
See the Pace We Have Struck

---

Only a Few Territories Unsold

---

FILMS LLOYDS, Inc.
220 West 42nd St., New York City

---

A BIO BOOSTER

is what every user of the famous

BIO CARBONS

invariably becomes. This is but natural since the admirable results obtained therewith of

MOVING PICTURE PROJECTIONS

are so vastly superior to the use of the common carbons—no matter under what brand.

JUST BECAUSE

They
BURN STEADIER
BURN CLEARER
BURN BRIGHTER
BURN LONGER
AND WITH LESS CURRENT

BIO CARBONS

THEY ARE WHAT YOU WANT.

Charles L. Kiewert Co.

| NEW YORK | MILWAUKEE | SAN FRANCISCO |
|---|---|---|
| 165 Greenwich St. | 114 Huron St. | 143 Second St. |

"The Belasco of the Photoplay"
Writes his own Plays—
Plays the leads—
Directs his own productions—
Manages his own company.

Advertising Romaine Fielding Means a New and Individual Clientele for Your Theatre, Mr. Exhibitor, of Followers of This Photoplay Star

The Box-office value of the player who won first prize in a recent popularity contest by one of the biggest magazines is something every live exhibitor now recognizes.
ROMAINE FIELDING'S FOLLOWING IS DISTINCT, INDIVIDUAL AND FAITHFUL—PEOPLE WHO APPRECIATE THE FINER THINGS IN THE SCREEN DRAMA.

Current and Recent Releases

"The Evil Eye"—"The Rattlesnake"—"Hiawanda's Cross"
"The Harmless One"—"When Mountain and Valley Meet"

Address, LUBIN NEW MEXICO CO., Las Vegas, New Mexico

KINEMACOLOR MACHINES

(Which also Project Perfect Black and White Pictures)

ARE NOW SOLD

English-Kinemacolor, - - $200.00
Kinemacolor-Simplex, - - $300.00

SERVICE, TWENTY DOLLARS UPWARDS

INQUIRE NEAREST OFFICE

CHICAGO
538 So. Dearborn St.

NEW YORK
1600 Broadway

LOUISVILLE, KY.
Majestic Theatre Bldg.

A spectacular photo-play in 6 reels. Enacted by the most eminent European talent.

Coming !

A SUPREME MASTERPIECE

The Hero of a Nation

BAR-COCHBA

Beautiful line of Pictorial Printing, Photos, Heralds, Etc.

THE SUPREME FEATURE FILM COMPANY

64 East 14th Street

STATE RIGHT OPERATORS WIRE NOW

New York City

RAMO

TRADE MARK

ANOTHER HEADLINER

A vital photodrama of the problem of today that will appeal to all classes.

"WIVES"

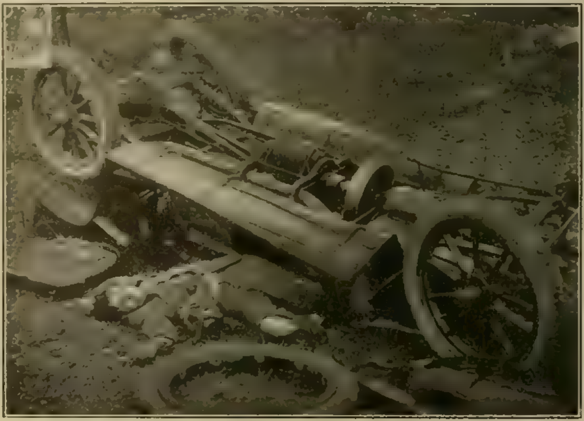
— In — Three Parts

Only Four More Territories To Hear From



Dead in the Wreckage

Exclusive Territorial Protection Assured

ONE, THREE SIX SHEETS
PHOTOS 8" x 10"
CUTS
SLIDES
HERALDS

THIS IS OUR COLORED SIX SHEET POSTER

RAMO FILMS Incorporated, Sales Offices, Columbia Theatre Bldg., New York

---

FILMS

THE HOUSE OF FEATURES

FILMS

What You Have Been Wanting
A 3-REEL THRILLER

The BANDITS of DEATH VALLEY

With Miss ANDREA STEVENS, the celebrated Danish Actress, as KAREM, the Girl of the Mines.

Full Line of Advertising Matter

READY DECEMBER 4th

An Exciting and Unusual Detective Sensation

LIEUT. DARING AND THE INTERNATIONAL-JEWEL-THIEVES

The Most Daring 3-Reel Feature
EVER PRODUCED

Full Line of Advertising

READY NOVEMBER 28th

FILMS

TRANS-OCEANIC FILMS
145 WEST 45TH ST., N. Y. C.

FILMS

Every American affiliated with the motion picture industry should rejoice in the announcement of the forthcoming release of

THE VOLUNTEER ORGANIST

Founded on William B. Gray's famous drama of the same title

A full evening's performance

---

Copyrighted
and all rights reserved

The result of five months' strenuous toil on the part of the ablest crew of film makers in America

From left to right—Percy Lowe, stage manager; Wm. B. Gray, director; Fred Christenson, master mechanic; Herman Schlicker, photographer

The men responsible for the most stupendous, colossal and magnificent photo-drama ever produced in THIS or ANY OTHER country

Details in next week's issue of the Moving Picture World

EXCLUSIVE
MOTION PICTURES

A Remarkably Comprehensive Reel of

CALIFORNIA
—VS—
STANFORD

In America's Greatest Annual Rugby Football Contest.

SHOWS

Sensational Plays of the "Big Game".
Celebrated Stars of Both Teams.
Coaches Demonstrating the "Hows" of Rugby.
Bleachers Groaning under their Human Load.
Rooters in Frenzied Out-burst.
Waving Pennants—Gala Attire.
Victorious Collegians in Giant Serpentine.

Filmed Exclusively by the

CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION

APPOINTED OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPHERS

CALIFORNIA MOTION

CAPITAL,

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Herbert Payne, President, Capitalist.
Henry T. Scott, Chairman of Board of Directors, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.
R. P. Schwerin, Vice-President and General Manager, Pacific Mail Steamship Company.
Walter S. Martin, Martin Estate Company.
Edwin M. Eddy, Selwyn Eddy Estate.
Thomas Magee, Thomas Magee & Sons.
George Lewis, Pres. Schreve & Co.
James Woods, Manager St. Francis Hotel Company.
Thomas A. Driscoll, Director Hibernia Bank.
Baldwin Wood, Attorney-at-Law.
Clarence Payne, President Payne Estate Company.
Thomas B. Eastland, President Coast Realty Co.
A. M. Johnson, Attorney-at-Law.
Robin Y. Hayne, Capitalist.
Alex. E. Beyfuss, General Manager.

"Greatest Reel Ever Made of a Football Game"

That is what everyone who has seen the pictures of the University of California-Stanford contest, says.

THE SCORE WAS

13 to 8

That, in itself, signifies close, fast play. Rugby is an open, spectacular game and full of action.

A GREAT SUBJECT FOR A GREAT REEL

COLLEGE TOWNS WILL PLAY TO CAPACITY

This reel has proven one of the biggest drawing cards of the season on the Pantages Circuit.

If doubtful wire any San Francisco newspaper or Alexander Pantages, San Francisco.

San Francisco Examiner
November 13, 1913.

* * *

The Pantages is showing the exclusive motion pictures of the big game at Palo Alto last Saturday. The demand to view the movies has come from all points of the State. Alexander Pantages has arranged to send the pictures over his entire circuit. The victorious Stanford team was the guest of the management Tuesday night. Next week's bill will have a spectacular fantasy entitled "Golden Dreams" for its headliner.

* * *

APPLY IMMEDIATELY FOR STATE RIGHT BOOKINGS

ALSO

An exclusive reel of the New Zealand "All Blacks," (World's Champions) vs. American "All Stars" in great International Contest for World Championship Honors, played at Berkeley, California.

PLACE YOUR ORDER BY WIRE

PICTURE CORPORATION

$1,000,000

MANUFACTURERS
AND PRODUCERS OF "PHOTOGRAPHICALLY PERFECT"
MOTION PICTURE FILMS

Publishers of the Film
"Golden Gate Weekly"
California Events

Telephone—Sutter 4272
Cable Address—Campico

MAIN OFFICES—SAN FRANCISCO
356 PINE STREET
"Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in West"

A BARGAIN WITH SATAN

GREATEST OF ANY DOUBLE IDENTITY FEATURE EVER PRODUCED—BETTER THAN FAUST AND DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE PUT TOGETHER, THOUGH BASED ON NEITHER. IT IS THE CLEVEREST OF ALL MYSTICAL PICTURES—A STATE-RIGHT FEATURE

IN FIVE EXCITING REELS

NEVER BEFORE HAVE WE HAD A FINER SET OF POSTERS FOR ANY SUBJECT AS WILL BE SENT OUT WITH THIS ONE. 1-3-6-9 SHEETS. ALSO ½ SHEET HERALDS, PHOTO STANDS, ETC.

OTHER EXCELLENT FEATURES COMING RIGHT ALONG

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| PETER MAKAROFF | 4 PARTS | THE FALL OF FRANCE | 3 PARTS |
| THROUGH THE CLOUDS | 3 PARTS | THE GREAT BULLION ROBBERY | 3 PARTS |
| HUMANITY | 3 PARTS | THE BLACK 13 | 3 PARTS |

HUGH HOFFMAN

THE ENGINE OF DEATH

FOUR REELS OF SENSATION, THE MOST FORCEFUL FEATURE THAT WE HAVE EVER HANDLED. IT DEALS WITH A JAPANESE SPY AND HIS EFFORT TO OBTAIN IMPORTANT GOVERNMENT DOCUMENTS—CALLING INTO ACTION THE SECRET SERVICE DEPARTMENT AND PRECIPITATING A GENUINE AND APPALLING RAILROAD DISASTER. STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

APEX FILM COMPANY

145 W. 45TH ST., NEW YORK. P. P. CRAFT, MANAGER

Poster Mounting Cloth

Headquarters.

Our 42-inch poster cloth is recognized as the standard fabric for poster mounting. It is used by the LEADERS.

TURNER-HALSEY COMPANY, 62 LEONARD STREET, NEW YORK

---

Look at that RUBY concern hustling up scoops for its customers. Now it's

"THE BLACK 107"

A True to Life Portrayal of the Russian Persecution of the Jewish Race

Look out for cheap, amateur productions, founded on a name, backed by nothing. This is a FEATURE.

RUBY FEATURES, 145 W. 45th St., New York City

---

FEATURE BARGAINS

| | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Charlie Colms | 2 Reels | $60 | Balkan War | 2 Reels | $25 | Nursing a Viper | 3 Reels | $75 |
| Disappointment | 2 " | $60 | Dante's Inferno | 2 " | $50 | Actor's Daughter | 3 " | $75 |
| Shadows of the Past | 2 " | $50 | Mexican Revolution | 2 " | $25 | Ring That Binds | 3 " | $75 |
| Broken Chain | 2 " | $50 | Inventor's Sweetheart | 2 " | $25 | White Domino | 3 " | $50 |
| Addressed to the Dead | 2 " | $35 | Red Falcon | 2 " | $25 | Shadows of Death | 3 " | $75 |
| Game of Cards | 2 " | $25 | Henry VIII | 2 " | $25 | Madame Sans Gene | 3 " | $50 |

Also 150 Commercials at $3 each. Paper on all features.

ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO. No. 21 East 14th St. NEW YORK CITY

---

BARGAIN=MACHINES=BARGAIN

Order one for Emergency. Slightly used machines, in first-class running condition. Powers No. 6, $135.00; Edison Model B, $150.00; Edison Exhibition Models, $50.00, $60.00 and $75.00. All complete with lenses, rheostats. Ticket Choppers, Mirror Screens, Chairs, etc.

Order at once. First come, first served.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO., Inc.
1301 Race St., Philadelphia

---

FEATURE FILM BUYERS

I have bargains in Exclusive, Famous Features. What is your territory? Get in communication with me at once.

P. A. BLOCH, 560 West 165th Street, NEW YORK

---

Photoplay Company, Inc.

19 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The headquarters for all standard projecting machines. Full line of accessories and supplies

Expert Repairing on All Machines

Write us for terms and catalogues.

---

IT IS SAID BY MANY WHO KNOW

That the life of the Motion Picture Machine is two years. This may be so with most Machines, but NOT the MOTIOGRAPH

We are receiving letters daily, telling us of the long life of the MOTIOGRAPH and with a small expense in the Up-Keep.

WHY? QUALITY

All our parts are made in our own factory, by expert mechanics, and with proper care, the MOTIOGRAPH will last ten years instead of two.

Write for Catalogue and Information.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.

Eastern Office: 21 E. 14th St., New York
564-572 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.
Western Office: 833 Market St., San Francisco

---

EXHIBITORS NOTICE

Just Released for New York, City and State, Ambrosio Masterpiece

The Knights of Rhodes

In Four Parts. For bookings, Write, Wire or Call

MONARCH FEATURE FILM CO., 69 West 23rd St., New York City

DEAGAN MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Played from Piano Keyboard

WRITE FOR CATALOG "F"

J. C. DEAGAN
DEAGAN BUILDING
1776 Berteau Ave.
Chicago, Ill.

---

Indirect Lights for Moving Picture Theatres

No. 51.—15" diam., 36" long $6.00

No. 52.—20" diam., 36" long $8.00

No. 51

No. 53 Brackets $1.65 Complete with green art shade

Cannot be duplicated for double the money in any local chandelier store. We make a specialty of lighting. Write us.

NOTE. Send for circular showing very latest novelties for first class moving picture theatres.

GENERAL SPECIALTY CO.
409 Morgan Street St, Louis, Mo.

---

For FEATURE FILMS

address
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE
Suite 405 Schiller Building, Chicago
Phone Central 6229
SEND FOR OUR NEW LIST

---

Advance Motion Picture Co.

Commercial, Industrial and Educational Film Mfgrs.
Chicago.

General Offices. 547-549 Peoples Gas Bldg.
Factory and Studio. 950 Edgecomb Place.

---

MOTION PICTURE FILMS

Get our prices. Quick facilities. We print negatives, develop and print positive. Splendid results assured. Camera men supplied.

Parisian Manufacturing and Film Renovating Co.
940 Wentworth Avenue Chicago, Ill.

---

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St. :: CHICAGO, ILL.

---

Novelties in Moving Picture Apparatus

A list of moving picture apparatus which is new and will interest you. Kinetoscopes, Radiant Vellum for Screens, Condensers, Fire-Proof Film Rewinders, Electric Stereopticons, Edison Home Kinetoscopes and Educational Films.

We are prepared to furnish every kind of moving picture apparatus and supplies and will gladly give you information on any subject concerning moving picture apparatus.

It means a saving of both time and money. The Lantern Slide Outfit enables you to produce clear, clean-cut slides. An inquiry will bring you full details concerning this outfit.

We have for sale or rent forty thousand slides Around the World and all other subjects.

WILLIAMS, BROWN & EARLE, Inc.
MOVING PICTURE APPARATUS AND SUPPLIES
Dept. 61 916-918 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Persecution of the Jew in Russia

has caused every person in every city of this civilized world to center their thought on the persecution of this race in that country.

THE RECENT TRIAL AT KIEV has been watched by everybody with undivided attention, newspapers have devoted page after page of news matter telling of the condition and suffering of this poor Jew. Many of the most important Ministerial bodies have denounced the action taken by the Russian Government.

The most talked of International event in many years.

A lesson to a modern government.

We have slides showing the conditions existing in Russia, the misery and suffering of the Russian Jew, THE ACCUSED MAN, the Hall of Justice, cartoons, etc., etc., 20 in all, which we offer for $10.00 per set.

Mr. Exhibitor: Your patrons will be more than interested to see these slides.

ORDER NOW. Only Express or Money Order or certified check.

CURRENT EVENTS SLIDE CO.

553 West 33rd Street NEW YORK

---

AMERICAN-ECLAIR

FEATURE FILMS

A Word to the Wise—etc.

THE EXHIBITOR WITH CLEAN, EXCITING, INTERESTING, ENTERTAINING, EDUCATIONAL, AMUSING PHOTOPLAYS NOW-A-DAYS, IS CLEANING UP. IT IS COMING TO A TEST OF MERIT, AND NOTHING ELSE.

THE ECLAIR EXHIBITOR

HOLDS HIS PATRONS AND CHUCKLES WHEN HE COUNTS UP.

A Few Eclair Coming Releases:

Wednesday, Nov. 26th "A SON'S DEVOTION" (2 Reels)
A Powerful sermon on gambling. It has the punch!

Sunday, Nov. 30th "ROARING BILL" and "ONE ON TOOTY" (Split)
Laughing comedies.

Wednesday, Dec. 3rd "WHEN PIERROT MET PIERRETTE" (2 Reels)
A society melodrama with a startling climax.

"THE DOPESTER" SAYS—"SEND IN THE NAME OF YOUR THEATER FOR THE ECLAIR BULLETIN. IT WILL MEAN MONEY TO YOU."

Demand the Universal Program and Get Eclair Films!

225 W. 42nd ST., NEW YORK CITY.

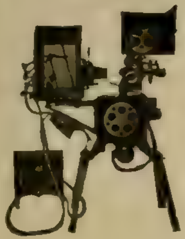
POWERS



SIMPLEX

"Honesty is the Best Policy"

We don't claim to know it all. But our vast experience, covering a period of years of successful service to the Exhibitor, places us in a position to cater to and supply your every want. Come in and talk over your difficulties with us. We may help you and learn something ourselves.

HONEST PRICES. A SQUARE DEAL. COURTEOUS ATTENTION

All a part of the P. T. E. Co.'s Service

THINK THIS OVER

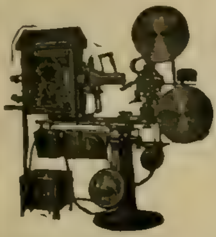
MOTIOGRAPH



EDISON

Machines, Carbons, Tickets, Lenses, Rheostats, Reel Cases, Booths, Gas Outfits, Signs, Slides, etc., etc.

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 East 14th Street
New York City

---

ENSIGN

DAYLIGHT LOADING CINEMA-CAMERA

This new departure Cinema-Camera is in no sense an amateur camera: quite on the contrary it will be found to possess many of the advantages of cameras selling at three times the price, and the use of Daylight spools at once removes all limit from its field of usefulness.

PRICE $80.00

